"We have advanced beyond the status of a little theatre with honor pins and buttons given for extracurricular activity. We have aimed to establish a laboratory for the study, in an adult way, of a very definite social institution which daily affects the lives of millions of people. We believe it is a function of a university to conduct such a laboratory. We believe further, that a university should influence and be a part of (in so far as this is possible) the development of a concept for an American Theatre.

"Without the least condescension we have chosen to widen the scope and meaning of the word 'Theatre' to embrace this most modern of the arts, the cinema. The drama is one art; the cinema another. Still they are both 'Theatre.' The rehabilitation of the American stage depends on this recognition. The theatre of the future in communities such as Syracuse will more and more demand that drama and cinema be under one roof."

In selecting pictures for exhibition, the University has had perhaps greater freedom of choice than the commercial showman, yet this in itself has evolved not one but several knotty problems. Drawing upon his experiences as an exhibitor, Professor Falk observes, "Freedom

FANS AND CRITICS TO DECIDE STAR'S FUTURE

The future of stars, how many pictures a year they should make, the type and also the characters they should portray will be left entirely to fans, critics and the theatre owners, according to the plan of Jesse L. Lasky, president and production chief of Pickford-Lasky Productions.

This will be done in the form of a questionnaire Mr. Lasky is sending out from Hollywood for Francis Lederer asking how many pictures the star should appear in, if too many pictures are apt to hurt a star's standing, what kind of parts are best liked, what specific story would the public like to see filmed and last but not least, was the star's latest film liked.

SCHOOL TO PRODUCE of choice is frequently a vexatious thing, especially if there happen to be certain tacit restrictions inherent in a situation, that one does not realize exist until they are well upon him."

Protests and Films

Elaborating, the University dramatics department head said:

"How was I to know, for instance, when I book 'Chapayev' that the earth would rumble and shake under my feet? How was I to guess that the American Legion would protest so violently, that the mayor of the city and even the Governor of the State would be involved. All I wanted to show was the aesthetic and technical differences between the first and fourth periods of Russian cinematography.

"But in view of that circumstance would it be prudent (call it good showmanship) for me to offer 'The New Gulliver' to my people, even if I believe it's essential to their souls' good that they see it?

"If we exhibit Emil Jannings in 'The Making of a King' we will be picketed, as sure as fate, by anti-Nazi delegations; if we show 'The Youth of Maxim' we will be boycotted by ultra-patriotic organizations, of which there are many in our district.

"Or take a film that is outside the realm of politics—Dreyer's beautiful treatment of the Passion of Joan of Arc. To me this is one of the few true tragedies (in the Aristotlian sense of the word) that have been brought to the screen. It exalts and clarifies; it makes spiritual assertion. But the teacher of French did not think so. She threatened to protest to the French Ambassador at Washington.

" 'It was bad enough,' she asserted, 'to give us Rene Clair a few weeks ago with his insults and jibes at French middle class living, but this film is positive sacrilege. It destroys for the students and town folk the concept of the maid as a beautiful blonde in flaming armor on a white charger and substitutes for it an ugly brunette with a shaved head.' (As if anyone could call Falconetti ugly!) . . . So the French teacher went out actively to campaign against the film and did much harm.

"Or if these cases aren't difficult enough, what would you do with Dr. Watson's beautiful film 'Lot in Sodom?' It certainly should not be kept from an adult-minded audience, but what about the phallic symbolism, the homosexuality, the incest—abstract and stylized as these items may be?

"I cite these instances to draw your attention to the policy that one must pursue when he brings a cinema project to town and campus. Exactly what such a policy should be in all points I do not as yet know. I lack sufficient data to make arbitrary generalizations. However, I should like to call to your attention major considerations which govern the choice of films for our Civic-University Theatre.

Cultural Values First

"It is our first business, as a university, to stress cultural values. Every film we choose, therefore, must without question have distinct artistic merit. Every film must reflect favorably upon the camera-screen device as a medium of aesthetic consequence. We reject absolutely the postulate of the box-office showman that the cinema is incapable of rising persistently to an artistic level. Many American and foreign films disprove this challenge and assert beyond doubt that aesthetic consideration can and should enter into one's appraisal of films.

"We believe that an audience can be gathered for these films—an audience naturally smaller than the one which supports the 'mass' films but an influential audience none the less. In our own case, in eight months' time we have increased our potential audience from 300 to 2,000 and at the same time have increased its capacity to absorb the type of film we offer it. It should be remarked that this audience is composed of college students, faculty members and their families, high school students, a certain segment of the townfolk trained in the arts, and last but not least in this reckoning, the man on the street."

Miggins Heads Fox European Division

Ben Miggins, former European director for Fox Movietone newsreel, will become Continental director for Twentieth Century-Fox, in charge of all European business.

Russell Muth, editor of Fox Movietone German news, takes Mr. Miggin's former position, and, in turn, is succeeded in the German post by Robert Hartmann.

Submit Reorganization Plan

A plan of reorganization under which the holders of $4,447,000 in defaulted first mortgage bonds would acquire the lease to the Fox Theatre and the fee to the adjoining Humboldt Building in St. Louis has been submitted to Federal Judge George H. Moore by a committee representing about 75 per cent of the bondholders. A hearing on the plan will be held April 3 before Judge Moore.

Admits Owing on Tax

Marion Davies has filed a stipulation with the Board of Tax Appeals in Washington conceding she owes the government $30,000 plus interest in additional income taxes for 1931. The Internal Revenue Bureau had charged her with a deficiency of $52,044. She had paid an income tax of $100,292 for 1931.

Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Distributing Corporation, and Jules Levy, vice-president and general sales manager, presided over a meeting of the company's eastern division in the Perroquet Suite at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria Tuesday at which current sales problems of the company were discussed.

Among those attending the meeting were E. L. McEvoy, eastern sales manager; Harry Michalson, short subjects sales manager; Leo DeVaney, Canadian district manager; Nat Levy, and the managers of the Albany, Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Clevelaid, Detroit, Indianapolis, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington branches. The entire sales force of the New York office attended.

Mexico to Produce Series for Science

A series of shorts depicting Mexico's beauty spots, places of tourist interest and activities of the people is to be made by the Ministry of Public Education, which accepted the suggestion of a group of congressmen that these pictures would be excellent publicity abroad to attract visitors.

The first picture is being made in Michoacan, President Cardenas' home state. This film, which is featuring the activities of the Michoacan women's organization, is being directed by Eleanea Sanchez Valenzuela, local journalist, and the first native woman to direct a picture. The productions will all have musical accompaniments played by the famous state orchestra.

Lina Basquette Sues

Lina Basquette, through her attorney, George S. Fishel Ryal, has filed suit for $100,000 in the United States district court of Boston against Harry and Fisher Zeitz, New Bedford theatre operators. Miss Basquette charges illegal use of her photograph which later appeared in a newspaper advertisement of a colored troupe.

Edwin S. Reld, director of the State Division of Motion Picture Censorship of Virginia, said this week in Richmond that no films have been rejected in full within recent months.

FIELD REPORT

GIVES MARCH OF TIME No. 1 RATING

A year ago some showmen questioned the idea of audiences liking the March of Time and its hard-hitting drama of real life. Its worth in small rural theatres was doubted. Questioned, too, was the importance the public and the press would place on the monthly issues. But with its second year now under way, these questions have answered themselves.

DO PICTURE AUDIENCES WANT TO SEE THE MARCH OF TIME?

Here is one answer from a large suburban house in a big mid-western city.

*"Recently I attended the.....theater here to enjoy the March of Time. After the so-called feature a 'Screeno' game was conducted. Finally the feature began again.

"Leaving my seat I asked the usher when I might see the March of Time. In a characteristic gush of courtesy he showed me the manager. This tuxedoed dignitary explained that the March of Time was omitted to save time. But this was the last show! He offered me a refund and I refused it.

"By this time a large group had gathered and they took up the argument. None would accept refund or invitation to leave. Some became angry and the super-manager was called. He wailed that the cost of running extra time was too great; that the contest had taken too long. Receiving no sympathy he offered to show our request after the feature now on.

"Leaving the unsatisfied crowd I returned to my seat. Presently the house lighted and an announcement made that through an error the March of Time had been omitted and would be shown immediately. It was."—H. M.

And another from one of the largest first run houses in the Southwest.

*"Our weather here has been pretty severe, but the March of Time, proven by figures, has meant an awful lot of money for us at the box office and has been established in the minds of our patrons as one of the greatest film features the theater has ever seen."—P. S.

HOW IMPORTANT AN EXPLOITATION MEDIUM IS THE MARCH OF TIME?

This letter is from the General Seafoods Corporation to its branches and dealers all over the country.

*"The March of Time during the past month has been filming a picture of the New England Fishing Industry. It impressed us so greatly that we are writing this letter to advise you of the March of Time play dates in the theaters in your territory with their names and addresses.

"It is quite possible that you may wish to incorporate this news in your local advertising, and we feel sure that such action will be of material benefit to you."

WHAT IS THE MARCH OF TIME WORTH TO THE SMALL-TOWN THEATRE?

The operator of a 200-seat house in this Montana town (pop. 468) says:

*"Being a comparatively new subscriber to the March of Time I have been noticing the increased interest my patrons are taking in your news and look forward eagerly to the next issue.

"I admire the courage and bravery of the March of Time in giving the public unbiased facts. We want more leaders like you in the motion picture industry."—H. O. E.

Radio City's Center Theater displays the March of Time and its three exciting episodes on a huge lobby easel as well as on its Sixth Avenue marquee.

RELEASED BY RKO RADIO PICTURES

From a 500-seat house in an Idaho town (pop. 1500) comes this letter.

*"In my opinion this is THE greatest item in short subjects available to exhibitors today.

"I feel that this subject has not only added prestige to our program presentation but has also built our business on the days of its showing to the extent of bringing patrons to our theater who do not come at any other time.

"The exhibitor of today who has the March of Time available for his screen and does not use it, is not doing his duty to his community."

HOW IMPORTANT DOES THE PRESS CONSIDER THE MARCH OF TIME?

This review is from the Washington, D. C., News.

"Showmen are pretty well agreed that only two short subject series have any influence on the box office. One- and two-reel films enhance programs. But the only shorts that consistently affect prospective patrons' choice of theaters are the March of Time and Walt Disney's cartoons."

Australia's famed Smith's Weekly finds it important too:

"The greatest sensation in the moving picture world since the advent of the 'Talkies' has arrived in Australia—a series entitled 'The March of Time.'

"They are 'The Thinkies'—the term is 'Smith's'.

"They deal with subjects of world interest in a manner which sends the audience away with something to ponder."

As does London's Observer:

"March of Time is, on every count, the most lively, intelligent, and important departure of the recent screen."

BATTLES OVER CHANCE GAMES IN NINE STATES

Kansas Attorney General Threatens Action; Massachusetts Prohibition Move Fails

The legality of chance games as a box office stimulant still stands in question in the courts of the land, developments this week occurring as follows:

Connecticut legislation banning cash awards was predicted, the while Connecticut courts (1) reserved decision in a test case; (2) were to receive a second test case, as police elsewhere in the state approved the practice.

Georgia police hit cash awards.

Kansas planned to move against chance games.

Louisiana is to receive a bill taxing chance games $500.

Massachusetts killed an anti-chance-game measure, and at the same time state courts were weighing legality of the practice.

Missouri courts had a chance-game test on its calendar, and an arrest.

Nebraska ruled chance games a lottery.

New York courts still have chance-game tests on their calendars.

Wisconsin exhibitors won their chance-game court test.

Chance-game insurance for patrons is spreading, as fresh suits were filed by copyright owners of Bank Night against alleged infringers and as Houston theatres voluntarily dropped the plan, the while its first use at Pittsburgh first runs was noted.

In New Canaan a forecast that the 1937 Connecticut legislature will enact a law banning cash awards in theatres of the state has been made by Judge Stanley P. Mean, who said, "There is no law against it now, but there will be when the legislature meets again."

Greenwich Ruling Reserved

Meanwhile, in Greenwich a decision in the first Bank Night test case in the state has been reserved by Judge L. Paul Burke in the Town Court. Henry C. Dreyer, manager of the Pickwick, was arrested when he refused to discontinue cash awards and is at liberty under bail of $500. In Waterbury, on the other hand, Roy E. Haffner, New England representative of Bank Night, cited state supreme court opinions in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Iowa to the effect that the game is not a lottery and announced his intention to seek a court test in the state of the ban placed on such theatre promotions by Waterbury, Bridgeport and other towns. As this was being done, Chief of Police Philip T. Smith and Assistant City Attorney M. Edward Klebanoff of New Haven agreed to approve Bank Night, Cash Night and all other games in which free participation is possible.

In Savannah, Ga., city police have ordered a local theatre operator to stop Broadway Handicap, a cash night feature, in their crusade against gambling. The operator contended in defense that the stunt is no more gambling than the cash awards at other houses.

Attorney General Clarence V. Beck of Kansas announced at Topeka that he plans to move against Bank Night and other promotions following complaints that have been reaching his office complaining that some of the schemes were becoming rackets. On the heels of this, however, comes the announcement that Wichita, free of giveaway troubles all through the depression, will join the procession within the next few weeks when Fox Midwest introduces Bank Night at the Miller, Palace and Orpheum, first run houses there.

In New Orleans, opponents of giveaways are expected to ask the legislature when it convenes in May to set a license tax of $500 on each theatre for each night a game is used. A special tax will be asked on the companies handling the games and on local salesmen.

A bill introduced into the state legislature at Boston by Senator McCarthy of Lowell to make Bank Night illegal in Massachusetts has been killed. Another bill, this one to amend the lottery laws so that Bank Night, now before the state supreme court, would be specifically legal, is pending following a committee hearing at which no opposition was advanced.

The Missouri supreme court has rejected the application for a writ of habeas corpus filed by George E. McKean of St. Louis, Bank Night representative, who sought to ascertain whether his giveaway games violate the Missouri lottery laws. He was arrested last December for operating Bank Night at a theatre in Fredericktown.

In Nebraska the game suffered a blow, however, under a definition given in Lincoln by Assistant Attorney General Paul Chaney, who ruled that the game, as conducted by many Nebraska theatres, is a lottery because of the prize value, the drawing to determine the winner and payment of a consideration for the opportunity to participate.

In Albany the court of appeals has reserved decision on the appeal of the Winthrop theatre, Brooklyn, from a decision of the lower courts holding that Farmer Miller, giveaway game used by the house, was a lottery. At the same time the lottery complaints scheduled for hearing in New York's special sessions court in the Bronx of the lottery complaints against Loew's Grand and Elsmere were postponed until March 27.

In Milwaukee local exhibitors won their third victory on charges of violating lottery and gambling ordinances when a district court jury decided Hollywood was not a gambling game. The case was against Earl Williams, manager of Fox's Oriental, which police raided recently.

Bank Night Insurance

In Tampa, Fla., it is reported that a company is to be formed to offer insurance on Bank Night drawings, the plan to operate under state insurance regulations and calling for the insuring of patrons at the theatre at a rate of five cents for each $100. The policy is to be good for only one week. Meanwhile, the Iowa Insurance department has refused to sanction a plan for Bank Night insurance in Des Moines following the report from Houston that insurance as offered in Texas has been declared a lottery and ruled illegal by Attorney General McGraw.

Bank Night finally has reached the first run sector of Pittsburgh with the installation of the game recently at the Alvin, in conjunction with five other houses of the Harris Circuit, but located in neighborhoods. The Alvin has used an automobile giveaway and will replace it with the cash award in the future.

Maryland Re-elects Hornig; MPTO Unit Alters Name

Outstanding developments this week in organized exhibitor quarters were an annual election by the MPTO of Maryland, the change of identity made by independent Philadelphia exhibitors, and, the furtherance of the merger of New York independent units, now expected to be completed by May 1st.

Too, Allied States national association changed the dates for its annual convention from June 2nd to June 3rd to 5th, at Cleveland's Hotel Hollenden, where a committee headed by H. H. Richey, of Detroit, will function as convention pilot.

In Baltimore, Frank A. Hornig was re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Allied affiliate, at the annual election attended by approximately 60 members. Other officers named were: Arthur B. Price, vice-president; Herman A. Blum, secretary; Helen Connelly, secretary. The board of directors includes: Mr. Hornig, Mr. Price, Mr. Blum, Walter Pacy, J. Louis Rome, Elmer Nolte, Jack Levine, Sam Soltz, Bill Hicks, Lauritz Garman and Louis Schneider.

The Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners in Philadelphia will be known hereafter as the Independent Theatre Owners, Inc., it was revealed this week, following a meeting held in the Quaker City attended by 53 members.

In New York it was learned that negotiations for merging the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and the Independent Theatre Owners Association are expected to be completed by May 1. Charles L. O'Reilly and Harry Brandt, heads of both organizations, have virtually agreed upon a deal, final details being left to the memberships of both organizations.

Sam Rinzler, partner with Louis Frisch in the Randforce Circuit, and Sam Rosen of the Fabian Circuit, emphasized the need of a strong exhibitor unit at the regular meeting of the ITOA at the Hotel Astor. The theatre leaders also pointed out the necessity for a permanent committee, to be composed of representatives from every major and independent circuit, to take care of legislative, labor and other problems confronting the exhibitors.

Schaefer Honor Guest At Dinner on Monday

George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager in charge of sales at United Artists, will be honored at an informal dinner to be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor on Broadway on Monday evening, March 30. The event will be in celebration of Mr. Schaefer's advent to the head of the sales department at United Artists.

The committee in charge of the dinner, consisting of Austin Keough, Charles Freeman, Sidney Kent, Harry Kalshein, Joseph Bernhard, Paul O'Brien, Leon Netter, Marvin Schenck, Edward Raftery, George Skouras and Monroe Greenthal, are now completing arrangements.

THREE THEATRE BILLS INTRODUCED, ONE DIES

Maryland Senate Votes 10 Per Cent Admission Tax; Massachusetts Kills Censor Bill

The few remaining state legislatures still in session continue to embroil motion pictures in legislative arguments:

Maryland's senate has voted a 10 per cent admission tax to collect $1,000,000 annually from theatres in the state.

Massachusetts killed a state censorship law.

Mississippi was understood to be expecting the presentation of a censorship bill.

New Jersey was considering a new theatre tax of one cent on each 25-cent admission.

New York's Assembly passed a bill permitting bars at theatres.

Despite opposition put up by exhibitors, including a delegation headed by A. Julian Brylawski of Washington, who appeared before the Senate finance committee to make formal protest against an admission tax, the Senate at Annapolis passed by a vote of 24 to four the bill to levy a 10 per cent tax on all amusement admissions in Maryland. The bill has been sent to the House and a fight is planned.

The program previously adopted by the Senate finance committee sought $1,000,000 from theatres alone toward a total requirement of $2,700,000.

One new proposal advanced is for a levy of three-quarters of one per cent on gross receipts. It is estimated that this would raise $425,000.

Censor Bill Shelved

An important censorship measure has been shelved in Massachusetts with the sidetracking of the bill introduced into the legislature at Boston by Representative Dorgan of Dorchester. The measure sought legislation against theatres showing productions of low moral standards or employing subversive propaganda. Mr. Dorgan in the past has fought a losing legislative fight to prevent children of 14 and under attending all but strictly religious and educational pictures. The putting of the present bill over to the next annual session is regarded as a virtual defeat of the measure in industry circles.

In Jackson, Miss., a censorship bill and another on tax reduction are expected to be presented to the Senate this week, with action favorable to independent theatre operators included in the latter measure.

New Jersey Tax Considered

New Jersey is considering a new amusement tax program of one cent on each 25-cent admission bracket with no exemptions as part of a broad-base tax, it has been revealed. Veteran legislators wanted to bring the thrice-defeated amusement-luxury tax bill to a vote again this week before turning to the far-reaching new levy, the legislature adjourned for a few weeks.

The amusement tax in the present bill is four per cent on gross admissions, to be absorbed by exhibitors who, they say, could raise their scale to cover the tax or absorb the loss.

If this bill is defeated again, plans are to abandon it and turn to a general state tax.

Meanwhile, the Assembly in Albany has passed the Brownell Bill which permits theatres in New York City to be licensed as sellers of alcoholic beverages. The bill now goes to the Senate, where it must be also passed before becoming a law.

Tax Writ Ruling Reserved

The appellate division of the New York supreme court this week reserved decision following a hearing on the Independent Theatre Owners Association-sponsored application for an injunction to restrain the City of New York from levying a two per cent sales tax on film rentals, and distributors from collecting it.

It was argued by attorneys for the theatre interests that the city already has ruled that film rentals are subject to the sales tax and that the injunction procedure is immediately necessary to prevent the collection of a "discriminatory" tax. They further stated that an Illinois sales tax had been held unconstitutional for similar discriminatory levies.

Morton Baum, representing the city comptroller's office, opposing the application for the injunction, contended that the tax legislation itself provided a remedy for its rulings by making them subject to certiorari proceedings in the appellate division.

Meanwhile, arguments on appeal of United Artists from the city finance department's board of review decision upholding the two per cent tax will be reached in April in the appellate division.

Personnel Changes In Effect at FWC

Resignations, promotions and other changes in the Fox West Coast operating setup became effective on Monday under orders from Charles Skouras in Los Angeles.

Milton Hossfeld, senior booker, moved into the newly created job of field man working between Los Angeles and New York. He is succeeded by Charles Piercy, who, in turn, is succeeded by Edward Solig. Edward Smith takes the latter's place, turning over his post to David Boyd.

Soviet Signs Chaplin Picture for Russia

The Soviet Motion Picture Industry, acting through its American agents, the Amkino Corporation, has acquired from United Artists the Russian distribution rights to "Modern Times," Charles Chaplin's latest production, according to a joint statement issued by V. Verlinsky, president of Amkino, and officials of United Artists. The distribution agreement also includes "City Lights."

Alec J. Braid Dies

Alec J. Braid, director of advertising and publicity for Gaumont British, died in London March 24th. Mr. Braid came from the newspaper field to join Gaumont in 1913 and founded the company's house organ. He later handled publicity for Stoll Film Company and W. & F. and was appointed in 1931 to the position he held at the time of his death.

Dave Mountain Resigns

Dave Mountain has resigned as New York representative of the George A. Hirliman Enterprises.

Independents Ask Protection in Suit

Eight exhibitors in Kansas City have filed a petition in federal district court to intervene in the "restraint of trade" suit filed February 25 by a group of local independents against Fox Midwest circuit and major distributors.

Intervenors seek to protect themselves against the possibility of being without film, and against loss of availability rights under their contracts with defendant distributors, should an injunction be granted, and the present system of clearance by zones, set up last fall by Fox Midwest, become inoperative.

Judge Returns Friday

Judge Merrill E. Otis will not return to Kansas City before Friday, date of the first hearing on the conspiracy suit. Consequently a ruling on the petition to intervene cannot be had before that time.

Those seeking to intervene are the Belmont (Rube Finklestein); Ashland Theatre Corp. (Clarence A. Schultz, who also heads Commonwealth Amusement Corp.); Bijou (J. W. Cotter); Oak Park and Bagdad (Jay Means); Westport (J. F. Rigney); Aladding (William Parsons), and Liberty (Ed Dubinsky).

Intervenors allege that they are independent, unaffiliated; that they compete with each other, with the plaintiffs in the conspiracy suit, and with Fox Midwest theatres, and that no common relationship exists between them except each has a contract or contracts with defendant distributor or distributors. They further allege that none of them owns, operates, or controls more than two theatres in Kansas City, Mo., and that most of them operate but one.

In asking that the court allow the intervention, the petitioners point out a possible consequence of an injunction, temporary or permanent. Distributor defendants may be required to release all pictures in Kansas City, Mo., simultaneously so that each of the approximately 60 theatres could exhibit them on the same date. However, distributors could not supply duplicate prints in sufficient number for such simultaneous release, at least not promptly enough to comply with such requirements.

Sees Loss to Intervenors

Thus, if distributors should be precluded by injunction from furnishing pictures in accordance with established trade practices, known as "clearance" and "availability," and should be precluded from simultaneous release to all theatres by the physical inability of providing an adequate number of prints, then the intervenors would be in jeopardy of not having any pictures, and would be forced to close their theatres at heavy expense and loss, including good will and patronage incident to and dependent upon continuous operations of a movie theatre.

Intervenors would, the petition alleges, suffer irreparable damage if distributors are precluded from releasing pictures at successive intervals in accordance with present releasing procedure, and if an injunction should fail to except from the operation thereof the contractural rights of the intervenors with respect to protection and clearance.

Equipment Stolen

Theft of the following specified equipment from the projection booth of Consolidated Amusement Enterprises' U. S. Theatre, New York, is reported as of March 20th: Intermittent mechanisms No. 15434 and 15441; Lenses No. 116017 and 116018.

213 FILM SALARIES FROM $15,000 TO $325,000 LISTED IN U.S. REPORT

Employees of 16 Companies and Their Salaries Are Made Known by the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue Officials

The public spotlight was focused this week, for the edification of Congressmen at Washington, on the incomes of some 213 motion picture persons in the higher earnings brackets, receiving $15,000 or more annually. The information was submitted by the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue, in making its customary periodical report of salaries to the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives. It covers salary payments by corporations whose fiscal year ended during 1935. These salaries, then, for the most part, are earnings for the year of 1934-35.

The new report, as usual, does not embrace all film companies, revealing salary payments made only by Fox Film Corporation, Twentieth Century Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Columbia Pictures, United Artists Studio Corporation, Crosby Productions, Inc., Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., RKO Service Corporation, Fox West Coast Theatres, Fox Midwest Theatres, Renraw, Inc., Movietone News, Inc., General Theatres, Boston Theatres Operating Corporation, Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises Corporation.

Outstanding amounts paid included $103,499 to Lew Ayres, $185,000 to Warner Baxter, Janet Gaynor, $252,583; Will Rogers, $324,314; Fredric March, $157,458; Wallace Beery, $100,000; Ronald Colman, $108,284; Maurice Chevalier, $150,000; George Arliss, $125,000; Henry King, $156,192; Jesse Lasky, $156,000; Al Rockett, $117,000; Sol Wurtzel, $104,000; George White, $124,235; Frank Capra, $156,000.

Sidney R. Kent's salary at Fox was reported at $166,000 and the same company reported $300,000 paid to Winfield Sheehan during the last of his tenure in that studio.

Other large bracket payments were made as follows: Samuel Briskin, $139,750; Harry Cohn, $182,000; Darryl Zanuck, $104,333; Bing Crosby, $152,142.

Well over 30 per cent of the 213 salaries reported ranged from $15,000 to $20,000.

Salary Range	Number of Employees	% of Total Reported
$15,000 to $20,000	64	30

U.S. to Use Own Legal Talent in St. Louis Action

It has been indicated in Washington that the Department of Justice has given no consideration to the employment of outside attorneys in the Government action against Warners, RKO and Paramount, now pending in the federal court of New York.

Officials said specifically that Ben Golder, Philadelphia attorney, had not been retained by the government in its New York action. Mr. Golder recently was named by the Philadelphia federal court to determine whether a conspiracy existed among distributors to restrict the showing of double features by contract provisions. He had been attorney for Harry and Louis Perelman in the case which resulted in the federal court's declaring illegal dual prohibition clauses in contracts. The distributors' petition for a rehearing is pending in Philadelphia.

Meanwhile, in St. Louis, Fanchon and Marco will close the Ambassador theatre March 26 for an indefinite period. Harry C. Arthur, vice-president, stated his company was forced to close the house because of an inability to obtain suitable product.

The theatre figures in the Government's action against the three major distributing organizations, charging conspiracy. In recent weeks the house has been grossing approximately $13,000, considered fair. The weekly rental of $2,350 has been paid by the St. Louis Ambassador Theatre, Inc., of which Mr. Arthur is president, but it is understood the bondholders' committee for the property has indicated that it would declare a default.

Symphony-on-Film Device Is Evolved

Ivan Ivanovich Eremeeff, Russian radio and sound engineer, has devised a method of bringing entire symphonies to the screen, with the cooperation of Leopold Stokowski, conductor, and the members of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. Each instrument is recorded on a strip of sound film, the final film being nine inches wide, the strip for each instrument 1½ inches. The 60 strips pasted together represent the entire orchestra. The film is placed in a device having a keyboard of 88 notes, which is the full scale of the piano, and light shutters are so arranged that as a key is pressed a light beam passes down the 1½ inches of sound track and an equivalent note is produced. Each man could take care of two or three instruments on a like number of keyboards.

Paramount Signs Frank Lloyd

Frank Lloyd has been signed to a three-year contract with Paramount to head his own unit as a producer. His contract calls for the production of four pictures a year and Mr. Lloyd personally will direct several of these.

RKO Purchases Building

RKO has bought the two-story building in Los Angeles that has been used for some time as the company's exchange there on South Vermont St. Gore Brothers, Realtors, sold the structure, which will be remodeled.

Big Gain in Seating Is Seen in South America

Approximately 40,000 seats will be added to the South American total as soon as 36 new theatres, now in various stages of construction, are completed, according to Walter Gould, in charge of Latin America for United Artists, and now visiting the home office in New York for conferences with executives there.

A dozen theatres are planned for Chile, 14 for the Argentine and 10 for Brazil, Mr. Gould said. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has practically completed its new houses in Lima, Peru, and Santiago, Chile. The MGM house in Montevideo, Puruguay, is expected to be finished in about three months and another theatre in Rio de Janeiro will be ready for opening in about six months, Mr. Gould concluded.

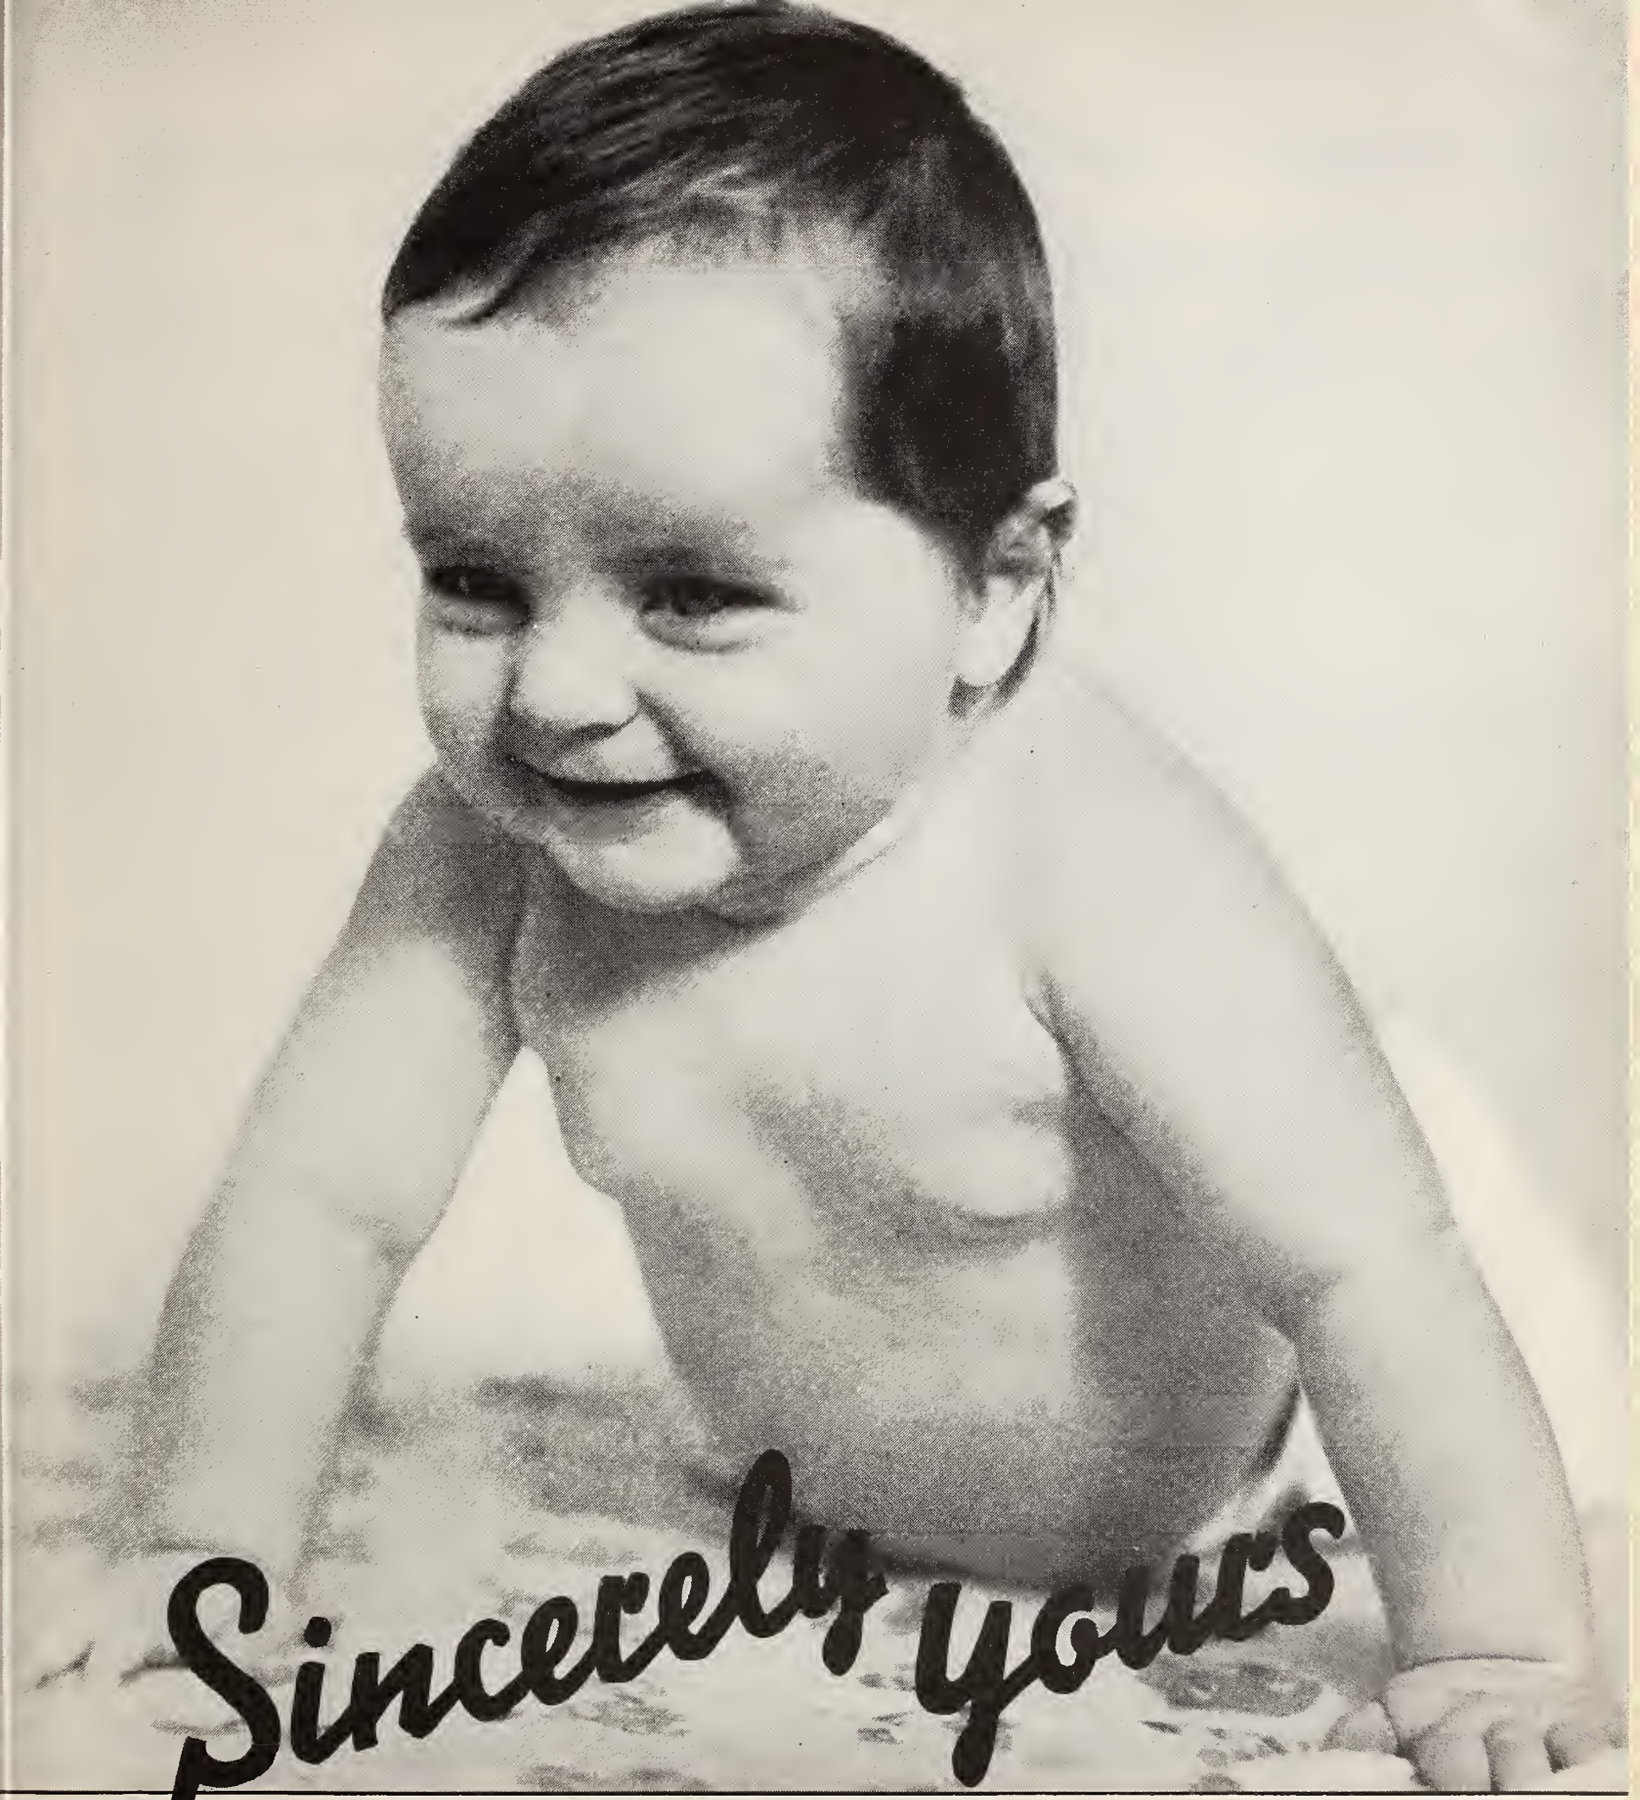
Bombay Has Theatre-Hotel

Construction has been completed on the building of the new theatre-hotel in Bombay, India, by Mr. S. Cambata, and the structure will be open to the public late next month. The building will combine, all under one roof and one management, a motion picture theatre, restaurant, shops and large hotel.

Palmer Casting Head

Bob Palmer has been appointed casting director at the Hollywood RKO studios to succeed Fred Schuessler, now casting director at Paramount.

New Roumanian Tax



Under a new Rumanian tax, motion pictures are subject to a turnover tax of 12.5 per cent on an arbitrarily established "average value of $2.04 per kilogram," according to a report to the United States Department of Commerce from Foy D. Kohler, American vice-consul in Bucharest. He also reports that a total of 860 pictures were imported into Rumania in 1935, compared with 948 in 1934 and 647 in 1933. Of the 1935 total, 360 were features, 350 shorts and 150 newsreels. The feature totals for 1934 and 1933 were 340 and 331, respectively.

Rifkin Takes Theatres

Charles W. Rackliffe, owner of the Suffolk and Majestic theatres in Holyoke, Mass., has leased both houses to Herman Rifkin of Boston, who takes over operation of the houses this week. Mr. Rifkin is the owner of the Republic exchange in Boston and has interests in several other New England theatres.

Columbia in Dutch Deal

Loet Barnstyn of Standard Film of Holland has closed a one-year deal with Columbia Pictures to distribute the company's current season's product in Holland. Standard also has the releasing rights in Holland for "Modern Times."

FORMAL "U" TRANSFER TO COWDIN ON APRIL 2

Interchange of Talent and Stories with General Film Distributors in London Provided

Universal Pictures formally will pass from Carl Laemmle to the J. Cheever Cowdin interests on the morning of Thursday, April 2. The purchasers had asked that the transfer be made on April 3, but the new date was agreed upon after communicating with Mr. Laemmle.

The $4,000,000 balance of the $5,500,000 option price will be paid to Mr. Laemmle in cash in Manhattan on the day of the transfer. A meeting of stockholders to elect a new board of directors will be held shortly thereafter, with the new board members to include Mr. Cowdin and Lawrence Fox of Standard Capital, Charles R. Rogers, C. M. Woolf and Herbert Wilcox. Mr. Woolf and Mr. Wilcox will be representatives of the British financial syndicate which is participating in the purchase.

Meanwhile, word comes from London that there will definitely be an interchange of stars, directors, story material and technicians between Universal and General Film Distributors there. This is provided for under the terms of the Mr. Woolf's organization's participation in the deal.

The reciprocal production terms are in addition to the arrangements for the distribution of all Universal product, including the newsreel, by General Film Distributors throughout the United Kingdom and the worldwide distribution by Universal of a selected number of the British company's films.

The production arrangements also provide for use of the Universal studios in California by producing units of General Film Distributors when desirable. Mr. Wilcox will be in charge of the production liaison in London. Frank Ditcham, head of Universal's London office, will continue with the company there as an associate of Mr. Woolf. Identified with the latter in the syndicate participating in the Universal acquisition are Lord Portal, J. Arthur Rank, Paul Lindenberg and L. W. Farrow.

It was further reported from London that a private holding company with a capital stock listing of 1,225,000 shares is being formed there to acquire the syndicate's Universal holdings. The company will be similar to the Universal Corporation which was formed in America by Standard Capital Corporation as a voting trust to acquire the holdings which are being taken over from Universal Pictures Corporation. The British interests also will be represented on the board of the new Universal Corporation by Mr. Rank and Mr. Farrow.

RKO Employees End Bowling Season

RKO home office employees wound up a highly successful bowling season last week at the Radio City alleys. Forty bowlers, the largest aggregation representing any motion picture company on the New York alleys, participated in the official list of 63 games, with first honors for a five-man team going to Captain Art White's Capitol theatre five. Second place went to the Columbia outfit with the Majestics third. George Ronan of Pathe News won individual high average for the season with 180.

Hirliman to Patent A New Color Process

George Hirliman, in Hollywood, has applied for patents on the new color process which is being used for the first time in his "Captain Calamity," now in production. The new process, "Hiracolor," is the result of five years of experiment and is a two-color process which depends upon a device affixed to the camera, and not upon specially prepared film.

Mr. Hirliman claims that his process reduces color photography costs materially, and expects within a year it will be as low as black and white. No extra lighting is required, according to Mr. Hirliman, and any color laboratory can do the developing and printing.

Abeles Warner S. A. Head

Arthur S. Abeles, who has been managing the Mexico City branch for Warner, has been promoted to supervisor of South America with headquarters at Rio de Janeiro, Joseph S. Hummel, head of Warners' foreign sales, said on his return last week from an extended tour.

Richey To Handle Ball

H. M. Richey, business manager of Allied States Exhibitors of Michigan, has been named general chairman for the third annual Variety Club Ball to be held at the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit on April 25. He succeeds M. Gottlieb, who resigned because of business pressure.

Hornstein Has Motiograph

Joe Hornstein has closed a three-year deal with Joseph B. Kleckner, president, and Walter Hirschfeld, vice-president, to handle Motiograph projectors exclusively in northern New Jersey, southern New York and eastern Connecticut.

Another Company

The Cinecolor Company of America, Inc., whose charter at Wilmington, Del., was rescinded recently by the state tax department for failure to pay assessments, was in no way connected with Cinecolor, Inc., of Hollywood.

Robert Jones Honored

Robert Edmond Jones has been awarded the Fine Arts Medal for his work in the field by the American Institute of Architects in New York. Mr. Jones is also color director for Pioneer Pictures.

Merchants to Use Oldtime Pictures

Showing of oldtime films in department stores are becoming a vogue since a recent two-weeks test of such programs at the McCreery and Company store in New York proved that they attract large crowds, according to Dorothy T. Stone of the Stone Film Library.

The merchandising trade has shown considerable interest and the plan is being extended to a number of cities. Among stores which have contracted for the "Flicker Frolics," as they have been dubbed, are Gimbel's in Philadelphia, for the entire month of May; Kaufman's, Pittsburgh, beginning June 1, probably for the month; the O'Neill store, Akron, April 25 to 27, and Famous and Barr, St. Louis, April 20 to 25. Boston and Chicago will also see them.

For these exhibitions, which are given free, the Stone library has assembled programs of films dating back to 1910, reducing them to 16 mm. to comply with fire regulations. They are presented in the spirit of the came-the-dawn era, with merchandising trailers interspersed, the show taking two hours.

The Stone library is arranging for national theatrical release of a series of 12 one-reelers titled "Twenty-five Years Ago," documentary films of an historical nature, with narration by Ford Bond and musical background.

The library has named Abe Mayer at General Service Studios, Hollywood, as coast representative.

New York Schools Add To Screening Facilities

While visual aid instruction in the public schools of New York City—"the largest school system in the world"—consists largely of still pictures, the facilities gradually are being changed to motion picture projection.

Present equipment consists of 200 auditorium and 470 classroom projection machines and 1,270 stereopticon machines, according to the annual report of the Board of Education, issued last week.

A total of 1,700 reels of film are available for showing in the school system, and 314,030 slides. Nature study films are the most popular with children, says the report.

Gerald Brooks Passes

Funeral services were held in New York Wednesday for Gerald Brooks, member of the board of Paramount, who died Tuesday following a cerebral attack. He was 52 the company was chosen again to serve on board of Paramount Publix from 1929 to 1933 and following the reorganization of the company was chosen again to serve on the board for a two-year period that was to have expired in 1937. He was connected with the firm of E. F. Hutton and Company, members of the New York Stock Exchange.

Allowances of RKO Creditors Set by Court

Stipulations providing for the allowance of 18 creditors' claims against RKO for a total of $2,427,000 have been approved by Federal Judge William Bondy in New York.

The stipulations were entered into by the Irving Trust Company, as trustee of RKO, after lengthy negotiations with the creditors, conducted by Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lumbard, counsel to the trustee. The claims were originally filed for a total of slightly more than $3,000,000 and comprise the largest single claim group disposed of in the RKO reorganization proceedings to date.

Judge Bondy took no action on an amended stipulation for the allowance of the late S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel's claim against RKO, which was originally filed for $231,500 plus the value of 10,000 shares of RKO Class A stock. A stipulation for the allowance of this claim at $179,271 had been made at the time of Mr. Rothafel's death last January. However, inasmuch as the claim was based on an uncompleted contract, the settlement stipulation was submitted to Judge Bondy for amendment to cover the period of the contract only up to the time of Mr. Rothafel's death. The amendment is still under consideration by the court.

Pathe still owns $248,000 of RKO gold notes, it was disclosed last week in another stipulation entered into with the RKO trustee. The holding represents the last of more than $3,000,000 in notes issued in 1930 when RKO acquired the Pathe assets.

The Memphis Orpheum Company, an inactive subsidiary of RKO, also filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal district court in New York, it was further revealed. The company formerly operated the Orpheum at Memphis, which had the distinction of showing the heaviest individual losses of any theatre in the RKO fold, company officials said.

"Ziegfeld" Opening Set for New York

The first showing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Great Ziegfeld" is scheduled for the Astor on Broadway, opening April 8 for an extended two-a-day run. Bernard Sobel, general press representative for Mr. Ziegfeld during the last 10 years of his producing career, has been engaged by MGM to handle the publicity and exploitation of the picture during its New York run.

Republic in Swiss Deal

Republic Pictures has closed a deal with Alfred E. Mooser of Bern for exclusive distribution of the company's product in Switzerland, according to William Satori, the Republic European representative.

75 PER CENT OF M-G-M'S ACCOUNTS FAVOR PLAN

Move to Eliminate Hangover Films Endorsed by New York ITO, Questioned by Allied

More than 75 per cent of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's exhibitor accounts have agreed to its plan of clearing the decks for the new season with the conclusion of the calendar release year by dropping 10 scheduled films and replacing them with eight others, the company headquarters in New York revealed this week.

MGM regards the large response as a demonstration of exhibitor goodwill and the trade's attitude toward the proposal rather than a demonstration of selling on the company's part.

The plan is designed to eliminate hangovers by delivering to exhibitors what is actually released this season, thereby eliminating the confusion the exhibitor encounters in buying when confronted with undelivered product. Thus by August 31 MGM plans to have all of its 1935-36 films actually released and on September 1 start with a new slate, permitting the exhibitor to book and play 1936-37 pictures at the same time.

New York exhibitors accepted the change 100 per cent in nine days after notice was sent to the branches on February 17, the company announced.

The idea may launch a new sales policy generally, as hangovers have been the rule with most companies because they invariably sell more than can be delivered, it was pointed out. MGM has fallen behind on releases for years, this being due to changes in star values and materials, necessitating alterations in production plans. The revamped schedule puts the studio on a basis of being able to deliver what is promised.

Must Deliver by August 31st

The standard exhibition contract obligates the distributor to deliver a picture by August 31 following the year of originally scheduled release. After the year has elapsed, the film, if undelivered, is subject to a new contract. Under those conditions, the exhibitor, buying from several companies and each having hangovers, is confused when he buys for the new season because the undelivered product must be taken into calculation.

Because the replacements are two less than the eliminations, MGM will deliver 48 instead of 50 sold on this year's list.

Members of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association of New York at a recent meeting endorsed the plan, John Benas, a member of the association's buying committee, pointing out that MGM was entitled to the concession as it from time to time had granted adjustments where justified. He added that the company this year reduced the list of percentage pictures to four and held that the general sales policy of the company was fair. In return, he said, independent exhibitors should be fair with MGM and accept the replacement agreement.

Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA and head of a circuit of more than 40 houses, is understood to have been the first New York exhibitor to sign the agreement. He, too, urged fairness in dealing with MGM, declaring the distributor would not have suggested the plan if it were unreasonable.

Opposition has been voiced, however, by members of regional units of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, Nathan Yamins, president of Allied of New England and of national Allied, censuring the proposal in a bulletin to members. The statement lists salaries said to be paid to MGM and Loew executives and continues:

"We have no quarrel with any man's income or earnings, but we do feel that exhibitors might bear them in mind when Metro has the nerve to ask the signing of riders permitting the transfer of high percentages from undelivered '34-'35 product to '35-'36 pictures. If Metro thinks its '34-'35 pictures still undelivered are unworthy of percentage rates, can't they afford to be men enough to forget the prohibitive rentals they demanded for undelivered 'masterpieces' without trying to grab their high rentals for pictures they do not choose to deliver? Is all sense of fairness and decency dead in this business?"

Northwest Allied Waiting

From Minneapolis comes word that a number of exhibitors have asked Northwest Allied for advice in the matter and that organization is withholding a decision pending receipt of an opinion from Abram F. Myers, national Allied general counsel.

"The Great Ziegfeld," one of the films withdrawn, will be roadshown, beginning at the Astor in New York April 8, and MGM is not promising that the other nine will be delivered in 1936-37. They are "Forty Days of Musa Dagh," two Joan Crawfords, one Clark Gable, two Jean Harlows, one Jeanette MacDonald, one Grace Moore and one unidentified musical.

In place of this group, the company agrees to deliver:

"The Unguarded Hour," with Loretta Young, Franchot Tone, Roland Young, Lewis Stone. (Completed.)

"Speed," with Madge Evans, Roland Young, Ted Healy, Chester Morris. (Completed.)

"Night in Glengyle" (cast not announced).

"Lady Comes to Town," with Clark Gable, Joan Crawford.

"Piccadilly Jim," with Robert Taylor, Rosalind Russell.

"Captains Courageous," Rudyard Kipling story with Freddie Bartholomew.

"His Brother's Wife," with Franchot Tone.

"Love on the Run," with Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy.

The rider stipulates that the replacements "are to be furnished and exhibited and/or paid for" pursuant to all conditions of the 1935-36 license agreement.

PRICE FIXING ARGUED BY BRITISH EXHIBITORS

Power Asked to Expel Association Members If They Flout the Official Rental Maximum

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Price fixing was the one trade problem of wide importance discussed at the annual general meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, held at the Hotel Victoria in London. It came up on a proposal of the London and Home Counties Branch to amend Rule 8(a) to read:

"To secure unity of action among proprietors of cinemas and other places of entertainment and in particular to secure that film rentals paid or payable by members of the association shall not exceed the maximum sums fixed from time to time by the Council of the Association in accordance with these rules."

With the exception of the first phrase, the whole of this suggested rule is new. Its appearance on the agenda reflected the determination of a certain section of exhibitors, in face of several rebuffs, to make the establishment of maximum film prices a function of the CEA and, still more important, to make enforcement a matter of CEA discipline.

Previous efforts to win this end by various means, including a system of cash deposits forfeitable in the event of exhibitor payments over the official maximum, have failed largely because it was declared to be outside the constitution of the CEA to punish delinquents. The attempt to amend the constitution itself was therefore a frontal attack of some importance.

Power of Expulsion Sought

Ken A. Nyman, moving the amendment, made plain that what was wanted was the power to expel members disregarding an official rental maximum and Jack Alexander, seconding, hinted that still more stringent penalties might be requested at a later date. In face of considerable doubts expressed by a former CEA president, E. E. Trounson, and others, based on difficulties of enforcing the rule, the amendment was carried, on a show of hands, by 50 to 35. As a two-thirds majority is required for an amendment to the Rules, it was declared lost, but a card vote was challenged by the movers.

Will Ask Quota Relief

Another record attendance was achieved at the annual banquet of the association the same evening, more than 900 being present at Grosvenor House. Viscount Monsell, First Lord of the Admiralty, was the guest of honor.

T. H. Fligelstone, the new president of the CEA, made one rather important statement of policy in the course of his speech. He declared that exhibitors were experiencing great difficulty in complying with the increased quota and that, in the immediate future, the association would have to pay a visit to the president of the Board of Trade and that they would have "plenty to say" to him and to his Parliamentary secretary.

At the moment the position in regard to revision of the Films Act is that the president of the Board of Trade has promised to set up an official Committee of Enquiry. Presumably, the CEA demand for a reduction of the quota will be referred to this body.

Simultaneously the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries has been evolving a producers' policy and trying, apparently without success, to obtain CEA approval for it, all the time, a confidential report from its own Advisory Committee has been in the possession of the Board of Trade, which declines to publish it. Questions in the House of Commons bring very little enlightenment of the Government's own views, though a member this week did elicit from Mr. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, the statement that he thought the Act "was achieving the object for which it was passed."

Color, by Goldwyn and Lubitsch

Sam Goldwyn and Ernst Lubitsch, both of whom arrived on the Berengaria, seem to be agreed about two things: the importance of color and the significance of Russia. Both are scheduled to make tours of the Soviet studio—with a hint that there may be interesting television experiments to see in that quarter—and both, at their press receptions, supported the idea that we are in for a color cycle. Mr. Goldwyn said "The Hurricane" and "Goldwyn Follies" would both be in color and Mr. Lubitsch declared "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" to have converted him. Incidentally, Mr. Lubitsch turned aside questions about his rumored picture for Alexander Korda with a reminder that his Paramount contract had a year to run. Mr. Korda came into the Goldwyn story also, of course. He is to be loaned the Goldwyn Girls and, by way of makeweight, Mr. Goldwyn will try to find a Girl or two more while he is in London.

Warner Production Increase

Additional increase of production for the Warner-Teddington studios is expected to be affirmed by H. M. Warner and Sam Morris on their arrival shortly in London. Twenty pictures a year is the plan. More personnel is to be imported from Hollywood. Russell Medcraft as story editor is a first transplanting.

Herman Fellner Found Dead

Herman Fellner, managing director of Cecil Films, Ltd., was found dead in his home in London Monday. He apparently had hanged himself.

Mr. Fellner, who was 58, was largely responsible for introducing the sales policy in London of selling territorial rights to films instead of single prints instituted in 1913. The earliest films he handled by this method were "His Other Self" and "Quo Vadis."

He brought Jack Hulbert and Cicely Courtneidge to the screen and was at one time with Ufa as a producer and production manager for Gaumont British. His first picture for Cecil Films was "Public Nuisance No. 1," recently completed.

Hake to New York for 20th Century-Fox Post

C. V. Hake, present manager for Twentieth Century-Fox in Japan and Korea, has been transferred to the head office in New York in an important executive capacity, according to a cable from W. J. Hutchinson, foreign manager, in London. Mr. Hake will arrive in New York about the first of May and one of his first duties will be the organization and conducting of the 1936 Overseas Kent Drive.

Mr. Hake has represented Twentieth Century-Fox and its predecessor company, Fox film, in Japan since 1928, and has acquired a very high standing in the motion picture business there. Prior to joining Fox Film, he had had extensive experience, with First National Pictures and with FBO. At FBO he was assistant to Colvin Brown, now vice-president and general manager of Quigley Publications, and at First National he was Japanese manager.

AMPA Names Seven To Pick Officers

With 15 names suggested, the seven members to be elected to the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' nominating committee are: Charles Leonard of Universal, George Gerhard of Cosmopolitan Productions, Ralph Lund and Rutgers Neilson of RKO, Ray Gallagher of Quigley Publications, Tom Waller of Paramount, and Milton Silver of National Screen Service.

Because of his work in connection with the Naked Truth Dinner and Movie Studio Party last Saturday, Ralph Rolan of March of Time has been made an honorary member of the organization.

Republic Sponsors Club

The Young Explorers' Club, new national organization for boys and girls, is being sponsored by Republic Pictures, with M. B. Liebman as the organizing director. Backed by national magazine advertising, including Young America, the organization will be used to exploit "Darkest Africa" and other serials of the company.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 14.—(A) How often should knife switches be inspected and what faults should be looked for? (B) Of what does rubber covered insulation consist? Describe it fully. (C) Describe the cathode of a photoelectric cell; the anode.

Answer to Question No. 9

Bluebook School Question No. 9 was: (A) What are wows and what is flutter? (B) Describe the oil well of a sleeve type bearing? How is it lubricated? (C) Of what does the projector automatic fire shutter consist? (D) Explain why it is impossible for any lens to focus light to a point.

The following made creditable answers: C. L. Loft made excellent replies to questions No. 7 and 8, but too late for proper credit. S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; G. E. Rau; B. Vietti; J. B. Prater; W. C. Brown; W. Limmroth; C. L. Loft; A. L. Cooper; F. H. and L. Klar and T. H. Morton; R. A. Hooker; J. J. Cuddy; H. C. Goodman and N. N. Gray; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleigh; F. Simms and O. L. Daris; Nic Granby; D. Emmerson; W. D. Samuels; M. and J. Devoy; C. L. Sexton; T. L. and G. Daniels; C. Hawkens; H. Winkle and R. R. Robins; H. K. Abernathy and R. Tompkins; L. N. Morgan; G. Thompson; G. Johnson and L. R. Spooner; B. B. Hornstein; N. R. Tomlinson; H. D. Lilly; K. L. Knight and L. Henderson; G. N. Guidotti, F. L. and N. Savlor; J. N. Perkins and R. Mills; T. R. Fanning and W. Burns; B. L. Jennings; R. W. Williams and J. Pracer; J. T. McGuire and A. L. Long; S. E. and C. Gay; H. T. Todd and L. A. Dodson; R. T. Tomlinson and D. N. Richards; D. McGee and N. E. Olliver; B. T. Henkle and J. Gillespie; D. Pollock; H. J. Billingsworth; L. B. Knowles; W. H. Remick and D. L. Slinger; H. B. Maulding; R. Marks and B. L. Mathew; H. T. Granger; F. I. Daniels and F. Madden; L. B. Hardy; J. R. Middleton; V. Sanders and J. Jensen; J. Jones and B. R. Shepherd; L. N. Henry; A. L. Cooper; G. Sargent and S. G. Sanders; K. M. Michael; G. H. Anderson; O. L. Harris; F. T. Price and H. G. Lomis.

We will listen to our old friends Evans and Rau first. They say, "Wows are relatively slow changes in pitch of the sound caused by variations in speed of the drive motor. Since sound is recorded at constant speed, in order that it be correctly reproduced the reproduction speed must not only be constant, but also exactly equal to the speed of recording. Flutter is rapid variations in speed of the sound track past the sound aperture. It may be due to rapid variations in speed of drive motor, to the gear train, to a dirty sound sprocket or to anything else that may affect rapid change in speed of sound track past the aperture."

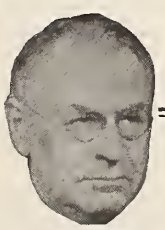
B. DeVietti puts it thus: "The sound track must pass the sound aperture at precisely the same unvarying speed at which the sound was recorded, if perfect sound reproduction is to be attained. Should there be any unsteadiness of speed, a condition will be introduced that is known as 'wows' or 'flutter,' which it is being determined wholly by the rapidity of the speed changes. If they be rather slow, a groaning effect will be imparted, commonly termed a wow. If the speed change be relatively rapid, the effect will be a fluttering of the sound."

J. R. Prater says, "Wows are low frequency changes in pitch of sound, caused by unevenness in speed in either the recording or reproducing apparatus. Flutter is an unsteadiness in sound pitch similar to wows, but of higher frequency."

(B) M. and J. Devoy say, "The oil well of a sleeve type bearing is a depression or cavity under the bearing. Hanging down into this cavity is a ring of metal which rests on the journal, a slot being cut in the upper half of the bearing for that purpose. As the journal rotates, the ring does also, and since its under part dips into the oil with which the aforesaid cavity is partly filled, naturally it carries oil up to the bearing, where it is distributed along the length of same by means of suitable slots cut in the metal of the bearing."

W. Limmroth describes it thus: "A sleeve type oil well consists of a depression in the casting immediately under the bearing. It has an opening for filling the same with oil, and a second for draining. A metal ring is hung on the journal by means of a slot in the upper bearing. This ring hangs down, its lower part being immersed in the oil with which the depression is filled. In operation this ring rotates as the shaft revolves, and in so doing, of course carries oil up to the journal."

(C) A. L. Cooper says, "The automatic fire shutter of a projector consists of a mechanically controlled sheet of metal that automatically drops down between the cooling plate and aperture when projection speed drops below a safe limit, in modern practice about 60 feet per minute. It rises automatically when projection speed rises above the safe limit."



D. Danielson says, "The automatic fire shutter consists of a metal shutter located between the cooling plate and aperture. The shutter mechanism is so constructed that this shutter is raised and held out of the light beam, either by a centrifugal force governor or a friction arrangement so long as the film is passing the aperture at sufficient speed to prevent it from being heated to the point of combustion. When, however, the speed of passage is reduced to the danger point, it is automatically dropped down over the aperture, thus cutting off the light beam until safe speed is again reached."

(D) C. L. Loft gives us a correct answer, as follows: "A lens focuses light rays in such manner that an image of a light source or object is formed, which same may be either smaller, larger or equal size with the light source or object, therefore unless the light source or object itself be a point, it cannot focus light emanating from it to a point."

I might remark that only 37 out of hundreds made correct answer to this one, though quite a number more answered in such manner that it is possible they have the correct idea, but expressed it wrongly. Here, for example, is a very nearly correct reply, but oddly expressed. It is wholly correct, save for the first sentence, which says each pin point is a light ray. Now the writer (R. A. Hooker) is in error there, for each pin point sends out a cone of light. (See page 127 of your Bluebook.) However, such an error does not condemn an answer, for in general Brother Hooker has the right idea. He says:

"Every point in a light source is a light ray. These rays are either collected by a mirror or a condenser collector and passed on to the projection lens. Now since the light source has area, its image could not, of course, be brought to a point. It could be either of equal size with the source or larger or smaller. As I understand it, these rays do not all meet at any common point in the projector optical train, but may only be focused at a point outside of and beyond it."

Now that is a basically correct answer, though perhaps a bit mixed, save in the point named, but it shows that this good brother in a far-off mountain town is using his Bluebook to good purpose. He is studying his profession. If you could examine some of the answers to this question you would understand the need for the Bluebook and this "school."

UA GETTING OUTLETS IN CHICAGO ENVIRONS

Circuit for Showings in Towns with Mobile Equipment Being Planned by the Independents

by BILL CROUCH
in Chicago

The first move in a plan to show United Artists' pictures in towns where they are not playing at present was started this week with the leasing of the Masonic Temple Auditorium in Elgin by Tom Norman and Fred H. Schmitendorf. The Temple Auditorium, as the new theatre will be called, will be remodeled and redecorated and equipped for sound pictures. The place seats about 1,200 and will be known as the "home of United Artists Pictures."

The theatre, which will be opened formally on Easter Sunday, April 12, with "Modern Times," is being leased on a one-year-basis with an option for four more years. There will be a special "midnight premiere" on Easter Eve. The Masonic group will receive a percentage of the receipts as rental and the pictures will be played on a percentage basis. E. P. Pickler, UA salesman, represented that company in the deal.

DeVry equipment will be installed in the new house, which will have a large "daylight" screen.

The reason for United Artists' great interest in the theatre is that its pictures have been sold away from the Great States circuit, which operates three theatres in the town playing about 550 pictures yearly from other companies. This will give UA an opening wedge in this territory and enable it to play its pictures in Elgin for the first time this year.

Mr. Norman said this is but the start of his theatre operations in this territory, his next move being the opening of a house in Kewanee, another Great States stronghold.

Mr. Norman, who has been identified with film selling and exhibition in this part of the country the last 20 years, is also planning a revolutionary change in exhibition in many Illinois small towns that have inadequate theatre facilities. He owns and operates a deluxe DeVry sound truck with public address and sound motion picture equipment. With this unit he can go into such towns and present talking pictures in halls or auditoriums.

As soon as the Elgin and Kewanee theatres are in operation Mr. Norman plans to start a small circuit in the surrounding towns which have no theatres or which do not play United Artists pictures, and present talkers there once or twice weekly. Towns which are now under serious consideration for this service are: Foreston, Lanark, Gray's Lake and Hanover. He plans to get started on this type of exhibition early in May.

United Artists in this battle for bookings in downstate houses may start to build theatres if the desired results are not obtained under present plans.

Fred Anderson, operator of the Anderson Circuit, said that his firm has leased the Fargo theatre in DeKalb, and has not participated in a pooling arrangement with C. G. Lekander, owner of the house, as was stated in this column last week. Anderson also operates the Egyptian and Barb theatres in DeKalb.

Opening of Essaness' newest theatre, the Lake, in Oak Park, is set for April 11. This new modern house will seat 1,400 and is one of the finest theatres of its size in the Middle West.

Another house to open here this spring is the B&K Will Rogers, which will be ready for occupancy by June 1. This is being built at Belmont and Central avenues.

Other B&K houses which have been or are being remodeled are the Berwyn, in Berwyn, the Riviera, the old B&K house, which has been thoroughly renovated, the Pantheon, the Manor, the Varsity and the Harding, which has a new front now being built.

The Chicago Theatre is having some work done that is very unusual, so much so, in fact, that it is being kept secret until finished.

A basketball game between professional teams, the Duffy Florals of Chicago and the Cooper Clothiers of Windsor, Canada, was played on the stage of the B & K Southtown theatre last Tuesday night. Next winter the plan will be tried in four or five houses. Results of the contest last week were reported favorable from an audience standpoint.

"Klondike Annie," the Mae West picture, which was booked into the Chicago theatre for a two-weeks engagement, didn't come up to expectations at the box office and plans for the second week were dropped, "Colleen" being set in instead and "Annie" moving to the Garrick for the second Loop week. Hearst papers carried no advertising on the picture nor did they carry any editorials current with the showing. Local film critics gave the picture a thorough "panning."

Allied of Illinois holds a smoker this week in the Roosevelt Room of the Morrison hotel. Special entertainment will be provided and the newly elected officers will be installed. Two women members of Allied, Mrs. Mary Rudolf of the Emmett theatre and Florence Paley of the Haymarket theatre, got invitations but were much surprised to read "For Men Only" on them.

Herb Elisburg was taken suddenly ill the first of the week and has been in a hospital for observation.

Members of Warner exchange held a party at the Warner Club headquarters the other evening and had one grand time. Circuit bookers and buyers and the press were guests of the Warner film men. The affair was under the supervision of Leo Blank, branch manager.

Clyde Eckhardt, rested and bronzed by the Florida sun, is back from a three-weeks vacation trip to St. Petersburg.

Mary Pickford stopped over at the Blackstone hotel the other morning before taking the Santa Fe Chief to the Coast. Claudette Colbert and her mother also stopped at this hotel while here between trains en route to New York. Miss Colbert said she was going East to get her Easter wardrobe.

Bette Davis was another who stopped over between trains. The B&K publicity staff staged a breakfast for the press at the Blackstone while Miss Davis was here.

Reports from all exchanges are to the effect that all city deals for new product will carry the seven days extra clearance that B & K demanded last year and failed to get. It was generally agreed by the distributors last fall that B & K would get the extra clearance asked on deals for the coming year.

Jack Miller of the Exhibitors' Association is in Washington attending to matters pertaining to current film legislation. He will be gone about a week.

J. S. Markstein is in Dallas, Texas, making plans for the showing of Screeno in two specially built auditoriums at the Centennial Fair.

Joe Leo, en route to the Coast, stopped off for a few hours to visit with Henri Elman. Another visitor at Henri's Capitol Film exchange was Al Friedlander, vice-president of First Division Pictures.

Under the guidance of Harry K. (5 suit) Smythe, the "Capa April Foolies" are fast reaching definite form. This dinner-dance being staged by the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association will be held April 15, at the Old Town Room of the Sherman hotel. According to Mr. Smythe the program will start at 10 p.m. Al Trace and his CBS band will provide the music and visiting film, stage and screen celebrities will be on hand. Col. Lou Abramson at the Allied offices has charge of tickets.

A large benefit show was held Tuesday for the widow and children of Irving Fehlberg, assistant manager of the Midwest theatre who was killed by a moron-maniac two weeks ago. The $5,000 proceeds of the event, held at the Midwest, will be put in trust for the widow and her family.

Dave Dubin stopped over to see friends on Film Row before leaving for the Coast.

Margot Napier won top honors with her one-act play the other evening. Looks like another winning season for the producer-directress.

Walter Brown journeyed to Minneapolis this week to confer with members of the Ross Federal staff there for a few days. He returned the end of the week.

So successful was United Artists' new plan for handling midnight previews at the screening of "These Three" that the same plan was tried again for the midnight showing of "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Special passes for those who attend the showings at the United Artists Theatre for business purposes have helped matters.

Maxine Smith is the new motion picture editor of the Chicago American. Miss Smith, who was formerly in this department and more recently has been doing special assignments, succeeds Sam Morris, who resigned.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended March 21, 1936, from 112 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $1,065,633, a decrease of $90,239 from the total of the preceding week ending March 14, 1936, when 107 theatres in 17 major cities of the country aggregated $1,155,872.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

You have no doubt heard of hermits. Well, we're him. All we can do is to sit here in the house and wonder if the United States is still on a paying basis or has gone haywire.

If we were in New York we'd have something to write about; if we were in Michigan we'd have something to write about, or if we were in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado or Wisconsin we'd have something to write about. Or if we were in Oregon, Washington or Arizona we would have something to write about, and if we were in Hollywood we'd have plenty to say. But to have to sit here in the house where we can see nothing but the pictures on the wall and watch the cat and dog chase one another around the house makes it mighty hard to think of anything worthwhile to write about.

We can remember the towns we have visited from Pennsylvania to the Pacific; we can remember the theatres and just where they are located and just how they look but, if we were to be hung (as probably we ought to be), we can't remember the names of the boys who operate them, and it makes us feel like a fellow said to us the other day, "Say, your breath is familiar but I can't quite get your name."

About the only joy we can get out of life right now is in recalling the boys we have called on in the past ten years and the many lovely visits we have had with them. Sometimes, we feel like swearing, but swearing never did anyone any good, and besides that, Ernie won't let us swear in this colyum.

As this is being written the papers report the strike of those elevator operators in New York is letting up, or down—or both. When we think of those people down there having to climb stairs to get to their offices to work it makes us wonder why our Pilgrim Fathers didn't land in Russia instead of on Plymouth Rock. As we understand it, the Herald office is located on the 30th floor of one of those wigwams. The strike didn't light in Rockefeller Center, so we haven't any chance to be sorry that Dennie Shea and A-Mike Vogel had to climb up and down those stairs three or four times a day and we'll betcha that Gertrude Merriam would have been about two-thirds out of wind. There's no darn sense in living in New York anyhow. But no matter if they should have to climb thirty flights of stairs, the Herald would be got out on time just the same. They can't head those boys off no matter how they fix it.

Notwithstanding we are located out in the corn and hog country and surrounded by snow and water, there is occasionally an oasis there on the horizon. We just got a letter from W. R. Baughn, Jr., of the Soo theatre at South Sioux City, Nebraska, asking us to have his subscription to the Herald renewed for him, and including his check, as evidence of good faith. We already have done that, and we slipped the check and a letter out to the Herald when the Warden wasn't looking. It is a mighty nice feeling to get a letter from the boys asking us to have their subscription renewed, and it is especially so when they enclose a check. Thanks, Mr. Baughn. The Herald, as well as myself, wishes you an abundance of success.

While we are on the subject, we would like to call the attention of those "Jayhawkers" down in the "Sunflower State" to keep their dogs tied up, for when the weather settles and the roads are passable we expect to invade the state and plant the HERALD banner at the corner of every cornfield and shout "Pro bono publico." By gosh, that's the way we feel about it right now. This goes for Sam Blair at Belleville, too. No matter if he did lose four bucks on Al Smith.

Didja ever go to Cedar Falls, Iowa? But maybe you don't know where Cedar Falls is. Cedar Falls is located on highway No. 20 that runs from Cleveland, Ohio, to the east entrance of Yellowstone National Park in the northwest corner of Wyoming. This is a pretty long highway. We know, for we have traveled about every inch of it, and some of it six or eight times. Cedar Falls is about eight miles northwest of Waterloo, and Waterloo is a pretty good town in spite of its being so close to Cedar Falls. Cedar Falls is on the bank of the Cedar river, and what makes the town of such importance is the bullhead fishing in the Cedar river and the Regent theatre which is operated by Mr. M. R. Blair. When you are travelling No. 20 you should be sure to stop at Cedar Falls and visit the Regent and you are sure to see a good show and you will meet one of Iowa's very prominent theatre managers, and you will find Mr. Blair a very fine gentleman. He has just sent us a check with a request for us to renew his subscription to the Herald. This makes another oasis in this corn, hog and alfalfa desert, and a few jackrabbits.

While we are on the subject it might be of interest to you to know that Nebraska doesn't owe a cent to anybody, and Antelope county (that's where we live) is one of three counties out of the ninety-three in the state that doesn't owe a cent, and our warrants are at par and our jail is as empty as a politician's gourd. There are a lot of us that ought to be in there, probably, but we are not. And we don't have to climb stairs out here either.

An Open Letter to Russell Armentrout

Dear Russell:

We are wondering if you are still operating a theatre in Savannah, Missouri, on the bank of the Mississippi river. If you are, and if the high water has backed up into your theatre (which we hope it hasn't) and if you are catching any catfish on your stage, as the boy in Beardstown, Illinois, did that time, please send us a catfish or two, for we haven't had anything to eat since day after tomorrow. Remember what we have always told you, that if you eat too many prunes just before going to bed you will dream of blondes instead of brunettes. And remember to keep sober, just as you always have.

When the birds begin to sing
In the tree-tops in the spring
And we hear their glorious music everywheres,
Then we hope their joyous noise
Will reach those elevator boys
Then the New York folks won't have to climb up stairs.

The other night we went to the Moon theatre and saw Franchot Tone and Bette Davis in "Dangerous." At the end of the second reel we felt like we wanted to get up and go home, it was so draggy, but from then on it began to pick up and before it finished it had us wide awake and we were ready to give three cheers for "Dangerous." We'd give two bits to see that one, or one as good, any time.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Ambassador

RED BLOOD OF COURAGE: Kermit Maynard, Ann Sheridan—Acceptable western entertainment that should please where they do not demand major company standards. We played it with another feature and received no complaints.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Columbia

ESCAPE FROM DEVIL'S ISLAND: Victor Jory, Florence Rice—This is different than the average picture. Plenty of thrills and a pretty good story. Pleased almost everyone who saw it. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 29-March 1.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GALLANT DEFENDER: Charles Starrett, Joan Perry—This is the best western we have ever played, the singing will make you want to run it over and over and when it's time to send it back, you will want to keep the fourth reel. I hope Columbia will continue to put plenty of singing in their westerns. Running time, 57 minutes. Played February 15-16.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LONE WOLF RETURNS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Gail Patrick—A very good detective yarn. Nicely produced in an atmosphere of suave surroundings. Douglas and Patrick make an interesting team. Tala Birell good, also. Played March 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS AVENGER: Charles Starrett, Joan Perry—Pleasing western entertainment that held its own on a double bill. It is strong enough to single. —J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

REVENGE RIDER: Tim McCoy, Billie Seward—Another western that played to above average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tillbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SHE MARRIED HER BOSS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Michael Bartlett—Regardless of Columbia's comparison in their press sheets, heralds, etc., this one is not to be compared to "It Happened One Night." The latter has everything for mass appeal and in the bargain Clark Gable, who is a big favorite everywhere, and he was never better than in "It Happened One Night." "She Married Her Boss" is a sophisticated story with a good title and a marvelous child actress whose dialogue is clear and understandable. Aside of this the cast meant nothing and no favorable comments were made. Business below average. Played February 15-17.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERN FRONTIER: Ken Maynard — Good western; the horse is exceptionally well trained. However, the ending of the picture was so abrupt that it left the patrons disappointed, due, no doubt, to the print being shot. Played March 5.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—Usual Cagney-O'Brien picture. Well liked by practically everybody in this county. The shots of the plane flying in the fog are too obviously faked. Even the kids could tell the difference. Played February 23-24.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—There is one trouble with this team: indistinct, fast talk and at times so loud that it cracks the speaker and the next so low that it takes all my RCA has. There are few people who can speak exceptionally fast and at the same time distinctly. Cut it out! This picture would have drawn exceptionally well on my serial night, but being a percentage arrangement I was compelled to use it two nights and business only average. Played February 18-19.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

I FOUND STELLA PARISH: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—Kay Francis still draws better than the average star and that is all that saved the day on this one. Her performance was excellent, but the picture as a whole failed to please. Played March 14. —Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

FIRST A GIRL: Jessie Matthews, Sonnie Hale—Producers should make more like it. Patrons raved about it; returned date requested. Running time, 70 minutes.—Robert Guise, Wareham Theatre, Manhattan, Kan. General patronage.

MAN WHO KNEW TOO MUCH, THE: Leslie Banks, Edna Best, Peter Lorre—This is a very well done cinema, but it seemed to go over the heads of our audience; in fact, they missed the entire idea. However, we did not lose any on playing it. The British can put out better pictures if they want to. I think this was made to please, but it just didn't work out right, as the American public want more shooting in their gangster pictures, while there was not much shooting, but more acting by talking and laying plans to do things. It was a fine picture for a group who wish to study the expression of artistic ability. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Adult patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CASINO MURDER CASE, THE: Paul Lukas, Alison Skipworth—A fair picture that could have been good had Metro not used Paul Lukas and his accent for Philo Vance.—D. B. White, Ritz Theatre, Fernandina, Fla. General patronage.

I LIVE MY LIFE: Joan Crawford, Brian Aherne —Good show that kept them guessing to the very last end. Running time, 10 reels. Played February 23-24.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S.D. Small town patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—The direction is expert and forceful, the acting of Beery and Cooper very good and some of the scenes very thrilling, but Beery doesn't pull here and Cooper's crying even keeps the kids away.—D. B. White, Ritz Theatre, Fernandina, Fla. General patronage.

RENDEZVOUS: William Powell, Rosalind Russell —A lively and amusing melodrama. One of the most mystifying pictures produced by Metro. Powell gives an expert performance, as does Rosalind Russell. Business was fair but it seemed good following immediately after extremely poor business on "O'Shaughnessy's Boy."—D. B. White, Ritz Theatre, Fernandina, Fla. General patronage.

RIFFRAFF: Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy—Uneven sound recording was outstanding in the print that I had; very annoying to the patrons. Comments on the picture differed. Business above average the first night, but hit low the second night, perhaps due to rain. Played March 10-11.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

RIFFRAFF: Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy—A rowdy story of fisher folk. Pleased in our location generally. Awfully small second night crowd, however. Played March 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—A worthy production; but in these times of depression we shudder at this story of the Revolution as it flickers on the screen. Business very much below average for this gruesome, bloody entertainment, if entertainment is the right word. Running time, too long. Played February 25-26.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—Much superior to "David Copperfield," but then, we guess it's a better story to start with. Beautifully produced and played throughout. Once again, though, we can only report a fair house for another special. It's difficult to blame the picture, though, as it is truly great. Played March 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHIPSAW: Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy—For the love of mike! When are these gangster pictures going to end Who wants them? Certainly not the Purity Leagues! Don't forget that in every town, large or small, the majority of people know what is right and wrong. Then when the Purity Leagues sweep down and the poor exhibitor gets ruined, then the shouting and alarm. Myrna Loy is easy on the eyes; business above average. Played February 22-24.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WHIPSAW: Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—A different sort of story that gets across nicely. Very satisfactory entertainment. Played March 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL: Sir Guy Standing, Tom Brown, Richard Cromwell—This story has been filmed so many times that it can offer very little in the way of originality but is good entertainment, nevertheless. Our patronage enjoyed every moment of it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

ANYTHING GOES: Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman, Charles Ruggles—Not much to story but one of the cleverest musicals of the year. Crosby turns in the best performance of his career. Ruggles at his best. Clever incidents throughout entire film. Song hits that will send them out humming. Pleased 100%. Above average business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 1-3.—F. Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ANYTHING GOES: Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman, Charlie Ruggles—Pleased well, but Crosby is losing his box office appeal, especially with the women. Good enough to play big. Charlie Ruggles steals the show. Played March 1-2.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

ANYTHING GOES: Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman, Charles Ruggles—A very good musical. Nothing great. I wish the producers would either make a contract that the stars were either to play the screen or quit. I think the public gets tired of hearing them all week on radio, and then try to make them like it on the screen. Running time, 10 reels. Played February 14. —C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Frances Langford, Betty Grable—It's a gay little picture, but is not the picture it could have been had they stuck more to the swell story it comes from, namely, "The Charm School." To any unfamiliar with that fine play, it will satisfy; to those who enjoyed the original, it may disappoint. Played February 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DESIRE: Marlene Dietrich, Gary Cooper—Just finished playing Paramount's "Desire" with below average Sunday and Monday business. The story was interesting and clever with the usual happy ending. Many of my patrons remarked that they liked the picture very much, but were tempted to stay at home, as they thought there would be "just one love scene after another." The trailer did lean that way. Played March 15-16.—Jerry Waller, Elroy Theatre, Inc., Elroy, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S A GREAT LIFE: Joe Morrison, Rosalind Keith—A nifty piece of film fare. Should satisfy any neighborhood house fine. Plenty of real human interest stuff, good singing and some fine comedy from Chic Sale. A story of the CCC boys and okay. Played March 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KLONDIKE ANNIE: Mae West, Victor McLaglen —Average Tuesday-Wednesday gross. For some reason or other Mae has never been a good draw for my town. Thought the picture was entertaining and don't see why the bluenoses are raising such a fuss. Played March 3-4.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee-Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

MILKY WAY, THE: Harold Lloyd, Adolphe Menjou—Chalk this one up as one of the funniest pictures you'll play this year. Lloyd almost forgotten but he brings back his own line of comedy that had them rolling in the aisles. Forget the star and sell it as the comedy of the year. Guaranteed this one and did not have one complaint. Lloyd would be a big money star if he'd make more films. Had patrons that hadn't been in the theatre in years. Grossed above average. Running time, 86½ minutes. Played March 8-10.—F. Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MILKY WAY, THE: Harold Lloyd, Adolphe Menjou—A good Lloyd picture, but no business. Perhaps because he has made too few pictures. Played March 8-9.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

NEVADA: Larry Crabbe, Kathleen Burke—They must have searched the whole globe for the amazingly beautiful scenic shots shown in this and that is not all. It is so far ahead of most westerns that it gives the rest something to shoot for. Crabbe is good and I would not wonder but his name helps box office. Business good three days last part of week.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ROSE OF THE RANCHO: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, Willie Howard—Terrible picture. Had dozens of people get up and walk out. The singing was only fair, considering who the stars were, and the story very poor. The Jewish comedian was very good, except that the jokes and cracks he used came over on the Mayflower. Played March 15-16.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

SO RED THE ROSE: Margaret Sullavan, Randolph Scott, Walter Connolly—A very good feature. Drew a little extra here. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 6-7.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla. Small town patronage.

TIMOTHY'S QUEST: Dickie Moore, Eleanore Whitney—A nice little picture. A family picture. Good acting by the small children. Not big. But a nice little feature. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 11.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla. Small town patronage.

VIRGINIAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Richard Arlen, Walter Huston, Mary Brian—Talkies have gone a long way since this was produced. Played March 11. —J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—A nice picture. Will please most of patrons. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 12.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla. Small town patronage.

BREAK OF HEARTS: Katharine Hepburn, Charles Boyer—A very good picture which was Katharine Hepburn's poorest. Did average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CHATTERBOX: Anne Shirley, Phillips Holmes—Not too good. Some thought fair, others panned it. Running time, seven reels. Played February 19.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla. Small town patronage.

LADY CONSENTS, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall—A swell program picture. Did better than average week day business. Several people said it compared favorably with "Magnificent Obsession." Played March 10.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Preston Foster, Dorothy Wilson—A picture that is good, but a business killer. Give us a good common sense show of latest type and we will be o. k. Such old history is too much a thing of the past to bring in the dough. Running time, 10 reels. Played March 13-14.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S.D. Small town patronage.

MUSS 'EM UP: Preston Foster, Margaret Callahan—Disjointed construction—no heads or tails, or why, to anything. However, no weekend kicks. The title seemed too gory to the ladies and they stayed away. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

OLD MAN RHYTHM: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable—Just an ordinary program picture with an old man in his second childhood going to college and showing the boys how it should be done. Played to below average crowd. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 22-23.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE: Gene Raymond, Margaret Callahan—Very good. People seemed to enjoy it here. Raymond very good. Hope they keep him off the air. Running time, eight reels. Played March 4.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla. Small town patronage.

TO BEAT THE BAND: Hugh Herbert, Helen Broderick—I guess this must be a Musical Comedy—as it has a "screwy" story and a lot of vaudeville sequences that have nothing to do with whatever plot there is—but it will please the average patron, at least in a small town. Played March 7-8.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

TWO IN THE DARK: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame—A real good mystery type. A little different. Did not draw for us. Running time, eight reels. Played February 28-29.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla. Small town patronage.

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN: Preston Foster, Jane Wyatt—Very good program. Running time, seven reels. Played February 26.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla, Small town patronage.

Republic

FRISCO WATERFRONT: Ben Lyon, Helen Twelvetrees—This picture hardly offers the action and story that it's title would lead the patron to expect. It is best suited for double bills as it is only average entertainment of an unexciting sort. The audience response was only fair.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres. Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

LEAVENWORTH CASE, THE: Norman Foster, Donald Cook, Jean Rouverol—A routine murder mystery which isn't so mystifying because the murderer is made known at the beginning of the film. Donald Cook is shown as the master mind whose pet monkey does the dirty work. Maude Eburne as an old eccentric of the Leavenworth household contributes the only standout performance in a somewhat indifferent cast. J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RED RIVER VALLEY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Frances Grant—Gene Autry has merited our confidence in him. When these westerns were announced for production and we purchased them, Doubting Thomases shook their heads; Autry was practically unknown to film audiences; Republic might not give its westerns major company quality. Ignoring these warnings we placed the advertising material on "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" two weeks in advance in our lobby and the doormen and cashiers were besieged with requests for the date. Needless to say the engagement was profitable and the paramount question among our patrons was, "When are you going to have Autry again?" Each succeeding picture has drawn and pleased. His latest, "Red River Valley," is the best of the series. Aside from having a sensible and well written story, it has innumerable directorial touches which show care and thought were put into its making. Its almost continuous musical score highlights the action and is a relief from the library phonographic music which western producers so frequently resort to in order to cut expenses. And—glory be—there isn't a single Dunning process shot in the picture; even close-up scenes during wild pursuit riding are the real thing and not old action clips thrown on a screen with the star prancing before it. Autry sings "Red River Valley" and other numbers and is cleverly assisted by Smiley Burnette, with his comedy songs.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth Texas. General patronage.

RETURN OF JIMMY VALENTINE, THE: Roger Pryor, Charlotte Henry—This was part of a double program with "King Solomon of Broadway." Edmund Lowe helped bring in the customers and "Jimmy Valentine" did the entertaining. Roger Pryor makes this picture one of Republic's best releases of the season.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

TUMBLING TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Lucile Browne—This is actually a different kind of a western and it will entirely satisfy all lovers of that sort of picture. Running time, 57 minutes. Played March 14-15.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

MIDDLE WEST ADDS TWO REPORTERS

From Kansas and Wisconsin come new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week. They are:

Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kansas.

Jerry Waller, Elroy Theatre, Elroy, Wisconsin.

Writes Waller of Elroy: "This is my first attempt to join the other exhibitors in 'What the Picture Did for Me'. Nevertheless, I have been a faithful reader of that department, so here goes."

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET: Warner Oland—Still the same old Charlie, and for some reason these pictures seem to be welcomed by my patrons. Business above average, possibly because of the final chapter of the serial. Played March 13.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET: Warner Oland, Rosina Lawrence—Along the same lines as all the rest of them and from the business done on the last two they are on their way out. They don't gross within forty per cent of what they did a year ago. Too much of a good thing. Oland is always good but the proverbs that go with all these pictures evidently are beginning to bore the audiences. Universal had the Cohens and Kellys type pictures that lasted quite awhile and faded out and that seems to be the case with the Chan pictures. Each does a little less than the previous one.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HERE'S TO ROMANCE: Nino Martini, Genevieve Tobin, Anita Louise—Good show for Broadway houses but a flop for the little fellows out in the sticks. Melodrama is what we should have any time. Running time, nine reels. Played February 16.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S.D. Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Dorothy Wilson—Just have to follow up other reports that say that this is good and good for box office. Rogers' latest and last for me. I have played all the others so I am through with Rogers, which I am sorry to say. Bill Robinson, great dancer, gave big support to the show. Running time, nine reels. Played March 8-9.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Jack Oakie, Alice Faye, Arline Judge—Very nice musical, some nice songs, comedy with Oakie. The dance revues good. Pleasing audience show. Played March 12-13.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Jack Oakie—This one was well received and business above average. A fine picture with beautiful Alice Faye and the rest of the cast at their best. Fox deserves a big hand for this one following so closely their smash hit, that big success, "Thanks a Million." Give me more of these types of shows and my worries are over, but alas, the gangster junk seems to be the obsession of over 50 per cent of the producers, and why? Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 15-17.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

METROPOLITAN: Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce—A swell show for the metropolitan centers but a heartache for small towns. Played to poorest Sunday business in a long time. This one finished the singing shows for me on Sunday bookings. Played two weeks after "Here's to Romance" and was a worse flop than the Romance. Running time, 10 reels. Played March 1.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S.D. Small town patronage.

MUSIC IS MAGIC: Alice Faye, Ray Walker—Just a program picture. Business poor. Running time, seven reels. Played March 11.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S.D. Small town patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—Played to good houses every show, but disappointed many. Jane Withers pleased well, but show as a whole was more or less of a flop. Played March 5-6. —Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—Jane is a honey of a little actress. She sings several songs in this. An entertaining family picture. Played March 10.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—A good piece of entertainment; ideal for weekend showing. Jane Withers does not dominate the picture and thereby gives the fine cast a chance to do something instead of standing idly by. Business above average. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 7-9.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—A swell picture any way you look at it and should do business for any town. A little gruesome in spots but good entertainment. Played March 5-6.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee-Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew—Everyone seems to be of the opinion that this fellow McLaglen is becoming an actor. Picture pleased everyone, even though Freddie Bartholomew didn't get over so big. Played March 12-13.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew—The boy did nice acting but the Mythical Kingdom story evidently did not appeal for the take was away below normal and nothing the second day. It meets the demand for clean pictures.

That it is. But the fact remains that the public did not support it and we had quite a number of walkouts. So what is the answer? I don't know. My guess is that it is a better picture for the children than for adults. The story is trite, dealing with the usual Revolution that goes with this type. As I said before, this Bartholomew boy is an actor. He was the picture. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SHOW THEM NO MERCY: Rocbelle Hudson, Bruce Cabot, Cesar Romero—Not the special that the rental represents; played it on the serial night. The avalancbe of gangster pictures certainly builds up sentiment against the movies. This "Crime Does Not Pay" stuff is an insult to intelligence. Nothing but plain gangster hokum that does no good to anybody and perhaps a lot of harm to the industry. The class of people wbo migbt enjoy such stuff seldom attend movies, and we don't want them. Comments against this picture and business poor—for which we are duly thankful. A fine cast and a good story of its type, but the theme is cruel and will be frowned upon by the thinking public. Played February 21.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WHISPERING SMITH SPEAKS: George O'Brien, Irene Ware—A fine action picture with clean comedy and good story. Have not played one poor O'Brien picture to date. Fox has not forgotten how to make outdoor pictures. Played February 14.—A. H. Edwards, Orpbeum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WHISPERING SMITH SPEAKS: George O'Brien, Irene Ware—A real good railroad yarn witb plenty of action. These railroad stories are good screen material. Why not more of them? George O'Brien as usual is excellent. Played March 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD, THE: Clark Gable, Loretta Young—A perfect outdoor picture, well produced, wbich built up. This brought much favorable comment and should do business in any situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Tbeatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MELODY LINGERS ON, THE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Houston—And so did the picture; entirely too long. Good story, but the direction was not so hot. Picture dragged in spots all through. Played February 26-27.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

SPLENDOR: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—I may be wrong, but from tbe looks of my gross on this picture it seems to me that Miriam Hopkins isn't slipping, boys; she's already slipped. Tbe picture wasn't too bad, but it just doesn't have any B. O. appeal. Played March 3-4.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

DON'T GET PERSONAL: James Dunn, Sally Eilers —Any showman surely does not need any hints about this one, the "Bad Girl" team. It's one of the cleanest belly shakers ever put on the screen. Running time, 70 minutes.—Robert Guise, Wareham Theatre, Manhattan, Kan. General patronage.

HIS NIGHT OUT: Edward Everett Horton, Irene Hervey—This is a real comedy drama, laughs from start to finisb and even a mystery plot that had them guessing to the very last end. Play it Sunday and you will come out all right. Running time, eight reels. Played March 4.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HIS NIGHT OUT: Edward Everett Horton, Irene Hervey—This one was given under the auspices of the American Legion; benefit Crippled Children's Society. Noticed quite a bit of laughter with Horton, as usual, the mainstay of the picture, although his support in tbis one is okay. Many favorable comments wbich pleased the Legion. Horton is clever and a favorite of yours truly. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 3-4.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

INVISIBLE RAY: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—I do not command the words that would tell you bow great tbis picture really is. Perfectly cast, it is carried through by ones tbat know just what it is all about, and while Lugosi and Karloff do their best, they are backed up by ones that also do their best performances, so with the story and cast plus everyone connected witb it hitting on higb you have a most interesting picture. Sorry to report unsatisfactory business.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

INVISIBLE RAY, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi —A darn good picture of scientific exploits. Well played and not too borrible for enjoyment. Even if it does go long on imagination, it is realistically enacted and carefully directed. Played March 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING SOLOMON OF BROADWAY: Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Page—Picture has some good songs but Pinky Tomlin should take singing lessons. Edmund Lowe saved the show with his quick patter and nonchalant manner, no matter what situations confront him. Better double feature this. Too weak on a single. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—A wonderful picture. Not a complaint out of the big crowds which we had for tbree days. Play it big, boys, it's worth it. Played March 8-9.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart—Slow, draggy, tiresome and no comedy relief. Some walkouts. Stars quite unknown here, therefore no draw. Running time, nine reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

STORMY: Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers—A week-end dandy. Pulled extra business.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

STORMY: Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers—This is a western of special interest and Rex the Horse sure puts the show over in a great way. Beery is a perfect actor, a chip off the old block. Should please the most critical audience. Play it Sunday and you will cash in on it, and what's more you can face the patrons when they come out. Running time, seven reels. Played March 6-7.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

STORMY: Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers—A nice picture telling an interesting story of a boy and his horse. While western atmosphere prevails, the story is definitely not that of a western. Noah Beery, Jr., is fine and reminds us of Wallace. At times his manner is very like that of Will Rogers. Played February 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THREE KIDS AND A QUEEN: May Robson, Henry Armetta—Tony (Henry Armetta) and his male sidekick are the whole show; they certainly bring the laughs. May Robson no draw here. Business not up to average. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 29-March 1.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Bros.

DANGEROUS: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone—Adults seem to like it very much. Pulled above midweek average.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

DANGEROUS: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone—The producers must have been hard pressed for story material when they selected this one. Depressing, trite, foolish, disgusting. Business at its worst. Played February 13.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGEROUS: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone—Playing this just after Miss Davis' winning the Academy Award made her excellent performance more interesting. She surely does make her roles vivid and real. As for the picture, however, it is pretty heavy fare and somewhat sordid as entertainment. Franchot Tone is splendid as her victim. Played March 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRESHMAN LOVE: Patricia Ellis, Frank McHugh, Warren Hull—A pleasant little programmer that holds the interest fairly well; bad weather kept business down. Played February 20.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

FRESHMAN LOVE: Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull—Frank McHugh makes them laugh from beginning to end. If in a college town, book it; exploit it with hookups from freshman classes; it will be a sure shot; so sure you cannot miss. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 8-11.—Robert Guise, Wareham Theatre, Manhattan, Kan. General patronage.

FRESHMAN LOVE: Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull—We can't say much for this one. Pretty nonsensical throughout. Just about gets by and that's all. Someone has said Frank McHugh is perfectly cast, but we can't see him as a college coach "no-how." Played March 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRISCO KID: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay—A good picture in the program class. Cagney does good work in this so-so story. Played March 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST, THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—No picture played here in months has met with the universal approval of the crowd as did this one. Excessive dialogue may hurt it in the average small town but intelligent people will enjoy this treat. Played March 7.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee-Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

WIDOW FROM MONTE CARLO, THE: Dolores Del Rio, Warren William—Darn good program picture. Warren William is naturally a crowd getter; of course Dolores Del Rio has nothing but a figure and an accent to offer, but I guess that's all the yokels want. Played February 28.—Jack Blair, Dickinson Theatre, Paola, Kan. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ALIMONY ACHES: Andy Clyde—This is one of the best comedies we have ever had the privilege to play. Columbia this year is putting out exceptionally good short subjects.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

DR. BLUEBIRD: Color Rhapsodies—A cartoon that is outstanding because of its beautiful color and novel treatment. Had more comments on this one than any we've played in a long time. Adults enjoyed it as much as the kiddies. Running time, seven minutes.—F. Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

NEIGHBORS: Color Rhapsodies—Although this is in color, it does not please very many. Running time, two reels.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Educational

FEUD, THE: Paul Terry-Toon—A good enough cartoon to please your cartoon fans.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOILED AGAIN: Paul Terry-Toon—A pretty good cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JUST ANOTHER MURDER: Coronet Comedies—Good. Lots of laughs. O. K. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

JUST ANOTHER MURDER: Coronet Comedy—A fair comedy that provoked several good laughs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KNOCKOUT DROPS: Frolics of Youth—Good comedy all right with plenty of laughs. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MIXED POLICIES: Coronet Comedies—A not-too-bad comedy. Talkative wife spoils hubby's chances to collect insurance or buy more.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RHYTHM OF PAREE: Young Romance—Just one word for it. It's labeled a musical comedy. Tragedy for the audience. Never ran a worse one. And I have run some bad ones.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SEEING NELLIE HOME: Song and Comedy Hits—Fairly good short.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

TIMID YOUNG MAN, THE: Star Personality Comedies—Buster Keaton always plays good and helps to put over the feature. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAY UP THAR: Young Romance—This one is somewhat a novelty comedy. Good in every move, laughs galore and lots of good music. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

GREAT AMERICAN PIE COMPANY: MGM Miniatures—An entertaining little short. Running time, 11 minutes.—M. R. Harringon, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HOW TO SLEEP: MGM Miniatures—A very clever reel mostly on not sleeping. Had several excellent comments on it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LET'S DANCE: MGM Miniatures—A very fine reel on teaching the art of dancing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LUCKY BEGINNERS: Eddie Fay, Jr.—Pretty good. There are quite a few good amateurs in this.—J. M. Lakeman, Princess Theatre, Haleyville, Ala. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MONKEY BUSINESS: Charley Chase—A little better than average comedy. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MANHATTAN MONKEY BUSINESS: Charley Chase—Just a comedy. Not bad; not good. Chase not in the class of the balance of Metro product.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Chic Sale—"Perfect Tribute" is right. This is one of the best shorts I ever run. Advertise it like a feature. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Charles "Chic" Sale—Excellent! Sale looked, talked and walked just as I imagine Lincoln did. Sorry he didn't give the Gettysburg speech at Gettysburg although when he did give it in the hospital it was very stirring.—C. McKusick, Assistant Manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Country patronage.

RURAL MEXICO: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another beautifully presented travel picture. Geography is great stuff when you can see the world through the eyes of the color camera. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SLIGHTLY STATIC: Todd-Kelly—Very poor.—J. O. Smith, Paramount-Fox Theatre, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

STARLIT DAYS AT LIDO: Musical Revues—A real hit. Nice music and comedy bits presented against a beautiful, colorful background. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY: Harman-Ising—Some cartoon, very comical. Fine for added attraction. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

TRAINED HOOPS: M-G-M Miniatures—A fine story of horse training. Some of the scenes are removed from a feature picture, but the general effect is good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

ADVENTURES OF POPEYE, THE: Popeye the Sailor—A highly amusing collection of highlights in Popeye's hectic career. Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BROADWAY LIGHTS: No. 5—Mostly about the opening of "Jumbo." Entertaining.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

FINER POINTS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Bird dogs in action. Interesting.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MOSCOW MOODS: Headliners—Russian music that is a pleasing short.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

PARADE OF THE MAESTROS: Headliner Series—A splendid band reel offering three fine orchestras playing separately and collectively three or four good tunes. Also introduces three popular radio announcers.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PICTORIAL, NO. 7—Good pictorial.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SPINACH OVERTURE, THE: Popeye the Sailor—About the best Popeye in several recent releases. It's full of that good old dynamic spirit that makes Popeye a favorite.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SPORTING NETWORK: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—A mixed assortment of various sports as reported on the radio networks. Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR REPORTER: Headliners—A swell little musical short with Ted Husing introducing different prominent celebrities. Comments excellent. Couple of good songs and some hot music. Running time, 10 minutes.—F. Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

TIME FOR LOVE: Color Classics—A sort of an artistic type color cartoon. Few laughs, but somehow interesting.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—Ted Husing presents a sporting test for fans. The idea is to see how many correct answers one can give to questions pertaining to the sport world. Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Tbeatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YOU GOTTA BE A FOOTBALL HERO: Popeye the Sailor—Another good one in this popuar series. Running time, 6 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

HIT AND RUM: Four Star Comedies—A good slant on the drunken drivers of automobiles with lots of laughter. Running time, two reels.—Dudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PICKLED PEPPERS: Blonde and Red Head Series—This is a very good short and will go well with any program; in fact, it is the best I have run from RKO. Running time, two reels.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SOUTH SEASICKNESS: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Anything but funny. I find it is much better not to run any short than to run something that makes your customers feel disgusted. No matter how good your feature is when you run a short like this with it, you spoil your show. Running time, two reels.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOX MOVIETONE NEWS: No. 43—Better than ever, up to the minute, exciting, musical and beautiful settings. Fox must have a grand staff who can work out such perfect ideas to work into the best newsreel which has ever been released in the history of the industry. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

Universal

BRONCO BUSTER: Oswald Cartoons—This cartoon is the best Oswald we ran for a long time. Perfect Saturday short. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GREAT IDEA, A: Mentone Musical Comedies—Best musical comedy that you can get. Plenty of laughs, action and humor. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION, No. 15—Of special interest and good all the way through. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION, No. 16—These singles as interesting a short as ever made. My second and glad I bought them. They will save any weak feature and always good for marquee billing. Running time, 9 minutes.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BY REQUEST: Claude Hopkins and his orchestra, Tip, Tap and Toe—A good band subject with some colored boys and a tap dance.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CAT CAME BACK, THE: Merrie Melodies—An entertaining color cartoon that is good for some laughs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING OF THE ISLANDS: Warren Hymer, Winifred Shaw—Musical in color. Beautiful color and entertaining.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

LADY IN RED, THE: Merrie Melodies—Excellent color cartoon.—J. O. Smith, Paramount-Fox Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

PLANE DIPPY: Looney Tunes—A funny cartoon with a radio controlled robot plane obeying orders given to a puppy doing tricks. Amusing and full of action.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STUDY AND UNDERSTUDY: Broadway Brevities—Another of the Broadway Brevity series. This one is even better than usual. New songs hits, peppy dances and everything. Good enough for most any program.—J. O. Smith, Paramount-Fox Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

TROUBLE IN TOYLAND: Broadway Brevities—Fairly good musical comedy with kid stars.—J. O. Smith, Paramount-Fox Theatres, Ashland and Lineville, Ala. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

'WEE' MEN: Pepper Pot—OK for a novelty number. A musical short with midgets.—J. G. Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

THAT THREE-SHEET ALIBI

Every now and then this desk hears from a long silent member enclosing reports on some of his recent boxoffice activities. And more times than not the writer says he kinda feels ashamed of getting so much out of the pages and not doing his bit in return to keep up steam in the boiler.

Well and good and welcome home. Glad to see you back and the door is wide open for other erring brothers who read the Round Table each week but do not advise headquarters of what's what in their part of the world. Yes, we know a lot of the boys would do a better job of meeting their Club obligations if allowed the necessary latitude. But there isn't much excuse for the laddie who alibis—you know, the one about hesitating to three-sheet himself for fear that others might believe he was blowing his own bugle.

Pooh, pooh, for that—it doesn't hold water. Your Round Table functions as a clearing house for what exploitation, advertising and operating slants the men in the field find profitable and report for the benefit of other members. If a theatreman reads these pages each week—if he gets anything out of them that will help him to do a better job, then in justice to those who cooperate he should "pay his dues" not too infrequently with a report of his own.

Well, poor old Joe Zilch is out again. Yes, friends, hard-working Joe has been fired, canned, sacked and mothers rush their children indoors when he appears. Zilch has tried and tried to explain to the boss that signals were crossed, that the deplorable error was immediately corrected, but all in vain. It's sure tough on the boy; but the evidence is plain:

He forgot to splice his "coming" trailer into the newsreel.

DEVELOPING MANPOWER

To the list of highly commendable projects aimed to encourage members of the personnel is to be added the eight-weeks' course in theatre advertising started by Stanley A. Brown, Des Moines Tri-States district manager. "The school was originally planned for younger staff members,' reports Motion Picture Daily, "but enrollment the first week included all managers and assistant managers as well as 15 juniors."

The development of manpower is as important in the operation of theatres as is the finding and schooling of new faces for the screen. Theatremen who undertake the responsibility of extending the horizons of the more ambitious of their staffs are not only serving the industry but are serving themselves as well.

"IF YOU CAN'T BEAT 'EM"

It wasn't so long ago that hockey night in Midland, Ontario, meant famine for theatre boxoffices. With 2,500 rabid rink fans in a town of 7,000 buying tickets twice a week to see the local teams in action, little sustenance was left for motion picture houses.

"Running the biggest picture on hockey night is suicide," said Duncan Campbell, of Midland's Capitol Theatre. So as to escape so untimely an end the fast-thinking manager decided to join forces with the rink officials. How he did so and effectively is recounted on another page.

There is an old-time political axiom that goes: "If you can't beat 'em, then jine 'em."

Campbell has reason to be a firm believer.

SHOWMAN'S TRAVELOGUE

How do showmen function in other places? What have brother-members in similar situations to contend with? What makes the theatre wheel go 'round in one sector and what slows it down in another? These are as to be expected some of the natural questions asked by managers from time to time and the series inaugurated in this issue is an attempt to answer them.

On following pages will be found the first of these articles written by Motion Picture Herald correspondents on local conditions and the general theatre set-up in various of our key cities.

It's a showman's travelogue, so to speak and as such is expected to give our readers somewhat of a satisfactory closeup of theatre machinery operating in representative spots throughout the nation.

A. Mike Pagel

BEATS THE FLOOD. Despite the high water conditions, Seth H. Field (left) manager, Dirigo Theatre, Ellsworth, Me., accompanied by Kenneth M. Kurson (right) general field manager, Graphic Theatres, overcame road difficulties to get to Augusta where at the State Capitol the winner of the Quigley February Bronze received his honors from Governor Louis J. Brann.

Short Made Locally Gets Smart Campaign

Soundly executed was the advance drive on short "It Happened in Canton," made locally, by Manager Lawrence H. Thompson, for date at Loew Theatre in that spot. Cast was composed of students with as many high schools as possible represented.

As the extra attraction was shown on same bill with "Exclusive Story," Thompson pegged his campaign to counteract any possible feeling that the picture was amateur in entertainment and also to sell it as a feature of the show rather than a filler. Therefore the drive was directed two ways, the short plugged strongly in some locations and in others the regular picture.

Though policy of only paper is not liberal to theatres, Thompson obtained a number of extra breaks and gathered extra publicity through a number of co-op ads by having members of the cast in "shopping" at participating stores. Beauty and hat shops used cuts of Madge Evans in newspaper, to build up the regular feature.

LOUIE, OF COURSE. Roundtabler Charninsky, Capitol, Dallas, using two 'phones at one time to call local scientists on "Invisible Ray". Note the background (catch on?).

Drama teachers were contacted unofficially due to rulings against advertising in schools and ushers distributed application blanks to students for tryouts for parts. Restaurant catering to school trade put out heralds, plugged the short on menus and threw party to the cast after premiere.

Opening night was very "Hollywood" with lights, carpets, broadcast, etc., and leads in cast were brought to theatre in special Dodge cars promoted by Thompson. Players were called to stage and flowers presented to girls. Other special "nights" were arranged for nearby factories.

"Inquiring" Air Stunt Inaugurated at Strand

Local daily radio program from lobby of New York Strand, affords the house loads of publicity, says Irv Windisch. Program is based on questions selected by Earl Harper, radio sports announcer, who interrogates passers-by.

"Inquiring Mike" is airwaved from the Strand daily for half hour periods, opening announcements mentioning location of broadcast, theatre, current feature plus cast names. Of value to the Strand is permanent installation of radio equipment making it possible to arrange other broadcasting.

Billiard Parlor Ties In for "P's and Cues"

Russell Brown, Orpheum, Spokane, arranged a contest with local billiard parlor for each game played to tie in his "P's" and "Cues" short. Large placard in parlor announced showing of film and drawing to be held on completion of contest. Players were requested to write names on ticket given them for each game played. Winners received tickets to see picture.

Special photo was planted by Brown in Spokane newspaper showing oldest and youngest local billiard players in match game and special posters were spotted in prominent windows and all billiard academies.

Campbell Hooks On To Rink Popularity

Midland, Ontario, where Duncan Campbell skippers the Capitol, is a city of 7,000, with every one a rabid hockey fan, says Duncan Campbell, who skippers the local Capitol Theatre. Thus on nights of big games, Campbell has been taking it on the chin. The biggest picture shown on hockey night would not get a dime, sez he, so what to do.

Results were obtained by cooperating with hockey officials to advertise a special after-the-game show at the Capitol. Both teams were invited as guests, the showing announced on the rink p.a. system, advertised on the screen, in newspapers and with heralds distributed at the games.

Further assistance is obtained by the announcement at the theatre of hockey scores of out-of-town games, and as the Capitol is the only place in town obtaining these scores quite a bit of extra business is thus secured. Cost is only a few phone calls.

Round Tablers Listed With "Bounty" Winners

First prize of $500 in MGM's "Mutiny on the Bounty" ship design contest was awarded to I. B. Hinman, of Plainfield, N. J., winner's model being entered in the local contest put on by Round Tabler Ed Hart, at the Oxford, in that spot.

Second prize, $300, was voted to Lawrence Kelmel, of Shawnee, Kan., and third, $200, to C. P. Krupp, of Akron, Ohio. Krupp's entry came through Round Tabler Jack Flex, at Loew's.

More than 10,000 entries were submitted during the six months of the contest judged by Lowell Thomas, news commentator, Gordon Grant, marine artist, and J. J. Wenner, ships' model expert.

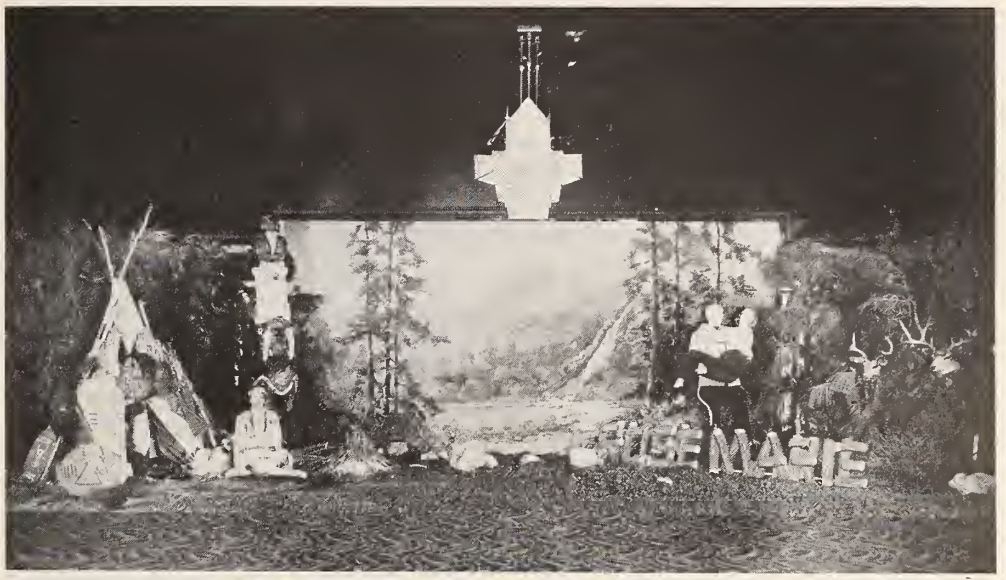
Department Stores Tied To "These Three" Opening



Co-op ads, windows and fashion broadcasts were hooked to the New York Rivoli opening of "These Three," Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon cuts spotted in millinery, dress and cosmetic department store ads.

Pipe tieup on Joel McCrea got space in many smart tobacco shop windows and chain of hosiery stores also contributed displays. Broadcasts on three local stations were included in the campaign.

MARCH DEADLINE; MARCH JUDGES

Midnight of Monday, April 6, is the deadline date for entries in the Quigley March Awards. So, please have those campaigns at headquarters by that time.

The March judges are as follows: Leon J. Bamberger, RKO Distributing Corp., Monroe Greenthal, United Artists, and Irving Lesser, Roxy Theatre.

REALISTIC DISPLAY. Pine trees brought down from the hills, earth, boulders and green bushes from the forests gave realism, added atmosphere to Manager W. C. Ricord's smart "Rose Marie" lobby at the Stadium, Los Angeles. Drop in background further conveyed illusion of outdoors. Tepee, costumed girl and totem pole were also in keeping with the general idea of the display.

Bank Opens Free Accounts For Births on Opening Day

Already under a full head of steam as head of the Perry Theatres in Charlottesville, Va., Frank Boucher, recently transferred from the Paramount, in Lynchburg, reports his first exploitations.

On "Country Doctor," Boucher hooked up a number of sizable co-op ads, featured by effective and amusing copy by local bank which offered free bank accounts to children born on opening day. Single babes got one dollar; twins, five; triplets, ten; quadruplets, twenty-five and quintuplets??

With local appearance of a Major Bowes unit, for first time paper ran an editorial on anything local having to do with theatres, plug welcoming the amateurs. Popular columnist also devoted much space to letter addressed to the Major on occasion of the date.

Highly effective also was co-op page headed by proclamation by Mayor and letter from secretary of Chamber of Commerce both giving the Bowes unit a big hand and urging locals to attend the show.

Dual Spanish Premieres For "Modern Times"

Most complete and elaborate was the advance campaign put on by W. D. Morgan, general manager, Artistas Asociados, S.A.E., for the dual premiere of "Tiempos Modernos" (Modern Times) at the Capitol, in Madrid, and the Tivoli, in Barcelona.

In Madrid, opening night's audience included heads of the newly elected Government of the Spanish Republic, diplomatic corps and leading local celebrities. Nationwide broadcast was put on with "mike" in lobby and events described by star broadcaster. Celebrities attending said "hello" in the best Hollywood manner.

The Madrid premiere was timed to build up interest in the Barcelona opening two nights later at the Tivoli, where a same sort of drive was put on to excellent returns.

Music Tieins Stressed On Chicago "Fleet" Date

Every important music angle was covered fully by John Joseph, Chicago RKO Theatres publicist in his drive for "Follow the Fleet" at the Palace. These included local tieins on the network broadcasts from New York, special screenings for top orchestra leaders and radio production heads.

Other air plugs started a month ahead on weekly theatre program and WGN did a special preview on picture opening day. Various accessories were turned over to Irving Berlin's music company for display purposes in big music stores and the chains.

Cosmetics, nautical scarfs, dresses, slacks and fabrics as had to do with the picture were utilized by leading downtown department stores on tieups with windows, store displays and newspaper ads. Animated front with gaily colored banners strung from top of canopy made up a very elaborate display and attracted due attention.

LARGEST LETTERS. Electric sign on New York Strand for "Road Gang" said by Irv Windisch to contain largest electric letters used on Broadway for this purpose. Letters measured 10' each.

Robertson Gets Police To Work On "Burns"

No doubt a good stand-in with the coppers in Tampa, Fla., allows Manager L. O. Robertson, of the Park, to obtain their cooperation for on "Mary Burns," he broke out with a radio patrol car (see photo) similar to those used by the city. P. A. system attached and siren gathered crowds when Robertson would give 'em the pitch with a plug for the date.

During rush hours, usher playing "dick" was handcuffed to a girl who was "arrested" from time to time on the busiest corners. At the theatre ahead of the opening, "L.O." says he had six police borrowed from headquarters walking up and down aisles at end of the feature. While the house buzzed, house lights were cut and "Burns" trailer run with the announcer warning patrons to look for the gal who might even be in the next seat, etc.

Merchants Ads Sell Shows for Brown

Harry Brown, Jr., publicity director, Paramount and Fenway Theatres, Boston, Mass,. forwards tear sheets of co-op ads secured by his assistant Paul Levi. One ad on "Paddy O'Day" is tied into the picture with copy "for the little star in your home," cuts show dresses inspired by Jane Withers. Second ad is on "Bride Comes Home" and shows Colbert in newest thing in neckwear. Both ads carry conspicuous theatre mention.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Novel Co-Op Ad Used By McNeil for "Zero"

For "Ceiling Zero," Henry McNeil, Jubilee Theatre, Stellarton, Nova Scotia, planted a co-op page in newspapers. Each merchant's ad contained aeronautical vernacular such as, 'our winter prices have taken a nosedive," "Why take the chance of a financial crackup," etc., etc. To those picking out the flying terms contained in each ad, tickets were awarded.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Finley Writes News Column

With a reported first time in the history of the paper, Harry E. Finley, Wilson Theare, Tyrone, Pa., conducts a movie column, which he dubs "Theatre News." At first paper would not permit a byline, but with the growing popularity of the column, Harry now signs his name and is the recipient of fan mail. Space is free and he manages to get in a plug for his theatre.

Baker Invites Clergy To "Little Minister"

Ushering in "Little Minister" at the Tivoli Theatre, Sutton-in-Ashfield, England, Wally Baker invited leading clergymen to preview after which they expressed themselves on comment cards. These were later incorporated into a folder and distributed, while the originals were mounted on display board in lobby.

For "Maybe It's Love," Wally printed up neat leaflets with copy on outside "Private and confidential. Not to be read aloud in company—hints on how to tell when you are in love." Inside contained gag copy.

On the recent death of King George, Baker had his kiddie club send a message of condolence to Her Majesty which was acknowledged the same day.

THE THEATRE SET-UP IN SAN FRANCISCO

Management and Publicity in Golden Gate City Said to be Conservative

by T. A. CHURCH
San Francisco Correspondent

SIXTY years ago, Lotta Crabtree, dancing and singing darling of the miners in the days of the gold rush, presented a drinking fountain to the city of San Francisco. It was not a strikingly beautiful creation even for that day, but it bore the stamp of sentiment and San Francisco took it to her heart and wove legends around its donor. It was set up at Newspaper Corner, in the very heart of business activity, so its name Lotta's Fountain, grew to be synonymous with the heart-beat of the community.

The theatrical district that once centered in the vicinity has long since moved out Market Street, but sentiment toward the old landmark has never diminished. It has changed somewhat with the years and the old monument now bears an additional plaque setting forth the fact that Tetrazzini sang there one memorable Christmas Eve in appreciation of her "discovery" by San Francisco opera enthusiasts. Thus, this city maintains on her principal thoroughfare a monument to two of her best beloved entertainers whose careers began here, coupled with a ballyhoo for her climate.

Twenty Foreign Quarters

San Francisco is essentially a city of the sea, with a thriving shipping business, manufacturing industries that call for highly skilled labor, high wage scales, a climate pronounced perfect and a steady flow of travelers, a combination that strongly favors the amusement industry. Federal Reserve statistics for 1935 stamp the Pacific Coast area as leading the rest of the country in business activity, with Greater San Francisco the white spot. The cups, banners, trophies and cash awards annexed by film exchanges here, in competition with other exchanges, indicates that this has certainly been true as concerns show business.

Just mention population and you bring up a ticklish subject. Not that the city is ashamed of its population, but that it fails to secure credit for what it has. By State enactment, the city is limited to but 42.19 square miles, compared to 442.5 for Los Angeles and 308.86 for New York. The population of the city proper is 710,536, according to an enumeration made last July. But the city has overflowed into numerous suburbs so closely united that one passes from one municipality into another without realizing it. The 1930 census credits what is known as Greater San Francisco with a population of 1,578,009.

Despite the cosmopolitan nature of the population, 93.8 per cent are of the white race. The various foreign quarters, such as Chinatown, the Latin Quarter, Little Greece, and the rest, are veritable cities within a city. There are more than twenty of them, with a population of about 200,000. Chinatown, with a population of 16,000, is the largest Chinese colony outside of China. There are more than 37,000 foreign born Italians, 18,000 Germans, 14,000 Irish, 20,000 English and Canadians, 7,000 Russians, 7,000 French, 7,000 Mexicans and 6,000 Japanese.

Since San Francisco is the financial center of the West, with more than fifteen hundred firms of national reputation making their headquarters here, white collar workers make up a very considerable part of the population. Headquarters of the Twelfth Federal Reserve District are here, and this is the home of the fourth largest bank in the United States. Its stock exchange transactions are among the largest outside of New York. Three Universities are within commuting distance, the University of California being the largest in the world, from the standpoint of enrollment.

The prevailing wage scales are among the highest in the United States but, paradoxically though it may seem, living costs for the average wage earner and moderate salaried families are low. In relation to fourteen other important cities of the country, cost of living in San Francisco is next to the lowest, only Portland, Ore., reporting lower figures. The carpenter, usually used as a yard stick for wage comparison, is paid $9 a day, this being the wage upon which all public work and union jobs are figured.

Thanks to a municipally owned street railway system, a five-cent fare prevails and one may reach any part of the city for a nickel. The layout of the city is such that most of the streets feed into Market Street, the main artery, so that the downtown theatrical district is easily reached. The compact nature of the city and the steepness of its hills work against a general use of private automobiles for transportation but even so parking space is at a premium in the downtown district. Many theatres have special rates for theatre parking at nearby garages and advertise this service widely.

In any compilation of American showmanship, the efforts of theatremen in the Golden Gate sector are of course to be registered high on the list. Of more than passing interest, therefore, is the article here which sets forth the why and wherefore of showbusiness as practised successfully by San Franciscans.

The situation in other key cities will be similarly treated in following issues of the Round Table.

—A-MIKE.

Says Good Management Important

Floyd St. John, of the Republic Pictures Corp. of California, says that this city is unquestionably the white business spot of America. "There are plenty of statistics to prove this," he said, "along with reasons why this is true in the amusement field.

"Of course, the amusement business prospers when other lines are making a good showing, but good management also has an important place. I venture to say that no other city in the country can show as high a type of executive or publicity man, on the whole, as can the theatrical industry here. Both circuits and independent houses are managed by veteran executives who understand both the business and the territory. Changes in management have been few and far between in recent years and some of those who head major enterprises have been connected with the business since the days of the nickelodeon. They have succeeded where outsiders, no matter how clever, would most assuredly have failed.

"The local policy has been to keep admission prices low enough to permit attendance to be heavy, yet sufficiently high to return a profit. Almost without an exception, theatres in Greater San Francisco are making money."

Prices of admission do not vary greatly between first-run downtown houses and deluxe subsequent run houses in the outlying districts, certainly not as much as they did five or six years ago. The average price of admission at downtown houses is now close to 35 cents. To distribute patronage more evenly, most downtown houses name a price of 30 cents to one o'clock and then step this up to 35 cents for the rest of the afternoon, with an advance to 40 cents for night shows. A good balance is being maintained between downtown and neighborhood houses as far as attendance is concerned. National circuits control the downtown situation, with local circuits in the saddle in residence districts.

Methods of theatre operation have changed quite sharply from those in effect a few years ago when the circuit plan first got under way and matters of policy were decided from a distance. For a time, managers were permitted little latitude in the operation of the houses over which they presided. They played the pictures given them, used the advertising provided and did little other than forward the receipts. Few knew whether their houses were making or losing money. Now mangers again have duties that correspond closely to those of owners, assisting in the selection of pictures, handling their own publicity and deciding many matters of policy to fit their respective houses.

Managers Receive Latitude

"We certainly give our men plenty of latitude in the management of houses entrusted to their care," says Robert A. McNeil, vice-president and general manager of the Golden State Circuit. "We hold a meeting for managers every week at which problems are discussed and plans sounded out. The men handle their own publicity work in their own way, choose most of their own mediums for advertising, contact merchants for tie-ups, keeping expenditures within a definite budget. The budgets are set for each house in keeping with the possible gross. The managers are expected to make the most of the funds at their command.

"We have only district houses in San Francisco and since newspaper advertising rates are high, make use of space in columns such as 'Today At The Theatres.' In this style of notice, originated by W. Harold Wilson, who has charge of some of our publicity work, houses are listed according to district and four or five lines are given over to each, naming the pictures and leading stars. This really gives all the information the amusement shopper desires, especially for subsequent runs.

"The publicity handled directly by house managers is carried in district publications, circulars, tie-ups with merchants and lobby displays. Especially interesting displays are routed from house to house.

"At some of our meetings, usherettes and other employees make short talks, outlining their problems and telling how they have managed difficult situations. We get a lot of pointers from them for use in other theatres.

"We get out a weekly sheet, 'The Golden State Co-Operator' and pack into this the proceedings of the weekly meetings, and other material as well. This keeps up interest, especially in the profit sharing contests for managers we hold from time to time."

Aaron Goldberg, operating five small but neatly appointed subsequent run houses in downtown San Francisco, lists himself as a 100 per cent independent exhibitor who does not believe in give-aways, lottories or prizes.

"As my houses are small and use pictures long after the release date, I can make use of little newspaper advertising. However, I am considering the trial of a daily inexpensive column ad for one or two of my houses. Publicity is confined largely to lobby displays and programs sent through the mail to a select list that is checked frequently.

"My houses operate on a 10 cents to 20 cents policy in keeping with the small size of the theatres and the age of the pictures. Theatre admission prices in San Francisco are too low, in my opinion. There is no doubt but that higher taxes are ahead for the industry and it is time exhibitors were commencing to prepare for them."

Newspaper advertising rates are considered high in San Frncisco and this accounts for the comparatively small size of theatre advertisements, the studied care given copy and the space devoted to theatre readers and reviews. Newspapers have their own reviewers and reviews appear under the names of the writers. In addition, use is made of syndicated columns from Hollywood. Papers are free with tie-ups and this is a favorite form of publicity.

Advertising Percentages Vary

The percentage of gross receipts devoted to advertising varies considerably with the different houses and circuits. Some of the first run houses are spending but six to seven per cent, but the average is higher. Some circuits are attempting to hold expenditures to eight per cent, but usually end with spending about 10 per cent. Sometimes, when pressed, 25 per cent is given over to publicity, and there have been instances during the past year when this mounted as high as 40 per cent. Between 75 and 85 per cent of publicity budgets go to newspaper advertising, with the foreign language press coming in for its share. The balance goes to lobby displays, billboards, card tieups, programs and lighting effects. Billboards are not used as formerly, but some exhibitors find them excellent.

Very little ballyhoo is employed, other than in lobby displays. Exhibitors agree that the San Francisco public does not respond to this form of publicity. Attendance is regular, requiring no whipping up, and theatre goers are loyal to favorite houses. Many patrons visit certain houses regularly, regardless of the attraction.

The stage show, once such a feature here in connection with screen attractions, is fading from the picture. The Warfield, long the stronghold of stage attractions, recently became a straight picture house, leaving the Golden Gate the only house making use of its stage regularly.

Moving pictures have plenty of opposition in the city, one mayor wanted known as the Paris of America. There are dog tracks just outside the city, two horse racing plants on the Peninsula, scores of gay night clubs and legitimate shows in three houses. In season, there is grand opera and symphony concerts in the truly magnificent Municipal Opera House, first of its kind in the United States. The symphony orchestra receives a subsidy from the city by vote of the people. The Civic Auditorium seating 12,000 houses conventions, boxing matches, wrestling bouts and bicycle races. Exhibitors welcome competition of a cultural type, such as opera and the concerts, which brings many desirable visitors. The type to which they most object, and one which is growing, is the showing of moving pictures in schools, churches and lodges under the guise of educational programs. These places pay no taxes or license fees and most of the pictures shown are exhibited on theatre screens in the usual course of events. Marathon walking and dancing contests have disappeared, the last Legislature having abolished them. Likewise, street carnivals are conspicuous by their absence, a high license and careful supervision plan having ended them.

Theatres in Good Physical Condition

The physical condition of San Francisco theatres is above reproach. All have been erected since the great fire of 1906 and most of them within the past ten years. Building restrictions are exceedingly rigid, so much so that builders have complained that many factors of safety are beyond all reason. An earthquake survey of downtown buildings was made recently and only minor changes were ordered on one or two theatre exteriors.

Where construction costs have been high in some instances, savings are possible on some equipment. Heating and cooling systems are a part of theatres here, as elsewhere, but climatic conditions are such that expensive installations are not required and the cost of operation is low.

Senator William G. McAdoo, in presenting the claim of the city for the National Democratic Convention, declared that "San Francisco is air conditioned by God."

TESTIMONIALS. To Grace Moore, patrons of the Beaufort Cinema, Birmingham, England, were invited by Manager F. J. Studd to extend appreciation for star's performance in "On Wings of Song" (Love Me Forever) by singing signature sheet.

ELECTRICAL DISPLAY. Spectacular front at the Tivoli Theatre, London, on "Modern Times" outlined figure of Chaplin in characteristic pose, on one side and action shot of star in scene from factory sequence, on the other. Campaign was supervised by Francis Meynell, theatre publicist.

SOCK STUFF. Exterior of the Cirkus Theatre (World Cinema) in Copenhagen, Denmark, in this fashion effectively sold "Last Outpost." Center enlargement scene still was bordered by star figures with title above in large neon lettering. Flash credited to owner and manager Neilsen.

BANNER ADVERTISING. For buildup on "G Men" at the Nippon Gehijo Theatre, Tokyo, Japan, banner signs running from top of marquee almost to roof of building were utilized, reports Jos. Hanley, Warner Bros. Japan manager.

GIANT CUTOUTS. Traffic-stoppers indeed were the cutouts of Astaire and Rogers planted out front at the Teatro Nacional, Havana, Cuba, on "Top Hat." Figures were over 15 feet high. Credited for the campaign is Manager Heliodoro Garcia.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-35 season.

Dear Earl:

Many believe that never in the history of exhibiting films in Boulder has a picture won such a warm place in the hearts of the theatre public as your picture "THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR" starring Paul Muni.

Therefore, it is their wish as well as mine to warmly commend you upon the making of this picture, and pray that in the future you will find it possible to produce other pictures with such universal acceptance.

Kindest personal regards,

HE ASKED FOR IT

EVERY trout fisherman—at least every real dry fly exponent—knows the technique called "fishing the rise." One catches a specimen of what the fish are feeding on and thereupon ties a lure to match it.

Mr. Marlen Pew, editor of Editor & Publisher, as we have remarked before, frequently rises to ephemeral opportunities to spice his pages with assaults upon the motion picture industry. That obviously is safer editorial showmanship than handling some of the hotter material in his own field. So the other day he wrote:

"These seem hard times for 'our better people,' meaning folks who object to vulgarity in all its forms, including smut. Vendors of degrading and anti-social films and printed and broadcast rot, are always irked by any attempt to keep their products civilized, but we have rarely seen the case more brazenly asserted than in the current ssue of Motion Picture Herald, mouthpiece of the Hollywood management, Terry Ramsaye, the editor, speaking:

" 'The movies belong to the masses, and if people want to engage in intellectual pursuits and concerns they ought to be sporting enough to let the movies alone and do their playing and thinking in terms of the printed page . . . The screen could do with much less attention from "our better people." Those who would do something for American life, the clubwomen especially, might well be concerned about seeing that a good apple pie could be had commonly, that the public taste in flowered chintzes is improved, that home life be made home life. There are many things to be attended to if one must be engaged in attending to other people's business. The motion picture is an all-too-convenient springboard from which people may jump into newspaper publicity. It is not a major problem.'

"Back to the kitchen, mind your own business, dear mother, and let Hollywood polish off the manners, appetites, morals of your children! You make pie and Hollywood will make the racial degeneracy! Vulgarity, indecency, rot come cheap and sell like hot cakes." . . . etc.

It is consistent with a certain journalistic technique to quote material out of context, so Mr. Pew would interpret Mr. Ramsaye's expressions as pertaining to the moral content of the motion picture instead of the question of intellectual levels which were his subject in the Philadelphia speech quoted.

But if Mr. Pew enjoys the method, we can change the subject, too, paraphrasing for him:

Stay in the kitchen, dear Mother, and let the newspapers create the appetites, manners and morals of your children.

Let their advertisers show nice little girls getting a lift from a smoke, young business men lauding 89 cent whiskey, book section copy on sexual esoterica and the literature of diseased personality.

Let the editors garnish the columns of the paper that comes with the morning milk with the product of reporters sent out to cast their nets in the sewers of abnormality of conduct and the court catch basins of crime for the recording of the current history of all that is foul and wrong in the world.

Let the publishers also promote race horse gambling at home and purvey the lure of alien lotteries to impoverish the poor in the cruel hope of easy money.

And let them top off the dish with dime novels done into cartoon strips and moronic comics reeking with destructive inanity.

Let the papers that come into your home alone, dear Mother, and go out and raise hell with the movies, instead.

Mr. Pew in his task as the editor of a newspaper trade journal might find some exciting copy in the subject of the cultural values of advertising columns, and at the moment for a specimen we refer him to the theatre page of the Los Angeles Examiner, page 13, of the issue of Tuesday, March 24, a page from which the newspaper publisher debarred mention of Miss Mae West's "Klondike Annie," but which in display of nearly a column, at amusement rates, announces:

Man, there aint nothin' hotter than this
HARLEM SIZZLER at the Burbank.
Hotcha Brown Skin Model in HARLEM SCANDALS
plus Greater Burbank Burlesque
4 Scorching Performances Daily.

The offering is illustrated with the newspaper halftone's best approximation of a "high yaller" with remarkably competent pictorial verisimilitude in the region of the mammillary rotundities. Mr. Pew might consult "Dear Mother" about that one.

In his Philadelphia expression Mr. Ramsaye's contentions were on the motion pictures' cultural position. He continuously insists that the screen has the right, or should have it, to be as dumb as the papers, not as dirty. We continue to contend for the motion picture against the penny vaudeville of the press, against the uplifters, highbrows and editors who would deliver the whole screen to the rule of minorities.

"WELL KNOWN writers are treated like office boys in Hollywood studios," Mr. John Howard Lawson of the Dramatists' Guild testified in a Washington congressional copyright committee hearing.

That's bad.

But what's worse is that in some Hollywood studios some well known office boys are being treated like writers.

This Week

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

Product Plans

Advance product and selling plans of 40 companies, which already have purchased 122 stories for one-fourth of the new season, are outlined beginning on page 13.

Fireworks Used Up

Committee action on the Neely-Pettengill bill to ban block booking and blind buying is now in order, with conclusion of three-week-long hearings before the House interstate and foreign commerce committee.

The concluding sessions were marked by an exchange of personalities as the opposing sides sought to drive home their final points.

The bill in question and other pending legislation were declared unconstitutional in a brief filed by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, representing the large interests. See page 56.

Regulation

President Roosevelt, after his Florida fishing trip, has before him a report of George L. Berry, industrial coordinator, pertaining to the manner and method of regulating trade practices. At the same time the Merchants' Association of New York, widely recognized, demanded that no action be taken to place trade practice supervision in the hands of the Federal Trade Commission, at least until a study is made of the FTC Act and the anti-trust laws. Proposals are before Congress, for instance, to give the Federal Trade Commission the power to regulate motion picture trade practices. See page 42.

Starts Duties

Hope Williams (Mrs. J. D. Williams), who has been appointed special London representative of Quigley Publications—Motion Picture Herald, Motion Picture Daily and Motion Picture Almanac—sailed last weekend on the Aquitania to take up her duties in the London Bureau.

Mrs. Williams will be associated in London with Bruce Allan, London representative of Quigley Publications.

Mrs. Williams, who was born in Sheffield, England, was first employed in the office of Frank Macnaghten, owner of the Macnaghten Vaudeville Circuit. At the age of 18 she became the first woman manager of one of Mr. Macnaghten's theatres. She went to Australia as executive secretary to the Hon. Hugh D. McIntosh, theatre owner, newspaper publisher and member of Parliament. In Australia she married Jaydee Williams and coming to America acted as his confidential secretary during the organization and formative years of First National Pictures. She assisted Mr. Williams during his several years' residence in London when he was engaged upon a work which contributed important impetus toward the development of British production.

Loew "Invasion"

Arrangements completed with United Artists Theatre Circuit will see Loew-MGM operating in Chicago and Detroit, for the first time, on expiration, within a year, of operation agreement for the United Artists theatres in those cities held by Balaban & Katz and United Detroit Theatres. The deal is understood to include assured supply of preferred MGM product for the two houses.

The United Artists theatre in Detroit has had this product, usually running it in two-week stands. The United Artists in Chicago has exhibited MGM product less regularly, the circuit's Chicago theatre exercising first call on practically all available material at all times.

Anti-Trust Cases

Involvement of large distributors in anti-trust actions this week grew deeper with new activities in the courts along four fronts.

New York independent owners sued distributors for allegedly forcing them to accept short subjects along with features; Kansas City courts denied, but did not dismiss the plea of independents for an injunction against Fox Midwest and the distributors on charges of unfair clearance and zoning: April 27 was set as the date of an anti-trust action in Lincoln, Neb., and Government officials said there would be no delay in the New York anti-trust action against distributors in the Fanchon and Marco-St. Louis action even though the courts last week gave the distributors the right to appeal to the United States supreme court. All these developments are covered in detail in the story found on page 33.

Debt Paring

Twenty-three millions of dollars is the extent to which Warner Brothers has reduced the corporate debt in six years, as a result of economies necessitated by the depression.

Decision by the company to give consideration to a refunding program of $50,000,000, retiring some $31,000,000 of debentures, this week prompted Wall Street financial writers to study the corporation's present financial structure. Their observations are reported on page 32.

Self-Regulation

Twenty-two planks are contained in the MPTOA's final platform for establishing self-regulation within the industry, thereby eliminating trade practice abuses, and ranging from a 20 per cent cancellation privilege to the establishment of trade board machinery for effecting the program.

The platform was this week presented to the Pettengill committee at Washington, for study. See page 63.

Tax Measures

Ten state legislatures this week were considering motion picture theatre taxation, and two others were studying additional legislative proposals which would affect theatres. There was action in Alabama, Florida, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey and New York. What these actions were, in detail, may be found in detail in the story on page 60.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

New Pathe Unit

Pathe Film Corporation officials on Wednesday night announced that the company "had formed a new subsidiary corporation to take over its motion picture activities." They said the new company "is entering into negotiations to acquire an experienced and aggressive management to handle the production and distribution of motion pictures."

The company's balance sheet, as of December 28, 1935, showed current and working assets to be $1,097,250.35, and liabilities $267,933.76. Details will appear in next week's issue.

To reports published in New York afternoon newspapers that the March of Time would be taken over by the new company denials were made by Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Distributing Corporation, and Roy E. Larsen, president of March of Time, Inc.

Mr. Larsen said that "in accordance with the terms of our contract with RKO the March of Time distribution contract with RKO has been renewed for another year from August." He added that he "knew nothing of the new company in which Pathe Film and Time are said to be involved."

Mr. Depinet pointed out that the RKO releasing arrangement is for a number of years, with annual renewals, and that RKO is "going ahead with March of Time next season."

Critics' Award

"Winterset," Maxwell Anderson's poetic play, has been awarded the first annual prize by the New York Drama Critics Circle.

The award carried the following citation: "The Circle's decision is based on the conviction that in 'Winterset' the author accomplished the notably difficult task of interpreting a valid and challenging contemporary theme dealing with the pursuit of human justice in terms of unusual poetic force."

Circuit Options

A 90-day extension of Paramount's options to repurchase the 50 per cent stock interest in the A. H. Blank and Karl Hoblitzelle circuits has been agreed to by the theatre operators.

The current options expire April 1 and April 4, respectively, and new extensions were made necessary by postponement last week of the Paramount board meeting.

Negotiations for a new five-year operating deal with N. L. Nathanson for the Famous Players Canadian Circuit are also reported progressing satisfactorily. The new agreement would permit Mr. Nathanson to acquire an appreciable minority stock interest in the Canadian company. His current contract as operating head of the company expires June 1.

The reorganization of Paramount's Olympia Theatres Circuit, last of the company's large theatre organizations in bankruptcy, is not expected now until mid-summer, it was further stated at Paramount.

The meeting of the board of directors of the company was postponed because of a lack of a quorum. The meeting, however, will be held some time within the next two weeks. A number of the directors were absent from the city and others were attending the funeral of Gerald Brooks, board member, who died suddenly last week.

The deferred meeting did not change the plans of John Otterson and Adolph Zukor, who arrived in Hollywood this week for conferences at the studio with William LeBaron on current production problems and plans for next season. Mr. Otterson and Mr. Zukor are expected to return to Manhattan late next week.

Approved

Of 21 pictures reviewed and classified by the Legion of Decency in its listing for the last two weeks, 15 were termed as unobjectional for general patronage, five as unobjectionable for adults, and only one as objectionable in part.

The new pictures and their classification are as follows: Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage—"Brides Are Like That," "Blazing Justice," "The Border Caballero," "Charlie Chan at the Circus," "Federal Agent," "House of a Thousand Candles," "King of the Pecos," "Lawless Border," "Roaring Guns," "Sutter's Gold," "Tempo Massimo," "Too Many Parents," "Two in Revolt," "Young Love," "13 Hours by Air." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults—"Der Fluechtling Aus Chicago," "G'schichten aus dem Wienerwald," "Madonna, Wu Bist Du," "Moonlight Murder," "Petticoat Fever." Class B, Objectionable in Part—"Snowed Under."

Film Sleuthing

Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State Police, will address the Spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to be held at the Edgewater Beach hotel in Chicago April 27-30, according to Glenn E. Matthews, chairman of the Papers Committee.

Col. Swarzkopf's paper will be on "The Application of Sound Motion Pictures to Criminal Identification."

Payroll Taxes

Regulations under which theatres, producers, exchanges and others employing eight or more persons will be subject to the new federal payroll taxes for unemployment insurance, were made known this week at Washington by the United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue, together with a warning that an employer is liable to the tax regardless of whether the state in which he is located has an unemployment insurance law.

New York State's unemployment insurance tax law was declared unconstitutional, but no action was taken by the State's highest court to stop the operation of the law until the United States Supreme Court acts on its constitutionality.

Details of the new Federal regulations appear on page 76.

GB Expands Plans

Gaumont British on Wednesday issued the following statement:

"Denying all reports of the sale of GB's interests to any other company, Jeffrey Bernerd, following a transatlantic telephone talk with Mark Ostrer, chairman of the board of GB Pictures, Ltd., announced today that he will not sail for England on Friday, as previously reported. Instead he will remain in this country for the next three or four months, during which time he will attend the company's forthcoming sales convention.

"Mr. Bernerd said further that GB is going ahead with expansion plans of great scope. In connection with these plans, he added, the company's product for next season's release here will be increased from 6 to 24 first line productions. The program, he said, calls for 'A' type product exclusively, and will be budgeted accordingly."

Fights Claims

Nelson Cunliff, federal trustee for Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., in St. Louis, has filed objections with Referee in Bankruptcy John A. Hope to claims totalling $3,387,093.53 filed against the company by the Bondholders' Protective Committee. The referee advised attorneys for the bondholders' committee to file an answering brief by April 11.

It is the contention of Trustee Cunliff that the Bondholders' Committee had no authority to file and prosecute the claims in question as no written request for such an action had been made on the committee by at least 25 per cent of the holders of the outstanding bonds. He holds that such notice was necessary under the terms of the bonds and the deed of trust securing them.

This Week in Pictures

FIRST ROLE A LEAD. Ann Preston, Chicago radio and stage player, only recently signed by Universal Pictures, makes her debut with a leading role in "Parole," hurdling the preliminaries of screen acting by stepping into an important part right at the start.

RECEPTION. Peter Lorre, star of Columbia's "Crime and Punishment," is greeted by the usherettes of the Plaza theatre in London at the premiere of the picture there. The star, vacationing in Paris, flew over for the opening.

HONEYMOONING. Jack Oakie and his bride, Venita Varden, new in pictures, are honeymooning in New York, nor are they in any hurry to get back to Hollywood because Oakie has completed work in his latest Paramount production, "Florida Special."

SALES TRIBUTEE. May is Harry Thomas Month, in honor of the president of First Division, distributing Alliance, Chesterfield, Invincible, Diversion, Normandy, Academy, Associated.

OFF FOR LONDON STARRING. Dolores Del Rio and her husband, Cedric Gibbons, in New York for a breathing spell on the way to London where Miss Del Rio is to appear in a picture to be produced by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., for release by United Artists.

INVITED. Ann Sothern, who has a new seven-year contract with RKO Radio, intersperses a New York vacation with an invitation to the Texas Centennial celebration, extended by Irene Caldwell, official hostess of the Dallas festivities.

BOUND FOR SHEPHERD'S BUSH. Richard Arlen, signed by GB, is on his way to the company's studios in England to star in a picture on Canadian railroading. With him are seen Mrs. Arlen (Jobyna Ralston) and Junior.

SIGNED. Doris Nolan, Broadway stage ingenue, has been signed by Universal in its new talent quest, after her work in the stage play, "Night of January 16th," attracted attention of scouts.

YOUTHFUL "FIND." Mildred Law at "sweet sixteen" soon will be at work at Warner Brothers' Burbank studios, having been signed after appearing in two musical short subjects for Sam Sax, Brooklyn Vitaphone production chief.

HANDS ACROSS THE STUDIOS. Samuel Goldwyn, producing partner in United Artists, Mrs. Goldwyn and their son are greeted upon their arrival in London by Alexander Korda, maker of H. G. Wells' "Things to Come," forthcoming UA release.

PREMIERING. Joan Marsh, who played the lead in Republic's "Dancing Feet," was in New York for the premiere. The picture was at the Roxy.

ARRIVES. Patric Knowles, young English stage and screen player, is in America for a featured role in Warner's "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

MATERNAL PRACTICE. When Shirley Deane was assigned to the young mother role in Twentieth Century-Fox's "The First Baby," the unmarried player unofficially adopted Sandy Stone, her screen baby, for practice. The youngster seems to be in favor of the arrangement.

JUST FOR A STROLL. Shirley is just half a step behind, but what's a little miss to do, when one notes the size of those strides of Alice Faye and Jack Haley? It's a little hike between scenes of the Twentieth Century-Fox production, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," starring the little lady of the screen.

PREVIEWING. Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Mrs. Milliken are guests at a private showing of several of the current short subjects produced by the Van Beuren Corporation and released through RKO Radio Pictures.

WHAT EXHIBITORS MAY EXPECT IN NEW SEASON FROM 40 COMPANIES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Creation and sale of 1936-37 product is already well under way, forceful evidence that the approaching season will witness the engagement of both major and independent distributors in the lustiest competition of 20 years to trade early with the country's theatre owners.

Forty producers in Hollywood and New York at this early juncture have advanced their new program plans to the point where the first tentative determination already has been made on the nature and numerical constitution of next season's feature and short subject schedules; first pre-seasonal product conferences between the home offices of New York and their studios in Hollywood are over; actual selling of new product has commenced; annual sales conventions are being set; sales policies and procedure for 1936-37 are in formulation, and at least one-fourth of the contemplated feature product has been definitely set, with the purchase in recent weeks of 122 manuscripts.

Aware of the quiet movement to dispatch salesmen to the doorstep of the exhibitor earlier than usual, virtually every important executive in production and distribution within the past month has participated in company conferences to determine the what, when and how of 1936-37 programs, with the idea in mind of beating their competitors to the dotted line on new-program sales contracts.

Too, their discussions embraced studio disposition of what little product remains to be made to complete 1935-36 commitments. Virtually every studio in Hollywood now is at the peak of production to complete this year's schedules. Fifty features were shooting or preparing in Hollywood last week, comprising product both for the new and old. Typical of the activity: Columbia entered the final 1935-36 with about a dozen features in various production stages; MGM was speeding to deliver the required 30 features for release between now and August 31st; Paramount had finished 80 per cent of its present program; RKO Radio was at about the same point, likewise Republic Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warner Brothers. And in all cases activity had been started on preparation or actual production of next year's supply.

The new season will not witness any radical changes in present sales policy and procedure. Nor will the numerical supply differ from this year's, the "Big Eight" producing and releasing approximately as follows:

MGM	50–52
Paramount	60–65
Radio	48–50
20th Century - Fox	60
United Artists	30
Universal	36
Warner Bros.	60

Added to these are Republic's 26, for a total of from 418 to 429 for the nine largest producers.

From the exhibitor's standpoint, owners are being urged by their theatre owners' associations not to be unmindful of their "duty" to the independent in buying 1936-37 product. Typical was the warning sent to members in New England by Allied States Association in that area, advising: "At this time of year, when the major film companies are all having drives, first national drives, then local drives and other playdate drives, the independent exhibitor should not permit any one to usurp any additional playing time, except those which he is forced to give with socalled 'Stop Pictures.' You must not be unmindful of your obligation to independent distributors."

Among the 40 companies which already have determined to some extent what may be expected from them in new product are 14 new producing concerns which will commence operations with the new season. Included are the following: Aeolian Pictures, Centaur Films (Walter Kofeldt), China Roars, Inc. (Clyde Elliott), Chelsea Pictures (Maurice Conn), Coronet Pictures (S. S. Krellberg-William Steiner), Edison Films, Gregor Productions (Arthur Gregor), M. H. Hoffman, Sr., Hungaria Films (Menyhert Szabo), Krimsky Productions (John Krimsky), David Loew, Major Productions (Emanuel Cohen), Pan-American Studios (M. H. Hoffman, Jr.), Royer Productions (Fanchon Royer), Shubert-Rowland Pictures (J. J. Shubert and William Rowland).

Others which have disclosed activity for 1936-37 include: Atlantic Pictures, Burroughs-Tarzan, Chesterfield-Invincible, Columbia, Conn, Coronet, Danubia, Dominion Productions, First Division, Futter, GB Pictures, Hoffberg, Guaranteed, Lesser, MGM and affiliated producers, Paramount and its independent affiliates, Pioneer, RKO Radio and various of its affiliated units, Republic, Revier, Sherman, Stage and Screen-Weiss, and the parents and affiliated producers of Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists (Goldwyn, Pickford-Lasky, Criterion-Fairbanks, Selznick, Korda, et al.), Universal and Warner-First National-Cosmopolitan.

Independents Active

Independent producers in Hollywood were evidencing signs of the greatest pre-seasonal activity in 10 years. At one coast rental studio alone—RKO Pathe—G. B. Howe, general manager, reported independents had contracted to produce at least 57 pictures for 1936-37, forecasting "one of the biggest booms ever experienced." As the schedule stands now, three additional sound stages will be required.

With such an advance in general activity, most of the larger companies are expected to hold earlier sales conventions than usual, principally in May. Paramount, RKO and Universal, however, have set their meetings tentatively for early June. Regardless, no time will be lost in sending film salesmen into the field well in advance for a quick disposal of 1936-37 contracts. The larger circuits have opened negotiations and some even have signed. Typical is Paramount's new product deal with all the Fox theatres. Selling will be advanced generally at least one month, according to present indications.

And while the distribution divisions were rounding out their merchandising plans, the studios in Hollywood already had consummated the purchase of one-fourth of the material that will be required for production, spending at least $610,000 for 122 manuscripts, based on an average of $5,000 a manuscript, as generally estimated. That this was a very conservative estimate was evidenced by the fact that the purchase prices ran as high as $165,000 for a single story, as in the case of Samuel Goldwyn's purchase of the play, "Dead End."

INCREASE OF COLOR FILMS PLANNED

More Published Stories Used

There was no particular trend of style disclosed in the new story purchases, although the choice rapidly was turning to the published book and magazine yarn. They represented 47 per cent of the total acquired, an unusually large assortment, and compared with the 48 per cent in original manuscripts and the negligible five per cent of plays bought.

There will be a marked increase in color, the 1936-37 plans indicated. Pioneer, Selznick International, Twentieth Century-Fox, Walter Wanger, Paramount, Warner Brothers and Radio so far have taken up the subject for adaptation to the new features. Word came from England that 24 in color would be produced there, the majority for distribution in the American market.

The 122 properties acquired, all in February and March, and listed elsewhere, with available production credits, were for the most part intended for 1936-37, but a few will be used immediately in the windup of this year's schedules. In addition, several hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of story material is reposing in the producers' vaults in Hollywood.

Considerable quality potentialities appear in evidence in the new purchases, among them Kathleen Norris' "American Flaggs" (MGM); Rex Beach's "Barrier" (Harry Sherman); Sidney Kingsley's "Dead End" (Goldwyn); Tristram Tupper's "Gentleman from Louisiana" (Republic); Peter B. Kyne's "Go-Getter" (Warners); Kathleen Norris' "Gram" (MGM); Fedor's "Matura" (Twentieth Century-Fox); Bret Harte's "M'liss" (RKO); Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Mother Carey's Chickens" (RKO); Rex Beach's "Ne'er Do Well" (Sherman); Faith Baldwin's "Portia on Trial" (Republic); Clarence Budington Kelland's "Roxana" (Universal); H. C. Witwer's "Cain and Mabel" (Warner); Peter B. Kyne's "Cappy Ricks" (Republic); Sardou's "Divorcons" (Paramount); Rudolf Friml's "Firefly" (MGM); P. G. Wodehouse's "Jeeves" (Twentieth Century-Fox); Elmer Davis's "Oldtimer" (Paramount); Sean O'Casey's "Plough and the Stars" (RKO).

Detailed product plans of some 40 companies for the completion of commitments for this season, and first plans for the construction of new product for 1936-37, follow:

Aeolian Pictures

New production activities got under way with the purchase of two manuscripts for feature treatment.

Atlantic Pictures

Twickenham Productions, of London, will be represented in the American market by Atlantic Pictures in the distribution of "Last Journey" and "His Private Secretary."

Burroughs-Tarzan Pictures

The states right market will support individual features, a survey disclosed, and so this company has decided to avoid production of series in 1936-37. Franchise holders are in agreement. In line with that policy, the producers are now acquiring the screen rights to books and plays dealing with subjects of present interest.

"Drag Net" was the first this season, and is being followed by "The White Glove," released this month, and "Alcatraz," winding up the program with "Three Wise Monks," "Murder at the Carnival," "SOS Coast Guard" and "The Girl with the Red Feather."

Franchises have been sold to Melvin Hirsch, of Syndicate Exchanges, for the New York City territory; Lee Goldberg, of Big Feature Rights, for southern Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky; Bines and Asher, for New England, and Harry Nolan, of Mercury Film, for the Mountain States. The company now is represented in 80 per cent of the country.

Centaur Films

Walter Kofeldt, general sales manager, is visiting key cities to dispose of franchises for 52 short subjects annually to be produced by Centaur, now organizing.

Chesterfield and Invincible

Maury M. Cohen, president of Invincible, has been holding 1936-37 product conferences in New York with George R. Batcheller, head of the related Chesterfield company. A novel was purchased immediately.

Working at RKO-Pathe studios in Hollywood, currently filming "August Weekend," the dual interests have eight more scheduled to complete the present season.

China Roars, Inc.

Clyde E. Elliott, in Hollywood, has formed China Roars, Inc., under a Nevada charter, to film a production in China for 1936-37. He indicated that western capitalists are sponsoring the company, which has secured the promise of the Chinese Government for cooperation. Mr. Elliott sails for China April 27th.

Columbia

With the Hollywood studio working at top speed, Columbia enters the final quarter of its 1935-36 schedule with a dozen features in various stages of production: Five are in the cutting room, or emerging therefrom: "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "King Steps Out," "Devil's Squadron," "Panic on the Air" and "Roaming Lady." Four are before the cameras: "And So They Were Married," "Blackmailer," "Mine With the Iron Door," "Avenging Waters." Leading a new series to be filmed for this season will be "Lost Horizon," "Fer de Lance," "Queer Money," "Trapped by Television," "All His Geese Are Swans" and "Outlaws of Palouse."

And while negotiations were being consummated during the past few weeks for the acquisition of four original manuscripts, two magazine stories and a book, product conferences for 1936-37 were in session in Hollywood.

Columbia is expected to have 48 features in 1936-37.

Conn

Maurice Conn will produce 30 features in 1936-37 for his Conn Productions and Ambassador Productions, and is now forming a national exchange system, opening the first in New York, under the name of Chelsea Pictures, of which Adolph Pollak is vice president and general manager.

The new program is almost double the 16 on this year's schedule, and will be outlined when Mr. Conn arrives in New York, any day now, from Hollywood.

The new distribution setup will embrace cooperative arrangements with existing exchanges and the opening of new offices, where such can not be effected. First Ambassador picture to be released by Chelsea will be "Song of the Trail," and the first Conn release will be "Black Gold."

Coronet Pictures

Amusement Securities Corporation, motion picture financing company controlled by S. S. Krellberg, together with Canadian financial interests, are sponsoring Coronet Pictures, Ltd., in the production of 18 features at Montreal, to be produced both for the American and British market, in compliance with the British quota laws, at a studio to be erected in the Quebec capital.

William Steiner is president of Coronet, which has already completed its first, "From Nine to Nine," a Universal release featuring Ruth Roland and Kenneth Duncan. The remainder will be distributed by Mr. Steiner, probably on the states right market. The first was made at the studio of Associated Screen News, Montreal.

Alfred Krellberg now is in London arranging for distribution there.

Danubia

The states right market will have additional releases from Danubia, which this week closed for "Keep Smiling" and "Be Good Until Death," both Hungarian.

Dominion Productions

William E. Raynor is touring the key cities for the sale of two new states right features.

Edison Film

"Stories Behind the Stamps," short subjects, will be produced by this new company, in a series of six or 12, it is understood. Captain Tim Healy, of NBC, has been mentioned as star.

First Division

The company is about to enter its final drive for 1935-36, designating May as "Harry Thomas Month," a long-standing event in the organization. The company is distributing Alliance pictures, Chesterfield, Invincible and Diversion product, and the pictures of Walter Futter, Normandy, Associated Talking Pictures, et al.

New production plans both for First Division and Pathe were discussed last week at the meeting of the Pathe board of directors, in New York. Until it is determined whether Pathe

QUIGLEY GRAND AWARD WINNER IN NEW POST

The appointment of John Armstrong, winner of the 1935 Quigley Silver Grand Award for exploitation of product, to director of publicity, Radio Pictures, Ltd., was announced Wednesday by Ralph Hanbury, general manager, in London.

Mr. Armstrong, former Paramount Theatres London publicity head, was voted the Quigley June 1935 Silver Plaque for his campaign on "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" at the Carlton theatre and was selected by the Committee for the yearly honors at the annual judging at the New York Athletic Club, on March 17th.

INDEPENDENTS GET SET FOR ACTION

will re-enter production, actual plans for First Division will be held in abeyance.

Futter

Walter Futter purchased a feature manuscript for treatment next season.

GB Pictures

Conferences concerning sales activities for the balance of this season and requirements for 1936-37 were held in Hollywood by Jeffrey Bernerd, in charge of distribution, who made the trip from London; Arthur Lee, vice president in charge of American sales; and others from the GB exchanges from the field. Mr. Bernerd returned to New York this week.

The company will, in the new season, distribute a number of educational British-made short subjects on this market, adding a non-theatrical department to the office in New York, in charge of William Berry.

Hoffberg

New product in 1936-37 will be handled out of a new division in Hollywood, in addition to New York headquarters, Jerry Marks having left Broadway for California to take charge.

Gregor Productions

Arthur Gregor, of Hollywood, is understood to be considering the production in Mexico of 12 Spanish features annually, six of them in English.

Guaranteed Pictures

Huet Productions, of Spain, will be represented in this market by Guaranteed, distributing six Spanish dialogue features in North and South America.

Hoffman, Jr.

M. H. Hoffman, Jr., has formed Pan-American Studios, Inc., and started construction at Miami on an eight-stage studio, where, beginning June 1st, he will produce 20 features for 1936-37, backed by Florida capital. Mr. Hoffman was aided by Governor David Scholz. One stage is already finished, located at Brandon Park in the north section of Miami.

Mr. Hoffman, Senior, is acting in an advisory capacity. He was formerly president of Liberty Pictures.

Governor Scholz predicts a new picture making development will grow out of the move.

Hoffman, Sr.

The elder Hoffman has a new producing and distributing company in formation and will make 30 features for 1936-37, having purchased Joseph Grice's "White Paper" as the first. Distribution will be on the states right market. In addition to "White Paper," Mr. Hoffman has purchased two original manuscripts and a novel, for feature treatment.

Hungaria Film

Twelve features, to be imported from Hungary, will be distributed in the United States and Canada by the new Hungaria Film Exchange, of East 107th Street, New York. Menyhert Szabo is president. The pictures will be produced in Budapest.

Krimsky

"High Wind in Jamaica" will be the first of three which John Krimsky will produce for 1936-37. Mr. Krimsky is presently identified with Harry Bannister in producing stage revivals at the American Music Hall in New York.

Loew

David Loew, son of Marcus, founder of Loew's, Inc., enters production on his own in 1936-37, making three features annually starring Joe E. Brown, who now is under contract to Warner Brothers. Mr. Brown will join Mr. Loew late in the summer. The producer arrived in New York this week to arrange for distribution.

Lesser

Sol Lesser's producing company has acquired a story for feature treatment. He will produce ten in 1936-37, six for Twentieth Century-Fox and four for Columbia.

Major Productions

Emanuel Cohen's new Major Productions is finally set for production for the new year, making four features, the first starring Bing Crosby, the second starring Mae West.

Ben Piazza, executive assistant to Mr. Cohen, has been in New York buying talent and material.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

The Culver City studio, in following its announced plan for cleaning up 1935-36 commitments with the expiration of the season, was proceeding at rapid pace to deliver the required 30 features between now and August 31st.

Meanwhile six features were before the cameras, one in preparation and five being edited, the while studio executives were concluding negotiations for the purchase of manuscripts for 1936-37, acquiring nine originals, five magazine stories, six novels and three plays, for a total of 23 from which to select the first of the new season's releases.

Nicholas Schenck, president, started preseasonal product conferences four weeks ago, in Hollywood, with Louis B. Mayer, Irving Thalberg and others of the production cabinet. Mr. Schenck has returned to New York, with tentative plans for 1936-37 already in work.

Ben Goetz sailed for England to work on preliminary details in connection with MGM production abroad. Eventually Mr. Goetz will be in permanent charge in London.

As the studio started on a widespread search to lineup mass talent for the new year, the company acquired film rights to "Quo Vadis," historical novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz, and signed Norman McLeod to direct, on the expiration of his Paramount contract. Also signed were Joseph Calleia, Edmund Lowe and Edith Atwater, of the Broadway stage, to act; Maurine Watkins, scenarist, and Joseph Santley, director.

The studio assigned Clark Gable and Joan Crawford to "Parnell," Broadway play of this season, produced by the new and young producing combination of Frederick W. Ayer and Robinson Smith.

Formal ratification was given the new ten-year contract with Irving Thalberg, and, thereby, Mr. Thalberg is committed to the studio for another 13 years.

George Hirlaman will release through MGM a series of three features starring Jose Mojica, Mexican singer.

Production activities at the Hal Roach studio continue at full blast, with two features and two shorts under way. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are co-starring in "Our Relations." Jack Haley stars in "Mr. Cinderella."

Mr. Roach at the same time announced that the ensuing ten months will witness an unusually heavy production program, brought about by a demand for more comedies of feature length. New features contemplated include: "The Money Box," for Laurel and Hardy; "Once Over," to be directed by Edward Sedgwick, and "Kelly the Second." The program of renewed activity will speed the conclusion of the present year's product and launch the lineup for 1936-37.

Paramount

John Edward Otterson, president, and Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, arrived in Hollywood this week to continue conferences on new product and new talent for 1936-37, the discussions having first been launched some four weeks ago.

No further important studio changes are contemplated and production details are now being set for next season, Mr. Otterson declared during a train stopover at Albuquerque, New Mexico, over the weekend.

"William Le Baron will have full charge of production on the coast," he explained. "I am going out to look over stories arranged for production during the coming season."

Mr. Otterson said that the deal with Winfield Sheehan, for production, was "definitely off," as previously reported, but that discussions might possibly be renewed later.

No additional producers are to be acquired, he continued, the list now being sufficient, with the signing of Richard Rowland to produce two for 1936-37. The Rowland productions, however, will be independently financed. In addition, Paramount has given a new five-year contract to Lewis E. Gensler, producer, who joined the company one year ago. His first of a series of four will be "The Duchess," starting April 6th, with George Raft. Following will be "Professional Lady," in which either Claudette Colbert or Carole Lombard will be starred. Then will follow "The Big Broadcast of 1937," with Jack Benny. Bing Crosby in "Beach of Dreams" will conclude.

Harry Sherman will produce a second series of "Hopalong Cassidy" stories for 1936-37.

Participating with Mr. Otterson and Mr. Zukor in the studio conferences, are William Le Baron and his associates and Russell Holman, New York story-talent executive.

The discontinuance of negotiations with Mr. Sheehan will require a realignment of the company's new schedule to create a source for the ten pictures Mr. Sheehan had planned to contribute. This subject will be among those discussed presently by the Otterson-Zukor conference in Hollywood.

A preliminary discussion of the new season's product was held at a joint meeting of the Hollywood and New York executives in Chicago last December. Following this conference it was decided to have a similar joint meeting in Chicago later for the final review of the program. It was subsequently decided to hold this conference in Hollywood, now, rather than Chicago in order to save the time of the studio staff and avoid its absence from the studio at this time.

Meanwhile, Neil Agnew, sales exective, had completed a thorough study of the sales situation on a visit to the exchanges in the field.

Reports have it that the company's 1936-37 sales convention will be held in June.

Paramount will be one of the majors which will participate prominently in color next season, having this week signed with Technicolor to produce four features, following its first color feature, Walter Wanger's independently produced "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," current. No stories for the color subjects in the new year have been selected yet, although a sea story produced by Frank Lloyd is being considered as the first. "Good for Nothing" and "Buffalo Bill" are also under consideration.

The company this week renewed the contract of Fred MacMurray, who has appeared in seven features for Paramount, and signed Irene Dunne to make three pictures a year, beginning with 1936-37.

> "We exhibitors should feel proud that we have a trade magazine like the Herald," writes Ralph Larned of the Paramount theatre at LaCrosse, Kansas, in resuming his reporting on product in "What the Picture Did for Me."
> "Every exhibitor should consider it a faithful duty to send in these reports, and regularly too, for I rely in no small manner on what my brother exhibitors have to say in booking the pictures they report on.
> "The Herald is my constant bible, and all of us should make the 'What the Picture Did for Me' section the biggest part of the publication."

Paramount has already placed in preparation 31 scripts for 1936-37, 15 of which were purchased recently, including 10 original manuscripts, two magazine stories and three novels. Six have been selected for production in April. One hundred and thirteen one-reelers are on the new program, it is understood.

The new shorts will probably include 18 in color, in three series—six Musical Romances, six Popular Sciences and six Color Classics. Cartoons will probably embrace a series of 12 Popeye the Sailor, 12 Betty Boops, six Screen Songs, and others, including: 18 Headliners, 13 Grantland Rice Sportlights, 13 Pictorials, 20 Paramount Varieties. Robert Bruce's Musical Romances is a new series.

Paramount is expected to release approximately 60 to 65 features in 1936-37.

With six productions now ready for release in April, Paramount rounds out 56 features for the three quarters of 1935-36, comprising 78 per cent of the season's program. Fifteen more will be released in the final quarter, April to June.

With April at hand, Paramount is embarking upon a heavy production schedule that will see seven features placed before cameras and four others already in work.

First of the new group is a Mary Boland-Charles Ruggles feature, "Early to Bed," under direction of Norman McLeod; Bing Crosby, in "Rhythm on the Range," Norman Taurog directing; "And Sudden Death," with Randolph Scott and Frances Drake; George Raft's "Duchess"; Virginia Weidler and Glenn Erickson, in "Good for Nothing"; "Three Cheers for Love," with Eleanor Whitney and Robert Cummings. Another is a Claudette Colbert picture. The six set for production in April will also include new pictures for Fred MacMurray and Gary Cooper.

Mr. Otterson, before leaving New York for Hollywood, reported that "Paramount's production organization has hit its stride with product completed well ahead of release dates.

"During May Paramount has an unusually heavy release schedule of nine pictures, including: 'Poppy,' which marks W. C. Fields' return to the screen; 'Concertina,' which reunites Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, and Madeline Carroll's first American picture, 'The Case Against Mrs. Ames.'

"In addition," Mr. Otterson continued, "ten scripts are now nearing completion for the pictures to be released in June and July. With the filming of these ten the production schedule for 1935-36 will be completed.

"During the second quarter of the current season," he added, "the studio established the unusual record of completing 11 pictures on schedule and within budget figures. All 11 productions were made at a substantial reduction in negative costs in comparison with previous pictures," concluded Mr. Otterson.

Typical of the advanced interest in negotiating earlier film deals with theatres on 1936-37 product is the consummation this week of arrangements whereby Fox Theatres will play Paramount product in 1936-37 and 1937-38. Spyros Skouras signed for Fox. Too, Milton Kusell, New York State sales manager for the company, closed with Louis Schine and George Lynch for 1936-37 product, for Mr. Schine's 70 New York and Ohio theatres.

Paramount will classify its 60 to 65 features for the new season as AA, A and B pictures, with production budgets for each classification graded accordingly.

The AA pictures will be specials and will have advantage of budgeting adapted to their indicated production values, rather than being held within definitely fixed budget limitations. The A pictures will be in an advanced budget classication, probably running as high as $1,000,000 or more. The B schedule, which may consist of 26 features, is expected to include everything up to approximately $300,000.

With William LeBaron in charge of production, the company, in addition, will have at least 12 associate producers. Associate producers on the A pictures will be Ernst Lubitsch, Frank Lloyd, Arthur Hornblow, Lew Gensler, Al Lewis, Benjamin Glazer and Lloyd Sheldon. The production assignments for AA pictures will also go to members of this group.

Associate producers on the B pictures will include Henry Henigson, Harold Hurley and A. M. Botsford. Cecil B. DeMille will make both A and B pictures, producing some himself and supervising others.

The pictures to be made in New York will be B product. These will come from Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, with an additional one or two from sources not yet set.

Pioneer

John Hay Whitney's Pioneer Pictures will produce three features in color between now and January 1st, including: "Dancing Pirate," "The Life of Custer" and an untitled story with a New York locale.

Meanwhile, Merian Cooper, Pioneer production executive, said in Hollywood that the company believes that "after our fourth production the cost of color will be no more than that of black and white films."

Mr. Cooper will contribute a "fantasy" to the new program. This week Mr. Cooper engaged Frank O'Heron to act as his executive assistant. Mr. O'Heron has been in retirement since he resigned as vice president of Radio Pictures, some eight months ago.

Francisco to windup sales effort for the current season and discuss early plans for the new. Ned E. Depinet and Jules Levy toured the country, presiding over the four regionals, to study the present sales status.

RKO Radio will have no less than 48 features in 1936-37, Mr. Levy said on returning to New York from two months in the field. This is the same number as 1935-36.

The short subject program will also remain the same, with the exception, of course, of the Walt Disney Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony cartoons, probably 18 together. Mr. Disney last week instituted a search for animators to be used on his forthcoming RKO product. The search is now being conducted from New York by Carter Ludlow, George Drake and Don Graham, executives of the Hollywood studio.

RKO distribution has been set again on 33 Van Beuren subjects. This will exclude Van Beuren's Rainbow Parade Color Cartoons, RKO-Radio this week notifying Van Beuren of their discontinuance.

It is understood, however, that the company's feature lineup will include more Class A pictures than heretofore, when 15 "A" productions was the usual annual allotment. Now the "A's" and "B's" will be about equal.

Annual convention will probably be held in June.

Reorganization of the Hollywoood studios is complete, according to Leo Spitz, the president. Mr. Spitz said there were no new deals in negotiation for additional producers.

New activity in story buying has been marked in recent weeks, the company having already purchased ten originals, four books and one play for 1936-37.

New season's product conferences have been under way both in Hollywood and New York, with the following participating at one stage or another: Leo Spitz, Ned Depinet, Jules Levy, Merlin Aylesworth, S. Barret McCormick.

Pioneer Pictures still has one more feature to deliver to RKO, before commencing under its four-picture deal with United Artists. "Dancing Pirate" has been finished, and the final story will be determined shortly.

Reliance Pictures will make six, under Edward Small's direction, for Radio, by the terms of Mr. Small's new associate producership contract with the company. "Robber Barons" is a Reliance story property, the five others embracing RKO manuscripts.

RKO has signed Fred Stone to a long term contract, thereby marking his retirement from the stage, after 50 years in show business. Victor Moore has started with Radio, too, first appearing in the Astaire-Rogers "Never Gonna Dance" musical.

Radio is understood to be considering a series of westerns in color. The company's only other color pictures are the Pioneer contributions.

With 30 writers at work on 26 features, the coast scenario department is going full blast to have several scripts ready shortly for 1936-37 production. In work for next season are "Bunker Bean"; "Make A Wish," with Harriet Hilliard; "Portrait of a Rebel," starring Katharine Hepburn; "M'liss," to star Anne Shirley, who will also appear in "Daddy and I"; "Winterset"; "Robber Barons," a Pioneer production; and others.

Ten new features will be before the cameras by mid-April, marking the peak of the spring production drive and setting a new high for the company. Pandro Berman has "Mary of Scotland" in production, with Katharine Hepburn and Fredric March. The Astaire-Rogers musical, "Never Gonna Dance," is another, and "Winterset" will be the third.

With only four more two-reelers remaining to be filmed, Radio's short subject program for 1935-36 is 90 per cent completed. This program, comprising six shorts in each of six groups, classed respectively as Smart Sets, Radio Flashes, Musicals, Headliners, Superbas and Edgar Kennedys, features the work of some 150 players. The entire program will be finished within a week, well ahead of schedule, according to Lee Marcus, associate producer in charge of shorts.

Twenty-six features based on novels, plays and magazine stories, will comprise the Republic Pictures program for 1936-37, it was announced over the weekend by W. Ray Johnston, president, and Nat Levine, production head, at a conference held in New York, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Mr. Levine flew in from the Hollywood studios to attend the conference, at which the following were in attendance: Mr. Johnston, Mr. Levine, E. H. Goldstein, executive vice president; Moe Siegel, production executive; Herman Gluckman, president of the New York exchange; Herman Rifkin, president of Republic Pictures of New England; Edward Schnitzer, eastern division sales manager; Edward Finney, advertising director; Sam Horowitz, divisional sales manager for the middlewest; Norton V. Ritchey, general manager of foreign sales; N. K. Loder, treasurer; Morris Goodman, sales manager for foreign contracts; Lou Lifton, eastern story editor; Sam Hacker, contract manager, and Claude Ezell, vice president of Republic Pictures of Texas.

Mr. Levine also announced that the studio is building up a stock company of players to train for future stardom. He is now looking for staff writers to handle next season's product.

Approximately 75 per cent of the current program has been completed. Three pictures are now in production in Hollywood: "The Harvester," "The Glory Parade" and "The Girl from Mandalay."

Said Mr. Johnston: "Our picture budgets have been increased."

Stories acquired in the past few weeks, for 1936-37, comprise six originals, one magazine story and six novels.

Mr. Levine, while in New York, this week, took occasion to "deny all rumors" that he would relinquish his post as production head. He indicated that the production staff is "now thoroughly well organized."

Revier Productions

Harry Revier has negotiated the rights to an original manuscript for feature treatment.

Royer Productions

Fanchon Royer has resigned as Republic producer and announced the formation of her own producing company with eight films planned for 1936-37.

Sherman

Harry Sherman has acquired seven novels for production in 1936-37.

Shubert-Rowland

Word from London indicates that J. J. Shubert and William Rowland will produce six musicals, four to be made in Technicolor, for 1936-37. Filming will be done in England.

Mr. Rowland has produced for Universal and

Stage and Screen

Louis Weiss, of Weiss Productions, Inc., has started production on "The Clutching Hand," second of three serials which he will produce for Stage and Screen Productions. It is a Craig Kennedy detective drama.

Twentieth Century-Fox

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and supervising general over production, is in New York conferring with Sidney R. Kent, president, on product for the new season. Both will travel to London to address the European sales convention, in April, and upon their return in May they will delve into final construction of the 1936-37 program.

With only eight features to be filmed for 1935-36, the studio's activities are already beginning to embrace 1936-37 production, having purchased one original manuscript, two books and a play. There are indications that at least a dozen features for the new year will be well under way by May 1st, one of which, "Ramona," will be in Technicolor. More than half of the stories for 1936-37 are understood to have been determined, as follows:

A follow-up to "The Country Doctor," under the title of "Reunion," with story by Sonya Levien; an Irving Berlin musical; "Zero Hour," with Warner Baxter and Lionel Barrymore, now nearing completion; "Ramona," in Technicolor, with Loretta Young, directed by Henry King; "Queen of Sheba"; "Lloyds of London," from Curtis Kenyon's "The Bell Ringer"; "Sing, Baby, Sing," with Fred Allen; "What Price Glory," with Wallace Beery and Clark Gable; "Dimples" and two other Shirley Temple vehicles; "Mark of Zorro," with Lawrence Tibbett; "King of the Kyber Rifles," with Victor McLaglen; "Four Devils"; "The Last Slaver," Civil War story; "Cafe Metropole"; "To Mary—With Love," by Richard Sherman; "Life of John Paul Jones"; "Girls' Dormitory"; "Three Little Girls," with Janet Gaynor and Rochelle Hudson as the first of a series of three comedies; "Banjo on My Knee," with Janet Gaynor; "Autumn," from the London play; "White Hunter"; "Pigskin Parade"; "Public Nuisance No. 1" and three other Jane Withers vehicles; three "Jones Family" releases; "Mediterranean Cruise"; "Libel," from the Broadway play; "The Man from Home" and two other Irvin S. Cobb vehicles; three P. G. Wodehouse "Jeeves" stories; two or three dog stories, four Charlie Chans; three or four British-made productions including Elizabeth Bergner's "As You Like It," and six Harold Bell Wright stories to be made by Sol Lesser, including "Alias Brian Kent," "Devil's Highway," "Man of Iron" and "Utah Trail."

Sol Lesser will make six features for Fox in 1936-37, including "Alias Brian Kent," "Devil's Highway" and "Utah Trail," by Harold Bell Wright; "King of the Royal Mounted" and "Smoky Range," by Zane Grey, and another. The new group will stress authors rather than star personalities, calling them "The Zane Grey-Harold Bell Wright classics."

In Fox's short subject division, a 15 per cent increase in production personnel and negative investment has been effected for the new season, in the reorganization and expansion of Terrytoons. Paul Terry, heading the company making the cartoon series for Educational-Fox, has, through the addition of new artists and writers, built up the staff to the largest size in its history.

Terrytoons have ten more single-reel releases to deliver this season.

Twentieth Century-Fox 1936-37 product will benefit by a $4,000,000 construction program to be launched this week at the studios in Hollywood, in preparation for the consolidation of activities at the Westwood studio.

'PASTEUR' FILM FACTOR IN U. S. SENATE DEBATE

Warner's "The Story of Louis Pasteur" broke into a Senate debate and made the Congressional Record in Washington last week.

In discussing the Public Health Service appropriation, Senator McKellar of Tennessee said he had just seen the picture at the Earle Theatre and that "Paul Muni's wonderful characterization had further impressed him with the vital importance of the Public Health Service."

United Artists

The company will continue its present policy next season on individual selling of only so-called "Class A" pictures. Several affiliated producers are already at work with this in mind.

In continuation of its policy of lining up "international" producers, United Artists, through Maurice Silverstone, managing director for United in England and the Continent, has concluded with Arnold Pressburger, of British Cine-Alliance, Ltd., London, to make two pictures yearly, beginning with 1936-37, for United Artists distribution, at Alexander Korda's London Films studios in England. Mr. Pressburger has been a European producer for many years, making pictures in Vienna, Paris, Rome and Berlin.

Still another new producer will be found in United's ranks next season, Samuel Goldwyn, now in London, having signed a five-year contract with the actress Elisabeth Bergner, and her director-husband, Dr. Paul Czinner, whereby the company will handle worldwide distribution of Bergner-Czinner productions. All of the pictures will be made at U. A.'s affiliated studios at Denham, England, and the selection of stories will be left to the discretion of the new combination. Her first three will be Sir James Barrie's "The Boy David"; George Bernard Shaw's "St. Joan," and Jack London's "The Little Lady of the Big House," all for the new season.

A third new producer will contribute to United's 1936-37 schedule, Mr. Goldwyn having also signed with Victor Saville, who now is forming his own company in London, to make two pictures annually. United Artists will handle worldwide release.

In Hollywood, Mr. Goldwyn's division has completed the current season's program, and has definitely set its 1936-37 features, placing writers under contract at the peak of new activity. Eight pictures are to be made by Mr. Goldwyn in the coming season, constituting the most ambitious program of his career. Four of the scripts will be ready for filming upon the producer's return from Europe in April.

Jane Murfin is revising "Come and Get It," the Edna Ferber story which will star Edward Arnold, with Virginia Bruce and Francis X. Shields, to be the first for 1936-37. W. P. Lipscomb, on loan from Twentieth Century-Fox, is completing his treatment of "Hurricane," by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, to be made in color and filmed in the South Seas. Sidney Howard, in New York, is writing the screen play for Sinclair Lewis's "Dodsworth," in which Walter Huston will star, with Ruth Chatterton. Sam and Bella Spewack are writing the scenario for their "Princess and the Pauper," to star Miriam Hopkins. Mr. Goldwyn will also produce the current Broadway play, "Dead End," for which he is reputed to have paid $165,000.

The Pickford-Lasky combination acquired two stories for 1936-37.

Color will be seen considerably in United Artists' new program, Mr. Goldwyn having scheduled a Technicolor production of his "Goldwyn Follies," while Alexander Korda in London will make at least two in color, and so will Henry Wilcox, likewise in London. Selznick International has set two for color: "Garden of Allah" and "Dark Victory," to star Merle Oberon. Mr. Selznick has signed Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer for "Allah," starting in two weeks, on location at Yuma, Arizona, in the desert, under direction of Richard Boleslawski. Mr. Selznick has scheduled ten for United Artists in 1936-37.

The Criterion Films company of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., producing in England, this week purchased a book and an original manuscript for 1936-37.

Reliance Pictures, another U.A. producer, has entered production on "The Last of the Mohicans," by James Fenimore Cooper, starring Randy Scott.

Universal

Commencing with the purchase of two original stories, four magazine yarns and a novel, the new J. Cheever Cowdin-R. H. Cochrane-Charles Rogers interests at Universal launched plans for the new season, the first without the regime of Mr. Laemmle that has guided the company through 30 years.

It was reported that the company will spend some $12,000,000 in 1936-37 product, and immediately arrangements were made to take a series of adventure melodramas from Trem Carr and starring John Wayne, to be made at Universal City under Mr. Carr's supervision. The first of the contemplated eight will go into production in July, and none will resemble in character the new series that Buck Jones will make for the same Universal program—the Waynes will not be westerns.

Charles R. Rogers, who will be executive vice president in charge of studio operations, has already made several additions to the production staff at Universal City. Rufus Le Maire, Broadway showman and film producer, will act as assistant to Mr. Rogers and to William Koenig, studio general manager.

Val Paul, associated with Mr. Rogers elsewhere for years, will produce for Universal.

Ralph Murphy, director with Mr. Rogers when he was with Paramount, has been contracted to act similarly, joining Al Green, whom Mr. Koenig brought with him from Warners.

Wanger

Having completed two features and placed two others in preparation, Walter Wanger, in Hollywood, is completing his current season's program and expects to finish his five remaining productions in May.

The two completed are "The Moon's Our Home," by Faith Baldwin, starring Margaret Sullavan, with Henry Fonda and Charles Butterworth; and, "Palm Springs," by Myles Connolly, in which Frances Langford, Sir Guy Standing and Smith Ballew are featured.

Preparing, or in production, are: "Fatal Lady," original titled "Brazen," starring Mary Ellis and Walter Pidgeon; "Big Brown Eyes," by James Edward Grant, starring Joan Bennett and Cary Grant; Arthur Somers Roche's "The Case Against Mrs. Ames," with Madeleine Carroll and George Brent; "Spendthrift," by Eric Hatch; and, "Simoon," starring Charles Boyer and Madeleine Carroll.

From the standpoint of color, Mr. Wanger expects to participate in 1936-37 with at least one, "Spawn of the North," and possibly another, following his "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," a current Paramount release.

Warner Brothers-First National

Operating throughout the season at top speed, the Warner-First National-Cosmopolitan production forces at Burbank, California, have completed 75 per cent of the scheduled 60 features announced for 1935-36.

Pictures completed and awaiting release are: "Boulder Dam," with Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis, Lyle Talbot; "Snowed Under," with George Brent, Patricia Ellis, Glenda Farrell; "The Singing Kid," starring Al Jolson, with Sybil Jason, Edward Everett Horton; "Brides Are Like That," with Ross Alexander and Anita Louise; "I Married a Doctor," with Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson, Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee; "Treachery Rides the Range," with Dick Foran, Paula Stone; "Golden Arrow," starring Bette Davis, with George Brent, Kay Hughes, Dick Foran; "Times Square Playboy," with Warren William, June Travis; "Law in Her Hands," with Margaret Lindsay, Glenda Farrell, Warren Hull, Lyle Talbot; "Hearts Divided," starring Marion Davies with Dick Powell, Edward Everett Horton, Charles Ruggles, Claude Rains; "Sons o' Guns," starring Joe E. Stone, Edmund Gwenn, Luis Alberni, Donald Woods, Fritz Lieber; "Hard Luck Dame," with Bette Davis, Warren William, Marie Wilson.

VISUAL EDUCATION IS SCORED IN CINCINNATI

Visual education, school radio programs, vocational education in the high schools and the teaching of music were termed "intrusive innovations," by Hadley Baldwin, chairman of the Sherrill Survey, in Cincinnati last week. Mr. Baldwin made the remark when speaking of the state department of education in his address before the Women's City Club.

Warners will release two "specials" a month through June, July and August.

Of the 130 Vitaphone short subjects scheduled for 1935-36, 115 have been completed, representing 88 per cent.

Warners next year will distribute a series of 13 one-reel animal subjects to be produced by Paul Hoeffler, under the title of "Dangerous Game."

Norman Moray, short subject sales manager, has been conferring in the field with exhibitors and Warner sales representatives concerning final decision regarding Vitaphone's new season's production schedule. Upon his return, in mid-April, Mr. Moray will work out the program with Sam Sax.

Story properties already acquired consist of seven originals, one magazine story and three novels.

Boris Karloff was signed this week for a series of Warner features, beginning in May when the actor returns from England.

Warners are well equipped with talent for 1936-37, having at present under contract 17 stars, 54 featured players, 19 directors, four dialogue directors, 46 writers and seven associate producers. Stars: Marion Davies, Paul Muni, Kay Francis, Leslie Howard, Joe E. Brown, Al Jolson, Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Pat O'Brien, Edward G. Robinson, Joan Blondell, Guy Kibbe, Rudy Vallee, Bette Davis, Jean Muir, Warren William and Claude Rains. Associate producers: Henry Blanke, Robert Lord, Harry Joe Brown, Earl Baldwin, Sam Bischoff, Lou Edelman, Bryan Foy.

Warners may embrace color in 1936-37 product considering production of "The Sea Hawk," a remake, in Technicolor.

Stories Purchased

Stories purchased in February and all production credits available to date, to serve as material for final 1935-36 programs, but, principally, for production in 1936-37, follows:

ABC Murders, book, by Agatha Christie, purchased by MGM.

Ace Drummond, newspaper strip, purchased from King Features by Universal.

Adam's Evening, magazine story, by Katherine Kavanaugh, purchased by Universal, for Edward Everett Horton.

HIS SYMPATHY WITH AUTHORS, EXCEPT—

Pertinent to the complaints of authors at the House patents committee hearing on copyrights last week that film producers "mutilate their work," and apropos the furor of the Authors' League and others over Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's decision to abandon production of "It Can't Happen Here," is the comment of Pare Lorentz, commentator on things cinematic for the New York Journal.

"My sympathies are all with the authors, except for the fact that between them they were paid $150,000 for the play and the scenario and for that money an author should be glad if a producer uses his novel for a crossword puzzle.

Tiffany Film in Woolworth House Is All Wrong, Says Sam Briskin

Why Kid Oneself with Big Booking on Small Picture, Asks Radio Production Executive

by LLEWLLYN MILLER
in Hollywood

"It's no use trying to kid yourself because you can't kid the public. Why do you want to talk to me? RKO pictures will do the talking for me," Sam Briskin, vice-president in charge of production at Radio, grinned as he leaned back in his green leather chair and locked arms behind his head.

Mentally, Mr. Briskin always has his coat off and shirt sleeves rolled up. He's been going around that way ever since the day he stepped out of the College of the City of New York, a fledgling accountant, ready to pound out a career with an adding machine.

On a number of occasions he has nearly lost that shirt. He's not afraid to take a chance. Because he likes the challenge of something new, changing and difficult, Sam Briskin is in the motion picture business.

He was doing pretty well for himself checking up other folks' ledgers when the boredom of it all overcame him. He had an idea of his own. Even though they were written largely in red ink, he wanted ledgers of his own. So he turned the auditing business over to his brother, invested his small capital in a manufacturing line of his own. He had a nice set of ledgers. The red ink followed in due course. If it hadn't threatened to drown him, he might never have been a film executive.

Though he was vividly familiar with the perils and pitfalls of pictures through the route of being accountant for the Hallroom Boys Photoplay Company, his real entry came accidentally through Jack Cohn.

"Why don't you go to work for us?" queried Mr. Cohn.

So Mr. Briskin joined CBC and spent the next few years wrestling manfully with finances of the company which eventually was to grow into Columbia.

"Those were the days when our ambition was to see how little we could lose, not how much we could make," Mr. Briskin recalled with reminiscent amusement. "And in between times we had to keep fit for the ordeal of being thrown out of Doc Giannini's office. They were great days. We hadn't any money and we had to move fast to give the impression that there were bulging bankrolls in the background. Our best break was that there wasn't any airmail. We had a bank account on the Coast and one in New York. You could depend on eight or nine days for a check to clear. Well, sometimes it took a lot of weird maneuvering, but we always cleared 'em, though the telegraph bills were terrific."

The first year the company made money Mr. Briskin quit.

He had asked for a $50 a week raise. Harry and Jack Cohn and Joe Brandt considered the matter. They didn't want to lose their energetic secretary and treasurer. Nor did they want to grant any raises. They compromised on a deal for 10 per cent of the profits and were well pleased when Mr. Briskin agreed. There never had been any profits.

" . . . you can never be topheavy with 'A' shows"

At the end of the year, when Mr. Briskin put in a claim for $7,000 the anguish of the partners was pitiful to behold.

Out of the subsequent argument came a temporary parting of the ways and Mr. Briskin started his own company, Banner Productions, which was liquidated after two successful years.

The story of Columbia's rise, with Mr. Briskin working shoulder to shoulder with the Cohns, is familiar. He went after the big money in the hard way. Noted for working 16, 18 and 20 hours a day, no associate ever has been able to say that he did not do as much as he asked of anyone else.

The most important change on the production horizon is quality rather than the increased length of films, according to his theories.

"Quality is the thing that counts. You have to have quality to make a good one-reeler, and just because a film is 16 reels long won't help it much unless the material demands the length. I predicted the decentralization of theatres years ago. It has happened.

"The next big change will be theatres becoming identified with a definite type of entertainment. It may take three years. It may take fifty. But the logical move is class houses showing nothing but class pictures at road show prices. You don't go to Tiffany's when you want a dime store ring. Neither do you go to Woolworth's when you want real diamonds. You don't walk into a Rolls-Royce agency when you want to buy a Ford or vice versa. Establish first-run houses as the places to find the spectacles, the super-spectacles, the expensive pictures.

"Important bookings never help unimportant pictures and you only hurt yourself when you try to put one over on the public.

"More 'A' pictures is what the public wants. A program can easily be top-heavy with 'B' product. But you can never be top-heavy with 'A' shows."

And he's shrewdly working to that end. Slowly but surely he's expanding lists of contract writers, directors and players, and he's keeping his shirt sleeves rolled up ready for the challenge of the new season.

DRAMATISTS-MANAGERS FIGHT NEARS CLIMAX

Broadway Producers Are Signing Own Agreement Despite Guild Concession

The fight between the Broadway producing managers and the Dramatists' Guild is approaching a climax as the producers this week were lining up a solid front to abide by their own form of contract, after the Guild for a second time rejected the managers' offer to conciliate the differences by negotiation or arbitration.

Despite the fact that the Guild late last week unanimously approved an amendment to its new agreement placing film rights sales to motion picture producers—the chief nub of the argument—on a 60-40 basis, with the playwright receiving the larger share, which is somewhat more favorable to the managers, the League of New York theatres, consisting of a majority of the producer-managers, proceeded with its own plans.

On Tuesday members of the League received copies of an agreement formulated by League counsel pursuant to a unanimous vote of the managers providing that no manager may make a contract for stage production in the United States unless it is subject to the form of contract adopted by the League on March 25, or until an agreement with the Guild shall have been negotiated and approved.

While the sliding scale for film rights sales in the Guild's agreement which went into effect March 2 is the chief contention, there are other points, prominently among these the provisions for production in England and the ruling that the rights conferred on a manager are non-assignable and ceases upon his death.

For the first time in years the Broadway managers have joined in united action to achieve a common aim, and their agreement with the League submits them to an injunction and damages in event of a violation.

Broadway consensus is that while the Guild appears adamant, it will yield by the time play purchases for the fall producing season starts. Already the younger members of the playwrights' organization have been influential in effecting the revision in the original agreement providing for the 60-40 split, which is scheduled for a final vote of the membership on April 8. The clause vesting full power over disposition of a play in the author, also objected to by the managers, will not be altered, however, said Sidney Howard, president of the Guild.

The Guild tentatively has agreed to negotiate with the managers, provided the number of representatives are limited to two or three and the managers put their suggestions in writing before they are discussed. Brock Pemberton, chairman of the League's contract committee, opposes the Guild's contract because it was not mutually negotiated with the managers and because he feels it sets a bad precedent.

Uniform Contracts Nearer

Meanwhile, uniform contracts for members of the Screen Writers' Guild, Dramatists' Guild and the Authors' Guild were brought a step nearer when a plan for absorption of these organizations was adopted Monday by the Authors' League of America.

Full control of the three Guilds is vested in the council of the Authors' League under the plan for bringing about a more complete solidarity of the writers' organizations. A writer's membership in the League will cover his activities in any one or all of the fields over which the three affiliated guilds have jurisdiction, thus eliminating the necessity of his joining more than one of the units. The uniform contract for writers will be sufficient to cover their activities in the screen, stage, radio, book and magazine fields.

The changes are embodied in a new constitution, which was approved by all but 17 of the 2,000 League members voting, said Marc Connelly, president.

To Vote on New Setup

The new setup is scheduled for a vote of ratification by the Screen Writers' Guild in Hollywood on April 18. The first effect of the reorganization is expected to be a demand from the screen guild for recognition by the producers. At the same time members of the Guild will vote an amended constitution, by-laws and dues plan in conformance with those of the Authors' League.

The Screen Writers' Guild meantime is expressing concern over the reported clause in the new film act now before the English Parliament banning American screen writers from working on British films.

Rockefeller Center Sells RCA Holdings

Rockefeller Center, owner of securities of Radio Corporation of America, in February sold its entire interest in the company, consisting of 100,000 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred A stock, it was revealed this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The block of stock held for three years was received by Rockefeller Center from RCA through an arrangement for adjustment of leaseholds.

Subject to ratification of stockholders, RCA plans to call for redemption at $55 a share of the entire issue of 7 per cent preferred A stock.

United Amusement Net

United Amusement Corporation, Ltd., Toronto, reporting for its last fiscal year, shows a net operating earning, after deducting for administrative and general expenses, of $227,799, an increase of $28,431 over the previous year. Net profit was $56,542 after allowing for taxes, depreciation and bond interest.

Bondholders Foreclose

More than 150 bondholders of the Beecroft Building Company in Madison, Wis., owner of the Orpheum, Strand and Parkway theatres there, have declared themselves for absolute foreclosure of the properties and have indicated they will vote against the reorganization plan recently approved by Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone.

Post on Film Board

Langdon W. Post, Tenement House Commissioner and chairman of the New York City Housing Authority, has been elected a member of the executive committee of the National Board of Review.

Exhibitors Discuss Copyright April 13

Exhibitors' views on pending copyright legislation will be received by the House patents committee in Washington on April 13, with the producers and distributors to be heard the following two days, ending the hearings, Representative Fritz G. Lanham of Texas, acting chairman, said this week.

The committee has notified Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, that he may appear, and other exhibitor spokesmen also will be heard.

The hearings this week were devoted to manufacturers of mechanical reproductions and the performing artists. The manufacturers asked for retention of the present license fee of two cents a composition and for extension of copyright protection to records as the only effectual means of curbing abuses charged against radio broadcasters.

Meanwhile, Hollywood heard repercussions of the attack made on producers last week by John Howard Lawson, former president of the Screen Writers Guild, who charged that low film standards were due to the ignoring of the dramatists' advice.

A wire signed by 65 screen writers repudiating the statements attributed to Mr. Lawson resulted in a near split in the Guild's ranks and necessitated the calling of a special meeting of the board. Ernest Pascal, president of the Guild, said many of the signatories were not Guild members and that several who are members tried to rescind their signatures.

Mr. Pascal declared that every writer, no matter what his field, is against the Duffy bill. In sequel, four signers of the original protest wire to Washington sent a letter to Mr. Pascal censuring him for upholding Mr. Lawson, after Mr. Pascal had privately admitted that Mr. Lawson's remarks were "out of line."

Unless copyright protection is extended, the phonograph record industry, now on the upgrade, may be eliminated entirely, it was contended this week by W. R. Altschuler of American Record Corporation.

Prior to the advent of broadcasting, popular records sold from 500,000 to 1,000,000 copies, but today 100,000 copies is a high figure and seldom attained, the manufacturers disclosed. It was charged that many small radio stations fill 25 per cent of their time with records, often without announcement.

Spokesmen for the music publishers late last week opposed major provisions of the pending legislation to modernize the copyright laws of 1909.

Harry P. Summerville of Washington, representing the American Hotel Association, urged a graduated fee for all copyrighted music on the basis of the size and cost of orchestras.

Fox Midwest To Move

Fox Midwest will move the general offices of the circuit from the Country Club Plaza, where they have been located about four years, to the third floor of the Uptown theatre, June 1. The circuit recently took title to the Uptown building, which houses its first-run theatre. Senn Lawler, publicity manager for the circuit, will move his offices from Wichita to the new Kansas City quarters when they are ready.

Rosenquest Made Buyer

Harry E. Rosenquest, assistant to Norman H. Moray, in charge of Vitaphone sales, has been promoted to short subject buyer for the Warner circuit under Clayton Bond in New York. He succeeds William J. Clarke, who resigned, effective April 4th.

COMPOSERS FIGHT "SNIPING" WHILE EXHIBITORS SEEK COPYRIGHT CHANGE

Warner Bros. Files 40 More Music Copyright Actions; Prepares to Answer Charge of Wasting Assets

On the defensive against attacks on numerous fronts, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is mapping its campaign against legislative assaults which have been directed at it in the last year, as exhibitor-radio-hotel interests are fighting in Washington for enactment of the Duffy copyright bill.

The recent criminal indictments against ASCAP officials in the state of Washington intensified the precarious position in which the Society finds itself in that state, but "it will be adjusted this year," assured Nathan Burkan, ASCAP general counsel, at the annual membership meeting in New York last Thursday night.

Meanwhile, Warner Brothers said this week that it was receiving acceptances of its five-year music licensing contract offered to the radio industry last week. Other salient developments included:

1. Suit charging waste of assets by Warners in the purchase of its seven major music subsidiaries was filed by two stockholders of Roxbury, Mass.
2. ASCAP reported that exhibitors paid $800,000 in music taxes last year, contributing to a substantial increase in the Society's gross.
3. Warner filed 40 additional suits over the weekend alleging copyright infringement by radio, hotels and cafes.

"Snipe" Legislation Fought

What steps will be taken to lift ASCAP from receivership in the state of Washington and defeat the indictments pending in the Snohomish county superior court at Everett were not made clear by the Society's counsel, but an active drive against what it terms "snipe" legislation will be made.

The National Association of Broadcasters has informed member radio stations that similar legislation might well be extended, and ASCAP reiterated its charge this week that the drastic regulatory measures had been passed as a result of "intensive campaigning by groups of associated music users," chiefly radio and hotel interests.

ASCAP pointed out that the "absurdities" of the legislation are that Wisconsin last year enacted a five per cent tax on performing rights collections on the Society's entire national gross, which would far exceed the $70,000 taken out of the state in a year. Also cited was the Louisiana law where ASCAP must pay $5,000 annual tax to each of 68 parishes for the privilege of doing business, while the total collections in the state were only $20,000 in 1935.

Similar Legislation Elsewhere

Similar taxing legislation is in effect in Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, Pennsylvania and Tennessee, ASCAP complained. And added to its troubles are the pending Duffy bill, enactment of which the Society claims would "wreck it," the Government's antitrust suit pending in the federal district court in New York, and the continuous opposition of its own customers.

The tax laws in effect, according to Mr. Burkan, interfere with the exercise of a right granted under the Constitution; conflict with the policy of copyright protection; discriminate against non-residents; are penalites imposed on the copyright owner for the right to vend his works, which is a right granted under the copyright law; impair the obligation of license contracts executed prior to the enactment of these tax laws, and unreasonably abridge the rights of the copyright owners to enter into future contracts.

Warner Prepares Answer

Warner is preparing an answer to the suit asking for a receiver of the music subsidiaries filed last week in the New York supreme court by Morris and Emilia Sharoff of Roxbury, Mass., holders of about 4,000 shares of Warner stock. The action is against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and Music Publishers Holding Corporation, the parent corporation of the music companies.

Named as codefendants are Harms, Inc., T. B. Harms Company, M. Witmark and Sons, Remick Music Corporation, New World Music Corporation, Shubert Music Publishing Corporation, Victoria Publishing Company, directors of Warner Brothers, Herman Starr, vice-president in charge of music, Edwin Morris, general manager of the music companies, Max Dreyfus and the estate of Moe Mark.

The complaint set forth that Warner Bros. paid $1,000,000 in cash and $9,000,000 in Warner stock for controlling interests in the music subsidiaries, charging that this amount was excessive and a waste of corporate assets. It was pointed out that all music companies named were members of ASCAP and that ASCAP had made five-year contracts with National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System in June, 1935.

It is further charged that Warner's withdrawal from ASCAP last January 1 resulted in "severe financial losses," and that an attempt is being made to create a rival organization to ASCAP. Removal of Harry M., Albert and Jack L. Warner as officers of the film company is asked, together with an injunction, accounting of royalties and a receiver.

EXHIBITOR UNIT URGES RESISTANCE

Urging exhibitors to "resist as strenuously as possible" the introduction of a score charge in that territory by United Artists, the board of managers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware at its last meeting adopted a resolution of protest against the company.

A letter was addressed to George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager in charge of distribution of United Artists, voicing the protest. Letters also were sent to all exhibitors in the Philadelphia territory urging them to demand elimination of the levy.

Mr. Schaefer said this week that the score charge has been added to United Artists' film rentals nationally since last August. He indicated that the levy would continue.

The score charge is one of the industry problems to be taken up by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in conference with the distributors.

Burkan Tells ASCAP Members Washington State Situation Will Be Adjusted This Year; Legislation Moves Protested

ASCAP'S gross income for 1935 was $4,505,829, an increase of $1,129,899 over 1934, when collections were $3,375,930, and of the larger figure theatre music taxes represented approximately $800,000, according to the treasurer's report made at the annual meeting.

After administrative expenses and foreign royalties there was left for distribution to members $3,262,556, an increase of $747,706 over 1934 when $3,514,850 was disbursed. The net is divided equally between publishers and composers and authors. The Society's relief fund expended $18,446 in 1935, as compared with $9,899 in 1934.

185 Actions Filed

By this week 185 actions had been brought by Warner against radio stations, hotel restaurants and night clubs allegedly playing Warner-controlled music without the formality of a license. Forty more suits were filed in the federal district court in New York and in various other places throughout the country.

Warner's offer of a five-year licensing contract to radio on revised terms, as announced last week, will expire in a few days, the company said. Declaring it to be Warner's sentiment that a "per-piece basis" of paying for the use of music on the air "would be fairer," Mr. Starr said that this method was made impossible because many stations had signed agreements with ASCAP on a "bulk or flat-fee basis." When the radio and music publishing industries agree on the "per-piece" system of charging, which has long been sought by radio, Warner will be willing to adopt it, Mr. Starr said.

Meanwhile in Canada H. T. Jamieson, president of the Performing Rights Society, continued to defend the Society against attacks in Parliament in articles printed in the Ottawa Journal. In Canada, too, the music users are demanding a reduction in music royalties.

Decision Reserved in Erpi Case

Judge John C. Knox in federal district court in New York reserved decision on the motion of counsel for Electrical Research Products, Inc., to dismiss the suit for $149,949 brought by the Music Publishers Protective Association for foreign royalties alleged due.

Facing a stoppage of publication of new music, the MPPA this week appealed to the Musicians' Union, Local 802, of the American Federation of Musicians, to delay its strike of 150 arrangers, copyists and proofreaders of music pending further negotiations on wages and working conditions.

WARNER DEBT PARED BY 23 MILLIONS SINCE 1930

Saving of $450,000 a Year Predicted by Financial Writer in Refunding of Debentures

Warner Brothers' decision to consider retiring $31,924,000 debentures, due in 1939, through a $50,000,000 refunding program, this week moved financial editors of Wall Street to recall "the valiant struggle made by the company against depression odds and its victorious, though battlescarred emergence from the six-year slump." The occasion also caused the financial press to analyze Warners' financial structure as it stands today and its workings financially down through the years of economic disorder.

"Few companies with debt structures approximating nearly 50 per cent of resources in 1929 were able, in the intervening years, to avoid receivership," commented Ian Mack, Scripps-Howard financial writer, in the New York World-Telegram. "But Warners did so by gradually lightening its indebtedness and eliminating unprofitable theatres. Thus, abetted by the general recovery, the company was enabled to convert huge deficits into earnings once more."

At the outset of the depression, it was pointed out, with 1929 earnings exceeding $17,000,000, the corporation completed a large-scale expansion program which provided it with more than 600 exhibition outlets throughout the country and which lifted its total assets to $230,000,000. "In doing so, however, it assumed obligations which lifted its consolidated funded debt to $105,575,485, with fixed charges aggregating $6,500,000.

"Of this indebtedness, $62,735,485 represented outstanding mortgages of subsidiary properties, while the balance of $49,838,000 constituted the six per cent convertible debentures of the company itself, maturing on September 1, 1939. Depression influences began to make themselves felt in 1930," it was observed, "when net income declined more than 60 per cent to $7,074,-121 and was replaced in subsequent years by deficits as follows: $7,918,695 in 1931, $14,095,-054 in 1932, $6,291,748 in 1933 and $2,530,514 in 1934.

"Contributing to these results, among other factors, were curtailed revenues from film rentals and theatre properties and rigid fixed charges. How the former fared in the face of receding mass purchasing power and restricted attendance at theatres is evidenced by the contraction of operating income from $52,340,302 to $23,361,302 at the depth of the depression in 1932. A slow but gradual recovery occurred in succeeding years, bringing gross to $31,857,522 in 1935.

Campaign of Economy

"In the interim, due to the corporation's mounting deficits and the resultant impairment of its cash and working capital positions, the six per cent debentures slumped in the open market to a low of nine in 1932, providing an appraisal of less than 10 per cent to the principal amount thereof outstanding. Intermittent actions instituted by disgruntled stockholders to have the corporation placed in the hands of receivers, in the meantime, were defended successfully by the management under Harry M. Warner, president.

"To meet the situation, Mr. Warner and his associates embarked upon a campaign of economy designed to rehabilitate the company's position. Production costs were reduced by nearly 35 per cent in 1932 from the 1929 level from $28,000,000 in 1929, while unprofitable theatres either were disposed of or abandoned, thereby reducing depreciation charges, following write-downs, from nearly $10,000,000 to slightly more than $5,000,000 currently.

Retiring Debentures

"At the same time the company embarked upon a policy of retiring as many of the debentures and subsidiary mortgage bonds as it could acquire in the open market with its limited cash resources. In the six intervening years retirements effected principally through such operations aggregated $23,000,000, reducing the corporation's indebtedness to its present total of $82,000,000, consisting of $31,924,000 of debentures and $50,029,000 of subsidiary funded debt.

"Savings achieved through the purchase of debentures at discounts ranging from 10 per cent to about 90 per cent parity, amounted to $6,567,678. As a result of this program, fixed charges of the company were reduced by nearly $2,000,000 yearly to the present annual figure of about $4,800,000. In the interim the improvement in general business helped to expand gross revenues to $31,857,522 in the 1935 fiscal year, enabling the company to show a net, after all charges of $674,150.

"Earnings recuperation gained impetus in the current fiscal year as enlarged theatre attendance lifted box office receipts still further. In consequence, first quarter net income crossed $1,000,000, contrasted with a $144,000 deficit in the corresponding year. Meanwhile the corporation's improved earnings status was reflected in a gradual recovery in the market price of the debentures to their current quotation around 96, six points under their call price.

"Expectations in the financial district are that the debentures will be refunded at a four and one-half per cent coupon rate, conditional upon the inclusion of a conversion feature in the indenture at attractive levels. Such an operation should save the company $450,000 a year, thus expanding the balance of earnings available for the 102,107 shares of $3.85 cumulative preferred stock and the 3,801,091 shares of common stock in the hands of the public," concluded Scripps-Howard.

AMPA Hears Report of Nominations Committee

Report of the committee on nomination of officers for the coming year was to be read to AMPA members at its regular meeting on Thursday. Preceding the business session, Roger Pryor and William Edmunds were to be guests.

A. Bernard Moloney of Reuters, Ltd., spokesman for the foreign press correspondents entertained at the AMPA meeting a week previously, discussed needs and requirements of press services abroad and volunteered aid and advice in preparation and timely dispatch of releases.

Hays Goes to Coast

Will H. Hays left New York on Tuesday for Los Angeles. He expected to remain in the production capital two weeks.

Brandt Declines ITOA Presidency; Two Units Meeting

Harry Brandt definitely will decline to run again as president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, he said this week. At a meeting of the organization's board of directors at the Astor Hotel last week, Mr. Brandt had been unanimously recommended for reelection.

In a letter to the board of directors of the organization Mr. Brandt said that his reasons were the lack of cooperation of producers, distributors and affiliated exhibitors and the refusal of those groups to acknowledge the work done by the organization.

Only final details remain to be ironed out in the completion of the merger of the ITOA and the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, however.

In New Haven, incorporation of the new Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut has been decided upon. A constitution will be adopted at the next meeting, April 7. Dr. J. B. Fishman, this week, was elected chairman of the board.

The semi-annual meeting of the Omaha Motion Picture Theatre Owners was held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Loyal hotel, with C. E. Williams, president, in charge.

Tri-State Motion Picture Theatre Owners will have its annual convention at the Chicsa hotel, Memphis, on Sunday and Monday. M. A. Lightman, president, will preside.

Census Bureau Expands Survey of Film Theatres

Expanding the scope of its study of the motion picture industry in its nationwide survey of business, the Bureau of the Census at Washington is planning to present a larger picture this year of the theatre field and its total annual revenue both in type of ownership and number of houses owned and controlled, together with locations.

"The success of the Census is dependent entirely upon the cooperation of theatre owners," the Bureau pointed out this week. "Carefully prepared reports, returned without delay, will greatly enhance the value of these thoroughly impartial Census statistics."

This year the Census is asking not only for information on annual payrolls, but in addition a breakdown for a sample week in October.

Benefits to Raise Flood Relief Funds

Major Edward Bowes has been appointed general chairman of a committee of citizens of Greater New York which is to be in charge of a series of benefits conducted during the week of April 17th to raise funds for flood victims. Mayor LaGuardia is honorary chairman of the body, which includes in its membership Martin Quigley, Frank C. Walker, Howard S. Cullman, Donald Flamm, Charles L. O'Reilly, George M. Cohan, Morris Gest, Eddie Dowling, William Griffin, Eddie Cantor, Gene Buck, Lee Shubert, Harry Hershfield and H. Wayne Pierson, vice-chairman.

ANTI-TRUST CASES AGAINST MAJORS NOW PROCEEDING ON FOUR FRONTS

New York Independents Sue Distributors on Forcing of Short Subjects; Trial at Lincoln Starts April 27

Involvement of large distributors in anti-trust cases this week grew deeper with new activities in the courts along four fronts:

New York independent owners sued distributors on charges of forcing short subjects with feature sales.

Kansas City courts denied but did not dismiss the plea of independents for an injunction against Fox Midwest and distributors on charges of unfair clearance and zoning.

April 27th was the date set for trial at Lincoln, Neb., of exhibitors' suit against distributors.

Government sees no delay in the action against distributors in the St. Louis Fanchon and Marco - Harry Arthur case, even though the courts last week gave distributors the right to appeal to the U. S. supreme court.

Major distributors this week were charged with violation of the New York state anti-trust and monopoly laws in the alleged forcing of shorts subjects with features in an action which opens the long promised warfare by the Independent Theatre Owners Association on this sales practice.

Follows Suit by RKO

The charges were made in an answer filed by Ridgewood Amusement Company, a Harry Brandt company operating the Star theatre, Brooklyn, to an action brought by RKO Distributing Corporation for a claim of $61 on a short subject contract. The action was instituted by the distributor in the municipal court. In its answer, Ridgewood alleged that it was required to take the short subjects in order to obtain the distributor's features and further alleged that this sales practice was also followed by Warner, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, Universal and Columbia in violation of the Donnelly Act, the New York State anti-trust and monopoly statute.

Weisman, Quinn, Allen and Spett, counsel for Ridgewood, said that an action naming all major distributors would be filed in federal court in New York in the near future alleging the violation of the federal anti-trust laws.

Further west, in Kansas City, Judge Merrill E. Otis denied but did not dismiss the independents' application for a temporary injunction against Fox Midwest and major distibutors on charges of conspiracy. Judge Otis based his denial on the fact that the independents had not submitted a clear supporting case.

Fox Midwest and other defendants are expected to answer the charges next Monday, probably with a motion of dismissal.

The court took the case under advisement last week before rendering a decision, and arguments at the time hinged on the question of whether or not the defendants act in concert to set up a zoning plan.

Trial will begin in federal court at Lincoln, Neb., on April 27th, of the conspiracy and collusion suit brought by State Theatres, Inc., against Lincoln exhibitors and distributors for $444,000. The defendants are Lincoln Theatres Corporation, Twentieth Century-Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal, United Artists, Warners, RKO and Paramount.

The action was brought specifically by G. L. Hooper of Topeka, principal stockholder of State Theatres, and the Monroe family of Beatrice, Neb., which formerly operated the theatre. Evidence was compiled by Cal Bard, Independent Theatres, Inc., executive, who will bring a similar suit against the same defendants for $1,353,000 immediately after the first action is concluded. Former state Attorney General Paul Good is counsel for the plaintiff.

Sought Denial January 29th

The Government's new anti-trust action against Warner, RKO, Paramount and individual defendants filed recently in federal court in New York is not affected at this time by the order signed in St. Louis last Friday granting the defendant distributors leave to appeal to the United States supreme court from Federal Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux's order dismissing without prejudice the Government's earlier civil action against the distributor defendants, attorneys in New York said.

The supreme court appeal, it was said, does not automatically arrest proceedings in the new civil action. However, if the appeal is decided in the distributor defendants' favor it would have the effect of nullifying the district court proceedings in New York.

The right to appeal was granted the defendants by Federal Judge Charles B. Davis at St. Louis in line with the procedure directing qualified appellants in cases brought by the Government to go directly to the higher court without a hearing before the intervening circuit court of appeals. The defendants pointed out in their appeal papers that they had sought denial of the Government's motion for leave to dismiss its civil action without prejudice when the motion was made, January 29th. They said that Judge Molyneaux also rejected their petition for a motion to dismiss the Government's case without prejudice or on the grounds of res adjudicata, contending that the dismissal of the Government's earlier criminal action at St. Louis disposed of the issues in the civil action.

The defendants in their application for leave to appeal cited 21 assignments of error in Judge Molyneaux's rulings on the Government's motions and their own motions. They are granted 40 days from March 27 in which to file their record of appeal with the supreme court, but because of the voluminous records in the case additional time will be sought of the high court for the filing of the appeal. The appeal will ask the supreme court for a reversal of Judge Molyneaux's refusal to deny the Government's St. Louis motion for a dismissal without prejudice.

Department of Justice officials in Washington also said that they do not expect the appeal order issued by Judge Davis in St. Louis would have any effect on the pending New York case. It was said that the New York case was considered an entirely separate suit and that it was not expected that the action in the St. Louis case would delay it.

FUNDS NEEDED FOR TRUST PROBING

An additional fund of $100,000 will be required to set up within the Department of Justice a new unit under the anti-trust division to investigate situations concerning which no complaints have been received although anti-trust law violation is known to exist. Establishment of such a unit was suggested to the House Appropriations Committee last month by Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson, who made this estimate of cost involved.

Although 1,500 complaints were received during the last fiscal year, it is understood that data obtained by other means, possibly through study of NRA codes, indicates prevalence of violation not officially reported. The new unit would investigate this type of transgression.

Herbert Yates Seeking Laboratory Location

Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., is said to have under consideration a number of sites for location of a British Consolidated laboratory, to be constructed. Settlement on a location, with Denham and the Iver district reported favored, is expected to be made before Mr. Yates sails for the United States on April 4th.

Plagiarism Charged on "Thanks a Million"

An injunction suit against the showing of "Thanks a Million" was filed against Twentieth Century-Fox in federal district court, New York, Tuesday, by Morgan Wallace and Lawrence Shubert Lawrence, who charged plagiarism from their play, "Congratulations." It is alleged that Mr. Wallace copyrighted the play which was produced on Broadway by Mr. Lawrence.

The Great Ziegfeld

(MGM)

Music and Dance Spectacle

It takes a lot of stuff to make a picture run three hours and four minutes. A lot of entertainment material is required to make each one of those minutes a sensational experience for any kind of audience. But "The Great Ziegfeld" has all the necessary ingredients to make that long time seem altogether too short. For that extended length a preview audience in the Granada Theatre, Santa Barbara, Cal., sat, stood and watched. Sometimes, in the heart appeal of the motivating romantic and dramatic stories, it was wrapped in hushed silence. Reacting to the beauty, grandeur and pageantry of its substantiating productions spectacles, it broke into storms of applause. The charm of its music, familiar and new, held the crowd. The comedy whirled it into spasms of glee. As it paraded picture stars today—William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer, Frank Morgan, Virginia Bruce, Reginald Owen, Joseph Cawthorne, Nat Pendleton and a host more; as it presented Fanny Brice, Ray Bolger and Harriet Hoctor, in their specialties; as it recreated Ziegfeld's old favorites, Anna Held, Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, Billy Burke, Ann Pennington, Sandow, Marylin Miller and scores of others—the crowd's understanding and appreciation was reflected in its marked enthusiasm.

Columns would be needed adequately to describe "Ziegfeld" in its entirely. In comparison, no previous music dance spectacle, no matter how elaborately produced, approaches it from a standpoint of sheer brilliance and beauty. Impressive as these qualities are, however, they actually are of secondary importance to the appeal of the motivating story. In this there are drama, love interest, triumph, sacrifice and tragedy, so that for every thrill the spectacle brings, for all the happiness the music inspires and every laugh the comedy provokes, the lure of human interest pointedly aimed to play upon the heart strings accounts for as many tears.

As the picture, written by William Anthony McGuire, old friend and associate, tells Ziegfeld's story, brings to the screen every element any kind of audience would want for entertainment, it also places in the hands of exhibitors every commercial essential for selling it.

It is the story of a great showman, all his chimeric dreams and concrete accomplishments. It relates his winning of Anna Held and their great happiness together. It portrays the drama of the incident that caused their parting, the pathos that is in Anna's heart when she phones to congratulate him upon his marriage to Billie Burke. It tells of Billie's loyalty and sacrifice that her husband might again ride the crest. It shows a triumphant Ziegfeld with four shows on Broadway in one season. It shows a heartbroken Ziegfeld, caught in the market crash, calling for Rogers, Cantor, W. C. Fields and all the rest to come back to him. Dying, visions of his great shows dance in his tired brain.

Is spectacle what audiences want? They'll get that continually from start to finish. Particularly they'll get it in the lavish grand staircase number sung to the tune "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," in which hundreds of girls posed in tableaux, had the audience standing up cheering. That comes first, but the balloon number, the negligee clad girls dancing in the moving boudoir, the exotic fashion parade, the "Tulip Time" and Fanny Brice features, the "Look for the Silver Lining" episode, the 60 Club ball, and Harriet Hoctor's Animal Ballet are spectacles in the highest degree.

The familiar songs mentioned plus "My Man," "I Wish You'd Come and Play with Me," "It's Delightful to be Married" and "If You Knew Susie," are supplemented with incidental music from all the Ziegfeld shows and five or six specially written new numbers.

If comedy alone matters, there's the comedy drama of the man's life and career; the comedy of Will Rogers, Fanny Brice, Ray Bolger and that provided by Frank Morgan as Ziegfeld's friendly rival, Sandow, his costumer, Herman Bing, bookkeeper Reginald Owen and publicity man Raymond Walburn.

As produced by Hunt Stromberg, directed by Robert Z. Leonard and played by the stars and entire supporting cast, the presentation of "Ziegfeld" on any showman's program should be considered an event demanding the expenditure of every bit of intelligence, brain power and resourcefulness.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Murder by an Aristocrat

(Warner)

Mystery Melodrama

Audiences are quite apt to accept this picture as something other than what the producers intended. The title cues its intended character. But instead of being a mystery shrouded, suspense tensioned, murder mystery melodrama, it's a picture that gave its first auditors more amusement looking at it than interest in following its story and action.

Basically, it's mystery melodrama involving a couple of killings, a lot of weird, hard to understand or explain carryings on, and the formula list of multiple suspects. It's so involved, however, that, instead of explaining itself, it has to be verbally explained in the end.

Bayard, blackmail bent wastrel scion of the Thacher family, is mysteriously wounded. Dowager Adele might have done it because Bayard thinks she ought to sell her jewels to pay him off. Hilary might have done it because Bayard has informed him that he knows how the former has been monkeying around with depositors' accounts in his bank. Janice, or district attorney Tweed, also a relative, might have done it, because they know that Bayard knows that they have been enjoying a philandering flirtation. David, Janice's liquor-and-drug addict husband, might be guilty.

Later, while in nurse Sally's charge, though she happens to be absent at the time, Bayard finally does get killed. Follows a lot of weird goings on, and then Dave is killed. The family, to maintain its prestige, is holding out that both deaths were suicidal, until nurse Sally, who seems to be a super Sherlock Holmes, reconstructs the carnage, showing that Dave killed Bayard, that Adele killed Dave, and she, evidently to save the survivors the tortures of a criminal trial, conveniently drops dead.

Previewed in Forum Theatre, Los Angeles. Audience quite evidently fully educated to the mechanics of mystery thrillers preferred to laugh when it should be enjoying thrills and chills and wasn't backward in telling the screen characters just what cues and tips to follow to finger the killer long before the nurse detective got around to it.

Sky Parade

(Paramount-Hurley)

Adventure Comedy Drama

Aimed almost exclusively to amuse the youngsters and their more mature aviation enthusiasts, this picture is half educational and half action adventure drama. Based on the popular radio broadcast, "The Air Adventures of Jimmy Allen," the picture already has the benefit of a readymade audience in the youngsters who are members of the Jimmy Allen Clubs. Furthering the worth of that exploitation angle, there is also a semi-historic picturization of the development of commercial aviation, making it an ideal vehicle for tieups with air lines and agencies and with plane manufacturers as well as the clubs.

Opening in the war, Scottie Allen, who appears with Jimmy in the broadcasts, learns that his wife has died in childbirth. Allen and his buddies, Speed and Tommy, return home after the Armistice and go in for barnstorming air circuses. When Allen is lost trying to hop the Atlantic, Speed and Geraldine, about whom slight romance centers, together with Tommy, become Jimmy Allen's guardians. Turning to commercial aviation, the film devotes considerable length to picturing that industry's growth and development. Upon losing government subsidies, Speed and Tommy turn to plane manufacturing and develop a robot pilot. Foreign governments trying to steal the idea, erstwhile war buddy Casey becomes the villain menacing Jimmy's life. Here come thrill and action, together with a spectacle air parade, when Speed radios instructions that bring the youngster down safely.

Unless adults are interested in the exploits of Jimmy Allen or are aviation fans, the picture may not hold much interest for them, but for the kids who like plenty of action and excitement and want to know the inside workings of airplane manufacturing and flying the feature is an unusual attraction for special juvenile shows.

Previewed in the Uptown Theatre, Los Angales. The reaction of the few kids in the house indicated that they liked it.

I Married a Doctor

(Warner)

Comedy Drama

Although this picture is an adaptation of Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street," it by no means is a remake of that feature. The substance of the story is the same, yet the treatment not only accentuates the underlying drama, romance, comedy, clash of temperaments and semi-tragedy of the original, but gives it a freshness and allure that is entirely modern. The picture always has the element of human interest as its dominating factor.

Marked bv exceptional performances on the parts of Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson, Ross Alexander, Louize Fazenda and Ray Mayer particularly, and by all the others of the cast in general, the show undoubtedly possesses entertainment quality for word-of-mouth advertising.

In theme the story is understandably human and intriguing. Carol Kennicott marries Doctor William and comes to his little midwestern city with nothing but love and hope for great happiness in her heart. Taking an active interest in the affairs of the town, wanting particularly to modernize and beautify it, she incurs the dislike of many of the residents. The feeling of illwill that they have toward her is intensified when they begin to believe the interest she is showing in an ambitious young artist, Erik, is something more than impersonal. Amazed and heartbroken that she should be so misunderstood, Carol leaves her husband and the town. Disillusioned, her life empty, she realizes that to live again she must return to conquer those who abused her.

Sober in character, though not without plenty of comedy, the picture has the quality to stir the more serious emotions. Sold as a feature that hits right home, that sometimes is ironic in its picturization of bigotry and the unwillingness to understand or sympathize, it can be given unusual attention.

Previewed in studio projection room.

Il Re Burlone

(Nuvo Mondo)

Italian Comedy Drama

Announced in its premiere at the Cine Roma theatre, New York, as the first million dollar picture to come out of Italy, this production, the title of which is translated as "Daughter of the Revolution," bears out the billing in point of settings, constuming, casting and, for the most part, technological aspects. It is what is commonly described as a costume picture, with historical background and possibly a dash of patriotic significance, the motivation provided chiefly by a movement launched in about 1840 to bring about a united Italy through consolidation of the then uncoordinated territories since brought under Italian rule.

The opening performance in America was given March 25th to an invited audience composed principally of Italian Americans. Response of this audience to the Italian dialogue, a great deal of which is of humorous character and does not translate readily into the English subtitles with which the picture has been supplied by May Carlisle, indicated enthusiastic satisfaction. The dramatic action, which begins about midway of the picture and continues to the end, is more effectively interpreted by these captions.

Chief emphasis is placed, by story and action, upon the personality and acting ability of Armando Falconi, who combines in about equal parts the mannerisms of Wallace Beery, Charles Laughton and Frank Morgan to produce a manifestly competent performance. He is cast as the King of Naples, whose abduction is planned by a group of radicals including some of his own officers, and Nenella, the feminine lead, whose father the king has caused to be executed some time before the story begins. He discovers the plot, arrests the leaders, who escape with connivance of their jailers, to the satisfaction of all, since the king, like the radicals, is genuinely in sympathy with the objective of uniting the Italian people.—Weaver, New York.

Produced by Capitani. Distributed by Nuvo Mundo. Directed by Enrico Guazoni. No P. C. A. certificate. Release date, March 25. Running time, 98 minutes. Audience classification, general.

Once in a Million

(Associated British Pictures)

Farce-Comedy

Buddy Rogers is the star here and the film offers an opportunity of boosting his return to straight work. The Band and any musical interest are missing. What is offered is a capital piece of burlesque, ingenious in plot idea and amusing in incident even when it is irrelevant incident. In fact, it is a talker caper, and Rogers shows himself a good comedian and still an attractive and debonair figure for the women.

There are definite exploitation possibilities in the central idea of a hard-up clerk being mistaken for a millionaire, because he has been sent to pay a million in notes into the Bank on Saturday and, finding it shut, is taking refuge in a hotel for the week-end, depositing his wealth in the strong room. Forced into the Royal Suite, and compelled to steal the dress suit of the dispossessed guest, a penniless foreign prince, he is also embarrassed by a lack of ready cash in his wooing of a beautiful Countess (Mary Brian), who also, as it happens, is bogus, being actually a mannequin planted to show off dresses for her employer and to help him sell his bad business to any simpleton who comes along.

The game of cross-purposes, further complicated by the activities of a gold-digger who invades the "millionaire's" bed chamber, and by a trio of Chicago crooks who turn out to be detectives, comes to a very amusing climax with the discovery, on Monday morning, that the Bank has stopped payment, Buddy being rewarded for his foresight in "saving" the million by a directorship, which makes marriage with the "Countess" immediately practicable.

It is all done on very broad farcical lines, developing into near-slapstick. Haver and Lee as the detectives do their full share in maintaining this atmosphere. Some of the other comedy is not up to the same level, but Rogers himself is engaging and there is action and variety right through.—Allan, London.

Produced and distributed by Associated British Pictures. Directed by Arthur Woods. Scenario and dialogue by Jack Davies, Jr., Geoffrey Kerr and Max Kester. Camera, Ronald Neame. Settings, Cedric Dawe. Dress parade by Norman Hartnell. Running time, 75 minutes. General audience classification.

Dancing Feet

Comedy with Music

Based on Rob Eden's novel of the same name, this picture is the story of a wealthy debutante who quarrels with her parents and fiance and takes a position as a hostess in a cheap dance hall where she wins fame and true love. That is the exploitation keynote of the picture, and out of it might come various types of devices to attract patrons, such as dance contests and the like. There is also ample romance and comedy, all handled by capable performers.

Name value is supplied by Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Eddie Nugent, Isabel Jewell and Vince Barnett. Others in support are James Burke, Purnell Pratt, Nick Condos and Herbert Rawlinson. Joseph Santley directed, and although there appears to have been so much emphasis placed on the dancing as to cause the plot to become slightly bogged down in itself, on the whole things move right along at a merry clip.

The picture opens with several amusing sequences in which Miss Marsh and Lyon are the principals and which concern the efforts of Miss Marsh's grandfather, Pratt, to keep the two youngsters from each other. Lyon's tricks to get around the old man finally anger him so that he threatens dire consequences if Miss Marsh doesn't cut him off her list of acquaintances.

At this stage Miss Marsh is seriously contemplating matrimony with Lyon, but Lyon falls down on his job and the girl, heartbroken, runs away from home and finds refuge in a dance hall. There she strikes up with Miss Jewell and the two decide to cast their lots together. Through her Miss Marsh meets Nugent, smart young fellow with nothing but dancing on his mind. Romance soon blossoms between the two and they decide to go into dancing seriously, as a team.

Nugent then gets the idea that they can give lessons over the radio and through the help of Lyon they manage to get on the air. Pratt, however, hears of what his granddaughter is planning and promptly has them taken off.

Nugent and Miss Marsh split and Nugent is at a loss to find a suitable partner when he gets another chance to broadcast at the dance hall. Pratt, however, realizes the boy is the real one for his granddaughter and manages to arrange everything in the end so that Miss Marsh and Nugent not only present their program but also wind up in each other's arms for the fadeout.

Interspersed throughout the picture are musical numbers that should aid materially in exploitation.—BAEHLER, New York.

Murder Mystery

Combining a quartet of marquee names with a closely-knit and suspenseful plot in which the indispensable murder is consummated with a minimum of morbidity, this picture is susceptible to the best type of exploitation suitable for features of its kind. The atmosphere is high grade throughout. Dialogue and action are kept on a level with the upper strata personalities involved. Solution of the mystery is accomplished by natural sequence of cause and effects rather than by Hawkshaw deduction.

Franchot Tone, Loretta Young, Lewis Stone and Roland Young are the principals. Aileen Pringle, mentionable as a player returning from recent obscurity, appears briefly in one sequence. The locale is contemporary London and the casting represents such figures as the chief of Scotland Yard and the rumored imminent appointee to the attorney generalship.

In the story Lady Helen Dearden, wife of an eminent prosecutor, is blackmailed by Hugh Lewis, former husband of Dianna Roggers, who sells her a packet of letters written by Lord Dearden to Miss Roggers before his marriage. In the transaction she is unwillingly present shortly before the Medfords, mountain-climbing husband and wife, are separated by the wife's fall to death from a precipice. Medford is charged with murder and Lord Dearden is assigned to the prosecution.

Lady Deardon has withheld from her husband word of the blackmailer's activities, believing he would expose the facts at the cost of his career. Therefore she cannot come to the rescue of Medford, who bases his hope for vindication on the finding of the woman who saw him on the mountain and heard him warn his wife of the danger of falling. As the case progresses, Dianna Roggers summons Lord Dearden to her apartment, planning further blackmail, and when she is found murdered that evening suspicion attaches to Dearden.

Lady Dearden is brought to the stand to testify for Medford and, in clearing him, tells the story of her husband's youthful affair. This supplies a motive for Lord Dearden's suspected murder of Miss Roggers and he is arrested. The unexpected solution of the mystery follows swiftly.—WEAVER, New York.

Boulder Dam

(Warner)

(Drama)

Drama, slightly sprinkled with romance and a bit of comedy, is the essence of this picture. It is virile stuff, of the type basically appealing to the masses, and showmen are given abundant material with which to prepare attractive campaigns.

The principal background, as the title implies, is Boulder Dam and against this extensive project is set the story that tells of a young man who kills another in a fight and is forced to become a fearful fugitive who finds a safe haven on the construction job. Interwoven with this theme is the romance of the two leading characters, Ross Alexander and Patricia Ellis, along with comedy, abundant spine-tingling and suspense creating sequences that all lead up to a smashing climax.

Besides Alexander and Miss Ellis, additional name value is supplied by others such as Lyle Talbot, Eddie Acuff, Henry O'Neill, William Pawley and Joseph Crehan. Frank McDonald directed from the screen play by Cy Bartlett and Ralph Block.

As the picture opens, Alexander, a hard-boiled, cynical young man, is the head mechanic in a taxi garage in Detroit. Following an argument with his boss, during which he strikes the boss, killing him, Alexander takes to the road, a fugitive from justice.

While beating his way across half the country he winds up in Las Vegas after meeting Miss Ellis by helping her fix her car. Mutual understanding develops a friendship and Miss Ellis takes Alexander into her home, where her family accept him as one of them.

Meanwhile, Talbot, annoyed because of his persistent pursuit of Miss Ellis, recognizes the fugitive, but remains silent for the time.

Alexander gets a job on the dam and by several lucky breaks and by using his head he is rapidly rising to where he finds himself in a position to propose to Miss Ellis. As the two are planning a home of their own and their engagement becomes known, Talbot gives Alexander 24 hours to get out of town or break the engagement.

Alexander is about to leave his job and the girl along with it when Talbot and another man are trapped on a disabled cable-car. Again Alexander shows his ability to think quickly in emergencies and single-handed he rescues his enemy and saves his life. Talbot is anxious to forget what he knows about the fugitive, but Alexander makes him confess to the construction boss of the dam and the boss decides that the best course is for Alexander to return to Detroit to face the music. He promises, however, that there will be the best of lawyers to aid him, the recommendation of his work at dam and last but not least a job waiting when he returns.

Exhibitors are presented ample exploitation material, particularly in the picture's background, and although the picture is certainly not a pretentious one by any means, it does contain enough of those ingredients that make entertainment values that appeal to the masses, and it is in this direction that campaigns are to be directed.—BAEHLER, New York.

TWO MOVES ON TRADE PRACTICE REGULATION

Merchants Demand Delay of Extension of Trade Commission Powers; Berry Offers Plan

Independent moves involving the question of United States Government supervision over trade practices of industry, including the motion picture, became evident this week in the following manner:

1. The powerful Merchants' Association of New York launched a fight to effect postponement of proposals to extend the powers of the Federal Trade Commission over business—some such proposal now before Congress, specifically mentioning motion pictures.

2. President Roosevelt's determination of disposal of Coordinator Berry's new industrial program, as a step toward recovery, will be withheld until Mr. Roosevelt's return from fishing in Florida's waters.

Meanwhile, unremarked by industry generally, the last vestige of the Administration's effort to regiment industry under the NRA passed into history April 1 with expiration of the innocuous and ineffective legislation enacted last year after the Supreme Court declared the recovery codes invalid.

Adopted in June, 1933, as part of the frantic and uncoordinated effort to stem the tide of depression, the National Recovery Act brought to Washington tens of thousands of business men in all lines of industry, called to consider the development of codes.

Headed by General Hugh S. (Crack-down) Johnson, with Sol A. Rosenblatt as his lieutenant, the NRA immediately attacked the problem of a code for the motion picture industry.

On November 27, 1933, President Roosevelt affixed his signature to an agreement which almost immediately was attacked as unfair to some of the exhibitor interests.

The picture code, along with codes for a score of other industries, was subjected to a steady barrage of attack as strengthening the hands of the powerful and oppressing the weak, and President Roosevelt in March, 1934, created the Darrow Board of Review, which in a report two months later severely criticized the motion picture code, its administration and the distributors.

The first blow to the NRA came in January, 1935, when the Supreme Court ruled that Congress had exceeded its power in delegating to the President authority to be exercised over the oil industry, an omen of the decision to follow a few months later—the "sick chicken" opinion—invalidating the entire code effort.

In an attempt to save as much as possible out of the wreckage, Congress, after much wrangling, passed a resolution extending what was left of the NRA until April 1, 1936, and, as a substitute for the codes, authorized the Federal Trade Commission to negotiate fair trade practice agreements with industries.

Educational and "reform" interests appearing three weeks ago at Washington before the Pettingill House sub-committee's hearings on an anti-block booking measure demanded that the Federal Trade Commission be given powers to regulate film trade practices. Principally sponsoring such federal control is the Motion Picture Research Council. Various other measures now pending in Congress would effect similar control.

Now comes a recommendation that action by Congress on all bills to increase the powers of the Commission be deferred pending a comprehensive re-examination of the federal anti-trust laws and the Federal Trade Commission Act, which, it is recommended, be undertaken by the Administration elected next November. The recommendation is being advanced by the committee on Federal Trade Commission and anti-trust laws of the New York Merchants' Association, and which has already been approved by the association's board.

Thousands of motion picture transactions in motion pictures which have been a daily occurrence for years, would be regulated by the Federal Trade Commission, and which heretofore have never been within the scope of the FTC statutes.

The report now reposing on the President's desk from Coordinator Berry, as head of the Roosevelt Industrial Policy Commission, makes four recommendations as follows:

1. Production control only in emergencies.

2. Maximum-hour and minimum-wage standards to "increase the purchasing power of wage earners and to make for re-employment in an age of continuous technological improvement."

3. Federal curbs on "unfair" and "destructive" trade practices.

4. Establishment of a permanent industrial council.

The Berry Industrial Policy Commission is an outgrowth of the Supreme Court's nullification of the National Recovery Act and the codes under it by which attempts were made to regulate hours, wages and trade practices in industry. Meetings have been held variously by the commission at which industries were invited to express their attitude to possible codification. It has made little progress in this connection.

The Council at the same time submitted four other reports to the President. These four outlined a national industrial policy, called for drastic revision of the anti-trust laws, suggested withdrawal of the government from private enterprise, and dealt with "internal and external competition."

Declaring individual initiative, free competition and the incentive of profit have been the influences which contributed most largely to the industrial development of the nation, the industrial policy report asserted every governmental policy should be so formulated as to foster and develop private enterprise.

Lower Selling Prices

The new federal policy, the report declared, should aim for the progressive lowering of selling prices, whenever and where possible through cost reductions, by reason of technological or other production improvements and the reduction of capital and debt charges "which now burden industry and increase the cost of goods." The report said:

"The committee recognizes that under our form of government it is commonly understood its citizens are accorded the widest exercise of freedom to engage in open and fair industrial competition, to exercise initiative and, spurred on by the incentive of profit, they are accorded the widest degree of freedom to develop and improve industrial facilities.

"Notwithstanding this recognition of individual rights, industrial experience and economic facts conclusively show that this objective has not been fully realized."

Launching its fight against any immediate action in placing industry regulation in the hands of the Federal Trade Commission, the New York Merchants' Association declared:

"If all these bills were enacted into law, the result would be the complete governmental regimentation of all business of more than purely local character.

"This may not be a conclusive reason for holding that all these bills are bad, but it is a sufficient reason for withholding judgment upon them until it is ascertained whether the abuses in the few industries (films included) that have prompted these bills may not be corrected by something short of the governmental regimentation of business which the enactment of these bills would bring about, not merely in these particular industries but also in all other industries in which no such abuses exist, and where there has been no demand for legislation of this character.

"Whatever be the merits or defects of these bills, the earnestness with which their sponsors are pressing them upon Congress, and the equal earnestness with which their opponents are resisting them, suggest this conclusion:

"Ever since NRA collapsed, there has been throughout industry a widspread feeling, shared by thousands of business men who are taking no part either in sponsoring or in opposing these bills, that there should be a comprehensive re-examination of the anti-trust laws and the Federal Trade Commission Act.

"This same dissatisfaction with the present scope of the anti-trust laws and the Federal Trade Commission Act is the moving cause for each of the legislative proposals contained in all these various bills.

New Examination Seen

"Whatever be the Administration that will be elected to office at the national election this fall, it is certain that one of its major jobs will surely be to join with Congress in a comprehensive re-examination of the anti-trust laws and the Federal Trade Commission Act, and in the formulation of whatever legislative program may then be called for in the light of such re-examination.

"Since this job must certainly be taken up in 1937 or in 1938 by whatever Administration is then in office, is it not a mistake, in the few weeks remaining before the campaign for this election, to attempt any piecemeal legislation on this subject?

"For these reasons, it is recommended that Congress defer any legislation on the subject matter of these bills until after the Administration elected to office at the national election this Fall shall have joined with Congress in a comprehensive re-examination of the anti-trust laws and the Federal Trade Commission Act, and in the formulation of whatever legislative program seems called for in the light of such re-examination."

One of the women, homeward bound in the early dawn, always takes out her prayer book and carries it in her hand until she gets inside her flat. This custom is not exactly an appeal for protection. She says she just wouldn't want any of the neighbors to think she had been out gallivanting around all night, but, rather that she had been to early mass.

The lady was probably reacting to the influence of the propriety of the rules and regulations set down by the Rockefeller management for the systematic conduct of the many buildings in the Center. We, for one, have felt the effect of this order, having tried the other night to exit from our own RKO Building with a portable typewriter of our ownership, but because we did not possess a clearance permit duly signed, countersigned and notaried, the long, strong arms of the burly guards forbade it.

The refusal of those guards to listen to reason is beyond comprehension, standing unmoved by our pleadings that were such as to touch even the heart of a Chase banker. Two days later we learned that the same regulation nearly cost another film tenant his right arm—s'help us. He entered the elevator with a great bundle on the limb and was stopped in the lobby by the same guards for the customary pass. The passenger, however, demanded exemption on a technicality. He was, it seems, greatly attached to the bundle. It was a plaster cast, and his broken arm was inside.

And on Broadway they're relating the coast story about a conversation overheard at a Hollywood party at which William Haines, former movie star, was explaining to Jean Muir, Warner player, that he now decorates houses—according to the personality of the client.

"How do you work that?" asked the blonde. "Take my house for example. Downstairs it is severely plain, almost masculine. Upstairs it is frilly and feminine. What would you suggest for me?"

"I'd suggest," Haines growled, in his own inimitable manner, "that you make up your mind!"

The li'l gal stood on the Los Angeles train platform awaiting departure for the east and preparations for a stage career, with John, of course. Barrymore wasn't at the station and the reporters present waxed curious.

"Of course I still love John," she cooed into the notebooks of the reporters.

"But does John still love you?" she was asked.

With a coy flutter of eyelashes she answered: "Who would know better than I?"

"But, Miss Barrie," the press persisted. "Mr. Barrymore could have taken time off to see you away, couldn't he?"

"John spent all afternoon with me and we were very lovey-dovey," she gushed, and Associated Press, et al, carried the gush around the world.

THE MILKY WAY
PASTEUR

THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION'S investigation into the affairs of the Telephone Company and its many ramifications has been bringing to light again well known incidents attendant the how and why A. T. and A got itself injected into the motion picture scheme, through the development of sound in its Bell Laboratories. Warner Brothers, of course, made millions out of their early participation with Western Electric in the commercialization of the talker, after all other companies had rejected the idea as the folly of a public utility.

What is not generally known, however, is the how and why Warners were able to get in on the ground floor, and it remained for Eileen Creelman, Sun movie critic, to unearth that happening, getting her information at first hand from Major Nathan Levinson, now director of recording at the Warner studio in California's Burbank, who has been avisiting in New York.

Originally, of course, the Major worked for Western Electric, where he heard the talking picture device.

Major Levinson had become interested in motion pictures through selling public address systems. He had quite a time getting people interested in them. Hollywood had no use for them at all, not until Major Levinson happened to visit Universal City on a day when a big mob scene was in progress for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

There was terrific confusion that afternoon. Assistant directors ran about shouting, exhausted, irritated, trying to transmit the director's orders. In spite of all the turmoil and effort, the crowd still did not act as one unit. Major Levinson watched a while, then made a suggestion:

"You know, if they had a public address system one man could talk to all those thousands of people."

Doubting but desperate, Universal decided to test his idea. Within a few hours the director was convinced. It took a more dramatic incident to impress the whole town. The actor leading the mob had to dash ahead up the steps of Notre Dame, the crowd rushing close behind him. The director, with Major Levinson beside him, watched from an elevated platform.

"From way up there we saw the leader, just out of sight of the others, stumble over his long robes. The mob was coming on full force. In another minute he would have been trampled to death. I thought of the loud speaker. The director grabbed it and yelled, 'Hold it.' The crowd stopped, stopped short. It was the only possible way he could have stopped it."

Major Levinson had left Western Electric, was selling public address systems up in San Francisco, when on a visit back east he heard of a plan for making educational shorts to demonstrate to telephone men the progress, history and various features of the Bell telephone. It sounded fascinating to Major Levinson. The thing really worked.

"But all they thought it good for was educational purposes," he remarked. "As soon as I got back to the Coast, I looked up Sam Warner. We had become great friends. I told him about Vitaphone, and he got as excited as I was. We came east and talked to Harry."

"How," Major Levinson was asked, "had they sold Sam's oldest brother, Harry M. Warner, president of the company?"

"We didn't sell Harry," Major Levinson said, chuckling. "He admitted it would be good for a while as a novelty. Sam warned me not to mention it to Harry, that we would sneak up on him. That's what we did. Harry thought it would be grand for musical scores—he was terribly enthusiastic about that. So we slipped in songs. Then we slipped in that line Al Jolson said. And it was done. Harry was right with us then."

That's when everyone else in Hollywood began to wish they had shot Nathan Levinson long ago.

"You know, we were actually afraid of sabotage by other producers," Major Levinson remembered. "They had so many silent pictures to release that they became almost desperate. Every time we'd release a sound picture it meant crowds in front of our theatres, a million for the Warners, and empty houses for the others. They would have done almost anything to delay us for a while, or at least we thought they would. It made it all pretty exciting."

When Jack Oakie confessed his plans in Hollywood to marry Venita Varden, the other day, he told reporters, "This is a sort of sacred thing with me. No gag this time. We're just gonna slip off and do it on the Q. T.—I don't want any of those ballyhoo weddings." So Jack and Venita were married at Yuma, Arizona, with only about 2,000 persons and half a dozen cameramen to watch the ceremonies. The national news press services flashed columns ahead of their travels to New York for the honeymoon, where they were met by an army of reporters and photographers, and half the populace, due, for the most part, to advance notice having been sent out by the press agents at Oakie's Paramount company. Furthermore, the publicity announcement from the producer in New York explained that the marriage, performed on the train platform, on which they remained to ride to the east, was, said Paramount, "by way of marking Oakie's role" in the company's new "Florida Special." What connection a Florida "special" has with a wedding on a California train is not clear. Regardless, the whole affair was, you see, devoid of all ballyhoo—just a nice, quiet "Q. T." BRASS BAND exposition, and carnival.

Columbia University's sophomore class lists, among its enrollment, citizens of every important country—except France. So, for their Easter Prom dance, they therefore "adopted a French citizen" as an honorory member. The person they selected was Fifi D'Orsay, of motion pictures, and she was made Queen of the Prom. Two days later Miss D'Orsay became a naturalized American citizen.

To keep the record straight, however, someone should inform the Columbia University sophomores that Miss D'Orsay is not a French citizen, but, before Americanizing, was an English citizen, having been born in Canada. Furthermore, her name is not Fifi D'Orsay, but Marie Angelina Yvonne Lussier Hill. She swiped the "Fifi D'Orsay" from a perfume bottle.

THE MOTION PICTURE knows Abel Cary Thomas as general counsel for all Warner Brothers interests. The world of books knows him as one of America's important collectors of first editions, autograph letters and manuscripts. Any public sale of Thomas documents brings out the top rank collectors. Two recent sessions raised on the auction block some $21,000 from the sale of only 10 pieces.

Many historically important documents are included in Mr. Thomas' collection, among which is Abraham Lincoln's original order for the organization of the Northern armies for the Civil War, dated at Washington, March 11, 1862, written in Lincoln's own hand and signed by him with the seal of the United States. Also, Mr. Lincoln's original order, likewise written in longhand, signed on July 2, 1861, instructing the Commander of the Armies to suspend the writ of habeas corpus as an emergency measure to check the Civil War conspiracy, after exposure of the Confederates' plot in Baltimore.

Specifically, the arrest of the police and police commissioners of Baltimore for conspiracy against the Union led the President to void the habeas corpus writ. He also had in mind the stoppage of troop transportation from New York to Washington.

That Presidential document was intended, however, to effect suspension of the writ only between New York and Washington. The order to the General said: "You are engaged in repressing an insurrection against the laws of the United States. If, at any point, on or in the vicinity of any military line which is now, or which shall be used, between the City of New York and the City of Washington, you find resistance which renders it necessary to suspend the writ of habeas corpus for the Public Safety, You, personally, or through the Officer in Command, at the point where resistance occurs, are authorized to suspend the writ." In other words, Lincoln ordered his Union soldiers to catch the Confederates and "hold the body."

Another remarkable item in the Thomas library is a copy of Dr. John Jeffries' "A Narrative of the Two Aerial Voyages of Doctor Jeffries with Mons. Blanchard," printed in London in 1786, and taken from the original library of President George Washington, displaying an exceptionally large signature of the President on the title-page. This quarto volume contains an account of the first aerial voyage across the English channel, made on January 7, 1785. Dr. Jeffries, who financed and participated in the expedition and who, on this and a preceding flight, made the first scientific aerial observations, was the first American aeronaut. Thus it was Jeffries who paved the way to some extent to enable film moguls to fly between New York and Hollywood within daylight.

Mr. Thomas has a "Little Women" first edition, valued at $170; the original edition of John James Audubon's and John Bachman's "Viviparous Quadrupeds of North America," $250; signatures of Lincoln, Grant, Buchanan, Fillmore, Martin Van Buren, Longfellow and others, all in one album, listed at $42.50; a full set of first and other editions of Aubrey Beardsley; books and letters by James Boswell, and countless others, among them the exceedingly rare "death-bed" edition of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass," autographed. It seems that Whitman was thought to be on his death bed, and was most anxious to see his last edition of "Leaves of Grass" before dying. So Horace Traubel had about 50 copies made up for him, roughly bound, on cheap paper; this became known as the "death bed" edition, and most of the copies—there were only 50—were distributed to Whitman's friends.

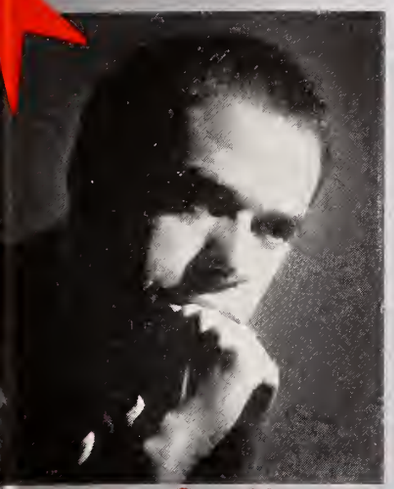
Lewis Novel Tilt Enters New Round

The fine frenzy of the Authors' League of America and the National Council on Freedom from Censorship et al. over Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's decision to shelve production of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "It Can't Happen Here," has gone 'round and 'round and comes out with a maverick.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which has a sister relationship to the National Council, is to hold its annual dinner in the sedate tea-room atmosphere of New York's Town Hall Club on April 20, and in the course of two-minute discussions on civil rights and censorship by a dozen speakers, the matter of the Lewis brainchild as affected by MGM's thumbs-down action will be taken up, with denunciations, even excoriations, of the film industry expected.

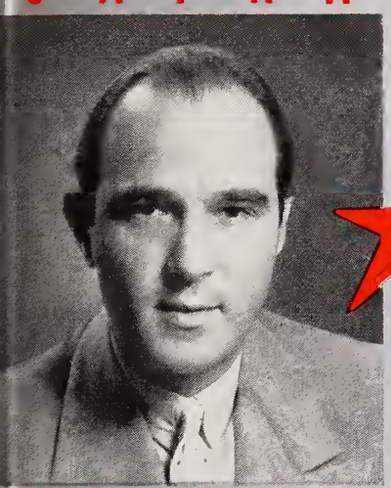
Chief speaker will be Congressman Maury Maverick, of the Texas Mavericks, who has been engaged to orate on civil rights and legislation. Among the roundtable participants will be Elmer Rice, crusading playwright, light of the Authors' League and former director in the New York region of the WPA federal theatre. Another, inevitably, will be Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild, an offspring of the Authors' League. It was Howard who fed the fires from the remoteness of Hollywood while Author Lewis and the Authors' League ran a fever when it was disclosed that MGM would not use Mr. Howard's screen dramatization of "It Can't Happen Here," for which, incidentally, it had paid Howard handsomely.

Substitute for Indignation Dinner



The protests at the ACLU dinner will serve to take the place of the public indignation meeting or dinner which the Council had announced in conjunction with the Authors' League and other irate organizations who have been urging the nation to get mad at Hollywood.

The reason the protest meeting was dropped, the sponsor said, was that they were unable to find a theatre operator on Broadway willing to rent his house for an evening. It seems the NCOFFC had planned, as a demonstration of the evils of censorship, to put on scenes from plays which have been banned in various localities, such as "Tobacco Road" and "Children's Hour," and "The Broadway producers are not sympathetic with what we are doing," the Council complained.



Rejected Film a Factor

It also had been planned to screen "Marie," otherwise known as "Spring Shower," a Hungarian film piece which the New York state censors have rejected as "in theme and portrayal immoral, sacrilegious and tending to corrupt morals," and the destiny of which now rests in an appeal pending in the state supreme court. A spokesman for the anti-censorship Council thought it was "a sweet little picture."

Meanwhile, Doubleday, Doran, publisher of the Lewis book, attempted to keep the excitement alive by continuing to tell readers of its newspaper advertisements that "this is the novel which was banned by the moving pictures."

Human Cargo

Dramatic Comedy-Romance

The background for this story, which the title more or less intimately suggests, is a dramatic exposure of the alien smuggling racket. As, in production detail, it illustrates the manner in which aliens, of all races, are secretively brought into the country via air, train and boat, it goes further and depicts the blackmailing to which the human contrabrand is subjected and the cruelties practiced upon them. Against the drama of that theme, the production carries a comedy tinged romantic story which has for its central figure a society girl who, in search of thrills, becomes a newspaper woman and in the pursuit of her calling becomes involved in the excitement and action when the government cracks down on the smugglers.

The story is based on the novel, "I Will Be Faithful," writteen by Kathleen Shepard. The screenplay is credited to Jefferson Parker and Doris Malloy. Direction is by Allan Dwan, maker of the recent "Black Sheep" and "Song and Dance Man."

The cast is headed by Claire Trevor and Brian Donleavy, who since his debut as the killer in "Barbary Coast" has been seen in "Mary Burns, Fugitive," "Strike Me Pink" and "13 Hours By Air." The supporting cast includes Alan Dinehart, Ralph Morgan, remembered for his performance in "Magnificent Obsession" and currently in "Little Miss Nobody," Helen Troy, Rita Cansino, featured in "The House of a Thousand Candles," Morgan Wallace, Herman Bing, John McGuire, Ralf Harolde, Wade Boteler and Harry Wood.

The background dealing with a situation that is continually cropping up in sensational newspaper stories, the producers believe the picture will have more than sufficient topical dramatic and romantic interest to be of wide interest.

Unconscious

Comedy

In this story of comedy, the appeal of situations wherein the smart city slickers take the country bumpkin for a ride is reversed. Its entertainment values from an audience point of view, its commercial worth from an exhibition standpoint, center about what is said and done when a rube big shot invades New York and gives the wise boys a trimming.

Majoring in fun provoking quality, the story has but a slight romantic contrast, and in its melodramatic racketeering-gangster counterpart the spirit of comedy is the dominating factor. A small town restaurant waiter, after usurping the function of a visiting real estate nabob, goes to the big city. Mistaken by the realty board for an expected property authority, the hero, in conducting his operations, gets mixed up with a lot of gangsters, gamblers and chiselers while ostensibly purchasing pieces of old property that are to be razed in order to make room for a model tenement building. As all try to make him their tool, he outsmarts the entire collection, makes friends with those supposed to put him on the spot and, of course, wins the heroine for his troubles.

The production, which is being directed by Arthur Grenville Collins, maker of the recent "Personal Maid's Secret" and "Widow from Monte Carlo," is based on a story by Frank M. Dazey, in which Ralph Block and Ben Markson collaborated on the screen play.

Edward Everett Horton is featured in the lead role with Glenda Farrell, last in "Lawyer Woman" and "Snowed Under," in the opposite role. The part of the gambling racketeer is played by Cesar Romero. The coupling of Horton and Miss Farrell in the featured roles is looked upon by the producers as a showmanship asset that will be a strong influence in attracting the attention of comedy devotees to the picture. The supporting cast contains several exceptional names such, as Frank Conroy, Clay Clement, Warren Hymer, Florence Roberts, Ed Gargan, Diana Gibson, Pierre Watkin, Robert Middlemass and George Irving.

Roaming Lady

Comedy Romance Drama

While temperamental and personal conflict puts a comedy twist to the love interest plot that is the basis of this story, the production tune to which it spins is alive with dangerous adventure and drama. It's all about a rich girl aviation enthusiast in love with a penniless air port manager who won't fall in love with her and furthermore will not let her fly solo. A thrilling air escapade causing her father to fire the young man, he learns of his daughter's sentimental interest in him and to break that up he contrives to have the young fellow and his pal sent to China. The girl trails along, and when all are captured by bandits the trouble she gives her friends makes all that has gone before look like child's play. Effecting an escape for the trio, the young man has to machinegun and bomb a horde of Chinese cutthroats before they reach safety and, of course, marriage.

Based on a story by Diana Bourbon and Bruce Manning, the screen play is by Fred Niblo, Jr., and Earl Snell. Direction is by Albert S. Rogell.

Players who will be seen in the picture include Fay Wray, making her first American picture in some time, Ralph Bellamy, Thurston Hall, Edward Gargan, Roger Imhof, Paul Guilfoyle, Tetsu Komai and Arthur Rankin.

Believing that the combination appeal of love interest with its continual conflicting contrast, and the smash of dangerous adventure in the air and in a strange country, are elements that have quick and potent audience appeal, the producers are expecting that this will prove a feature highly attractive to a wide segment of audiences. Additionally they believe that in story content, character of production settings and locales, it will provide more than sufficient exploitation possibilities to enhance the drawing power of the personalities presented.

Three on the Trail

(Paramount)

Western Adventure Drama

With several Hopalong Cassidy pictures already having established a vogue for the spirited Clarence E. Mulford Bar Twenty stories, this feature is being looked upon as the most promising from both an entertainment and commercial viewpoint. The story is entirely action adventure. At the same time it carries an appealing love interest contrast and a very definite comedy trend.

Adapted from the Mulford originals by Doris Schroeder, the screen play is by Miss Schroeder and Vernon Smith. Howard Bretherton is directing.

The story is typical western adventure in character. Shot entirely in the out of doors, locations were at Lone Pine and Kernville, two California towns in which the atmosphere of the old west has been carefully preserved. Embellishing these background effects considerable rebuilding was done both on location and in the studio where the few interiors were shot.

William Boyd and Jimmy Ellison, who have been featured in the entire series with George Hayes, are the story's three heroes. Onslow Stevens is the heavy and Muriel Evans is the girl. As bandit henchmen and ranchers friendly towards the trio will be seen Claude King, William Duncan, Al Hill, Ted Adams, John St. Polis, John Rutherford and Ernie Adams. Two other women appear in the picture; Clara Kimball Young as a rancher's wife and Conchita as an entertainer.

In the story, Muriel Evans is the central figure in a dangerous situation, in which she and Boyd Ellison and Hayes incur the wrath of gambler-rustler badman Stevens.

San Francisco

(MGM)

Dramatic Romance

In this production cast name values, worth of story content and quality of production features are being counted upon to arouse far more than ordinary audience and exhibitor interest.

The picture will star Clark Gable, last in "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Wife vs. Secretary," and Jeanette MacDonald, whose successes in "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie" are still fresh in the public mind. The supporting cast includes Spencer Tracy in the unusual-for him-chacaterization of a priest, Jack Holt, Shirley Ross, Al Shean, Jessie Ralph, Harold Huber, Flora Finch, Kenneth Harlan, Roger Imhof, Frank Mayo, Tom Dugan, Charles Judels, Russell Simpson, Ted Healy and his new stooges, and Bert Roach, as well as many others.

The feature, based on a published novel of the same title by Robert Hopkins, for which the screen play was prepared by Anita Loos with direction by W. S. Van Dyke, is romance and drama. It returns Gable to the vigorous type role in which he won wide popularity. He is a rough, tough, gambling king, with no faith in anything but his own dynamic power and his charm over woman. Miss MacDonald will be seen as an aspiring opera singer who, under the spell of Gable's magnetism, sacrificed her great ambitions to sing topical songs in his honky tonk. The music she sings runs all the way from grand opera to patriotic and religious hymns.

For background is San Francisco's legendary Barbary Coast in its most vibrant and roaring days. Careful research having been given to the matter of authentic reproduction of locales, costumes and settings, the picture's big production thrill is to be a reenactment of the earthquake and fire that razed a large portion of the whole city as well as all of the Barbary Coast.

HAYS WARNS AGAINST PROPAGANDA IN FILMS

Public Opinion Is "Finally the Safe Guide" on Border Line Cases, Says MPPDA President

A common-sense attitude in determining the distinction between motion pictures with a definite message and those dealing with "self-serving propaganda" was urged this week by Will H. Hays, president, in his annual report to the directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The new motion pictures, reaching greater heights of dramatic, artistic and social values on a general basis of intelligence and good taste, have won larger audiences than the pictures of old, Mr. Hays said.

Organizations outside the industry have aided, rather than hindered, development of higher types of pictures and have helped create the market necessary to make them successful, Mr. Hays reported. He also had words of praise for the creative talent within the industry.

"The new standards of artistry attained by the screen this year," he said, "are a tribute to the creative personnel of the industry.

"The question of public order, of public good, of avoiding the inflammatory, the prejudicial or the subversive, is a problem of social responsibility everlastingly imposed upon those who would produce, distribute and exhibit pictures to a universal audience of 80,000,000 men, women and children in the United States alone. The distinction between motion pictures with a message and self-serving propaganda which misrepresents the purpose of the entertainment screen is one determinable through the processes of common sense.

"It is a tribute just as full to the great and growing success which the cooperation given to the industry by educational and religious leadership has effected in the standards of motion picture appreciation. The processes of criticism, selection and education have enlarged, not restricted, the artistic and dramatic opportunities of the screen; they have increased, not decreased, motion picture attendance."

Mr. Hays named the following among forthcoming releases as indicating upward trends in motion picture standards: "Romeo and Juliet," "Mary of Scotland," "Under Two Flags," "The Life of Beethoven," "Green Pastures," "The Old Maid," "The Good Earth" and "The Lost Horizon."

Cites Critics' Commendations

"Conclusions reached by competent critics and by commentators of the press," Mr. Hays continued, "are to the effect that 'there is more intellectual distinction in the movies than ever before'; that 'the screen has translated into celluloid drama the greatest number of established classics in the history of motion pictures'; that 'the new productions have exceeded in quality the most optimistic hopes'; that 'pictures of historical significance are ever on the increase'; that 'the screen has shown its ability to portray the highest concepts of the human mind'; that 'pictures are finer, more interesting, more entertaining and more educational than ever before'; that 'honest and compelling themes are predominating in the outstanding pictures'; that 'more meaning and dignity has been lent to the screen'; and that the industry is performing a 'great experiment that will help to determine whether the screen is the universal entertainment medium for the experssion of the highest forces of art and drama.'

"Not every picture produced by the industry during the period under review is entirely free from objection," Mr. Hays said. "There are, and always will be, border line cases where even critical opinion will divide as to the over-all social or moral values of a given film or dramatic performance, and where the strictest moral rating will make a necessary and proper distinction as between adult and family attendance. In such instance public opinion is finally the safe guide."

In discussing the work of the Production Code Administration, Mr. Hays pointed out: "The vigilance which will not permit our Production Code to degenerate into a mere process of censorship applies to the opportunities as well as the self-restraint of the screen. The character of pictures produced during the current season demonstrates the ability of the screen to deal with vital subjects of the day, with social problems and with all dramatic forms on which honest entertainment can be built. This is asserted, notwithstanding such artificial controversies as may be raised to the contrary."

Ten color films will be produced in 1936, he said. Referring to the proportion of films based on originals, plays, and books, Mr. Hays said they rated as follows: From original stories, 244, or 47.01 per cent; from stage plays, 41, or 7.90 per cent; from novels, 142, or 27.36 per cent; from biographies, three, or .58 per cent; from short stories, 37, or 7.13 per cent; miscellaneous, 52, or 10.02 per cent.

Original Story Use Grows

This was an increase of seven per cent in the use of original stories for screen material over the previous year.

Mr. Hays also went into detail in discussing the advertising code and said that new types of pictures appealing to new audiences required new kinds of advertising.

"The rise is to be noted, therefore," he pointed out, "of a new day of advertising effort in which the right product will be 'sold' to the right audience in the right way. Some of the distinctive methods recently adopted to introduce the truly great picture sufficiently in advance of exhibition, the greater artistry that has marked the exploitation of our greater products, and the new recognition that wholesomeness and good taste are creative stimuli, are welcome signs of a new era."

NO CHANGES MADE IN MPPDA DIRECTORATE

The entire personnel of the directorate of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America were reelected at the annual meeting in New York Monday, including Will H. Hays, president; Frederick L. Herron, treasurer; Carl E. Milliken, secretary, and George Borthwick, assistant secretary.

Those directors attending included M. H. Aylesworth, Harry D. Buckley, R. H. Cochrane, Ned E. Depinet, Earle W. Hammons, Sidney R. Kent and Nicholas M. Schenck. Eastman Kodak was represented by Eugene Chrystal, Pathe by Willis Bright and Electrical Research Products, Inc., by Whitford Drake.

Guild Policies Win In Howard's Test With Paramount

Policies of the newly formed Screen Directors' Guild were upheld in the first test of power in Hollywood late last week when William K. Howard, director, continued production on "The Princess Comes Across" at Paramount following a flareup and the subsequent walkout of executives.

Mr. Howard demanded that he be permitted to complete the picture without interference from Arthur Hornblow, Jr., the producer, or his assistant, Dick Blumenthal, Hollywood reported. Mr. Howard had ordered Mr. Blumenthal off the set and subsequent developments required the intercession of top studio executives.

The studio heads on Friday acceded to Mr. Howard's demands for less interference. It was learned from Guild headquarters that the entire organization stood ready to back Mr. Howard if the studio failed to recognize his requests.

The annual election of the Junior Screen Actors' Guild will be held April 19 at the Masonic Temple in Hollywood instead of April 12th.

Several new features will mark the election. Because of an amendment to the by-laws, made and approved when the Senior Guild changed its by-laws, 33 instead of the previous number of 21 directors, will be elected for 1936-37. In addition, the office of third vice-president has been replaced by the office of assistant secretary.

The nominating committee has made the following nominations: President, Pat Somerset; first vice-president, Bob Ellsworth; second vice-president, Jay Eaton; secretary-treasurer, Aubrey Blair, and assistant secretary, Nate Edwards.

Boston Exhibitor Dies

Michael J. Lydon, pioneer exhibitor, died last week in Boston after a lingering illness. Mr. Lydon, who was 65, was the father of Frank Lydon, of the Hamilton Theatre in Dorchester and a leader of Allied.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Quick reference information on product started and completed and a panorama of the news of the week

50 Films in Work

The production chart remains practically the same as a week ago, with approximately 50 pictures in work, eight features started and eleven finished. Independents completed four productions. Two of the newly started features, "The Lost Horizon" and "Suicide Club," are expected to make the big picture classification, as well as one of those finished, "Road to Glory."

Columbia Starts Three

"The Lost Horizon," Columbia, which will be a Frank Capra production, will present Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt, Isabel Jewell, Edward E. Horton, Thomas Mitchell, John T. Murray and Lawrence Grant at the head of a large cast.

"Suicide Club," one of the three started by MGM, will present Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell, Louis Hayward, Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen, Virginia Wiedler, David Holt, E. E. Clive, Lionel Belmore and Robert Greig in the Robert Louis Stevenson story which J. Walter Ruben is directing. A second picture, "Speed," will include Wendy Barrie, James Stewart, Weldon Heyborn, Una Merkel, Ted Healy, Ralph Morgan, Patricia Wilder and Walter Kingsford in the cast. Edwin L. Marin is directing. Third of the group, "The Witch of Timbuktu," has Lionel Barrymore and Maureen O'Sullivan featured, supported by Frank Lawton, Robert Greig, Grace Ford, Lucy Beaumont, Arthur Hohl, Henry Daniell and Fred Warren. Tod Browning is directing.

Two pictures were started by Warner Bros. In "There's Millions in It" are featured Ross Alexander, Beverly Roberts, Andrew Tombes, Eddie Conrad, Harry Burns and Joseph Cawthorn, under William McGann's direction. The cast for "Public Enemy's Wife" is headed by Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, Robert Armstrong and Humphrey Bogart. Nick Grinde is directing.

At Universal "What Price Parole" went before the cameras. It will present Ann Treston, Henry Hunter, Noah Beery, Jr., Alan Baxter, Alan Hale, Alan Dinehart, Bernardine Hayes, Wallis Clarke, Berton Churchill and Anthony Quinn. Louis Friedlander is directing.

Last of the new group is "Private Number," 20th Century-Fox. Principal players are Loretta Young, Basil Rathbone, Robert Taylor, Patsy Kelly and Marjorie Gateson. Roy Del Ruth is the director.

Independents Complete Four

Ambassador, Berke, Excelsior and Chesterfield together with Halperin Productions account for indepdent dominance in the number of completed group. Ambassador finished "Born to Fight," in which Roy Mason, Frankie Darro, Frances Grant, Jack LaRue and Monty Collins appear. Charles Hutchison directed. Berke completed direction of "Desert Justice," which features Jack Perrin, Warren Hymer, Maryan Dowling and Roger Williams. At Excelsior "Ghost Valley" was finished. The cast includes Tim McCoy, Claudia Dell, Walter Miller, Wheeler Oakman and Jimmy Burtis. Sam Neufield directed. Chesterfield's contribution is "August Week End," which will present Valeria Hobson, Paul Harvey, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Betty Compson, Frank Melton, Gigi Parrish, Paul Irving and Pat West in the principal roles. Halperin's "Revolt of the Zombies," directed by Victor Halperin, features Dorothy Stone, Dean Jagger, Robert Noland, George Cleveland, Fred Warren, Roy D'Arcy, Carl Stockdale, William Crowell and Teru Shimada.

Paramount completed two. In "Florida Special" Jack Oakie, Frances Drake, Sally Eilers, J. Farrell MacDonald, Claude Gillinwater, Matthew Betz, Clyde Dilson, Harry Bradley, Dewey Robinson, Gary Owen, Sidney Blackmer, Lee Phelps and others will be seen. Ralph Murphy directed. "Three on Trial," a Harry Sherman production, features William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison, Muriel Evans and Onslow Stevens, with George Hawes, Claude King, Clara Kimball Young, Al Hill, Ted Adams, John St. Polis and John Rutherford in support. Howard Bretherton directed.

Two pictures were also finished at Radio. The cast for "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford" includes William Powell, Jean Arthur, Eric Blore, Lila Lee, Johnny Arthur, Paul Fix, Dorothy Granger, James and Lucille Gleason, Frankie Darro, Robert Armstrong, Ralph Morgan, Sid Saylor and Erin O'Brien-Moore. Stephen Roberts directed. In "Special Investigator" will be seen Richard Dix, Margaret Callahan, Harry Jans, Ray Mayer, Erick Rhodes, Frank M. Thomas, Sheila Terrey, Ethan Laidlaw and Jed Prouty. Louis King directed.

Universal finished "Unconscious." The cast lists Edward E. Horton, Glenda Farrell, Robert Middlemass, Cesar Romero, Pierre Watkin, Henry Hunter, Diana Gibson, Maria Heath, Ed Gargan and Frank Conroy. Arthur G. Collins directed.

At 20th Century-Fox "Road to Glory" was completed. Fredric March, Warner Baxter, Lionel Barrymore, June Lane and Gregory Ratoff are featured with John Qualen, Paul Stanton, Victor Kilian, Frank McGlinn, Jr., Paul Fix, Julius Tannen, and Nicholas Soussanin among the support. Howard Hawks directed.

DIONNES BECOMING "EMPIRE PROBLEM"

The Dionne Quintuplets, latest film stars, became an imperial problem this week following the writing of a letter by the girls' father to King Edward VIII asking that his five famous children be returned to him. The King transmitted the appeal to Canada's Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir. He sent it to the Dominion Secretary of State, who, in turn, passed it down to the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario and it is now in the hands of David Croll, the Provincial Minister of Welfare.

Out of all this "passing of the buck" comes criticism from one of Canada's leading newspapers, supporting the view of two Ontario medical members of the Canadian Parliament who criticize the Ontario Government for permitting the children to appear in pictures, particularly in "The Country Doctor," which, they claim, "will convey to hosts of ignorant people the impression that Canada is backward."

Economy

Sol Lesser, who announced last week that he had signed a three-way deal with Frank H. Spearman for a series of twelve "Whispering Smith" stories to be published, broadcast, and made as films, plans to use the same cast in the pictures that will be used on the radio, thus keeping his players together without incurring prohibitive overhead.

Competitors long have looked with envy at the success of the "Charlie Chan" series produced by Sol Wurtzel for 20th Century-Fox. But when they have thought of duplicating this success by production of other series about other detectives, they all have hit the snag that making a series means keeping a group of players under contract, because the same characters must be used time and again. This has meant a rapid mounting of overhead.

Rewarded

William Anthony McGuire was handed a long term contract by MGM in recognition of his work on "The Great Ziegfeld." His ticket assigns him as producer, director and writer. . . . William K. Howard and Paramount adjusted a brief difference over alleged executive interference with Mr. Howard's direction of "The Princess Comes Across" and he has continued with the film. The Screen Director's Guild stood behind Mr. Howard. . . . Lewis Gensler has signed a new five year contract with Paramount as producer. . . . A split in the ranks of the Screen Writer's Guild took place when a group of 65 writers, both members and non-members, dispatched a telegram to Washington in protest against alleged attacks by John Howard Lawson at the Duffy Copyright bill hearings. PRODUCERS FIRE PARTING SHOT AS BLOCK BOOKING HEARINGS END

MPPDA in Brief Filed by Pettijohn Says Industry Is Private Business with Right to Select Customers

Challenging the right of Congress to regulate the motion picture industry, the parting shot of the large producer-distributor interests defending themselves against attacks at the House interstate and foreign commerce subcommittee hearings on block booking was a brief filed late last week by the Motion Picture producers and Distributors of America dealing with the constitutional legal aspects involved.

Congress has no power under the Constitution to enact such legislation, declared the brief, which was drawn up and presented by C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the MPPDA. Citation of numerous court decisions indicated the line of attack to overthrow such legislation on constitutional grounds should it be enacted.

After considering the whole field of regulation and control sought in pending measures, the MPPDA declared:

"Under the rights guaranteed by the fifth amendment the Congress has no power to subject the motion picture industry to such regulation, control and price fixing, and should this legislation be enacted, it will not be upheld in the courts. No legislative bill can repeal our Bill of Rights."

Answers Federal Arguments

The memorandum dealt with the bills of Representatives Pettengill, Culkin and Celler to prohibit block booking, blind buying and discrimination and with Representative Culkin's measure to create a federal motion picture commission. It also was in rebuttal to the memoranda submitted by the Department of Justice, the Department of Commerce, the Federal Trade Commission and Professor Noel T. Dowling of the Legislative Drafting Research Fund of Columbia University.

Bearing in mind the fundamental principle laid down by Chief Justice John Marshall that " a law repugnant to the Constitution is void," the MPPDA presented its case under two points:

1. Motion picture producers and distributors are engaged in an entirely private business and in the absence of any purpose to create or maintain a monopoly have the right to select their own customers and dispose of their film in wholesale lots of two or more at prices which in their judgment are adequate and also to enter into contracts for the future delivery of such film in advance of either production or delivery. This right is denied by the proposed legislation.

2. The motion picture industry is not a public utility but a purely private enterprise engaged in providing the public a service of amusement and entertainment and is not affected with such a public interest as to justify federal regulation and control.

The courts for years have repeatedly upheld the principle of law contained in the Clayton act expressly giving dealers the right to wholesale and select their own customers in bona fide transactions and not in restraint of trade, the MPPDA memorandum declared.

Constituting a virtual history of major court decisions affecting the motion picture trade practices complained of, the brief cited numerous authorities in support of application of the rule of the right of customer selection, including an illustration by Supreme Court Justice McReynolds that a trader could refuse to sell to any man for any reason, even because his hair was red.

This basic principle first was applied to the sales methods of the film industry by the United States circuit court of appeals in 1932 in the case of the Federal Trade Commission against Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation, known as the Paramount case, which resulted from an exhaustive investigation of block booking and other industry practices begun in 1919 by the Federal Trade Commission.

Taking up the second premise, that the film industry is not a public utility subject to federal regulations, the MPPDA indicated that the four bills in question have one object in common: "They seek by some form of federal control to regulate and prohibit our sales methods and fix film prices, which presents the question as to whether such provisions are a proper and constitutional exercise of federal power."

The limitations on the power of lawmakers to declare the amusement business to be so affected with a public interest as to justify its regulation and the fixing of prices was decided by the U. S. supreme court in Tyson and Brother vs. Banton in 1927. This case arose from the question of validity of a New York statute declaring that the admission price to theatres is a matter affected with a public interest, the brief said.

In that case the court held that the amusement business is not a public utility and that the statute contravened the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution.

The MPPDA asserted that there are cer-

"GREEKS HAD A LAW FOR IT, BUT THIS IS U. S."

The Greeks, who had a word for a number of things, may have considered the amusement industry as one subject to governmental regulation—but this is the United States of America.

Referring to a Supreme Court decision given in 1927, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America pointed this out in discussing the constitutionality of the various measures pending in Congress.

Committees' Reports to Congress Next Step; Split Sentiment Indicated in Senate Group; Sharp Debate Closes

With conclusion of three weeks of hearings before the House interstate and foreign commerce subcommittee on the Neely-Pettengill bill to prohibit block booking and blind buying, the public record is closed, and the next important development awaited is the House and Senate committees' reports to Congress.

The respective subcommittees are to debate the measure in executive session as soon as the printed copies of the record of the hearings are available, in a few days. Their recommendations to the full committees and reports to the respective legislative branches will follow.

Despite reports from Washington that Senator Neely planned further public hearings, it was affirmed this week that his group will rest on the record of its hearing several weeks ago. Because of a cleavage of sentiment reportedly apparent in the Senate subcommittee, minority and majority reports were considered likely.

Grand Finale

The last day of the hearing, last Thursday, was marked by an acrimonious exchange between witnesses, which caused Chairman Samuel B. Pettengill to term as "regrettable" the injection of personalities.

The subcommittee members are bound to find much of the record irrelevant, according to observers in Washington, because only a small part of the testimony adhered to the subject.

The summation for the bill's opponents by C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was answered for the proponents by Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. Replying to Mr. Pettijohn's statement that Allied States' Tiffany contract was the "block bookingest, blind sellingest" contract ever offered exhibitors, Mr. Myers declared the contract was devised shortly after talking pictures were introduced and when it was difficult and expensive to obtain such films.

Says Franchises Reduced Prices

"That franchise and the RKO franchise," he said, "did more than anything else to bring down the price of films at the time and gave the exhibitors a break."

Mr. Myers read an affidavit from William H. Canning, manager for Nathan Yamins in Fall River, Mass., to the effect he was refused Fox product unless he took the entire output, but was offered Shirley Temple at the price paid for all Fox product during the preceding year.

H. M. Richey of Allied in Detroit also analyzed the Tiffany franchise matter. Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, filed a memorandum detailing the trade practice demands to be served on the distributors.

A brief against the bill was submitted by George P. Aarons for the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware. The hearings concluded with a final plea for the bill by Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman of the Motion Picture Research Council.

tain well defined limitations to the powers granted to Congress to regulate interstate commerce, "among which is the Bill of Rights, and whenever in the attempted exercise of granted power the Congress invades the Bill of Rights, it will be stopped by the courts."

Next in order the memorandum dealt with the various outside opinions given to the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce, first the memorandum of Assistant Attorney General Harold M. Stephens transmitted by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings at the request of Chairman Samuel B. Pettengill of the subcommittee.

The MPPDA'S reply to this was that the court unanimously held in the Paramount case that those practices do not curb independence of action by exhibitors, and that former Solicitor General James M. Beck refused to permit an appeal, thereby tacitly agreeing with the court.

Regarding the opinion of Assistant Attorney General Stephens that the Culkin bill "should be sustained by the courts and legislation affecting other practices would also probably be upheld," the brief replied that the conclusion is based on federal jurisdiction arising from the interstate character of the business, "but he does not cite any authorities whatsoever in support."

"The error in this opinion," the MPPDA went on, "is to be found in that having stated an undeniable proposition that Congress has the power to regulate commerce, he then argues it must necessarily follow it can do anything, even transform a private business into a public utility without consideration of the essential question as to whether it is affected with a public interest, and fix its prices by a mere legislative declaration, the long line of supreme court decisions to the contrary notwithstanding."

The brief dealt scantily with a report of the Department of Commerce on the Pettengill bill prepared by Thomas Burke, chief of the motion picture division, dated April 19, 1935, and transmitted by Secretary Roper to Representative Samuel Rayburn, chairman of the House committee.

This report was based on summaries and facts gathered from experts on production and exhibition. It did not purport to treat any of the constitutional questions, and after summarizing certain arguments both pro and con, it recommended that the Federal Trade Commission be called upon to offer its opinions and findings.

Commission Opinions Answered

The memorandum of the commission read into the record at the hearings just closed was next taken up, this consisting of two legal opinions on the Pettengill bill prepared by William Y. Kelley, chief counsel, and Eugene W. Burr, a member of the legal staff of the commission, and transmitted at the request of Chairman Rayburn.

Regarding Chief Counsel Kelley's opinion that the section of the Pettengill bill relating to the prohibition of block booking is valid, the brief commented: "He gives no reason other than that worked out by the commission presumably in its cease and desist order (against Paramount in the block booking case), and presents no authorities to substantiate this opinion." The reply refered to the authorities and arguments previously presented in the brief.

To the suggestion that films might be regulated as narcotics, lotteries and prize fight pictures are now regulated by Congress, the MPPDA replied that these laws were sustained by the supreme court under the police power, "which is distinctly different from the power to regulate sales methods and fix prices," as pointed out by the highest court in the Tyson case.

Replying to the supplementary opinion of Mr. Burr, the brief recalled that he supported the contention that Congress has the power to enact the Pettengill bill or other regulatory legislation by citing a long line of decisions.

The reply of the MPPDA was that "under the decision in the Tyson case there is no room for debate, as the supreme court squarely held the powers sought to be exercised in this legislation could not be sustained under the police power," as was pointed out in the reply to Chief Counsel Kelley.

The Columbia University memorandum prepared by Professor Dowling was on the point that the Pettengill bill would be constitutional as a result of the decision in the Paramount case.

"Professor Dowling adopts the same argument as Assistant Attorney General Stephens and makes the same error," Mr. Pettijohn declared.

Pettijohn Claims Pictures Shown at 70% of U.S. Theatres are Censored

Statistical highlights of the motion picture were explained by the "Big Eight" distributors at the Pettengill Interstate Commerce subcommittee hearings at Washington, including the admission, voiced by Charles Pettijohn, counsel, on behalf of the distributors, that approximately 70 per cent of the theatres in this country are today showing pictures under censorship of one form or another. Mr. Pettijohn explained that there are 31 recognized distributing centers in the United States. In 17 of these they cut pictures to conform with the action taken by local, state or city censorship boards. This 70 per cent of the theatres operating serves 80 per cent of the entire population, from the standpoint of revenue accruing. Other statistical highlights that were pointed out by Mr. Pettijohn for the committee's enlightenment included:

98 per cent of persons in the industry work for its betterment; two per cent work destructively against it.

There are today 86 distributors of theatrical motion pictures.

The "Big Eight" distributes approximately 340 of 800 features available yearly.

16,500 theatres operate in the United States; approximately 12,500 are independent.

10,000,000 individual film deliveries are made annually to theatres.

Most large first run theatres require only from 40 to 52 features a year.

Downtown "de luxe" first run rentals range from $5,000 to $25,000 per picture weekly.

Last-run theatres pay from $5 to $25 rental.

A first-run account can be sold at a distribution cost to the distributor of from two to five per cent, whereas it costs as much as 75 per cent to sell and distribute the same feature to last runs for $5, $6 and $7.

Distribution costs for the industry as a whole average about 26 per cent.

32 studios are today engaged in production in Los Angeles and vicinity.

There are 98 independent producers, besides the "Big Eight," engaged in the making of one or more feature productions a year in Los Angeles.

245 theatres were added to the total in 1935, increasing seats by 375,000.

MGM sells as many as 9,911 accounts on its best pictures, and only 4,208 on a mediocre production; RKO's average sales run from 11,169 accounts down to 2,666; Universal can sell as many as 9,007 exhibitors, with as few as 3,267 buying a mediocre picture; Warners' scale ranges from 9,265 down to 4,475; First National's, from 9,333 down to 3,534. (Figures are based on actual sales on specific pictures sold in 1933-34). In the same season, Paramount sold as many as 11,558 contracts on a specific picture, and Fox sold 10,792 similarly.

TEN LEGISLATURES HAVE THEATRE TAX PROGRAMS

New Jersey Kills 4 Per Cent Admission Levy; Indiana Exhibitors Ask Help in Fight

Ten state legislatures this week were considering motion picture theatre taxation, and two others were studying additional legislative proposals which would affect theatres, as follows:

Alabama has in hand a ten per cent admission proposal.

Florida theatres in the city of Pensacola face additional taxation.

Indiana exhibitors are seeking aid in their tax fight.

Louisiana's governor refused to lift the state's admission tax.

Maryland legislators have another admission tax proposal.

Massachusetts turned down a chain state tax; it would have affected theatres of circuits.

Mississippi is expected to pass an admission tax reduction bill.

Missouri faces a special session to consider taxation.

New Jersey killed a four per cent admission tax measure.

Ohio's new tax law provides licenses for theatres and a three per cent tax.

Too, the industry would be affected by other bills which are current subjects of legislative attention. A censorship bill is pending in New Jersey and another in Mississippi. New York killed three theatre proposals and was considering a new bill to compel the use of a projectionist for every machine.

Unable to agree on a general sales tax, a new proposal by Representative Harry Hodges has been introduced into the Alabama legislature. Included in the new measure is a 10 per cent tax on amusements where admissions are more than 15 cents.

Meanwhile, films in Pensacola, Fla., may be reduced to a three-day a week schedule if the pending city amusement tax is passed, according to a wire read to the City Council from the Saenger interests, which have two houses in the vicinity.

Associated Independent Theatre Owners of Indiana, meanwhile, have appealed to the major companies for their aid in helping them fight the Indiana one per cent tax on gross incomes applicable to exchanges, but which is being passed on to theatres. Distributors have encountered similar legislation in Washington and Louisiana, but in the latter state the measure appears to have been killed by Governor White's pocket veto.

In Annapolis, Md., despite the opposition of a large group of exhibitors, the Ways and Means Committee of the legislature reported favorably on the Senate relief bill calling for a 10 per cent tax on all amusement admissions. Immediately following, the committee also offered another tax bill calling for a two per cent levy on admissions to all amusements. Proponents of this bill claim that it will raise $400,000 annually.

Although the Massachusetts legislature has been largely concerned with flood relief during the past week, a number of film matters have been acted upon. A group of bills designed to impose special taxes upon chain stores has been killed. It was definitely felt that the passage of this legislation would have had marked effect, in the near future, upon theatre circuits.

Scraping through the senate by a 21-14 margin, Mississippi's theatre admission tax reduction bill appeared on the way to victory this week. The measure is receiving the full support of the state's smaller exhibitors and despite the opposition by circuits and many other interests, it barely got the necessary three-fifths majority for legislation reducing taxes. It now awaits Governor White's signature.

In Jefferson City, Mo., Governor Guy B. Park is expected to decide shortly whether he will call a special session of the legislature to consider additional appropriations for unemployment relief. State funds will be exhausted early in April. There has been some talk of a three per cent sales tax and a 10 per cent admission tax on amusements, but both suggestions are certain to be met with stern opposition.

The four per cent levy on gross receipts of places of amusement that has been cropping up before the legislature in Trenton, N. J., was killed again for the fourth time this week and is now considered dead. At the time, however, no action was taken by the Senate Miscellaneous Business Committee on the film censorship bill, which calls for a $2 fee on each 1,200 feet of film examined and for each print. Senator Horace G. Prall, sponsor of the measure, has said he will press for a favorable report at a later date. At the same time, however, opposition to the measure was expressed by the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, unit of the American Civil Liberties Union, in a letter to the chairman of the committee considering the measure. The council attacks the bill as useless and as likely to discourage producers from treating controversial subjects.

Three bills have been killed in committee in Albany this week, all affecting theatres. The Dix measure requiring 30 seconds of film showing fire exits was voted down by the Education Committee; the Moran bill calling for a one-mill tax per foot on film has been lost in the Taxation Committee, and the Crews bill to provide a day of rest for engineers and firemen in theatres was voted down by the Labor and Industries Committee. On the heels of these actions, however, Bernard Austin, Assemblyman from New York, introduced a bill calling a licensed operator for each machine.

Federal Play Draws Little Attendance, Much Editorial Fire

When "Jefferson Davis," first of the Federal Theatre Project's touring unit stage shows, opened in Charlottesville, Va., recently, it played to 153 admissions at 25 and 50 cents. Charlottesville, home of the University of Virginia and its 2,500 students, has a population of 10,000 with a drawing total of 25,000. Dominion Theatres, Inc., owns the three motion picture theatres there.

If "Jefferson Davis" is a criterion, "the commercial houses—stage and screen—can afford to ignore the whole affair," said an editorial in The Daily Progress following the showing. "If Mrs. (Hallie) Flanagan,'—director of the project—"viewed the initial presentation of 'Jefferson Davis' at the Plymouth Theatre in New York and has a working knowledge of the commercial stage's requirements, she must be cognizant of the fact that the attraction falls far short of the Federal Theatre's alleged objectives" . . . "yet Charlottesville taxpayers are, with several million others in the country, invited to watch and encourage the dissipation of government funds by hands which give every evidence of incompetence, if not actual greediness."

"Just how Mr. John McGee's 'Jefferson Davis' expects to revive the latent theatrical 'road' cannot be satisfactorily explained to interests even casually acquainted with "show business,'" said the writer. "To the contrary, so dull an affair may well tend to discourage attendance on the 'legitimate' theatre by the younger generations familiar only with the screen and radio."

Twenty-nine members of the cast have returned to New York, reportedly because business was disappointing.

24 COLOR FEATURES PLANNED IN ENGLAND

Technicolor Reported Doubling Capacity; Move for Agreed Quota Policy Is Dropped

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Ernest Lubitsch's prophecy on his arrival in London that "we are in for a color cycle" is supported by many current statements of production plans here. Every British major company probably will have one or more color features in the 1936-7 schedule.

Symptomatic of activity in this direction is the statement of Kay Harrison, managing director of Technicolor, Ltd., that already six companies have signed to make 24 color features; numerous Technicolor shorts also are planned.

Technicolor, it is also stated, will double the originally planned capacity of its British plant. An eleven acre plot on the Great West Road will be occupied by a laboratory costing £250,000, ($1,250,000), and with an ultimate capacity of 80 feet a minute of four color prints.

The first big Technicolor feature to be made in England will be "The Sport of Kings," by Robert T. Kane of New World Pictures, recently announced "big picture" affiliate of Twentieth Century-Fox, which will give it world release. It will be produced at London Films' studio at Denham as the first British all-color feature, and London probably will make "Lawrence of Arabia" as the second.

While Technicolor seems likely to be the process most largely used by British producers, various other color systems are enlarging their plans. Raycol is scheduled for the Ealing (ATP) production of "Hassan," and Dufaycolur is already in use. For demonstration three days hence is a new process called Harmonicolor, and it has been announced that Capitol Films shortly will use a new Continental process.

No Quota Agreement

On the grounds that every section of the industry will have an opportunity to state its views before the Departmental Committee of the Board of Trade which is to investigate the working of the Films Act, the Film Producers' Group of the Federation of British Industries has decided not to continue its move for a conference with the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association with an "agreed" policy on the quota in view.

The policies of producers and exhibitors have been in almost complete opposition, the producers for the most part desiring a stiffening of the definition of a "registered" British film while the exhibitors have demanded a reduction of the existing 20 per cent quota by half, as regards theatres, and recognition of the principle that the distributors' quota should exceed that on exhibitors. There was a possibility that a compromise might have been arrived at whereby the CEA conceded the minimum price clause desired by producers in combination with a reduction of the exhibition quota, but that has now disappeared.

Hearing Guaranteed

The Government decision for an inquiry by a committee including no trade members, and likely to be authoritative as well as official, is an important matter to film importers. It guarantees a hearing to all points of view, including the very important one of that type of major American distributor which is willing to sink a large sum in British production, but desires to be free of footage demands which make it practically unavoidable that its British films shall be quickies.

The committee, of which Lord Moyne, Minister of Agriculture from 1925 to 1929, is chairman, will "consider the position of British films having in mind the approaching expiration of the Cinematograph Films Act of 1927 and inquire whether any and, if so, what measures are still required in the public interest to promote production, renting and exhibition such films."

Official and Educative

Lord Moyne's running mates include A. C. Cameron, a governor of the British Film Institute and secretary of the British Broadcasting Corporation's council for school broadcasting; J. Stanley Holmes, member of Parliament from Harwich; J. J. Mallon, the warden of Toynbee Hall, university settlement in the East End of London; the Hon. Eleanor M. Plumer, member of the advisory committee of the Board of Trade, and Lieut. Col. Sir Arnold Wilson, member of Parliament for Hitchin.

There is a strong official and educative flavor in the personnel. Holmes is a chartered accountant, a director of several companies and the only business man on the committee. Eleanor Plumer and Wilson presumably aided in drafting the confidential report on the act prepared by the advisory committee of the Board of Trade. This report is still unpublished, but their participation in its preparation may have led to their designations on the committee which will now consider a future course.

General Theatres Corporation, recently reconstructed on the basis of Gaumont-British control after strenuous opposition, entailing legal proceedings from dissentient shareholders, announced a dividend of 9 per cent less tax, payable March 31, on its participating preferred ordinary shares of 6:8d value.

Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, another G-B company, is to pay 15 per cent on its ordinaries from net profits of £494,369, which are just on £12,000 better than in the previous year.

Protest Indian Films

At the Council meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association last week, when a resolution was passed protesting to the distributors of two Indian films, registered as British under the Act, and demanding the withdrawal of these subjects. Additionally, it was decided that the CEA should send a report to the Board of Trade and also circularize members asking them not to book the films.

The two subjects indicated are "Vasant Bengali" and "A Wager in Love," distributed respectively by First National and Warner Bros. In review in "Kinematograph Weekly," each is described as "of no practical use," but it is added that "Vasant Bengali" is "harmless for children." A further "Kine" phrase applied to both films is "a museum piece." Both subjects are silents.

These details are of some importance because they emphasize an outstanding weakness of the Quota law as it exists today. Registration cannot be refused to any film, made in the Empire, which is trade shown and offered for exhibition. Quality is a factor simply disregarded in the legislation; a few years ago distributors took advantage of the fact to issue a whole series of Indian productions, lavishly subtitled in Indian script (sometimes in more than one dialect) as well as in English.

Exhibitors undoubtedly have a strong case in representing that the inclusion of films of this type in registered footage alters the real incidence of the quota; they have to show 20 per cent of British films and a percentage of the nominal footage available is unusable.

This is not, however, the only or the most important point. The CEA policy is to ask for a reduction of quota, but its objection to these Indian films can be met in another way—the way favored by production interest, who want a minimum cost clause. Such a move probably would remove most of the worst "museum" quota films, but it would bring with it some new dangers. It will be the opinion of many that the CEA, in its entirely justified protest on this point, is providing excellent propaganda for the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries.

Poster Unit Meeting April 18 in Chicago

Directors of the National Poster Service Association, Inc., have set April 18-19 for the national convention which will be held at the Palmer House, Chicago. More than 100 poster service supply houses will be represented, Simon Libros, president, said in New York this week.

Plans made at a directors' session at the Lincoln hotel in Manhattan two weeks ago will be concluded at the Chicago gathering, Mr. Libros said. MPTOA FINALLY DETERMINES BASIS FOR SELF-REGULATION OF INDUSTRY

Exhibitor Unit Committed to a 10-Plank Platform for Adjustment of Twenty-two Practices in Distributor Relations

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Ed Kuykendall, president, this week placed on official record the nature of a definite program for alleviating the troubles of exhibition trade practices, when it submitted, on request, to the Interstate Commerce Committee's Pettengill subcommittee, the demands and requests and subjects of discussion that will be brought up at conferences with distributors on self-regulation.

MPTOA, therefore, now stands committed to a 10-plank platform for the adjustment of some 22 practices governing exhibitors' relations with exchanges, and among themselves.

At last week's public hearings on the Pettingill Bill H. R. 6472, proposing the abolition of compulsory block booking, the committee requested that Mr. Kuykendall outline the definite subjects to be treated and procedure to be followed at the scheduled meeting with distributors.

Mr. Kuykendall will now call a special meeting of the MPTOA executive committee, or form a special committee to meet with the companies. It has not yet been decided whether this committee will meet with representatives of distributors as a whole or meet with individual distributors.

Mr. Kuykendall, in reporting to the Pettengill committee this week, explained that, "The principal matters we have in mind for these proposed conferences are, and the requests and demands for adjustment and cooperation which my organization are most anxious to secure, and which we believe will be of genuine benefit to theatre owners," include the following items, in the words of report:

(1) A reasonable and unconditional minimum rejection privilege in all exhibition contracts for ten (10) or more feature pictures bought at the same time.

(a) Removal of the conditions and restrictions in the so-called "N. R. A. 10 per cent clause" now in use, which takes away the exhibitors' right to reject pictures; if he does not buy and license at the same time every single picture released by the distributor and/or offered to the exhibitor; if he fails to request in writing the cancellation of the picture within 14 days of the actual release in the exchange territory, which is frequently impossible for the exhibitor to determine; if the film rentals average over $250.00 per picture; if he is unable to book the pictures exactly as they become available; or if he is in default in any respect at the time on any of the terms, conditions and obligations of his contract.

(b) An increase in the number of pictures that may be rejected (it is clearly understood that no exhibitor is required to reject any pictures) from the present conditional 10 per cent to an unconditional 20 per cent of the total number of feature pictures licensed.

(2) The establishment of readily available local joint boards of grievance committees on bona fide local theatre owners and local branch managers of the distributors for the organized investigation, conciliation or arbitration of trade disputes, to which any exhibitor can present a complaint or grievance for such local board to hear, investigate and endeavor to work out an adjustment or voluntary agreement between the parties involved. It is intended that these local boards should be composed of business men experienced in and familiar with our business, that their proceedings should be informal and their recommendations for the adjustment of disputes and differences subject to acceptance by the parties.

"We believe these readily available facilities for impartiallly ascertaining the facts in commercial disputes, bringing the parties to the dispute together and mediating their differences will relieve our business of much costly and unsatisfactory litigation, but will deny no one their 'day in court' if they insist," said the report.

(3) Unreasonable clearance, either in time or area, not based on actual competition, secured by private contracts or agreements without the knowledge or consent of subsequent run exhibitors.

(a) The growing necessity for an openly negotiated and published uniform maximum clearance and zoning plan in each metropolitan center, to limit clearance within a defined maximum for each theatre or run, to provide a definite and uniform availability for subsequent runs of like classifications, and to encourage reasonable admission scales by offering earlier availability to theatres charging higher admissions, and to prevent unreasonable clearance not based on actual or probable competition between theatres.

(4) "Overbuying" of pictures to deprive a competing exhibitor of needed attractions for his theatre.

(a) Encouraged by unrestricted double featuring.

(b) Prompt release of pictures rejected under "selective" contracts.

(c) Involves questions of theatre policy, genuine competitive buying and bidding for pictures, reasonable booking requirements of specific theatres and frequently expert and unbiased judgment of the suitability of attractions, which can only be determined fairly by an impartial local committee qualified by personal experience and knowledge to judge each separate situation on its merits.

(5) Unfair cut-rate competition between theatres, frequently forcing the sale of motion picture entertainment below cost, demoralizing and cheapening the business and ultimately and inevitably ruining the quality of pictures for all theatres. Rebates in the form of:

(a) Premiums, giveaway and gift nights.

(b) Lotteries, pseudo-contests and prizes.

(c) Two-for-ones, coupons, merchants tickets and indiscriminate use of "advertising" passes.

And also cut-rate competition in the form of:

(a) Two or three feature pictures for one admission, the so-called "double and triple featuring."

(b) Unreasonably low admission scales underselling other theatres playing the same pictures but required to pay much higher film rentals for them.

(6) Control of the non-theatrical exhibitions of professional entertainment pictures, to prevent unfair competition with an established theatre.

(7) A standard form of exhibition contract, reduced to essential clauses, understandable in language to intelligent exhibitors who are not lawyers, with no trick clauses giving unfair advantages to the distributor added thereto without the actual knowledge and voluntary consent of the exhibitor, and with a uniform provision for the enforcable arbitration of all contract disputes.

(8) The separate "score charge" still made by some distributors, which has never been justified by them. This is particularly unfair on percentage contracts.

(9) Arbitrary designation by a distributor of the days of the week a percentage picture must be exhibited regardless of suitability.

(10) Forcing excess and unwanted short subjects with feature picture sales.

Says Law is not Solution

"There are other and perhaps less important matters that our committee, when appointed, will want to discuss, but these are the ones now contemplated. Frankly, we do not have a perfect solution for each of these problems to propose, some of them are primarily problems of exhibition, but the business is so interlocked that we need the cooperation and help of the distributors to fairly and effectively bring about any practical solution," the MPTOA said.

"We don't believe that any of these can be solved by legislation or by federal statute, nor by litigation and court action," the organization continued. "The Pettengill bill is of no help in solving any of these problems. In fact, such a law would certainly destroy any hope of our ultimate success in getting the distributors to place a minimum unconditional rejection clause in their contracts, by freezing into a criminal statute the methods by which the distributors must sell their pictures. There is nothing in the bill that requires the distributor to allow any rejection once the contract for exhibition is entered into.

"We don't believe that a statute could be drawn to require this, that would hold up in the courts, or that could not be easily evaded. From our experience we think that unenforceable laws are worse than no law at all. They just create uncertainty, endless litigation and disrespect for all laws and law enforcement agencies. Shortage of product and the limited number of box office attractions that can possibly be produced each year (and each month) will continue to cause 'compulsory' block booking in competitive situations, regardless of the provisions of the Pettengill bill. It's a matter of competitive buying as well as competitive selling."

MICKEY MOUSE NOW CAVORTS ON RUGS

Mickey Mouse has now added to his many duties that of cavorting about on novelty rugs being manufactured by Alexander Smith.

The rugs are in various designs, Mickey playing a concertina as Donald Duck dances and Minnie applauds; Mickey leading an orchestra consisting of one goose playing a trumpet; Mickey and Minnie on trapezes about to clasp hands, and Mickey in cowboy outfit, with ten-gallon hat, chaps and high-heel boots, about to rope a bad man.

900 PAY RESPECT TO GEORGE SCHAEFER

More than 900 friends of George J. Schaefer met Monday night at the Hotel Astor in New York to do him honor and wish him success in his new position as vice-president and general sales manager of United Artists.

It was announced as a "speechless" dinner, and it was that but for a tribute by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and an expression of appreciation by the guest of honor.

With Ed Sullivan, columnist of the New York Daily News, and Jay C. Flippen as masters of ceremonies, entertainment was provided by Milton Berle, Ken Murray, Roger Pryor, Jane Cooper, Benny Rubin, Richard Himber, Stuart Allen, Jimmy Savo and the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club.

LAEMMLE IN NEW YORK TO COMPLETE "U" SALE

Declines Post on Board in New Company Setup; Plans Return to Coast Before Vacation

Carl Laemmle arrived in New York on Monday prepared to participate in final details of the transaction by which his controlling interest in Universal passes to a group headed by Standard Capital company and Charles R. Rogers. Payment in excess of $1,500,000 by the purchasing group was made on March 14th, exercising an option taken November 1, 1935. Transfer of an additional $4,000,000 was to take place on Thursday of this week.

On arrival in New York Mr. Laemmle announced his decision to make his retirement complete, declining to accept the chairmanship of the board of directors understood to have been offered him under the new ownership.

His plans, he said, are for a return to Los Angeles, following the completion of the sale, for a stay until June, when he will return to New York for a brief visit before going to Carlsbad and other European points of interest for an extended vacation. Board membership, he pointed out, would require his presence at monthly meetings, an obligation to which he does not wish to subject himself in view of these plans.

Nevertheless, the man who founded Universal 24 years ago told the press, he will hold himself ready at all times to serve the company in any advisory or consultative way that may be desired. On this premise it is believed that any motion pictures which Mr. Laemmle may make in the future will be distributed by Universal. Conditions of the sale permit the production of three such pictures in the year following its consummation, but no definite statement as to whether the retiring pioneer intends to re-enter production on this or any basis has been made.

Mr. Laemmle's final message to the company, given to Universal Weekly, the house organ established many years ago, follows:

"With the production of 'Show Boat' I bow out of moving pictures as an active figure. My interest and enthusiasm for them will never leave me. Pictures have been my life work for 30 years. I have put my heart and my soul and sometimes my very breeches into the business, plus all I could borrow on many occasions. I have tried to so conduct Universal that when I left it the industry would feel that I had done more for the business than it had done for me. I hope I have succeeded.

"I have tried, too, to accumulate by my efforts enough money to leave my family in comfortable circumstances. Everyone in this business has that very laudable ambition. I have done that. There is another ambition in life that is just as understandable. I have that, too. That ambition is to leave a business that you have created in the very best hands. That ambition I have realized.

"When I turn over the reins of Universal, the company will be placed in the hands of R. H. Cochrane, without whose loyalty, good sense, unfailing courage and daily advice this company could never have weathered the storms that beset it or achieved the measure of success it has attained. I am happy to turn it over to him and to the men who surround him in the new business setup.

"My heart and my interest will always remain with Universal. I feel that because it has always been a fighting company, and a fair fighting company with a consideration for others, it also has a warm spot in the heart of the great majority of exhibitors. From those exhibitors I would now like to ask the same consideration for the new Universal that they have always given Universal and me."

Flooded Theatres Speed Reopening

Work of rehabilitating theatre properties damaged by floods in the East proceeded swiftly this week with inspection revealing losses in many cases less extensive than indicated by preliminary survey. Film delivery service returned to normal channels and schedules and, while attendance in the stricken areas remained depressed as a result of general disturbance of public routine and continued homelessness, optimism grew with respect to the practicability of recouping box office losses.

Said Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, returning from a tour of the affected districts: "There is considerable repair work to be done in our Pittsburgh and Johnstown theatres, but this is mostly in the nature of restoration and replacement of furnishings. The actual physical damage to property and theatre machinery was slight. The important damage to theatres in the flooded districts is represented by loss of income. This, however, will be more than accounted for within the next three months when general increased employment on flood repair work will bring added population and increased spending power in the affected cities."

Paralleling Mr. Bernhard's logic, many in the industry interpreted reports of a substantial general business upturn, stimulated by widespread property repair and replacement of wardrobes, foodstuffs and household furnishings, as promising natural box office benefits deriving from augmented business activity.

Meanwhile theatres in the affected districts and over the country staged benefit performances, accepted voluntary donations from audiences and lent their services in every way to the carrying out of Red Cross and allied relief efforts. At Cleveland, resources of RKO-Radio, Loew and Warner theatre circuits were pooled to produce a three-hour midnight show at the Hippodrome made up of 50 acts, with tickets at $1. Similar events were staged elsewhere.

Insurance companies reported a marked increase in the issuance of flood insurance.

Spanish Theatres Call Off Boycott

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER
in Barcelona

Exhibitors over the weekend terminated their boycott against MGM. The action had started with a whispering campaign against Jacques Edelstein, MGM manager, and then had veered to an attack upon contract provisions. The exhibitors had demanded the ousting of Mr. Edelstein, which was flatly refused by MGM. Members of Mutua, the local organization of foreign distributors, stood squarely behind MGM.

Attempts to arbitrate the differences had resulted in several deadlocks.

Mozart Film Draws

Taking advantage of the steadily mounting prestige of the Cine Maryland in this city as the first-run house for films of distinctly artistic and intellectual character—witness the recent successes scored by the American "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "One Night of Love"— British Film Distributors, Ltd., presented this week "El Amado de los Dioses" ("Beloved of God"), a picture based upon the life and career of the composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, the title esthetically paraphrasing Mozart's Christian name. The offering was welcomed by a capacity first-night house and proved to possess high values as developed by Basil Dean, the director and the cast headed by John Lodder, Llane Haid, Victoria Hopper and Stephen Haggard in the major roles. The picture also had the advantage of collaboration by Dr. Baumgartner, of the Mozart Verein von Salzburg.

The Philharmonic Orchestra of London, directed by Sir Thomas Beecham, played several excerpts from "Figaro's Hochzeit" and "Die Zauberflöte, which immeasurably heightened the dramatic values. The exteriors were announced as having been filmed at Salzburg.

The Mozart film is the second treating the biography of a composer to be released in Spain within the last two years, the same distributor's "Vals de Chopin" having been one of the outstanding British successes in this country.

Union Men to Run Theatres

In order to keep many houses open in several sections of the country, where inefficient management has ruined business, the first national convention of representatives of 30 industry employees' unions here has decided to establish cooperative societies of employes to run the theatres. The necessary financing will be obtained through small prorata assessments on wages. Theatres thus operated will specialize in films with labor and proletarian themes.

It is hinted that Government aid is anticipated, since the plan is expected to stimulate the industry in the country. The convention also voted to boycott all pictures containing fascist or communist propaganda and to urge the Government to develop an institute which will further the distribution abroad of Mexican-produced films.

For the first time in a long while the Mexican industry has been free of labor troubles, but employers have declined to predict how long the situation will last.

Appropriately titled "The Leathernecks Have Landed," this offering lands directly on the box-office front with barrage of sure-fire entertainment that should capture 100 per cent family patronage. The convincing story is aided by an excellent supervision, good direction and cast, resulting in fast-action, pat drama that is tops on the Republic program to date. Yarn and concerns a fighting marine who loves to fight so much that he contributes to the death of his buddy and his own dishon-ammunition to Chinese bandits, turns the trick and helps his former buddies clean up the situation. He wins a citation for valor and reinstatement into the service. Directed by How-

CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS, THE: Richard Arlen, Charlotte Wynters—This made a good weekend attraction for us in spite of the fact it is a very slow moving story.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

CATTLE THIEF, THE: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell—Drew usual good attendance for weekend, and was highly satisfactory.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

GIRL FRIEND, THE: Ann Sothern, Jack Haley—Only a fair program picture that don't mean a thing at the box office. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK: Jean Arthur, Herbert Marshall—These stars do not draw, but the picture is very, very good.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK: Jean Arthur, Herbert Marshall—Swell story and swell cast, yet for some reason, the picture just fails to click. It lacks that certain something which we can't describe. The picture is all right, and was well received, but it could have been so very much better.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

SHE COULDN'T TAKE IT: George Raft, Joan Bennett—Good old George Raft always brings them in here and this is one of his best—even if he doesn't do any dancing. Played this on Sunday-Monday to excellent business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SHE MARRIED HER BOSS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas—A very delightful picture that was disappointing at the box office. Splendid business on Sunday, fair on Monday, nothing much on Tuesday. Edith Fellows made quite a hit. Played March 1-3.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

UNKNOWN WOMAN: Marian Marsh, Richard Cromwell—Only a fair program picture that did not please. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

First National

BROADWAY HOSTESS: Winifred Shaw, Lyle Talbot—Seemed to please. Plenty of comedy and a fair story. I can't quite see Wini Shaw as a star. Some very good dance numbers. Running time, 69 minutes. Played March 4-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland—Really a marvelous picture that should go down as one of the outstanding pictures of the year, yet, like so many specials in our town, failed to do any extra business. We don't know why people still prefer to see "Shoot 'em Up Johnny" and pass by a picture like this. A darn swell picture and we hope we see a lot of Olivia and Erroll. Running time, 119 minutes.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—We went to town with this one. Men patrons complained not enough airplane thrills or shots as they expected. It's my humble opinion that Warners will pass a bet if they let Cagney slip from their fold. The screen bristles with his personality and the young bloods like him. Running time, 10 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—A real picture but had the misfortune of playing it when the thermometer was just 19 degrees below so the weather and the title froze them out. The picture under favorable conditions should do plenty of business and is suitable for either Sunday or weekend date. Played March 14-15.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

I FOUND STELLA PARISH: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—One of the most interesting pictures we've played this winter. The trailer is especially good and sold the picture for us as Miss Francis has never been a good bet for us. Business above average for midweek, and if I'd known how good this was I would have put it on Sunday.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MURDER OF DR. HARRIGAN, THE: Ricardo Cortez, Kay Linaker—Very fine murder mystery with perhaps the best build-up to the actual murder that we have ever seen. Not much drawing power to the cast. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MURDER OF DR. HARRIGAN, THE: Kay Linaker, Ricardo Cortez—Here is the best mystery picture of the year. You'll have plenty of trouble finding the murderer. Plenty of comedy mixed in with it.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PAYOFF, THE: James Dunn, Claire Dodd—Played March 19-20 on a double bill with "Song of the Saddle" to a satisfying business.—Walter La Pata, Star Theatre, Poultney, Vt. Small town patronage.

SONG OF THE SADDLE: Dick Foran, Alma Lloyd—A neat little western that pleased. Warners have made no mistake in making the series, and the singing introduced in each has made them quite a unique novelty. Cowboy songs go good in westerns and Warners shouldn't be afraid to put more in each picture. This one better than "Moonlight on the Prairie," pleased both young and old. Played March 19-20 on a double bill with "The Payoff" to satisfactory business.—Walter La Pata, Star Theatre, Poultney, Vt. Small town patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—A good picture. It will satisfy and draws the crowd.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. General patronage.

Liberty

OLD HOMESTEAD, THE: Mary Carlisle, Lawrence Gray—If the title of this picture had been "The Old Homestead Hour," everything could have been overlooked; but to use this grand old title, which was significant of one of the greatest, grandest old plays, and under this entirely misleading title hide a cheap, no-account picture, well, it is sacrilegious to those who remember "The Old Homestead" as it was. Business was above average due directly to this misleading title, but the patrons soon discovered that they had been tricked and I had to stand the abuse. So my advice to all who happened to buy this picture on the strength of its title is to advertise it as "The Old Homestead Hour." You will be keeping faith with your public and they will respect you for your honesty. Played March 19.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Oiwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Mascot

WATERFRONT LADY: Ann Rutherford, Frank Albertson—A nice little picture that held interest and gave satisfaction to a cash night audience.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

AH, WILDERNESS: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Aline MacMahon—A perfect picture for the small town, or large one either. An excellent story and a perfect cast makes this one of the best pictures of the year. Lionel Barrymore gives a wonderful performance and with Wallace Beery, Aline MacMahon, Spring Byington makes this one of those it-might-have-happened-here kind of pictures that everyone enjoys. And don't forget Mickey Rooney, who gives a very good performance of the livewire boy. I saw this picture four times and wouldn't mind seeing it again, and that is a good deal for an exhibitor to say. Don't be afraid to step on the advertising. Your patrons will not be disappointed. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BONNIE SCOTLAND: Laurel and Hardy—A good comedy that pleased our Saturday crowd very much. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IT'S IN THE AIR: Jack Benny, Una Merkel—Pretty good program picture that did not do so well at the box office. Jack Benny don't mean anything as a drawing card. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—A masterpiece as far as acting and directing is concerned. As entertainment it is too rough for the ladies. The result was the ladies did not turn out like they should. Running time, 133 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—Mutiny at the box office, after it had run in all the towns around me. My only regret is that they didn't hold out until the print had worn out completely. A great picture but no business. Played February 9-10.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Brothers, Kitty Carlisle, Allan Jones—Was considered silly by many, but seemed to give general satisfaction as light entertainment. Business on it was less than average. Running time, 10 reels. Played March 8-9.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Brothers, Kitty Carlisle, Allan Jones—This is easily one of the Marx Bros. best; bringing in a pair of young lovers and working their gags around the romance of the young lovers is a capital idea for the Marx Brothers. Evidently some of our patrons recalled some of the past, or let us say, the last Marx Brothers' picture, and some stayed away, as we only did a fair average on this. The next may do better.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—Very good picture. Wallace Beery is the whole show. Jackie Cooper don't go so good. I don't think very many patrons care to see him cry so much. Running time, 88 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PURSUIT: Chester Morris, Sally Eilers—A very good Saturday picture full of action. Suited fine for Saturday. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THIN MAN, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Rather disappointing as the plot is too involved and the audience never finds out what it's about. It's just as much of a mystery after it is finshed. Good sound and photography.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. General patronage.

Paramount

ANYTHING GOES: Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman, Charles Ruggles—Although this seemed to me the best picture Crosby has made in a long time, he gets worse at the box office every picture. Have tried him on weekends and think that we will be forced to play his future pictures on bank night or bargain night. Paramount still insist on allocating his pictures in the A classification which is okay, I suppose, for it balances itself up at the end of the year. A word to exhibs playing this later, advertise Ruggles, for he is the whole show and a good one, too. Played March 8-9.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Frances Langford, Betty Grable—Here is without a doubt the most entertaining picture of the year. You will laugh yourself sick. It's a scream. Oakie's impersonation of Al Jolson is the tops. Frances Langford really "Hits the Spot." Give it your best date with plenty of advertising and watch the nickels come in. It will please them all.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

CRUSADES, THE: Loretta Young, Henry Wilcoson—Giant war catapults hurling balls of fire. Thousands of horses in a mighty charge. Same old DeMille stuff. You can't get them in on this. They just don't go for it. I think that DeMille has about six reels of stock film that he uses in all his spectacles. Paramount could take the money that DeMille used to make "The Crusades" and make four or five musicals and everyone would be better satisfied. However, if you are going to play it, book Paramount's "Broadway Highlights, No. 4" for your best play dates one week in advance of your play date on "The Crusades." It has some pretty good stuff in it made at the World's premier. It will make you feel optimistic about "The Crusades."—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

EAGLE'S BROOD, THE: Wm. Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Another "Hop-A-Long Cassidy" that my folks did not recognize. Had expected to do big business with this because the first one went big. The story of "The Eagle's Brood" is not pleasing. They start the thing off by killing a man and a woman in cold blood and they keep doing this right straight through the picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

KLONDIKE ANNIE: Mae West, VictorMcLaglen—William Randolph Hearst notwithstanding, we still like our "Mae," and our "Mae" does right by us by bringing in extra business. While not as good, perhaps, as "Goin' to Town," it pleased all Mae's fans, of which there are many here, and as long as Mae makes 'em, we'll play 'em.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

MILKY WAY, THE: Harold Lloyd, Adolphe Menjou—It is strange how Lloyd can make so few pictures and yet hold his fans in this town. Here is a picture that is one of his best and proved it at the box office. Plenty of new gags and good clean comedy that seems to get over with the old and young alike, and the best part of it is that picture was not classified as a special, so we naturally made a little money. Step on this one, good for Sunday or weekend patronage. Played March 15-16.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MILLIONS IN THE AIR: John Howard, Wendy Barrie—Crackerjack of a program picture with plenty of real entertainment, including comedy and radio talent. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 11-12.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MILLIONS IN THE AIR: John Howard, Wendy Barrie—Paramount did it again. Just a program picture, but jammed full of entertainment. We got our money's worth out of the "bosom-peeking" scene which we haven't seen for years. While not up to "Every Night at Eight," it will give a not-too-critical audience an evening of very pleasing entertainment. Played March 8-9.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

PETER IBBETSON: Gary Cooper, Ann Harding—Was very pleasingly surprised with this picture. Had heard some adverse criticism on this picture, but the audience reaction was very favorable. It didn't pack 'em in like "Mutiny," but those that saw it were pleased. Running time, 85 minutes.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE OF THE RANCHO: John Boles, Gladys Swarthout—Not for our small town. Patrons were very much disappointed and the drawing power was not there. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ROSE OF THE RANCHO: John Boles, Gladys Swarthout—Operas will not go over here. However, everyone that saw this picture liked it. Our National Screen Trailer ruined this one. Never again will I run a trailer that has any Grand Opera in it.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

TIMOTHY'S QUEST: Eleanore Whitney, Dickie Moore—Boys, here is a picture that will really please them, no big names to advertise, but don't let that fool you. I played it on bargain night and stood them out for three shows. A real story and was enjoyed by the roughnecks as well as the better class of trade. Played March 12.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

VIRGINIA JUDGE, THE: Walter C. Kelly, Marsha Hunt—Very good program picture. Just the type of picture for Saturday. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—A very good picture. Suitable on any day, full of good entertainment, the kind of picture that gives as near 100% satisfaction as any of them do. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CHATTERBOX: Anne Shirley, Phillips Holmes—Very poor. The thing gets on your nerves listening to all the chatter about nothing. Patrons sure hate stories about any backstake stuff. I'll outgross four such pictures with a good old hoss picture. Running time, 8 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—One swell show. Pleased everyone. Ginger has improved until she is as good as Astaire. The dancing was the best they have done to date. Plenty of comedy. And the monkey was the hit of the show. Two a year from this team would be about the right number. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 1517.—Walt Bradley, Moon Theatre, Neligh, Neb. General patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Drew as well as "Top Hat" and is equally as good. Talented feet, catchy songs and a plausible story. We believe that Astaire will be very, very foolish to insist on his reported intention to seek another partner. The team of Astaire and Rogers is the drawing card, not Fred Astaire, and Ginger Rogers has a host of followers. If this team should star separately, Ginger Rogers will be starring a long time after Fred has been forgotten. We're not tired of this combination and we don't know anyone who is, except, perhaps, Mr. Astaire. Perhaps he is sawing off the limb he's sitting on.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

HI GAUCHO: Rod La Rocque, Steffi Duna, John Carroll—How a booker can sit back and allow a feeble-minded exhibitor to book such a picture is beyond me the embarrassment of facing the public as they me. Gladly would I pay them double rental to save come out. Played February 21-22.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IN PERSON: Ginger Rogers, George Brent—Although a little late this picture proved to be a good draw, which is out of the ordinary for RKO pictures. Ginger proves that she is a star in her own rights without the aid of Fred Astaire. Lots of comedy for which she is adept. Played March 17-18.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON A BET: Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie—Here is a knockout. Will please any audience 100 per cent. Get behind this one and place it on your best days. Drew exceptionally well the second night. Running time, 8 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

MUSS 'EM UP: Preston Foster, Margaret Callahan—Too many made like this one. RKO turns these out like crackers. People are tired of them. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 6-7.—Walt Bradley, Moon Theatre, Neligh, Neb. General patronage.

POWDER SMOKE RANGE: Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey—Here is a darn good Western. Plenty of stars in this one.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

RAINMAKERS, THE: Wheeler and Woolsey—O. K. for weekend run. About on the average of their previous efforts. They have a following here. Business average. Running time, eight reels. Played March 6-7.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF PETER GRIMM, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Helen Mack—A waste of film, too fantastic a story and a shame to put an actor like Barrymore in a picture like this. Played February 20.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Paul Lukas, Walter Abel, Margot Grahame, Heather Angel—Another "colossal" production gone haywire at the B. O. Drags all throughout and could have been condensed into six reels instead of 11. Small town especially steer clear of this one. Running time, 108 minutes. Played March 20-21.—Kenneth Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame, Paul Lukas, Heather Angel—Without a known star it was impossible to get many people in on this. The picture is well done and Walter Abel was liked very much as D'Artagnan.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TO BEAT THE BAND: Helen Broderick, Hugh Herbert—Pretty good program picture that did not do so well at the box office on account the actors in this did not mean a thing. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TWO IN THE DARK: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame—A nice little picture that did not cost scarcely anything to make; no big star names, not any big sets, but interesting mystery entertainment and if you are one of those lucky exhibitors that folks come no matter what you are showing, you will be pleased with this; but if it takes a lot of everything to get 'em in, this one will flop for you just like it did for me.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

FOUR SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

Four showmen from as many states add their reports this week on "What the Picture Did for Me."

Reporting for the first time are:

Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Alabama.

Walter La Pata, Star Theatre, Poultney, Vermont.

Two returning to the reportorial ranks after more than a year's absence are these:

Walt Bradley, Moon Theatre, Neligh, Nebraska.

Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, LaCrosse, Kansas.

Read the reports of these exhibitors in this issue.

Republic

LEATHERNECKS HAVE LANDED, THE: Lew Ayres, Isabel Jewell—A first class picture in all respects. While it drew only normal business, it pleased all who saw it. Good acting, direction and an exciting, interesting story. Played March 13-14.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BAD BOY: James Dunn, Dorothy Wilson—A light, breezy, entertaining picture. Louise Fazenda adds a bright bit to the picture. It seems hardly fair for Fox to put this short fifty-six minute inexpensive picture on the "B" classification. Business on this with Buck Jones' "Ivory Handled Gun" a fair average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET: Warner Oland, Rosina Lawrence—Each of the last three pictures have done a little less business at the box office, which, like the "Cohens and Kellys" of past years, went the same way. The pictures are typed too much, and four a year are too many. Our reaction, and that is off the box office, is that they are on their way out for popular appeal. This picture did not do within forty per cent of what they did two years ago. Chan's pictures run too much to type; a few proverbs and Chan always out on top.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Dorothy Wilson—A grand farewell performance from America's best loved star. This is Will's best performance and has everything an audience can ask for, comedy, romance, thrills. An excellent cast, good story and Will Rogers make this perfect screen entertainment for all classes. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 28-March 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye—Excellent musical drama with a good story, lots of good music and comedy. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Jack Oakie, Alice Faye—One of the best musicals we have had in some time; several new personalities in this one and all of them come through in great fashion. Business better than average in spite of a dust storm. Good Sunday picture. Played March 22-23.—Ralp Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LITTLEST REBEL, THE: Shirley Temple, John Boles, Karen Morley, Jack Holt—All that has been said about this picture in previous reports is true. It is one sweet box office attraction and business was as good as on her previous pictures. Shirley has beat all Will Rogers pictures here in the cash receipts. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 20-21.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

MAN WHO BROKE THE BANK OF MONTE CARLO, THE: Ronald Colman, Joan Bennett—Nothing to it. Just a fair programmer. Could be made into two reels and be just as interesting.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural partonage.

METROPOLITAN: Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce—I don't remember the running time on this picture, but it was too long, as short as it was. I'd put this one on the shelf before I'd play it if it were in my power. You'll have plenty of walkouts and you won't need any SRO sign. Maybe someone will like it, but it pleased none here.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

METROPOLITAN: Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce—This gave us almost a low record in receipts, which means that our patrons emphatically turn thumbs down on opera films. The picture itself should be a treat to music lovers. Lawrence Tibbett gives generously of his talents. The songs have a popular ring and his voice came through in magnificent form. The story that was used for a framework for the music was quite fair. I double-billed this with Zasu

Pitts in "She Gets Her Man," which did not help matters any.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MY MARRIAGE: Claire Trevor, Kent Taylor—Nothing to it. Just a mediocre programmer that will do for Bargain Night.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—Very good entertainment. Jane Withers now means something at the box office. She is a mighty talented youngster. She will go places. This show is plenty keen. Wisb that I had played it on Sunday. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 11-12.—Walt Bradley, Moon Theatre, Neligh, Neb. General patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew—As with all the mythical kingdom stuff and the "My Lording," this picture was not accepted for any material business. The boy is fine in his role, but it is the old tale of heroics and the revolution in tbe mythical kingdom and the kidnaping of the king. And all that goes with it. Took a nosedive at the box office. Too much of a kid picture for the adults. It answers the clamor for clean pictures, that it is. The small towns just do not go for this type of picture, as we have found out to our regret many times before.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

REDHEADS ON PARADE: John Boles, Dixie Lee —Just a programmer of the very common kind. Positively nothing to it. Herman Bing will drive you insane with his "Wop" accent. This is another one that should remain on the shelf.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOW THEM NO MERCY: Rochelle Hudson, Cesar Romero, Bruce Cabot—A good kidnaping story that portrays a new angle on the racket. Pleased for a weekend picture. This boy Romero is a perfect gangster and goes over well with the women. Business good. Played March 13.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THANKS A MILLION: Dick Powell, Fred Allen, Patsy Kelly, Yacht Club Boys—This is as good as the press sheet said it was and I didn't think they made 'em that good. The always popular Dick Powell has plenty of support in this one and a very good story. Patsy Kelly, Fred Allen and Raymond Walburn furnish the comedy, while Rubinoff, Paul Whiteman, Romona and the Yacht Club Boys furnish the music. A feature that will please any audience. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 11-12.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THIS IS THE LIFE: Jane Withers, John McGuire —Another mighty good feature from Fox. Jane Withers is running Shirley Temple a very close second here. This is her best and as a vaudeville artist she is one hundred per cent good. This one pleased all who braved the cold weather to come. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Tbeatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY: Edward Everett Horton —This picture did not give satisfaction here, caused, I think, from lack of action. Business way below normal. You would do well to set it aside if you can. Running time, eight reels. Played March 13-14.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BARBARY COAST: Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson, Joel McCrea—Pretty fair show. However, it is not the special they claim it is. It will do if not played too close to "Frisco Kid." They are both alike.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BARBARY COAST: Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson, Joel McCrea—If you like Miriam Hopkins, maybe you'll like this. Personally, we don't like Miss Hopkins. Doesn't come close to being as good as "Frisco Kid" and didn't please as well as the average program picture. We have had many much better pictures from other companies who are trying to keep the exhibitor in business, not put them out by charging ridiculous rentals. Played March 11-12.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

CALL OF THE WILD, THE: Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie—A fine production with plenty of action; Jack Oakie at his very best, Loretta in her most beautiful, and Gable great as usual. Oakie and the dog, Buck, steal the show; but, after all, that was Jack London's intention when he wrote the book. Magnificent scenery. They billed this one as a "he-man's picture," so it was only natural that a good reception awaited it here. Everyone satisfied. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 21.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MELODY LINGERS ON, THE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Houston—Played this in both theatres and didn't gross enough to pay the film rental in one. Another example of a high-pressured salesman selling me something I didn't want and nobody wanted to see. And to add insult to injury, the weather was perfect. As to the picture, it lingers on, and on, and on. Played March 8-9.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

EAST OF JAVA: Cbarles Bickford, Elizabeth Young —A good bloodthirsty weekend picture. Played it on a double bill and it seemed to please, altbough the women thought it a little rough. Played March 20-21. —Ralph Larner, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Louise Beavers—This one will go down in the records as one of the best dramas of all time, one of the finest all-around pictures ever made. Wonderful acting by each and every player. Louise Beavers can never be forgotten after this film; and Fredi Washington, whose role was much the hardest, brought forth a marvelous performance. Our audience, forty per cent colored and all "hardened criminals," walked out with plenty of wet handkerchiefs; everyone deeply pleased and certainly a wee bit better for having viewed the film. Played March 14.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STORMY: Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers—Besides showing you the most horses you have ever seen in your life, it brings to you a fine story, well acted, and good from start to finish. It should prove to be much better than an average attraction wherever shown.—W. H. Brennen, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Inc. General patronage.

STORMY: Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers, Rex, the King of the Wild Horses—Here is a hoss opera that is a real one. Out of the ordinary for a western and the story is very good. If you haven't played "Stormy" step on it with both feet for it is the tops. Played March 6-7.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SWEET SURRENDER: Frank Parker, Tamara—The folks that produced this gave a product that most any exhibitor will be glad that he has it for his screen. It brings some very interesting people out, and Frank Parker sings so well that the patrons sit and take and like it, and that is more than I can say about any other singing star that we have had in a long, long time. Interesting story, big stage sets and wonderful dancing.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

DANGEROUS: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone—What a picture! And we played it just shortly after the Academy Award to Miss Davis. We can readily see why she was the outstanding candidate for this award. Her ability to run the gamut of emotions is remarkable. And Tone gave a very fine performance. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak— Paul Muni does good work in this. The story holds interest and it did a fair average business during the Lenten season. So what more can one ask?—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre. Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DANGEROUS: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone—Darn nice picture. Play it. It'll please the majority.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

FRESHMAN LOVE: Patricia Ellis, Frank McHugh, Warren Hull—Frank McHugh tried hard to save this picture, but he didn't have anything to do it with. It's just another college picture. I've never seen one yet that wasn't like all the rest of them. Same old stuff. Just like going to a circus. When you seen one you've seen them all. The hero arrives just in time to save the big race. Ho hum, makes me tired to think of it.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

FRISCO KID: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay—An A-1 picture from every angle. Made a splendid Saturday attraction.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

FRONT PAGE WOMAN: Bette Davis, George Brent—Am glad I picked this up from last year's program. It is splendid. Bette Davis is fast becoming a real draw.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MISS PACIFIC FLEET: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—I consider this one the weakest number this pair has ever put over, but it seemed to please and that is all an exhibitor can ask. Lots of comedy and the cast is all quite popular here, but the story isn't much. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 7-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MISS PACIFIC FLEET: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Plenty of comedy in this one. You will laugh yourself sick at Hugh Herbert. Allen Jenkins will kindly get on your nerves, but Hugh Herbert will make you forget it all.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

MISS PACIFIC FLEET: Joan Blondell. Glenda Farrell—Maybe the very small turn-out made me supercritical of this picture, but I thought it by far the poorest this team has made to date. Story made little sense, comedy didn't click, and picture as a whole left you with a sense of disappointment.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

PERSONAL MAID'S SECRET: Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull—An outstanding program picture that drew slightly above average. Ruth Donnelly particularly good.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST, THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—Bette Davis never meant anything in this town, and Leslie Howard still less, owing, no doubt, to his mushy English accent. The picture is interesting, but when Warner Bros. remove one from their percentage class, as they did in this case, you know it is no drawing card. Business below average. Several favorable comments. Played March 17-18.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BIRD STUFFER, THE: Krazy Kat Cartoon—A very clever black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DR. BLUEBIRD: Color Rhapsodies Series—I wish I had words to describe how unusual and beautiful this cartoon is. It is simply superb. We had more comments on it than on any cartoon we have played in months. We are going to repeat it. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

IT ALWAYS HAPPENS: Andy Clyde—This got lots of laughs.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

OLD SAWBONES: Andy Clyde—It's seldom that we report on a short, but this comedy gave our audience more laughs than I have heard in the theatre for a year. A typical slapstick comedy which had the house in an uproar. Let's have more of this type. Running time, 20 minutes.—Ted Stamp, Elted Theatres Absarokee and Columbus, Mont. Rural patronage.

SPILLS AND SPLASHES: New World of Sport Series—Water sports presented very entertainingly. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Educational

AMATEUR HUSBAND, THE: Ernest Truex—Fairly good; some laughs, but very short for a two-reel subject. Running time, 15 minutes.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

BARNYARD AMATEURS: Paul Terry-Toon—A very good black and white cartoon and will please all. An amateur contest in a broadcasting station.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

COLLEGE CAPERS: Song and Comedy Hit—A fine single reel musical with the Cabin Kids.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

EDUCATIONAL SHORTS: I can't say much for their one-reelers, but the two-reelers are improving all the time, some real good slapstick comedies and especially the Buster Keatons. If he continues to make good shorts I think he should be allowed to make a comeback in features. We need some good feature comedians.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GRAND SLAM OPERA: Star Personality Comedy —An excellent slapstick comedy with Buster Keaton.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LAND OF THE EAGLE: World on Parade—Interesting subject of Central America, but my patrons would rather have something to laugh at in their shorts. Running time, 10 minutes.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

MOANS AND GROANS: Paul Terry-Toon—A very cute black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage

RHYTHM OF PAREE: Musical Comedies Series—There is just one word for this one. If you are catering to a lot of nit-wits, it is right down their alley, but the average audience are in their right minds and as such it is too bad to inflict anything like the above on them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SORORITY BLUES: Song and Comedy Hits—This is fine and the best song hit I have yet to use from this producer. It will make you a fine filler with any feature except a musical. Running time, 10 minutes.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

ALIAS ST. NICK: Harman-Ising—Another of the excellent Happy-Harmonizing. Colored cartoons all go over here and this is one of the best. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MONKEY BUSINESS: Charley Chase—I consider this one of Charley's poorest comedies, but it got a lot of laughs. Running time, 2 reels. —Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

METRO SHORTS: About the most overrated short subjects I buy. Hal Roach has sure slipped from the top-notch comedies he used to make. About the only ones worth their price is the Gangs.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TOP FLATS: Todd-Kelly—A very fine Todd-Kelly comedy. Audience enjoyed it very much.—C. L .Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

PARAMOUNT SHORTS: The best variety of shorts on the market and most of them good.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FELIX THE CAT AND THE GOOSE THAT LAID THE GOLDEN EGG: Rainbow Parade Cartoon—A very good colored cartoon about the goose that laid the golden egg and the pirate bold who stole him.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IN LOVE AT 40: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—This one pleased, although Kennedy has been in better ones. Who is the new "Brother" in these shorts? He isn't as good as the former "Brother" but not many squawks. Running time, 18 minutes.—Kenneth Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: When I saw the first reel of this, I ordered it off the screen. Believe every exhibitor should do so as a matter of patriotism. The reel is certainly Communistic propaganda, endeavors to show the Soviet as a worker's paradise, plenty of clothes, shops full of goods, people happy, and concludes with a picture of smoking factory chimneys and a comment by Soviet official that "This is a country in which the workers are busy and get paid for what they do." Now you couldn't take a picture in Russia unless it were favorable to Russia and this picture is plainly a "set-up." Furthermore, many of us know that conditions among the Russian workers are deplorable. But there are lots of Americans who do not know this to be the fact and these will be misled by this film. Americans are a very complacent lot. They have a grand country and they know it. They have a vague sort of feeling that it is so wealthy and so powerful that a few organized and shouting minorities more or less do not make much difference. But the time has come when Communistic propaganda is seeping in through school books, speeches, pamphlets and now radio and movies, and it is up to the American exhibitor to stop it as far as the screen is concerned by refusing to show the films. That will bring results. Any more such reels from March of Time and the March of Time will be eliminated from our screen altogether. Played March 13-14. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. H. Ramsdell, Lyric Theatre, Gaithersburg, Md. General patronage.

RKO SHORTS: Not a laugh in a carload, positively the worst short subjects on the market and any exhibitor who buys them is a fool, including myself.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOX MOVIETONE NEWS: After running Paramount News for seven years I changed off to Fox for this year and while it is a good news I don't think that the News angle is as good as Paramount, too much hooey and not enough news.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BROKEN TOYS: Silly Symphonies—Not up to the average of the Silly Symphonies, but will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHO KILLED COCK ROBIN?: Silly Symphonies—One can readily see why Liberty gave this one four stars. The best cartoon film ever made; bar none. Synchronization and color both excellent, plenty of laughs, and perfect imitations of Crosby, Mae West and other celebrities. Play this one at any price. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds. Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Universal

HARLEM BOUND: Mentone Musical Comedy (No. 4)—Floor show at Harlem's Kit Kat Klub, featuring Norman Astwood as master-of-ceremonies, with skits by "Buck and Bubbles," "Cook and Brown," sister Avis Astwood, and the Cotton Club Chorus. The highlight is the shuffling dance mania known as "Truckin'." Just an average picture. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

UNIVERSAL SHORTS: On the average I find Universal shorts to be fairly good, especially the Oswalds and Mentones.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BOOM! BOOM!: Looney Tunes Series—A good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DAY'S JOURNEY, A: Our Own United States Series—A very ordinary travel filler. Will get by—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Phil Harris, Leah Ray—An excellent miniature musical comedy in which Phil Harris bas a chance to render a couple of popular numbers in that bullfrog bass voice of his while carrying out the plot. Latter has to do with prize fighters, kidnappers, etc. Best shot: two colored boys burlesqing an impromptu sparing match. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAPERS: Looney Tunes—A so-so cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

OKAY, JOSE: El Brendel—Beautiful color and some good dancing. Seemed to please most of my patrons. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROOFTOPS OF MANHATTAN: Deane Janis, Gil Lamb—A very good Broadway Brevity that pleased. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE BILLBOARD: Jane and Katherine Lee—Some clever vaudeville acts in a fine reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VITAPHONE SHORTS: Couldn't get along without their band acts, balance of the shorts are fairly good but think they are working some of their two-reel musicals too much, not the quality they used to be.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatre, La Crosse, Kansas. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE TROUPERS: Four Trojans, Aunt Jemima—A very pleasing single reel. This series is all good. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Serials

Mascot

MIRACLE RIDER: Tom Mix—Just finished the last chapter of this serial and it pleased. Tom Mix and Tony are the whole show, but then they don't need any help to give a good performance. A better than usual serial.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

TAILSPIN TOMMY IN THE GREAT AIR MYSTERY: Clark Williams, Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers—Well, this thing is finally ended and what a relief. We have good luck with good serials, but poor ones such as this keep 'em away.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

Aguilar Spanish Head

N. L. Manheim, export manager of Universal Pictures, has named E. Aguilar as manager in Spain, with headquarters in Barcelona. Mr. Aguilar was formerly assistant to Siegwart Kusiel until the latter was appointed general manager of Universal's European distribution.

Seventh CCC Film Circuit

Another circuit of CCC camps has been formed in New York State to show regular weekly motion picture programs composed of a feature and two shorts, bringing the total number of such circuits in the state to seven and the total number of camps being served as 56.

Polish Agency in Spain

Distribution in Spain of Polish films will be made through the newly organized "Varsovia Films," with headquarters at Valencia, according to Miles Hammond, assistant trade commissioner in Madrid.

600-Meter Reels in Germany

The president of the film chamber in Berlin has decreed that beginning July 15 all theatres must use 600-meter reels.

Intermountain Expands

Intermountain Theatres, Inc., Salt Lake City, has entered the Montana field with the taking over of two houses.

Dear Herald:

Spring, spring, the beautiful spring,
It makes us all happy and makes us all sing,
It drives away winter and melts away snow
And everyone's happy wherever we go.
The birds in the trees with their music will bring
A reminder to us of this beautiful spring.

Yes, sir, Abner, spring is here. That is, we hope it is. The warm sunshine has run the mercury up to 60 above and the fleas are chasing one another up our back in a playful manner, which is further assurance that Old Man Winter has gone up to visit the Eskimos.

The snow is just about all gone, but the roads. Oh, gosh! the roads. The bridges are out in a lot of places and the mudholes are as deep and muddy as they are down in the Everglades, but fortunately we don't have any crocodiles, but we still have crooners. Spring makes us feel so good that we are going to invite you all to a duck dinner—"you bring the ducks."

We have just received a letter from an old friend of ours enclosing his check and asking us to have his subscription to the HERALD extended for him. It's from William Fresie, manager of the Coppelberg circuit of theatres in La Crosse, Wisconsin.

We never think of La Crosse without thinking of Mr. and Mrs. Fresie and the wonderful time we had with them and the very delightful dinner we had at their home. And when we think of them we are also reminded of the time that they both cleaned us up on the La Crosse golf course.

And boy, did they clean us? They didn't have any more mercy on us than Andy had on J. Montgomery Guindell when he kicked him out of the grocery store, but we are overlooking all that because they live in Wisconsin.

Every once in a while we see something that makes an impression on us that sticks. We played a picture once away back before sound came along and we expect to remember it as long as we live. It was a picture called "'Jes Call Me Jim," in which Will Rogers and Irene Rich played. The chances are that but few people, if any, still remember it. Then later on we played Pauline Frederick in "Madam X" and one fellow in our town measured all other pictures for years by "Madam X." If they didn't come up to "Madam X" they didn't meet with his approval.

Tonight we went to the Moon theatre and saw "King of Burlesque" with Warner Baxter, Alice Faye and Jack Oakie. Alice Faye was good, of course she was, just as she always is, but we will remember the excellent acting of Warner Baxter along with "'Jes Call Me Jim" for many seasons. Jack Oakie did the comedy stuff in mighty fine shape, and take it all in all, we'd pronounce it a very good production, but not the biggest picture by quite a little, but a pleasing one, and it is our opinion that any audience will feel satisfied with it. When they think they can beat Warner Baxter they are barking up the wrong sapling, that's all.

When you read the reports in the newspapers nowadays you can make up your own minds whether they are going to have war or not, and one man's guess is as good as another's. One article tells us that they are rattling their sabers with one hand and polishing up their squirrel rifles with the other, and the next article tells us that they are waving the olive branch while they are building a perch for the dove of peace to roost on. What we'd like to know is, in case they do get into war over there, just which country we will decide to fight for to "make the world safe for democracy."

Our position reminds us a whole lot of when we were a boy at a school meeting. There was a young Irishman there and when they all got into a general fight the Irishman pulled off his coat and rolled up his sleeves and said, "Gentlemen, I am a stranger here but just pass me out a man."

We need not fear that there will be war, for the League of Nations will take care of that. After Japan gets all of China she wants and after Italy carves the Ethiopian turkey the League will settle everything, except the debts.

Guy Williams, in his column, writes a letter to his friend Joe. He calls Joe's attention to the time they were in the trenches in the World War and says they are used to trenches now for they have been in a rut in this country for a long time. He also calls Joe's attention to "Fifi and her blonde friend," and he winds up by asking him, "Say, Joe, as you figure it, how old would Fifi and her friend be now if they were telling us the truth then?"

Yes, sir, fighting in the trenches in Paris is about as dangerous as pulling the cork out of a champagne bottle. We would appear about as sensible going into a war over in Europe as a sow going to Sunday School in a Tuxedo.

A report says that snow falls only on one-third of the earth. That's probably so; we got all of it.

The "Pathfinder" says a culprit was brought into court and the examining attorney asked him to state his name, and he said "Pzhylincstoski Jylotty," and the court said, "Will the defendant stop making funny noises and give his name?".

Here is a bit of news for you boys. Well, it may not be news to a lot of you, but those of you who have not already done so had better get Jane Withers in "Paddy O'Day" and give your folks a very satisfying show. Jane Withers is just the kind of a girl we'd like to have call us Grandady. The facts are that we'd like to buy her a dolly for Christmas and a lollypop every day. Our judgment is that this picture will please the fathers and mothers of the land and everybody else except possibly those who run more to poodle dogs than children.

This picture probably won't be listed as one of the 10 best of the year, but that may be because the critics don't have any children of their own. If they will leave it to the mothers of the country we will betcha that it will get more than "honorable mention." It's a picture the producers can be proud of; but then, maybe we don't know a good picture, since we have never seen very many.

A report in the paper says that the county attorney of Lancaster county, Nebraska, has applied for a court order restraining the theatres of Lincoln from showing Mae West in "Klondike Annie." Lincoln always was kinda funny that way. If they will team Mae up in a vaudeville act with Aime Semple McPherson we'll betcha it will draw the spotlight position on every vaudeville show in the land.

We hear a whole lot nowadays about "boondoggling," but maybe some of you boys don't know what boondoggling is. You know what bulldogging a steer is. It is when a cowboy ropes a steer. He grabs him by the nose and twists his head and throws him down, but boondoggling is when they grab the taxpayer by the nose and twists it, and give him a kick in the pants.

Whenever you get right up against a stone wall and haven't a doggone thing to say, the best thing to do is to not say it.

We heard a speaker apologize to his audience once for not having anything to say, and after the speech, the audience wanted to apologize to someone for going to hear him.

About all we can do is to think of the boys we have called on over the country and hope we can call on them again, and that gives us a lot of pleasure, for—

We'd like to call upon the boys
In Washington and Illinois,
Also those boys in Idaho
And those down in New Mexico.

But we can't go to every state
Because the distance is too great,
And we can't jump the pools and bumps
For April Shower has got the mumps.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 15.—(A) Explain the construction and operation of a magnetic loud speaker. (B) What is a push-pull amplification? (C) Should rheostats be located in the projection room. Explain your answer.

Answer to Question No. 10

Bluebook School Question No. 10 was: (A) In calculating the resistance of projection circuits, what various things must be considered? (B) When the positive carbon of a high intensity arc fails to feed forward, what is wrong? (C) Name one source of negative electrons and negatrons. (D) What is the effect of an over-size positive carbon?

The following made sufficiently correct replies to entitle them to credit: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; D. Danielson; B. Devietti; H. Edwards; R. H. Hooker; W. C. Brown; M. and J. Devoy; J. J. Cuddy, E. H. Toedte, A. L. Cooper; J. R. Prater; W. Limmroth; C. L. Loft; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleigh; K. and R. Wells; G. N. Guidotti, F. L. and N. Savlor; R. Tompkins and H. K. Abernathy; F. H. and L. Klar and T. H. Morton; M. R. Williams; H. D. Lilly; B. L. George J. O'Brien; P. and L. Felt; S. E. and C. Gay; N. J. Perkins and R. Mills; G. J. Long; F. Simms and O. L. Daris; C. Hawkens; R. F. Swift; T. L. and G. Daniels; T. H. E. Ricman; L. R. Spooner and G. Johnson; W. H. Edmonds; B. Davis and A. L. Sanderson; T. J. McGuire and A. L. Long; S. G. Sanders and G. Sargent; H. Spencer and W. Jones; D. Pollock; B. I. Jennings and T. C. Callahan; N. E. Olliver and D. McGee; D. L. Hunt; H. C. Larson and B. L. Mathew; G. K. Bruice; H. B. Hornstein; D. Anderson and B. H. Thaller; W. L. Simmons; N. F. Fanchette and S. Myers; T. L. Graybar; W. Bollinghause.

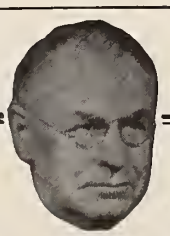
D. Danielson says, "In calculating resistance of a projection circuit, the following must be considered: (1) Arc amperage. (2) Supply voltage. (3) Arc voltage. (4) Type of arc. (5) Type of current."

J. J. Cuddy says, "In calculating resistance of a projection circuit, aside from the resistance offered by the rheostat, or whatever apparatus is employed to regulate current and voltage, there must also be considered the resistance offered by the light source itself; also that offered by wires, switches, carbons and other current-carrying elements. However, usually the resistance of everything except the current controlling device and the light source itself is disregarded in calculating resistance of the circuit, provided, of course, those other elements all be in good condition and not overloaded."

(B) A. L. Cooper says, "When the positive carbon of a H. I. arc fails to feed forward, it usually can be traced to rough, pitted current carrying contacts. Sometimes, though not often, the fault may lie in the feeding mechanism, the parts of which must contact the carbon with sufficient pressure to insure movement of the carbon. In other words, the tension must be enough to effect movement when the parts are in good condition. Too much pressure is bad, however, as it causes unduly rapid wear of the parts and may cause a roughening of the carbon surface, thus not only weakening the effect of the feed, but also reducing contact with the current supplying contact. It also may and not infrequently does cause sticking."

J. R. Prater says, "When a H. I. are positive carbon refuses to feed forward the trouble usually is due to rough, pitted, dirty current carrying contact blocks. Other possible but less likely causes of such trouble are excessive contact block pressure and incorrect feed roller tension."

(C) C. L. Loft says, "Dry batteries such as are used in flash lights; also the B and C batteries, such as are used in sound systems, are source of electrons and negatrons."



H. Toedte replies, "Batteries or dry cells are sources of electrons and negatrons."

C. Rau and S. Evans reply, "One source of electrons and negatrons is the dry cell that is employed in so many different ways as a source of electric power. Such cells have two elements, namely zinc and carbon. Its electrolyte is a damp paste of ground coke and manganese dioxide mixed with sal-ammoniac (ammonium cloride). The negatrons are obtained from the zinc and are passed out into the external circuit as the current."

Barney DeVietti says, "The question as stated is, I believe, rather catchy, because of the fact that 'negative electrons and negatrons' are, save for the name, the same thing, hence the question, because of the and, instead of an or, might be taken to refer to two things instead of just one. As to whether or not the question was intentionally worded as it was, I cannot of course say, but I believe my reasoning is correct. . . . Answering the question, one source of negative electrons or negatrons is the common dry battery cell."

(D) R. A. Hooker answers, "Carbon diameter has much to do with resultant illumination. Carbon diameters are worked out for different currents and should be kept just as nearly as possible to those limits. A too-large positive will cause unsteady light, flicker and reduction of illumination."

D. Danielson says, "The effect of an oversize positive carbon are unsteadiness of the arc; and since the illumination is derived wholly from the thin incandescent crater floor, there will be a much larger body of relatively cool carbon. It then follows that the extremely thin layer of incandescent carbon on the crater floor will not rise to such high temperature as would be the case were there a smaller body of cooler carbon back of it, hence there must and will be a lowering of the value of the light given off. The effect viewed as a whole is to cool the crater floor, thus not only lowering the illumination power, but also changing the color of the light."

Petition Hits Double Bills

Petitions for the discontinuance of double features in theatres in North Platt, Neb., are being circulated this week.

EXHIBITOR SUBJECT TO PAYROLL TAX, SAYS U.S.

Employers Held Liable Regardless of Whether State Has Unemployment Insurance Law

United States Government regulations, enacted last year, which will make thousands of exhibitors throughout the country subject to payroll taxes under the unemployment compensation provisions of the social security act, have been issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, together with a warning that employers are liable for the tax regardless of whether the state in which they are located has an unemployment insurance law.

Under the formula for determination of employment, effective as from January 1, last, every person who employs eight or more individuals on a total of 20 or more calendar days during a calendar year, each such day being in a different calendar week, is subject to the tax. This will involve theatres, exchanges, producers and other theatrical businesses employing eight or more.

The weeks in each of which occurs a day on which eight or more persons are employed need not be consecutive, nor is it necessary that the individuals so employed be the same individuals nor that they be employed at the same moment of time or for any particular length of time or on any particular basis of compensation.

Under these provisions, an exhibitor who normally operates his house with a manager, ticket seller, ticket taker, janitor, an operator and a single usher would be subject to tax if, on Saturdays or Sundays, he employed two additional ushers, even for a single hour, under a provision that "it is sufficient if the total number of individuals employed during the 24 hours of a calendar day is eight or more, regardless of the period of service during that day or the basis of compensation."

Under the regulations, an "employe" is a person "subject to the will and control of the employer not only as to what shall be done but how it shall be done," but "it is not necessary that the employer actually direct or control the manner in which the services are performed; it is sufficient if he has the right to do so."

Title of position is immaterial, it was ruled; an officer of a corporation is an employee, but a director, as such, is not, although the latter becomes an employ if he performs services for the corporation other than those incident to participation in meetings of the board of directors.

Basis of Tax

The basis of the tax is the total amount of wages payable by an employer with respect to employment during the calendar year, regardless of the time of actual payment. The term "wages" means "all remuneration for employment, whether payable in money or something other than money and the name by which such remuneration is designated is not material." The tax on wages payable for the current year will be one per cent; for 1937, two per cent, and for subsequent years, three per cent. Returns for 1936 must be filed by January 31, 1937, accompanied by the full tax or by 25 per cent thereof, with the remainder to be paid in three equal instalments at three-month intervals.

With respect to credits for payments to state insurance funds, the regulations provide that "the taxpayer may credit against the tax the total amount of contributions, with respect to employment during the taxable year, paid by him into an unemployment fund under the laws of any state, provided the Social Security Board has found such laws to contain the provisions specified in Section 903 (a) of the social security act and has for the taxable year so certified to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Credit Limitations

"The allowance of contributions as credit against the tax is subject to the following limitations: (1) The total credit shall not in any case exceed 90 per cent of the tax against which it is applied; (2) the contributions must have been actually paid into the state unemployment fund before the date on which the return for the calendar year is required to be filed, that is, on or before January 31 next following the close of the calendar year unless the time for filing is extended; (3) the contributions must have been paid with respect to services performed by an employe within the United States and not excepted from the term 'employment' by the act; and (4) the contributions must have been paid with respect to services performed during the calendar year covered by the return."

Protection of government revenues from any loss through court invalidation of any state law is secured through a provision that "if, after the return is filed, a refund is made by a state to the taxpayer of any part of his contributions credited against the tax, the taxpayer is required to advise the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under oath, of the date and amount of the refund and the reason therefor, and to pay any tax due as a result of the refund, together with interest from the date the tax was due."

Bateman Joins Republic

Francis Bateman, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales department, has been made Los Angeles branch manager of Republic Pictures to succeed Howard Stubbins, recently resigned. Mr. Bateman will take up his new post April 6th.

Small Opens Offices

William Small has opened the Theatre Advisory Exchange, Inc., in New York as an advisory service specializing in the financing, construction and reconditioning of theatres.

Columbia Keeps Dix

Columbia Pictures has signed Richard Dix to a long-term contract. The actor is currently working in the company's production, "Devil's Squadron."

FROM READERS

URGES SELLING OF FILM BY TRAILER

To the Editor of the Herald:

If Metro trailers would sell their pictures better and eliminate trying to sell Leo several times in each prevue, we'd get more people into our theatres. Following Metro's sorry trailer and sorry feature, "The Bishop Misbehaves," with Warners' excellent trailer and entertaining feature, "The Widow from Monte Carlo," makes an exhibitor praise the latter company's product, possibly a little exaggeratedly. Metro's method of exploiting Leo reminds me of Universal's method several years ago of exploiting the Laemmles at the beginning of all their features, thusly: "Presented by Carl Laemmle and produced by Carl Laemmle, Jr." Why waste time and confuse the minds of our audiences with trade marks and the names of producers, directors, cameramen, designers, etc.

"It Happened One Night" and "Imitation of Life" were types of product that entertained and pulled but there isn't one customer in a thousand that can tell who produced them and they don't care. Trade marks didn't sell them either.—D. B. White, Ritz Theatre, Fernandina, Fla.

HERE'S COMMENDATION FOR EXCHANGE'S WORK

To the Editor of the Herald:

Too often—perhaps because it is human nature to do so—we hear and read criticisms of the various producers and their exchanges.

Therefore, I want to go on record to the effect that I consider the RKO Exchange at Salt Lake City as deserving of a bonus from the parent organization. I have dealings with eight exchanges, but, with no mental reservations of any kind, I unqualifiedly pick RKO as the best exchange in Salt Lake City. Our dealings have been well-nigh perfect! They have always been fair, reasonable and equitable. Every courtesy has been extended. Bookings have been made promptly and to my entire satisfaction. No reasonable request has ever been refused. In these days of much bickering and complaints I want to raise my voice and say that the Salt Lake City exchange of the RKO Distributing Corporation is a distinct credit to the industry in general, RKO in particular and more particularly to Tom Walsh, the manager.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatres, Absarokee, Mont.

CAN'T RUN HIS THEATRE WITHOUT "ASIDES" COPY

To the Editor of the Herald:

Now what the hell has happened?

We can't run a theatre without this Asides and Interludes page by James Cunningham and we notice that the issues of March 7 and March 14 neither had this page. The writer writes a column about three times weekly for different newspapers and we have to depend on other brains for ideas and a lot of them came out of this page.

What say?—Hugh Gardner, Manager, Neosho's Orpheum Theatre, Neosho, Mo.

ALLIED MEMBERS PLAN CHICAGO BOOKING UNIT

Saperstein Assists But Says the Movement Is Not Official Step of Illinois Association

by BILL CROUCH
in Chicago

Members of Allied Theatres of Illinois are investigating the possibilities of organizing a buying circuit to reduce film rentals. The enterprise has not taken the form of a general Illinois Allied movement, according to Aaron Saperstein, president, but the plan, if worked out, may be adopted by the group. Various Allied members on several occasions have started the circuit buying idea, only to be checked by the distributors opposing the idea.

Success attributed to the buying circuit in Detroit has been an incentive to the local exhibitors, who seek a plan strong enough to withstand heavy fire from the distributors.

With at least 75 theatres in a buying combine the independent exhibitors could bring as much power to bear upon the distributors as the present circuit groups, possibly more.

Mr. Saperstein said he would act in an advisory capacity, but would not enter the movement as a activity of Allied.

En route to the Coast for conferences with studio executives, John E. Otterson, Paramount chief, said all studio activities would be under the supervision of William Le Baron, Coast studio production head.

Deals for other producers to join the Paramount forces, since the departure of Walter Wanger and the decision of Winfield Sheehan not to join the Paramount group, were being considered, he said, but no such deals would be signed for several months at least as the present schedule could be well taken care of by those now with the company.

Plans for forthcoming pictures are the brightest in many months, according to Mr. Otterson, who stopped over at the Blackstone between trains.

Sam Sperling, harmonica player from Brooklyn, was rushed here direct from the Major Bowes Amateur Hour, to appear at the Oriental theatre. Members of Bowes Unit No. 1 appeared over WMAQ in a special broadcast Monday morning. They did not perform during the broadcast as this is against the terms of their contracts.

Eddie Phelps, salesman for RKO, has resigned to take over the management of the Garden theatre in Canton. He recently purchased an interest in this house, which is owned jointly by Charles House and A. L. Hainline. The theatre will be opened on Easter Sunday.

Following his announcement that he will open the Temple Auditorium theatre in Elgin, Ill., on Easter Sunday, Tom Norman revealed that he had completed a deal for the Armory Auditorium in Kewanee, Ill., and will open that house about May 1.

The Armory will be redecorated and equipped with DeVry sound equipment. It seats more than 2,000 and will be called the Auditorium theatre.

In a special deal with United Artists the theatre will play that product first-run and will be called the "Home of United Artists Pictures."

Miss Emma Abplanalp, secretary of the Film Board of Trade, was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs at Assembly Hall, last Friday. Miss Abplanalp spoke about block-booking and censorship.

Miss Abplanalp said an inquiry showed that the majority of women who wired their Congressmen to vote for the Pettengill bill were not cognizant of the meaning of block-booking. She also told of local censorship problems which oft times delays the release of pictures locally because of severe cuts and violations in local censor rules.

The Essaness circuit has bought the Charles Chaplin picture "Modern Times" for showing in its houses. A feature of this deal was the granting by UA of an extra week's clearance between first and second week of release. B & K, which is also planning to show the picture, has an extra week of clearance between "C" week and the first week of release. So far Allied and other independent theatres have not purchased the Chaplin film.

Held over for a third week at the Apollo, "The Story of Louis Pasteur" has made a record with its big business in this Loop house. Partly responsible is the number of high school students that have attended the opening show in the morning. Last week close to 6,000 students viewed the picture as a part of their class assignments.

One morning when the Marshall High group of 1,400 students appeared at the theatre for the first show the police riot squads had to be called out to handle the traffic snarl.

Arraignment of four men who are accused of defrauding theatres out of "Sweepstakes" awards was scheduled for this week. The four—Ladislov Babka, Stanley Wejda, Max Weiner and George Burdick—confessed to having worked their scheme in numerous Chicago theatres, police said.

A small numbering device was used on blank tickets as the drawings were being held in the theatre and the fake ticket presented just before the time limit was up, provided no one else had made a claim for the money. The manager of the Sheridan theatre noticed the difference in the type numbers and the men were apprehended when they went to the Essaness offices to collect the award.

Washington Preview Set

A special showing of the Alexander Korda production of H. G. Wells' "Things to Come" will be held at the Wardman Park hotel, Washington, April 7th. Among those expected to attend are Justices of the Supreme Court, ambassadors and members of foreign legations, members of the cabinet, congressmen, the District Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Halpin Confers with Andrews

Dan D. Halpin, general sales manager of Acousticon Products Company, Inc., flew to the San Francisco and Los Angeles offices of his company last Saturday on a two-weeks business trip. At Los Angeles, Mr. Halpin will meet A. M. Andrews, president of Platinum Products Company and chairman of the board of Dictograph Products Company, for conferences.

Sax Holds Lucas Band

Sam Sax, production chief of Brooklyn's Vitaphone Studio, again has signed Clyde Lucas and his band, featuring Lyn Lucas and the Symphonettes, for another Vitaphone short. Mr. Sax also has signed Clyde McCoy, who has been appearing on the Eddie Cantor radio program, to make a short called "Sugar Blues."

Newsreels Are Discussed

A talk on newsreel assignments and makeup was given last Tuesday night at the Hudson Guild Neighborhood House in New York by Vyvyan Donner, Fox-Movietone News fashionist. The talk was followed by the screening of a newsreel compiled from shots directed by Miss Donner.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

MAKING IT MORE PALATABLE

Production of features that entertain while they inform is helping to lessen the force of the old accusation that education in many secondary schools is crammed down the unwilling gullets of hapless students. And while the screen is belabored from all sides by overzealous and volunteer crusaders, it is no overnight discovery to learn that Hollywood is putting out boxoffice attractions credited also with making more palatable frequently unappetizing dishes of educational routine.

Pedagogues have come to see the advantages to their charges of cooperation with theatremen and among the many instances reported is the most recent, a newspaper account forwarded by Round Tabler Art Abelson, of Glasgow, Montana. Says his local paper:

"Moving pictures are a required course for some pupils in the Glasgow junior-senior high school and probably one to which they will not object. . . . Pupils in the seventh and eighth grade science classes have all been asked to attend 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' now showing at the Roxy. They will be given a test later on the picture."

Theatremen who participate in this wise, with sincerity and good judgment, in fashioning appropriate bookings to the requirements of community education systems are playing no insignificant part in the adequate schooling of the rising generation.

"BELIEVE IT OR ——"

'Twas in Johnston City, Illinois, of a winter's morning during the coldest of cold spells when the rural quiet of the early dawn was broken by a fleet of autos speeding to the Palace Theatre. From five to six a.m., the cars had from city and surrounding areas transported high and grade school teachers from their homes to the theatre where before the sun rose, Manager Eddie Clark put on a special prevue of MGM's "Tale of Two Cities." Sixty-four local educators left warm beds to take part in this unique event followed by breakfast in the foyer after which the guests were carried to their respective schools. "The Superintendent of Schools requested each teacher to advise pupils to see the picture," writes Clark.

His account of this audacious and most telling showmanship is without cavil to be listed prominently among Mr. Ripley's "believe-it-or-nots." And that so many serious-minded and importantly placed citizens enthusiastically made it possible also earns for Clark a high meed of praise for his ingenious endeavors.

TO BE HANDLED WITH CARE

The frequent use of the "Why I think—" contest angle by advertisers has no doubt brought results for many sponsors in different fields. And there is no reason why handled with care, the slant should not do as well for the theatre.

However, an instance of the "why" idea used recently by a Round Tabler to plug a coming date invites an opinion that the query propounded possesses potentialities for backfiring.

The manager tied in with his paper on a contest, the query to be answered being: "Why I think that 'Blank' is the best picture of 1935?" Hundreds of answers were received and to all intents and purposes the exploitation was successful in helping that particular attraction.

Well and good for that—but isn't it a bit dangerous for a manager to personally stamp one picture out of many with the designation of "best" when there are other features of equal strength to be sold right along?

The State of New York to aid dairy farmers within its borders is encouraging the consumption of more milk with a spirited newspaper campaign. If the demand has jumped suddenly in the past few weeks, some of the credit by all means should go to the bang-up exploitation campaigns devised by Paramount and executed by many managers on "Milky Way."

ANOTHER HELPFUL TIEIN

In actual figures it is difficult to compute just how many accidents their cooperation is preventing but undoubtedly the participation of showmen in the "careful driving" campaigns now current in many spots is doing more than a little to cut down the damage.

The plan adopted is about the same in most cases. Traffic officers in the course of their duties select passing motorists who exercise great care in driving and those so honored are given theatre tickets donated for the good of the cause.

The return in publicity and prestige makes such cooperations very inviting. Managers should be ever alert to aid their theatres by tieing in with these local movements.

Plenty of Good Ol' Milk Up in That Saskatchewan

Between local dairy products distributors and government milk control board, Walter Davis, at the Capitol, Regina, Canada, up in the Saskatchewan country, sold a lot of attention on "Milky Way." Animated motor driven model of cow as used by the Board at exhibitions and fairs was borrowed by Davis and used for display, with stalls, straw, milk can, etc., for atmosphere. Milk companies built elaborate foyer flash, with seven-foot milk bottle (see photo) as centerpiece, and sent over chocolate milk for free distribution at Saturday show. Walt got some extra giggles with the old time box illusion stunt of showing a man's head only with caption "he laughed his head off at Harold Lloyd."

Careful Driver Tieup Planted by Botwick

Harry Botwick, State Theatre, Portland, Maine, cooperated with police department and newspapers on safety campaign. Cards were printed and given to policemen and on an average of 12 a day were distributed to motorists who performed an outstanding act of careful driving. These were exchanged at the boxoffice for admissions.

Copy on cards read "It is my duty as an officer to safeguard lives and property of others. You, by your careful driving, have assisted me in my work. In appreciation of your assistance, I have been authorized to give you this token donated through the courtesy of the State Theatre in Portland."

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

It's Leap Year, Says Lou Smith

Back in harness after a spell of illness, Lou Smith, now managing the Ritz, in the Bronx section of New York, has all the local gals in a dither with his Leap Year Night stunt put on the four Thursdays in March. Lou advertises (and in poetry, too) that between the hours of seven and eight on these nights, every woman attending with male escort is entitled to free admission for the boy friend.

To encourage the neighborhood youngsters to attend showings of the Frank Merriwell serial each Saturday, Lou distributes numbered cards and posts 25 of the numbers in the lobby. Winners see the next chapter on the house.

That Leap Year—

For "Brides Are Like That" at the New York Strand, the Warner-ites put on a Leap Year Matinee with free admission to wives who had become so on or after January first. Certificate, dated announcement card or newspaper clipping was to be presented as evidence.

Oklahomans Arrange "Movie Mardi Gras"

With the starting date set for April 12 to continue through May 15, a "Movie Mardi Gras" drive for spring and summer business has been set by Standard Theatres of Oklahoma City as reported by City Manager George Y. Henger.

Purpose of the Mardi Gras is to give the public a month of concentrated showmanship attractions and, secondly, to cash in on it, says Henger, and beat any possible summer slump to the punch.

For this purpose, a manual covering all angles has been put out for information of participating managers and among the slants approved by General Manager Pat McGee are the following:

During the period, smoking will be permitted during a certain hour when a special newsreel show will be held.

Efforts will be made to have Dick Powell or other available star interviewed via phone on a certain evening by Manager Milton Slosser, interview to be relayed into the local Criterion.

Bathing beauty tieup previously planted is well under way with further details forthcoming as it works out.

Arrangements are now being made to obtain prints of some of the old hit features to open the shows on certain days at the de luxe houses.

Stage Wedding Contemplated

A stage wedding not attempted locally for some years is under consideration for the circuit's Midwest Theatre.

Special cards will be issued to employees of downtown stores extending privileges of matinee prices from six until seven during the drive only.

Other slants include possible crowning of a May Queen on stage of one of the theatres, and also considered is a big parade as the opening wedge for publicity.

Henger is going to keep in touch with additional dope as the drive proceeds and his reports will be relayed to the members as they arrive.

KNOW PICTURE NAME AND RECEIVE PASS

First time he pulled the gag, the ratio of folks who did not know to those who did, was 10 to one, but now it's less than three to one, says Manager Leon Back, of the Broadway, Baltimore. It goes like this:

Usher works surrounding streets and coming on groups of three or more asks if anyone knows name of picture current at the Broadway. Those who know are given a single pass. If there are none with the right answer, usher then hands each of the group program with all details.

Back has been using this for the past month with results good enough to encourage him to pass it along.

Governor Proclaims "Sutter's Gold Week"

Much excitement on the occasion last week of the world premiere for Universal's "Sutter's Gold" at the Alhambra, Sacramento, Cal., on campaign conducted by George Knowles, Charles Holtz and Ben Westland.

Top feature was proclamation from Governor Merriam setting aside the opening week as "Gold Week" throughout the state. Proclamation included mention of picture with strong buildup for the premiere, copy stating "it is appropriate we give official recognition to this event." The Governor and other celebrities attended the opening and Mrs. Merriam wore a gown and wrap designed in the new Sutter's Gold color, latest shade for spring.

Special trains were run from Los Angeles and cities in that region, and an additional inducer was a $10 all-expense trip put on by Southern Pacific from San Francisco. Included were hotel accommodations, meals, reserved seat at premiere and admission to ball that followed.

Train was met by many locals attired in '49 costumes, reception filmed by the news services and climaxed by parade from station. Stage coaches and old-time wagons were used to haul picture names and others in the party.

Among other highlights many stores were tied in, prominent shots showing antique furniture (see photo) in vogue during period of picture.

Bakery Tiein Produces Weekly Story Herald

Tieup with bakery in Lincoln, Neb., has produced a new herald idea originated by John Echols, Lincoln Theatres' publicity head, reports ad manager Pat Patchen. Each week complete cartoon strips and story captions on coming attraction are included in one spread called the Gold Cup Bread Story Hour with title of picture, theatre and date alongside.

Size of herald runs about 25 inches by 22, imprinted on one side and with three-way fold. Bakery pays all costs and distributes, theatre furnishing only the mats obtainable from exchanges.

On "Trail of the Lonsome Pine," Echols distributed pine chips in imprinted glassine bags for date at the Stuart. Cost was taken care of by merchant's ad below theatre copy.

North Bay Celebrates "Country Doctor" Date

The home of the famed Dionne Quints is but a half hour's ride from North Bay, Ontario, where Jack Nelson skippers the Capitol. And as to be expected, Nelson did a bang-up job to exploit "Country Doctor," his most important shot being a 20-page five-star supplement to his leading paper in which were represented 90 per cent of all local merchants.

Stories, pictures, feature articles, interviews, were included in this excellent publicity barrage with Jack credited for the unusual splash. Additionally, paper ran editorial in news section endorsing picture.

Gurnette Now Names 'Em After the Dionne Quins

Naming the baby after picture titles and stars has gotten to be quite a thing what with the flock of gifts theatremen are offering on tieups. First 'twas "Rose Marie" and now it's "Country Doctor," with Manager Barney Gurnette, Santa Cruz, Cal., right in line.

Barney tied in with local sheet and merchants for the usual giveaways to the first baby born between midnight of March 15 and midnight of April 14 and named after one of the Dionne Quins. Gifts, of course, were all promoted and announced in full page co-op.

Short Gets Smash Ad

On MGM'S "How to Sleep" short, now current, Macy's, in New York, tied in with full page lacking one column ad to plug store's sleep shop. Frames from the short were used in a series of 12 cuts, each with copy below plugging various merchandise with picture fully credited.

Promotes Coffee For "Hobo" Shelter

Free coffee but not in the lobby was served by Manager Howard Ralston, Warners' Ritz, San Bernardino, Cal., on "Mr. Hobo." Beverage, promoted, was offered to patrons from a specially constructed shelter (see photo) with boy dressed al la hobo, doing the honors.

On "Colleen," Ralston got him a lot of sample gum sticks from the Adams people, printed up a lot of folders with picture copy to which the chickle was pasted and passed these out as a plug for the picture.

Nutting Gets Co-Op 'Cook' Ad

Floyd Nutting, Paramount, Grand Forks, N. D., secured a quarter page co-op ad from leading furniture store on "If You Could Only Cook," ad featuring refrigerators and carrying cut of stars. Imprinted recipe books were distributed at all local General Electric stores and windows given over to displays.

"Top Hat" Ball Put On By Crasto in Calcutta

Tying in with management of leading dance hall in Calcutta, India, Remi Crasto, RKO exploitation manager there arranged for a Top Hat Ball to bally that picture. Novelties in the form of top hats were distributed. Preceding the ball a dinner was held with each course named after songs, stars and producers of picture. Arrangements were made with Army and Navy stores to donate prizes to lucky diners.

Illuminated sign (see photo) with seven-foot letters was set up across main thoroughfare. Letters made of plywood and painted with luminous aluminum paint, floodlights were switched on at night. Window displays were arranged at music stores, men's haberdasher featured window of evening clothes with large photo of Astaire in full dress.

Elaborate Lobby Art Piece Sells "Mutiny" for Spencer

Accompanying photo shows large art display that was constructed for "Mutiny" by C. T. Spencer, Capitol, Hamilton, Ontario. Built in three separate panels, each contained shadow box and displayed a ship's model. Of especial interest was model of actual ship "Bounty" which was constructed on scale of half inch to a foot.

Built from plans secured in England, it took resident eight months to complete. Model had an overall length of eight inches fully rigged. In side panels, flanking the main display were models one of the Mayflower and the other the Columbus Santa Maria.

Paper Aids Rosenfeld On "Broadcast" Contest

To usher in his "Big Broadcast" opening at the Modjeska in Milwaukee, Wis., Joe Rosenfeld tied up local daily, whereby photos of seven stars in the picture with faces partially concealed were published. Prizes for proper identification were promoted and displayed in lobby, with tickets going to runnersup.

For "Thanks a Million" Joe secured bally record and got department store to play it on store p. a. system, in addition to distributing autographed photos of Dick Powell.

Proclaims "Times" Week For Nashville Date

Street ballys were the order of the day and used by J. Phelps at Loew's Vendome, Nashville, for "Modern Times." Impersonators pushed cart around town with signs reading "making a clean sweep for Charlie" and 11 boys, each carrying one letter of title, paraded, spelling out picture name as they strolled.

High school band led by Chaplin and Goddard impersonators followed 1902 and 1936 model bannered cars through streets. Mayor Howse proclaimed a "Modern Times" week, proclamation appearing on front page of papers. Life size standees of Chaplin were used in lobby, various window displays were secured and tabloids were distributed by life insurance company.

For "Rose Marie," Phelps planted girl dressed as Indian in lobby a week ahead, playing records from picture and distributing photos of Nelson Eddy. Tieup was also arranged with confectioner who presented box of candy to each fiftieth lady entering theatre every day during engagement. Modern office was set up in lobby with girl at desk calling patrons advising them of date.

Be a Brownette, Says Newkirk on "Riffraff"

For the "Riffraff" engagement at Loew's Granada, Cleveland, John Newkirk tied up with local beauty parlor to feature the new Harlow brownette hair. Merchant set up miniature beauty parlor in lobby (see photo) with offer to give gratis treatment to first six gals applying. A "believe it or not" is the fact that while Johnny says the stunt created plenty of comment there were no takers.

On "Exclusive Story," tieup was arranged with Cleveland press to put in a news flash bulletin board using news flashes from press and changing bulletins five times daily. Paper ran story with reproduction of board in their paper. Idea was originated by Carl Rogers, assistant, and followed through by Newkirk.

Contest Sells "Pink" For Jancke at Gem

In addition to his regular posting for "Strike Me Pink" at the Gem, Denver, Walt Jancke held a contest using six teaser ads and printing these on separate cards. Tying up leading newspaper, Walt received free space for ads as well as front-page readers. Cards were placed in merchants' stores and window cards announced that the merchant was cooperating on the contest.

Each card bore copy "deep thinkers won't be helped much by Eddie Cantor," etc., and cut of one of the Goldwyn girls. To each contestant presenting complete set of six different cards at the box-office, tickets were awarded.

Simons Uses Novel Bally To Sell "Modern Times"

Jack Simons up at the Poli in Hartford, Conn., put Chaplin mimic on streets for "Modern Times," man wearing necktie that changed colors, attracting much attention. Permission was received from superintendent of schools to allow teachers to distribute heralds in a coloring contest, heralds containing line drawing of the star. Passes were given for most effective coloring.

In his lobby Simons used large cutout illuminated letters and displays of Chaplin and Goddard, chief attraction-getter being gag of ring passing around cigar suspended in midair. Passes were given to customers guessing mechanics of the trick, which Jack will be glad to explain to inquiring members. Special broadcast was arranged to interview five children at the show who had never seen a Chaplin picture.

Hear Yourself as Others Hear You

Mighty effective tieup was that arranged by Manager Ev Steinbuch and Milt Harris, publicist at Loew's State, Cleveland, on "Wife Versus Secretary" with local dictaphone agency. Office equipment with machine and gal stationed at desk was placed in lobby (see photo), card invited patrons to speak into dictaphone and then listen to the recording. Stunt created comment, sez Ev, and why not?

BOSTON FOUND THIRD IN OPEN THEATRES

Cooperative Papers and Ad-Minded Merchants Stimulate Hub City Showbusiness

by BRAD ANGIER
Boston Correspondent

Boston, second stop in the Round Table countrywide showman's travelog ranks high in Club membership with many managers from that sector contributing regularly to these pages. The what's what and how herewith detailed endeavors to give the lowdown on theatre operations in the New England metropolis similar to that set forth last week on San Francisco.

Other key spots are to be covered in succeeding issues of the Round Table department. —A-MIKE

Boston is regarded as one of the best show towns in the country in so far as motion pictures are concerned. Its seven first-run situations, for instance, usually have a total weekly gross that ranks third nationally in size. Nor is this any result of a dearth of houses in the vicinity. New England, with an increase of 8.51 per cent in the number of spots now operating as opposed to those in lights a year ago, holds third place countrywide in total capacity of open theatres after New York and Chicago.

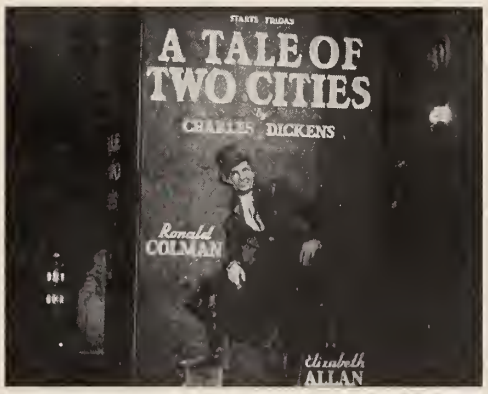
The Hub, although it has relinquished much of its ocean business to New York, is still one of the most important ports on the eastern seaboard. It is a manufacturing city. It was here, in 1636, that the first college in this country was established. On that occasion, Harvard beat Yale by 65 years. Boston is still an educational and cultural center, although some dispute this last.

The regular population, including drawing area, is estimated at roughly two million people. Irish predominate the heterogeneous racial group. Italians and Jews are present in large numbers. There is a large negro section in the South End. The city is predominantly Catholic. Theatres are aided appreciably by the fact that Boston, the business center of New England, is a convention city.

Railroad Sells One-Cent Returns

Most parts of the city and its adjoining suburbs may be reached for 10 cents by means of a network of subway, streetcar, and bus conveyances which is subsidized. The service becomes very slow after one o'clock, however, many lines running only once an hour. Train service, moreover, is dead for the night in most cases by 11:40 P. M. These conditions thin out crowds for last shows. Except for a few so-called private clubs which run behind locked doors until early morning hours, Boston offers little in the way of night life. It's one of the last stands of the sandman.

The action of the Boston and Maine Railroad in selling one-cent return tickets is an incentive for many New Englanders to attend the local theatres, usually in combination with a shopping tour. Stage shows, rather than films, are apt to be the draws in such instances.



The parking situation is, in a word, terrific. All streets in the large central part of the city are closed to parking of more than half-hour duration until six P. M. Parking spaces charge an average of 35 cents. The narrow streets, a holdover from Colonial days, make driving slow and difficult. This has a perceptible effect upon attendance downtown.

The patronage given downtown situations averages only slightly more than that afforded de luxe neighborhood theatres. Regular habitues and those who miss a show when it is first run keep the neighborhood houses well filled. Furthermore, only two Boston downtown houses, with the exception of the 15 and 25-cent Gayety, are using vaudeville at present, and stage fare has attracted a certain type of fan. Vaudeville and cash giveaway nights have been SRO'ing many neighborhood spots.

The Metropolitan, the largest motion picture theatre in the United States outside of New York with one exception on the West Coast, draws added patronage by offering its patrons free dancing in a beautifully appointed basement salon to the music of Sid Reinherz and his orchestra. A drinking and dining establishment adjoins.

Three affiliated circuits control the seven first runs in Boston. The M. and P. Theatres Corp. operate the Metropolitan, Fenway and Paramount. RKO runs the Keith's Memorial and the RKO Boston. Loew controls the Loew's State and Loew's Orpheum. The Paramount and Fenway, and the State and Orpheum, are respectively day-and-date. The Metropolitan, RKO Boston, Keith's Memorial are single feature stands. The State and Orpheum fluctuate between singles and doubles. Holdovers, moreover, are fairly frequent in the cases of the two Loew houses and the Keith's Memorial. This means that during some nominal months only about 20 features play the first-run stands.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

BOOK SETPIECE. A giant display simulating copy of book with cutout of Colman to illustrate was used as lobby setpiece by Manager DeRosa and Publicist Spencer at Loew's New York Paradise.

This booking situation has created considerable dissatisfaction in some quarters. Herman Rifken of Republic, for instance, tells the MOTION PICTURE HERALD that he is negotiating for a first-run independent house.

The average admissions throughout the week run from 25 and 35 to 65 cents. The seven first-runs take in an average weekly gross of $85,500. This, in turn, generally ranks Boston third nationally.

M. and P. Theatres Corp., with Martin J. Mullin as the M. and Sam Pinanski as the P., predominate the neighborhood scene as well owning more first-runs among Boston's seven than any other concern. Independents are steadily losing ground. New England ranked first nationally a year ago both in the number and in the total capacity of independent theatres. Although still leading the country in independent seatage, the territory now ranks second in the number of indie houses. Whereas unaffiliated circuits took on 30 additional spots and affiliated circuits added one situation during the past year, independents dropped 17 houses.

Take Part in Outside Doings

Thirty-six houses, largely de luxe, in Greater Boston, are operated by M. and P. Theatres. Warner Brothers have one apiece in the Everett and Woburn sections. RKO controls three, as does Loew. The unaffiliated circuits of E. M. Loew, Irving Green, Charles Morse, George Giles, Philip Smith, Interstate Theatres Corp., Julius Joelson, George Ramsdell, Ralph Snider, Frederick E. Lieberman and Max Levenson operate theatres in Boston and its suburbs.

Theatremen take a considerable part in outside activities. Martin J. Mullin and Sam Pinanski, for instance, have been among the foremost officials in charge of canvassing for the Boston Community Fund. Generally speaking, considerable latitude is given individual managers.

However, Charles Koerner and H. M. Addison center here as divisional managers for RKO and Loew respectively. M. and P. has both Divisional Manager Edward A. Cuddy and District Managers R. M. Sternberg, Frank W. McManus and Harry I. Wasserman on the spot. The 4,332-seat Metropolitan, though, is directly under the supervision of Edward A. Smith, who answers only to the M. and P. heads.

Theatre service varies. Projection and sound is generally good. Even the 10-centers demand that. Cleanliness varies from virtual perfection in most of the higher priced spots to slovenliness and actual filth.

MORE ON BOSTON THEATRES SETUP

Whereas such theatres as Loew's State and Orpheum are now spending approximately $125,000 in remodeling and rejuvenation, other operators, circuits included, make it a policy to spend as little money in upkeep, maintenance, and even cleaning as absolutely possible. As for ventilation, the atmosphere of certain downtown movie houses could be bottled and sold for chemical warfare. A number of houses are carpeted with samples. Small sections of various kinds of rugs form a confusing pattern underfoot.

Between $7,000 and $8,000 is spent during an average week by the first-run and neighborhood houses in the metropolitan dailies. The city is expertly exploited, largely through newspaper advertising.

Boston does not go so much for ballyhoo. Broadway and 42nd Street would die in the Hub. Boston is reserved, conservative, and even cold. Ballyhoo here deals with facts. It's the showing of wares in their best light. Trickery is apt to be a boomerang.

Newspapers Cooperate

A careful survey of newspaper advertising during the six months ending December 31, including assist ads given theatres by producers and distributors, shows that the day-and-date Loew's State and Loew's Orpheum spent the most money. Keith's Memorial was second. The Metropolitan, with by far the largest average gross, was third. The RKO Boston was fourth, and the day-and-date Fenway and Paramount last among the first-runs. Not including assists, the Metropolitan, with Gene S. Fox managing publicity, tops the town.

Loew's State and Orpheum, exploited by Joseph A. DiPesa, is again first when it comes to spending money on outside billing. The Majestic, where Harry Browning and Harry Brown, Jr., publicized roadshow engagements of "The Crusades" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream," was second during the half-year period. The Metropolitan holds third position.

Sniping is prevalent.

The eight newspapers in Boston are cooperative. They willingly tie in with the theatres with serializations, contests, comic strips, stills, news yarns, and the featuring of portraits of stars by such theatre artists as Laurence J. O'Toole of the Metropolitan. Reviews are printed regularly. These critiques are made in a particularly friendly spirit. Frankly, the theatres, using as a stick their huge advertising allotments, demand and get this. The regular Hollywood columns are syndicated. The local motion picture editors are not generally featured.

Merchants are exploitation-minded if the tieup involves plenty of publicity for them. Conservatism is again the predominating note. Window tieups lead. Pictures taken of visiting stars using some product or service are often used. Displays in theatres, fashion shows on the stage, and contests such as musical competitions held in conjunction with music concerns have an important place in Hub exploitation.

Parades are practically out, except in the case of tieups with regular parades such as those held on holidays, because of the narrow streets and congested areas. The Department of Public Works and the Police Department present an obstacle because of the fact that physically Boston has not progressed far from the Colonial days of winding lanes and crooked thoroughfares. Sound trucks are used only infrequently.

Competition Plentiful

Such organizations as the Watch and Ward Society, the Lord's Day League, and their ilk provide a different sort of publicity in their efforts that follow principals, according to some, along the lines referred to by George Bernard Shaw when he said that "some people are always trying to convict nature of indecency." A city censor carefully watches all theatrical offerings.

Occasional Soviet films arouse considerable frenzy from certain groups. A law has been introduced in the present legislature to require theatres to display the American Flag at all times.

In certain other respects, aside from its streets, Boston has not progressed far from the not so distant days when anyone smoking on Boston Common was subject to arrest.

Competition with motion picture theatres is plentiful. According to one exhibitor speaking last summer, the three R's have been replaced by the four B's in so far as theatre opposition is concerned. These are, in his words, "Beano, bangtails, bowwows and booze." The beano draw is tremendous even today, even though it has been abated somewhat by local regulations and by the prosecution of several beano sweepstakes, including one involving no less than $250,000.

Horse and dog pari mutuel racing, legal in this state last summer for the first time, drew some $5,000,000 during its initial year. There are three tracks in Boston and its suburbs alone. Bookies have been making fortunes on the small change that otherwise might have gone for movies.

As regards other sports, Boston supports two major league baseball teams. Even though it has not copped a pennant for years, it is regarded as perhaps the best baseball town in the country.

The beaches, fronting the Atlantic, draw hundreds of thousands during warm weather. Golf links thin out even the film district. Legitimate shows, on the other hand, with Shubert interests providing the more popular shows, do not take many from the film houses. This is generally because of the scarcity of productions and the shortness of runs, this last customarily because the top shows are here for tryouts.

Called Natural Show Town

"Boston, with its eight newspapers, has a higher rate of coverage than any other city in the country," according to Gene S. Fox, who came from Paramount Pictures on the West Coast to manage publicity for the de luxe Metropolitan. "The city is fundamentally a natural show town. You can take an ordinary picture, give it a well-rounded newspaper campaign that makes it smack of something you think they'll respect and which lifts it out of the common rut in spite of grapevine gossip that has already spread here via radio, fan magazines, or some other source, and you'll do business."

"To my mind," states Jack Granara who is the exploitation head for the RKO Theatres in this territory, "newspaper advertising is beyond any doubt the most valuable method of publicizing and promoting any theatrical attraction.

"Boston doesn't go for circus ballyhoo," he added. "As regards stunts, I feel that there are very few that can be worked to a worthwhile advantage."

Frank Lydon, vice-president of Allied in New England and former Code Board member, who operates the Hamilton in the Dorchester section of the Hub, threw an interesting light on the neighborhood situation.

"Competition supposedly furnished by opposition theatres is 90 per cent mental and 10 per cent actual," Mr. Lydon opined. "If neighborhood exhibitors will roll up their sleeves and sell their product, they'll have better success. We've always had opposition of some kind or another, and something new is always cropping up. But we always do business with good shows."

George Kraska, operating the 587-seat Fine Arts that takes from $500 to $5,000 weekly with tickets at 50 and 75 cents, had proved to himself that newspaper advertising is most profitable for his house. A weekly mailing list of 10,000 was dropped after experimentation. The two leading financial papers do the best for his highly specialized situation, in which foreign and art films are featured. Before finding this out, Mr. Kraska had been trying to reach a particular foreign class by advertising heavily in a tabloid.

LOBBY DISPLAY IDEAS ON "FOLLOW THE FLEET" FROM BOSTON, MASS., AND HENDERSON, KY.

Elaborate Lobby Display Sells "Pink" for Johnson

An attractive lobby display consisting of blue metal backgrounds and blowup cutouts covering entire front of the Liberty, Seattle for "Strike Me Pink" was used by Manager LeRoy Johnson. Cutout letters carrying copy were built of blue metal foil and corners of lobby were constructed in pillar style with still displays and lifesize cutouts of Goldwyn girls. In center of lobby, Johnson used seven-foot drum with still displays rotating on turntable.

On opening day, through arrangement with cigarette dealer, smokes were distributed, downtown lampposts carried Cantor head cutouts and roto breaks were secured five days ahead.

It's Leap Year, So Jump Aboard

With romance in the air, Walter Fehl, manager of the Apollo in Jersey City, N. J., ran a contest among the bachelor boys and girls in his community. Girls were called upon to write a letter of proposal to an imaginary sweetheart, while the young men were asked to write a letter answering such a proposal from an imaginary girl friend. Prizes for best letters were promoted from cooperating merchants.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Beer Company Ties In With McLeod on "Pasteur"

Aided by an extensive bally, Roy McLeod, Beacon Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., sold his "Pasteur" campaign with a display ad from prominent local beer concern run in all papers on theatre page. Ad stressed accomplishments of the scientist and the fact that beer is also pasteurized in the interests of public health.

Superintendent of schools was enlisted on educational angle and he circularized all principals recommending that children see the picture. Two dairies devoted their regular radio program to Pasteur and pasteurization with plugs for playdate. Picture was screened for medical men, women's organizations and critics.

The Venetian-blind idea was the basis of the attractive lobby animation on "Follow the Fleet" at the RKO Keith Memorial, Boston, as worked out by Manager George French with artist Cyl Champlin. One side carried heads of the stars as illustrated above right, with reverse carrying titles and dates. Side cylinders also turned.

Dairy Aids Botwick On "Milky Way"

As additional buildup for his ice carnival in Portland, Maine, Harry Botwick for his "Milky Way" date at the State tied up dairy on a fifty-fifty basis distributing Lloyd bottle slipovers on all outgoing bottles. Two thousand of these carried added copy calling attention to the fact that they were lucky, persons presenting them at the boxoffice would be entitled to a pair of free Harold Lloyd magic glasses. Dairy bannered all trucks, planted counter cards in all dealer outlets and had attractive display in theatre lobby.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

CCC CAMP. Tying up the CCC camp boys for "It's a Great Life", Charlie Mensing, Empress Theatre, Owensboro, Ky., bannered camp trucks and lined up boys at theatre for photo.

The Ladies Have It On "King of Burlesque"

Hail to the ladies at the Capitol, Regina, Sask., who took over the reins from Manager Walt Davis and did themselves proud on "King of Burlesque." Mrs. Ella Warner-Davis, and the Misses Mary Graham, Heda Summers, Lenore Williams said they "laid aside their rouge, lipsticks and eyebrow pencils and went to bat" and from all accounts knocked out a homer and came home with the bacon.

The old feminine touch was particularly noticeable in the Leap Year Party that was staged. Each gal purchasing two tickets for the evening show was entitled to one complimentary ride to or from the theatre with one paid fare in a taxi. Also given was ticket for tea and a sandwich at cooperating restaurant, provided lady was accompanied by the male escort of her theatre party. Store plugged the stunt in their ads and on counter displays.

"It's an Old Custom"

Imprinted blotters were distributed in office buildings, etc., bearing copy on picture and inviting girls to grab themselves a date, stories were run in papers together with mention in all theatre ads. Warning cards were distributed to men with copy reading "It's an old Leap Year custom, if a young lady asks you for a date and you refuse, you are supposed to buy her a silk dress, if you get stuck, Blank ladies' wear will help you." Merchant also plugged the party in his store and ads.

With the arrival into Western Canada of the first four-passenger Austin cars, these gals hustled over to the local agent and arranged for all cars to be bannered with theatre copy before leaving the railway for the salesrooms. Stunt took on a parade aspect, gathering quite a bit of attention.

[The above campaign having been put over by the female contingent of Walt Davis' excellent house staff, it is entirely fitting that it be detailed in these pages by our own Gert Merriam who has duly set down for the information of the membership, male and female, what the Canadian girls did so effectively on "King of Burlesque".—Ed.]

SNAPPY DISPLAYS AND SUCHLIKE

SALUTING THE ADMIRAL. Texans resident in the metropolis gathered at the New York Palace, where publicist John Cassidy arranged theatre party to "Follow the Fleet" in honor of newly-created Admiral Ginger Rogers. Holding State flag is Irene Caldwell, official hostess of the Texas Centennial Exposition, now touring country on behalf of the celebration.

SCENIC FRONT. Art work and natural shrubbery were combined to make up the scenic display on "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" at the Lyceum, Duluth, Minn., by Manager George P. Irwin. Landscapes in front panels and title across arch were all in vivid coloring.

"Cities" Contest Planted In Papers by Caldwell

A "Write your own caption" contest was planted five days ahead in local sheet on "Tale of Two Cities" by Wally Caldwell. Loew's Valentine, Toledo, each story also carrying details of attraction, and playdates.

Diecut arrow indicators were tied to electric light and trolley poles, specially constructed 18 foot float toured streets and guest cards distributed in leading hotels. Men's haberdasher devoted window to display of Colman formal dress with stills and playdates, roto pages were posted on bulletin boards of schools.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Machine in Lobby Types "Modern Times" Messages

Eddie McBride, Loew's State, Syracuse, planted ticket machine in lobby at which girl was stationed typing out special messages on "Modern Times." Paper ran a memory contest, tickets awarded for correct list of leading ladies in Chaplin films since 1915. Contest was also conducted over radio.

Imitators covered hotels, night clubs and schools and special kid show was arranged for Saturday morning.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Bishop Circularizes Gymns

To plug his MGM "Gymnastics" short, H. A. Bishop, Capitol Theatre, Montreal circularized physical directors of leading gyms, inviting them to attend showing in order that they might be able to personally recommend the picture.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

NOT A STUNT. No, it's no bally—just an informal shot of Duncan Campbell, (center) of the Capitol, Midland, Ontario, taking time out to do a little skiing around the Canadian countryside.

For the best totem pole constructed by local Boy Scouts, A. P. Barry, City Manager L & J Theatres in Macon, Ga., for "Rose Marie" at the Capitol offered prize of $10. Money went to treasury of troop represented by winner with comps. to individual members. Twenty troops participated.

Barry also tied in with 12 merchants to donate gifts for the first baby born in the county during a ten-day period before the opening and named Rose Marie. The slant was built up with a full page of cooperating merchants' ads and daily newspaper breaks. Finale was presentation by Mayor Smart of gifts to winning infant. Also helpful was contact with Nelson Eddy interviewed on train on his way to concert date in Atlanta. Barry, mayor and local fans met the star at station.

Radio slant was also employed wherein Barry promoted station to put on special morning broadcasts, five days ahead called "Advance Listeners' Contest." During programs, names of five locals were announced, these receiving guest tickets. Other broadcasts were arranged at different times of day to catch mill employees and other such workers to interest them in the outdoor and adventure angles of the picture. These angles also were stressed in heralds distributed to homes in the mill villages.

Post cards were mailed to music lovers, local male vocalist used to plug song hits at civic club meetings and a Rose Marie dinner featured at best restaurant, waitresses wearing sashes, the various dishes named after stars, songs, producer, eac. Girls saw picture on first day and plugged it to diners for rest of week.

On opening day inquiring reporter was sent out greeting pedestrians as follows: "Good morning, I am from the Capitol. Do you know what feature is playing there today?" Those who gave the correct answer had their pictures taken and informed that if photos were displayed in theatre lobby, they would be invited to see picture. Barry reports that in addition to giving a good check on effectiveness of advertising, the slant also piled up some extra publicity for the date.

Jones Nets 1,300 Free Lines On Classified Promotions

Figuring that a ghost on the street of Richmond, Va., would kick up a bit of excitement for "Ghost Goes West," Manager George A. Jones, Loew's Theatre, tied the bally to a promotion with local daily's classified page. Jones ran ad asking for a "ghost" with a sense of humor for advertising purposes and to all intents, the response was so good that Jones wrote letter to classified manager plugging paper's effectiveness and stating he was hiring five instead of one.

Paper reproduced the letter in a three-column house ad and followed up the next day with another three-column break including shot of "ghosts" and further tiein copy on picture and classified page. Besides this angle, Jones copped more space by offering comps. to readers finding their names in want ads and gave guest tickets also for all lost and found articles turned in and advertised on want ad page.

Large bakery was tied in to give away photos of Donat and announced this with 250-line ad day ahead. Jones had paper pull proofs of ad with additional of "Totay" and these were distributed for window display by bakery truck drivers to all stores selling the bread.

Among other traffic-stoppers, Jones used the "questions and answers" gag as planted on the New York Rivoli date. Two microphones were planted in front display (see photo) with passersby requested to ask question of one "ghost" which was answered by the other, the two "ghosts" operating from inside the lobby right behind the display.

Chaplin Costume Contest Planted in Cleveland

Run for three days in the Cleveland News with a followup story on fourth announcing winners, was the Chaplin costume planted by Ev Steinbuch and Milt Harris for date on "Modern Times" at Loew's State. First day paper ran three-column head with head of Chaplin and a number of hats. Second day a number of mustaches and pairs of pants; third day a flock of canes and shoes.

From these three displays readers were requested to select the derby, pants, mustache, cane and shoes worn by Charley in the picture, cut them out and paste up so that all the items would make up a figure of the star topped by his head. Best entry got $25, next $10, third five and next best 25 guest tickets. Return was over 1,350 free lines of space.

Distribution of various accessories was wide and heavy, such as stickers showing figure of Chaplin's back with theatre copy, pasted on menus, windows, school and library bulletin boards. "Good morning" stickers were placed on all newspapers delivered to guests at top hotels, small four by five imprinted star photos at five-and-tens and chain drug stores. Also distributed to school children by arrangement with board of education was the "find Charley Chaplin" novelty herald as were Chaplin mustaches to pupils at recess time.

Heralds were inserted in all Liberty magazines, in all taxi cab boxes, at all bus stations within a 150-mile radius and in envelopes containing bills from large service station. Gummed stickers also placed on magazines furnished by insurance company and distributed by agents plus other advertising given away during last day of annual food show at Public Hall.

Postal Telegraph boys on foot and riding bicycles, all wearing sashes, paraded to theatre opening day, cards and stills in all public and school libraries, colorful front containing many heads of Chaplin copy and radio contests were other slants put over by these Loew-ites.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-35 season.

THEATRE patrons desire enough supplementary lighting for comfortable vision from the moment of entrance. They are annoyed when a dark theatre compels them to stumble and grope blindly for their seats.

High Intensity Projection permits ample side lighting for a comfortable level of general illumination. It improves the quality of black and white projection and brings out the full beauty and realism of color productions.

FOR A FEW DOLLARS A MONTH

You can make your Store Front a Permanent Advertisement!

These pictures show how the Crump Theatre in Columbus, Ind., looked before and after it was remodeled with Pittco Store Front Products, which have proved as successful in theatre remodeling as in store modernization. Which store front is the better advertisement for the theatre . . . the old one or the new?

YOU probably use newspaper advertising to increase your box office. But do you take full advantage of that other powerful advertisement of your theatre . . . its front? Even though you expend lots of time and careful thought on building up fine programs, an old-fashioned or uninviting theatre front can destroy all that effort . . . by definitely repelling prospective patrons. On the other hand, a modern, attractive Pittco Theatre Front is a permanent advertisement that really pays. It carries an effective message of quality pictures, courteous treatment and progressive management to all who see it . . . and invites potential patrons to slide their money across your ticket counter. Our staff of experts will gladly cooperate with your architect in building you a Pittco Front like this. So act now to attract a larger clientele and fatten profits . . . remodel with a new Pittco Theatre Front.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LIGHTING THE THEATRE

VOLUME 123 APRIL 4, 1936 NUMBER ONE

Equipment Replacement Rushed in Flood Area

WITH SEATING and floor covering principally affected among the 460 motion picture houses in the flood areas of the Central Eastern States and New England, it is now estimated that between two and three million dollars will have to be spent on theatre rehabilitation as a result of the devastation wrought by the rising rivers. Many early estimates were rather wild, stating figures that would have replaced every theatre, building and all, in the menaced regions. The several millions now thought to be as close as general check-up can make any calculation, refers to equipment and furnishings, however, and not to damage done to the structural elements.

Seating manufacturers, especially, were called upon almost before the waters had substantially receded, to be prepared for rush orders. In many instances the manufacturers were able to duplicate at short notice the type of chair that had been damaged. In one case, reports the American Seating Company, an exhibitor sent a truck direct to the factory to take whatever chairs were available immediately. Most of the manufacturers had representatives in touch with the operators, and with the aid of previous knowledge of the floor plans, were able to arrange for rapid delivery. Probably the greatest source of loss to the exhibitor is of course the closing of his box office during the period of the flood and that of rehabilitation.

The greatest damage in a single restricted area was that in Pittsburgh, which has 82 theatres. All of the 14 Warner theatres there were closed by the flood, while this circuit's three houses in Johnstown were similarly affected. In New England the actual damage was much less severe.

A warning has been issued by the National Carbon Company to exhibitors and projectionists in the flood areas that carbons which have been submerged in flood water should not be used until the maker of them has been consulted. It is pointed out that water and silt may contain acidulous matter that ruins carbons.

Screen Manufacturers Form Own Organization

MANUFACTURERS of motion picture screens, at a meeting held at the Commodore Hotel in New York City, March 23, organized under the name of the Motion Picture Screen Manufacturers Association, bringing to fruition a plan that has been discussed among screen makers for some time.

The announced purpose of the new organization is to further the interests of all screen manufacturers, to establish rules of conduct to insure fair trade practices (this may be advisedly interpreted as referring to price-cutting), to conduct experiments looking toward improvement of screens, and to effect technical standards with respect to types of screens, reflection and sound transmission characteristics, sizes, etc. The wish was voiced at the meeting to co-operate with other groups, both technical and commercial, for the purpose of developing definite screen standards and specifications and of placing the screen in its rightful position as an important element in the whole projection process.

A. L. Raven, president of the Raven Screen Corporation of New York, was elected president. J. B. Shupper of the Raytone Screen Company was named vice-president, while Maj. Robert T. Rassmussen of the Theatre Screen Corporation, Roosevelt, L. I., was selected for the post of secretary.

E. G. Hines New Head of International Projector

EARL G. HINES is the new president of the International Projector Corporation, chosen to succeed the late Samuel R. Burns. His selection came as the reorganization plan of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., holding company of which International Projector is a subsidiary, was declared operative.

Along with the appointment of Mr. Hines, Herbert Griffin, who has been general sales manager of International Projector, was named vice-president. He was also appointed a director. Another new member of the International board is Walter Green, president of the National Theatre Supply Company, another General Theatres Equipment subsidiary.

The General Theatres Equipment reorganization plan is subject to the approval of the Chancery Court of Delaware. According to the adopted method, the Chase National Bank, through which institution the trusteeship has been conducted, agrees to loan the company $2,000,000 for the reorganization, in addition to other benefits.

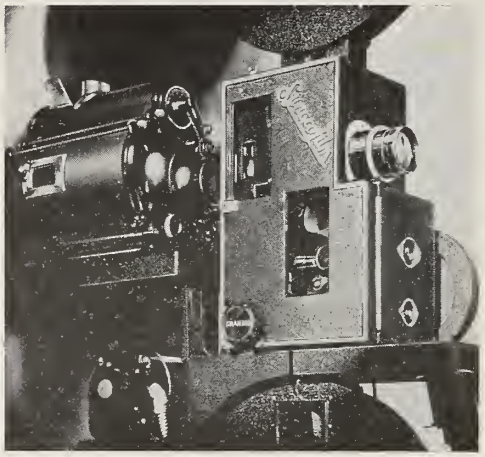
The new president of International Projector has been representing the Chase interests in the affairs of General Theatres Equipment and its subsidiaries.

Coast Cities Remove Bar to 2,000-Foot Reel

WITH FAVORABLE action taken by the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco, all restrictions to the use of 2,000-foot reels in a number of cities of the Pacific Coast have been removed. San Francisco changed a law which prohibited more than 1,000 feet of film in use at one time, at a meeting attended by city officials, underwriters' representatives, Rowena Foley Mourning, secretary of the San Francisco Film Board of Trade; George Allentine, manager of the 20th Century-Fox exchange there; and Gordon S. Mitchell, who represented the Academy Research Council.

Previous to the San Francisco action, Portland, Ore., officials approved minor revisions of ordinances which would have prevented use of the 2,000-foot reel there.

While there is no city ban on the new reel in Boston, the projectionists' union there indicates no relaxation of its stand against it. Investigation of reports that members were splicing 1,000-foot lengths together is said to have disclosed no basis for them. The union imposes a fine of $50 upon any member making such splices. Efforts are reported to have been inaugurated to induce the Massachusetts Department of Public Safety to bar use of the 2,000-foot reel when it comes into effect August 1.



New Semi-Portable Sound Projector

MODIFICATION of projector designs toward simplification and some reduction in overall size, continues. A new projector developed along these lines, with soundhead included as a unit, is the Syncrofilm 35-millimeter semi-portable model which has been brought out by the Weber Machine Company at Rochester, N. Y.

The mechanism frame and case are one integral unit made of cast aluminum. Bearings are of bearing bronze and easily replaced when worn. The intermittent movement is of the Geneva type and runs in a bath of oil. It can be removed from the projector as a complete unit. Sprockets are interchangeable with standard projectors. The shutter is in the rear.

The film gate is of the rigid type, cam-actuated and easily removed for cleaning. Film pressure shoes are hardened and ground tool steel. Each moves independently of the other. Pressure is adjusted with knurled screws on front of gate.

The lens holder is designed so that either ¼-size or ½-size lenses may be used, and is focused from outside of case. The framing knob is at the front of the projector.

The projector is equipped with automatic dowser so that if machine slows up for any reason the light is instantly shut off. With the exception of the main drive, the entire machine is driven by helical-cut gears.

The soundhead is an integral part of the projector and is of the same general design as the standard Syncrofilm head used on theatre projectors. The Photocell is a standard pronged type mounted inside the film drum. The optical system is guaranteed to cut up to 10,000 cycles. A standard T-8 single contact bayonet base exciter lamp is used.

While the Syncrofilm semi-portable projector was designed for arc lamp projection, any type of Mazda projection lamp may be used.

Device to Save Water In Air-Conditioning

THE REASON given by the York Ice Machinery Company of York, Pa., for the development of a water "economizer" for air-conditioning systems; namely to save water, sounds plausible enough today. Well water is being zealously sought. City authorities are urging development of new sources of supply. New York's Governor Lehman asks for further restriction of the use of ground water on Long Island. It's precious stuff.

The York "Economizer" was recently displayed in New York at the International Heating and Ventilating Exposition. It is a combination forced draft cooling tower and refrigerant condenser. A fan passes the outside air through a bank of bare pipe coils over which water trickles in a direction opposite to the air flow, to give a "Baudelot cooling action." Refrigerant is condensed inside the coils, and flows by gravity to a liquid receiver.

The cooling water is recirculated from the drain pan by a pump driven by a fractional horsepower motor which is so small as virtually to eliminate the pumping charges usually encountered in a cooling tower installation. Thus the "Economizer," operating with a 1/6-h.p. pump, is designed to handle the same requirements as a conventional cooling tower with a 7½-h.p. pump. The continuous evaporation of water pumped over the coils is replenished automatically by a float valve.

The liquid receiver is made of seamless steel with a dished head, and is provided with a vortex eliminator to insure a minimum liquid level and maintain a liquid seal on the line. Regular capacities range from 3 to 50 tons of refrigeration. Larger sizes are assembled to order in the field.

Metal Tube Amplifier For Public Address

AN AMPLIFIER using all-metal tubes in all stages, including the output, has made its appearance as the first of a line of similarly designed amplifiers adapted directly to public address systems. It is the product of the Morlen Electric Company, Inc., of New York.

This first model uses two 6f5 and two 6c5 triodes in the voltage amplifier; two 6f6 triodes as "power-drivers"; and four 6f6 output tubes. It is rated to deliver 38 watts normal, and 45 watts in continuous heavy-duty speech service.

Among features of the design are a two-position input mixer with universal impedance; a main gain control, tone control.

a. c. switch, a. c. convenience outlet, and dual output of 500 ohms and 15 ohms, tapped by 8 and 4 ohms. An input coupler is also available for low-impedance microphones such as the velocity and dynamic types.

New Baby Spotlight And Rewind Table

TWO NEW MODELS in regular lines of projection equipment manufactured by the Golde Manufacturing Company of Chicago, are a baby spotlight for 250-, 400- or 500-watt G-type lamps; and a rewind table designed so as to be especially compact.

The spotlight is here illustrated. It has a cast aluminum housing frame, lens mount and back, and a universal mounting bracket and base. It employs an optical glass condensing lens of 4½-inch diameter, and is designed to throw a brilliant beam for any distance up to 100 feet, using the prescribed wattages. The lamp base is of sliding type, and there is a two-inch adjustment, from spot to flood. The metal reflector is chromium-plated.

The rewind table has automatic and hand rewinders mounted on its top, which is of 10-gauge steel. The back edge of the top is raised to provide cutting and vise-clamping space. It is liberally provided with drawers for tools and supplies, and the legs are constructed to hold large-sized film cabinets.

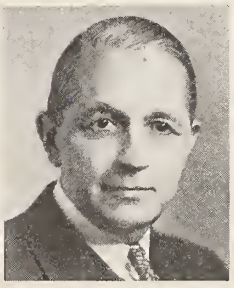
Appeal Made for More Technical Co-Ordination

EXTENSION of the research and standardization program of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in general, and of the Projection Practice Committee in particular, is looked for as a result of an appeal made by P. A. McGuire of the International Projector Corporation, at the last meeting of the projection committee before the Society convention in Chicago, April 27-30.

Mr. McGuire declared his belief that there was a vast amount of waste in the efforts of the industry's technical bodies owing to a lack of intelligent and sustained coordination of all related activities. Advances possible through the work of one group became nullified by the absence of similar progress in certain other fields, and the effect, he said, is one representing great loss to the industry.

The meeting, which was held at the Society rooms in the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, with Harry Rubin, the chairman, presiding, heard the first draft of the report the committee will make to the convention. It will point to considerable progress made in an effort to formulate a scientific basis for standard practice in projection illumination, as well as toward better projection room standards.

Howard Middleton of New York read a paper on condensers used in connection with high-intensity light sources.



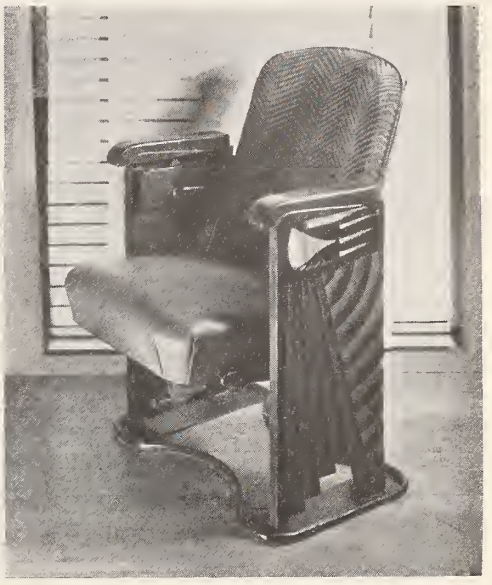
Present, in addition to Mr. Rubin, were Jess Hopkins, secretary; Dr. A. N. Goldsmith, past president of the Society; Sylvan Harris, assistant president; E. R. Geib, National Carbon Company; Earl R. Morin, theatre inspector for Connecticut, who recently was added to the committee; George Edwards, Herbert Griffin of the International Projector Corporation; Adolph Goodman, representing the RCA Manufacturing Company, and F. H. Richardson.

The spring convention of the SMPE will be held at the Edgewater Beach Hotel through four full days. The semi-annual banquet will be given in the ballroom of the hotel the evening of April 29. Each day will be devoted principally to technical sessions, but the afternoon of April 29 has been set aside for the visiting of the plants of manufacturers in Chicago who serve the motion picture industry.

New Organization of Dealers Seen Assured

STEPS TO ORGANIZE unaffiliated theatre supply dealers have reached the stage where the complete formation of a new association is expected within a month, according to Rudolph Eisenberg, New York attorney who has been active in efforts to form a new group for several months. Leading the effort is George DeKruif, who is well known in the theatre equipment field. He was an executive of the National Theatre Supply Company a number of years ago.

It is expected that it will be possible to effect a new association with from 15 to 20 dealer members. A total membership of about 30 is planned. According to Mr. Eisenberg, about 75 dealers were contacted, and about 30 replies were received indicating a desire to join such an association.



George DeKruif

At the same time, it is stated, 500 manufacturers have been contacted, bringing results, according to Mr. Eisenberg, which promise ample sources of product.

In a prospectus, the organizers of the new association state that the purpose is to develop a system of group buying and set up other trade advantages. In addition, it is planned to fix standards for equipment and fair trade practices among the members. It is proposed to incorporate the association, with each dealer member receiving one share, on which he will be entitled to earnings of the corporation, which would be derived from manufacturer discounts.

New Chair Having Chrome-Edge Back

A NEW MODEL theatre chair has been brought out by the Heywood-Wakefield Company, having, in addition to certain other features of design, a protective edge to the back of chrome metal.

The metal edge can be had in any color, to blend with or contrast with the chair covering.

Along with this feature, new aisle end standards have been designed which can be fitted with chrome or be had in any color combination to fit the decorative scheme of the theatre.

Two New Models of Ozone Generators

OZONE GENERATORS in two models, for air purification, have been developed by Electric-Air, Inc., of Grand Rapids, Mich. Both are of electrostatic type. A condenser is attached to a specially constructed high-voltage transformer, the combination of which generates an electrical spark, and the oxygen, coming into contact with the spark, is given the chemical boost which transforms it into ozone. The ozone is circulated through the building, obliterating odors and destroying germs.

In the construction of the condenser, a series of electrodes made of a special metallic substance and free from all foreign gases and corrosion, is employed. Separating the electrodes is a series of glass insulators. A variable control governs the amount of ozone to be generated and makes it possible to control the output of the machines.

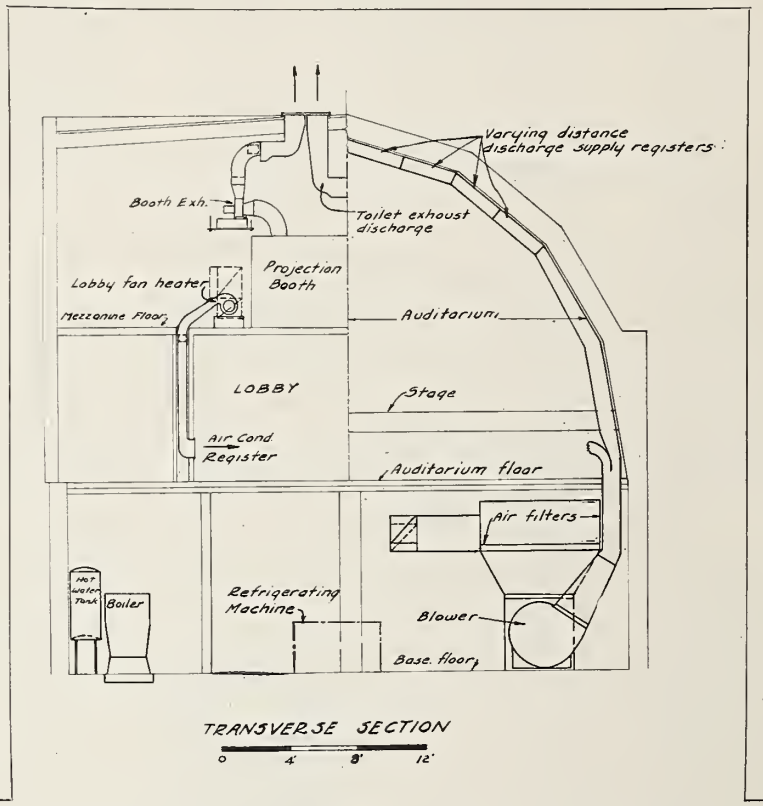
One of the models is suitable to theatres seating up to 300. The other is for larger theatres.

The purification action of ozone thus distributed through atmosphere is that of oxidation. Organic gasses, bacteria and other organic matter are destroyed and dispelled through the chemical influence of the third oxygen atom charactertistic of ozone.

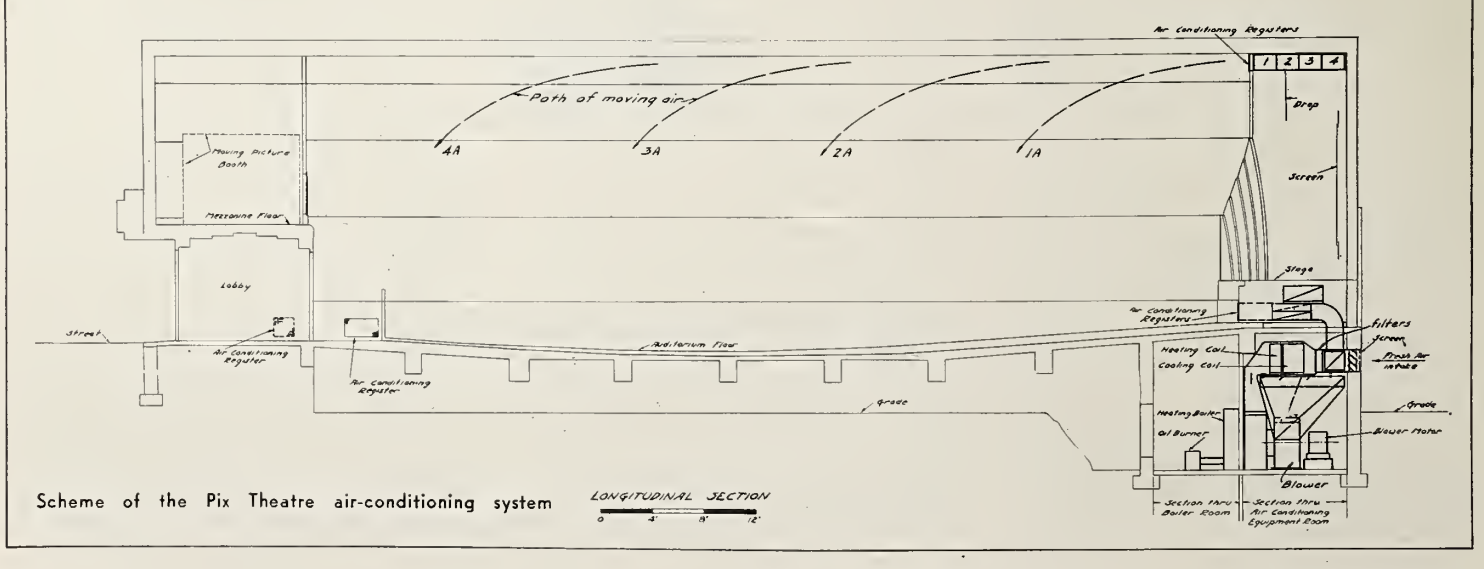
An Automatic Air-Conditioning System for a Small Theatre

● A non-technical description and diagrammatic demonstration of the heating, cooling and ventilating facilities of the Pix theatre, White Plains, N. Y.

THE AIR-CONDITIONING system of the Pix theatre in White Plains, N. Y., is quite in keeping with the deluxe-theatre type of facilities which in general have been provided in this unique experiment in small cinemas. The Pix, which is operated by Pix Theatres, Inc., and which seats but 300, has complete air-conditioning equipment for both winter and summer operation under absolutely automatic control.



The air-conditioning system presents a number of original methods, not all of which were dictated by the smallness of the theatre, but in anticipation of a variety of climatic and structural exigencies. It was designed by Sullivan A. S. Patorno, New York consulting ventilating engineer.



The building design created by the architects, Bianculli & Ghiani of New York, was thoroughly studied and carefully planned with respect to air-conditioning. The shape of the building and the location of the equipment rooms made it possible, according to Patorno, to effect economies in initial cost of the air-conditioning equipment (equipment installation is by Airtemp, using York compressors). It is pointed out by the engineers in charge of the installation that the length and width of the building is well proportioned so that properly designed duct work and outlets can supply filtered air, heated or cooled, from the stage end to all predetermined points in the auditorium, thus eliminating the expense of long horizontal ducts across the auditorium ceiling. [The plan and design of the Pix was discussed in the January 11th issue of BETTER THEATRES.]

High building thermal efficiency has been attained by the installation of 4 inches of rock wool insulation in all walls and in the roof construction. This affords protection against the sun's effect in the summer and the cold in the winter, with resultant economy in operation. Further, the building retains its heat overnight in the winter and its cool condition overnight in the summer, with resultant economy.

The mechanical equipment is located in an excavated section of the basement at the rear of the building. The boiler, oil burner and hot water storage tank are in one room. The blower for the supply of air to the auditorium and the refrigerating machine are in another room. Fuel oil is delivered into the oil tank on the side street at the rear of the building. The chimney is also located at the rear of the building, leaving the front of the building free of any elements disturbing to the proper architectural treatment. Hot water is provided to the fixtures in the toilet rooms in the front of the building. There are three

The Ute: A Design Exploiting Native Western Culture

By ROBERT O. BOLLER

The front of the Ute, faced in buff stucco with balcony, columns and trim of wood. The wooden vertical sign is of pueblo ladder construction.

IN AN AGE when men are striving for the ultimate in stream-lines, for an ultra-sophistication in decorative effects, and for a motion picture theatre architecture largely functional in design, it is startingly refreshing to discover a theatrical organization with the inspired courage and artistic appreciation needed to create a showhouse which is an authentic example of the ancient native culture of the surrounding region. Such a show place is the new Ute theatre recently opened in Colorado Springs, Colorado, under the supervision of J. E. Tompkins, general manager of the Interstate Theatres, and Ralph H. Ayer, local manager.

Colorado Springs is one of the most popular of the Western tourist towns, with a resident population of approximately 35,000. Not only is it the county seat of El Paso County, but its altitude of 6,000 feet above sea level and its equable climate make it a favorite health resort. Tourists flock from all over the United States each year to visit the many nearby points of sight-seeing interest, to drink from the famed Manitou mineral springs, and to ascend the white-capped Pike's Peak which towers above the little city.

The town caters to the amusement lovers among its stationary population, its motoring tourists, and the guests in its luxurious hotels with five motion picture theatres. When the old Rialto, built in 1911, reached the stage where extensive alterations were considered imperative, the preliminary plans were laid which led to the construction of the new Ute theatre on the site of the older showhouse. After the completion of final architectural drawings, the contract for the building was handled in record time by the Artmore Construction Company of Denver, in the face of heavy rains and destructive floods which harassed that section of the State.

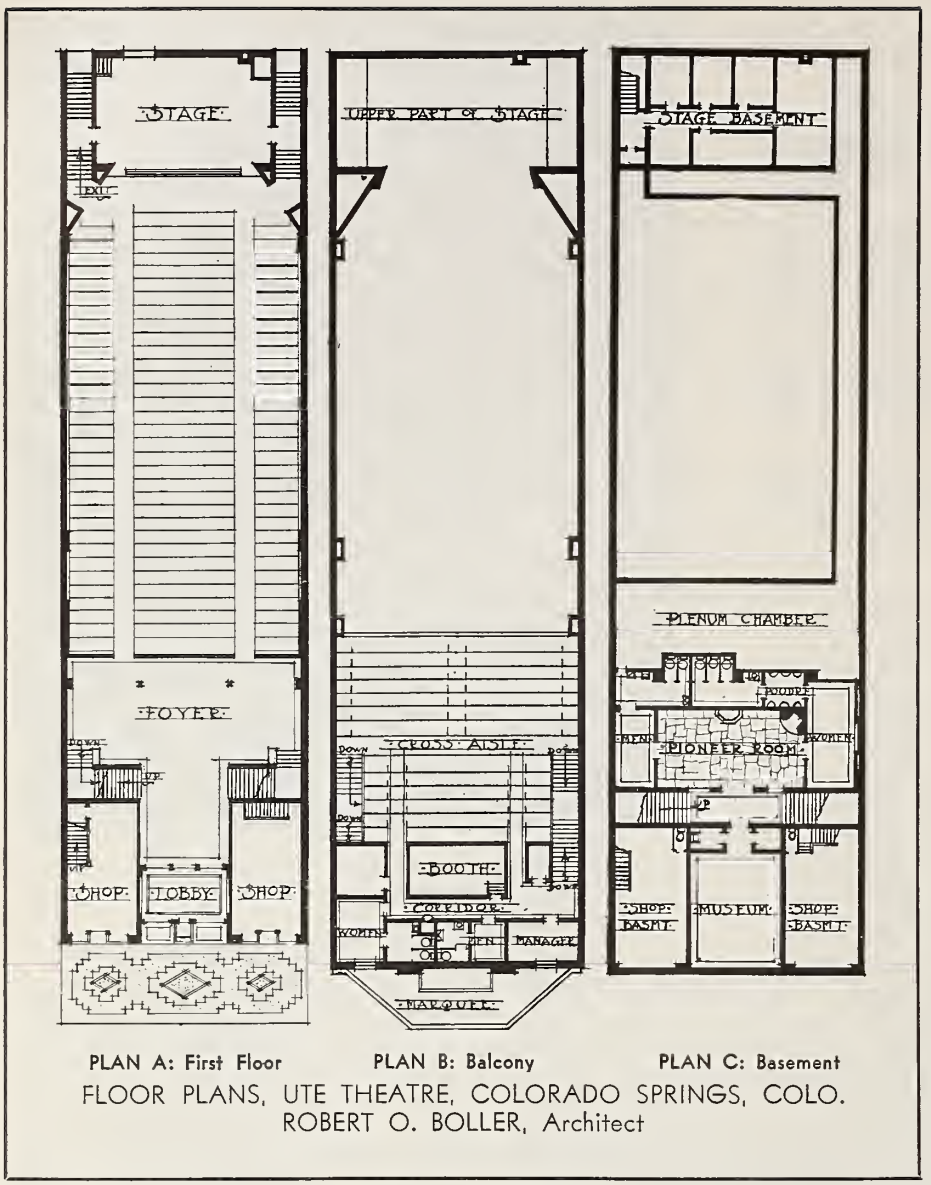
THEME OF DESIGN

To L. J. Finske, district manager for the J. H. Cooper Enterprises of Colorado, under whose personal supervision the Ute was conceived and erected, must go the most generous portion of credit for the architectural style chosen. It was Mr. Finske who decided that instead of the usual moderne edifices to be found these days in so many American towns, the Ute should recall the indigenous culture of the Southwest; for, he argued, tourists came to Colorado to enjoy scenes and structures characteristic of the region, rather than to see the latest modern architecture imported from the East or from Europe.

Having made his decision, he was tireless in his efforts to obtain authentic types and replicas, making several trips for purposes of research to Santa Fe, Taos and the Southwestern region with his architect, his decorator, and with members of his own business organization. Numerous photographs were made of pueblo buildings; a large number of rugs, blankets, and pieces of pottery were purchased and carried back to the Springs for use in the new theatre.



In order to appreciate fully and to enjoy the architectural detail and furnishings of the Ute theatre, it is helpful to have at least a cursory knowledge of the Southwestern or pueblo type of building construction.

The word pueblo (Spanish for village), as the term is used by archeologists, means a type of culture, rather than the name of any certain tribe of natives. The name Pueblo was first applied generally to a large group of Southwestern Indians discovered in 1539-40 by a roving band of explorers under the leadership of Coronado. These tribes were of Hopi, Zuni, Keres, Tanoan and allied stock, and at that time consisted of some 20,000 Indians living in 70 villages scattered throughout New Mexico, Arizona, portions of Colorado and Utah, and in a territory probably extending well down into Old Mexico. Their music, dances, metal work, carving and sand pictures were as peculiarly individual and original as was their architecture.

PUEBLO ARCHITECTURE

Their pueblo villages had the chief common characteristic of series of terraced apartments, sometimes six or seven stories high, built high on the top or side of steep cliffs, and accessible only by way of narrow pathways or by means of a system of the ubiquitous pueblo ladders.

The walls of the flat-roofed buildings were built of adobe, a sun-dried brick made in round balls before a knowledge of flat brick was introduced by the Spaniards. This material formed an effective insulation against the intense desert heat. The adobe construction was used wherever proper clay was available; elsewhere, the pueblo walls were of stone. Buttresses and pilasters were of necessity heavy and ponderous. Wooden poles, with bark removed and ends exposed over the walls, formed the beams supporting the mud roof. Constant plastering with mud and clay was necessary to keep the walls and roof intact and weatherproof. Rainwater was caught in large earthen jars set upon the roof.

The pueblo architecture was carried to its highest perfection in the design of the dome-shaped ovens used by the squaws for outdoor cooking. These were reminiscent of the Eskimo igloos of the North, or of the rounded structures of Syria and the East. Their indoor fireplaces carried the same feeling of rounded symmetry found in the outdoor ovens.

The pueblo tribes were an agricultural people, not much given to the nomadic and war-making life which occupied the North American Indian. The squaws of the tribes built the pueblo dwellings and modeled the pottery and rain jars, while the men tilled and irrigated the fields, cared for the live stock, and practised weaving and wood-carving. Under these peaceful conditions, their civilization reached an advanced degree.

Today, the pueblo Indians number less than 10,000, in 26 villages. Advancing cultivation has destroyed many of their ancient buildings, ruthless vandals and thoughtless tourists seeking wood for camp fires have helped to wipe out the remnants of this early civilization. Wind and weather are working day by day to level the mud and stone structures back to the dusty fields.

By making use of the most interesting features of this ancient pueblo architecture, the designers of the Ute theatre have striven to preserve in modern materials the beauty and culture of these early Americans.

THE UTE INDIANS

When the time came for a choice of a name for the new theatre, the owners recalled the legends of the Utes, one of the smaller tribes of the Colorado and Utah district, whose history is most closely associated with pioneer days in Colorado Springs, and decided to use this name for the new buildings.

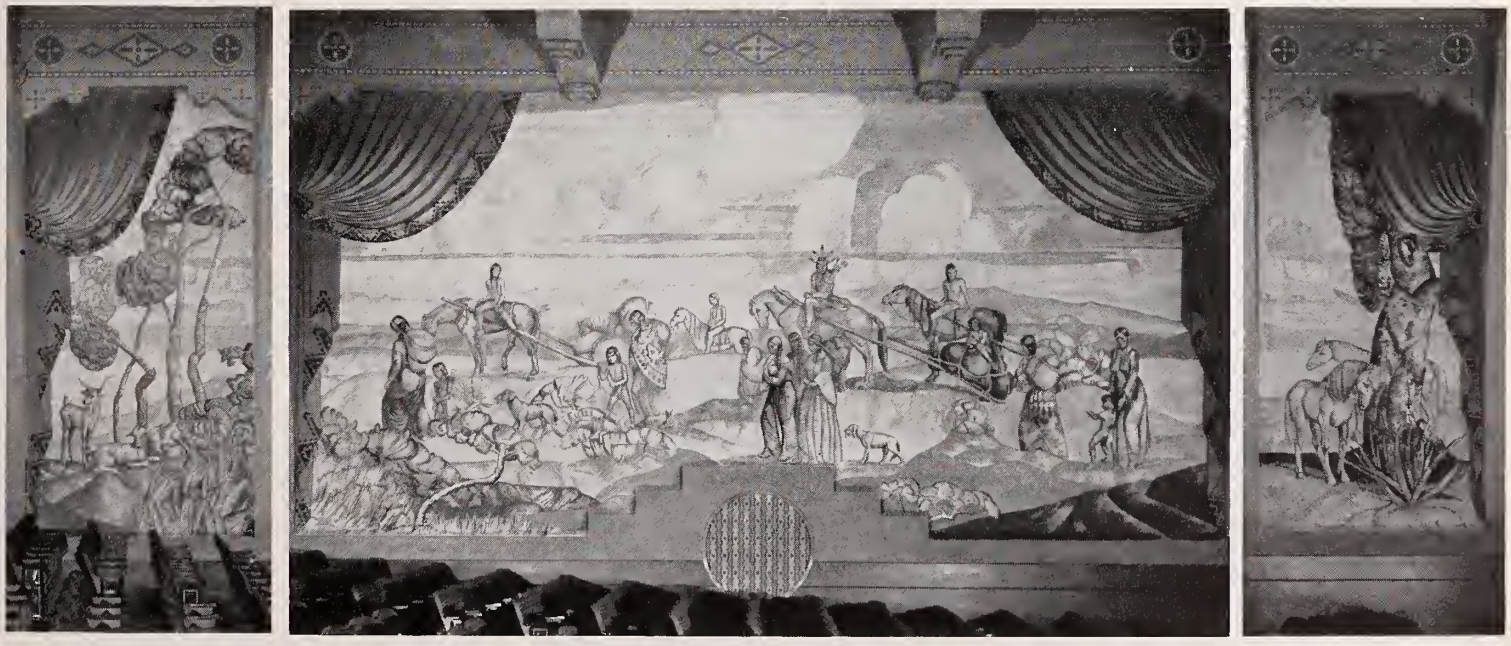
Until 1859 the Utes were known as the "Utahs." Quite different in taste and talent from their Southwestern brothers, this tribe is remembered by early settlers as a wandering race, fond of horses and hunting, uninterested in agriculture or manual labor, but skilled in trading with the Cheyenne, Sioux and Navajo Indians in the adjoining territories. They made their headquarters in the mountains about Manitou. Their most famous chieftain, Ouray, and his wife Chipeta, were greatly beloved by the whites, with whom they cooperated wholeheartedly.

Because of the Ute tendency toward nomadic wanderings, they created very little architecture, their summer dwellings being rude thatched huts, and their winter homes teepees of elk hide. Their artistic temperament evidenced itself, however, in the ceremonial dances handed down from father to son, and by the animal designs depicted in almost every lodge.

By combining the architecture of the pueblo tribes with tradition of the Utes, the Ute theatre has accordingly become a storehouse of treasure for those interested in the Indian lore of the region. With this brief background, it is easier to grasp the details of the theatre's design.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION

The overall dimensions of the theatre are 50x180 feet. This includes two shops, each 14x28 feet, in the front section of the building. The original brick walls and the old roof were used and added to in the rebuilding process, but a new and heightened ceiling was erected between the original roof trusses. The trusses were encased, plastered and decorated to form attractive features of the auditorium plan.



THE FRONT

The unique vertical sign which draws the eye to the front is a rough-hewn ladder of mountain fir, lashed together with rawhide thongs in the manner used by the Indians to construct their early ladders. It supports, at the top, a huge war shield and two arrows. The design on the shield was copied from an old Ute war shield found at Meeker after the bloody massacre of the whites at that agency in an Indian uprising about 1880. A long feather trails across the rungs on either side of the ladder, and on these the letters spelling the name, are intensified with neon tubing. The ladder is also outlined in neon for a striking night effect.

The marquee departs from standard lines with two angular attraction boards visible from far down the street. The emblems in the marquee facing have significance in the Indian sign language. The rising sun, thunder clouds and lightning are marked out with paint by day and with neon by night. The crow, favorite Indian symbol, is used prominently in the marquee ornamentation. Underneath, and

The design of the Ute theatre makes an interesting use of local historical materials which, in themselves, are peculiarly adaptable to the imaginative, human and colorful character of good theatre architecture. The reasons for, and the methods applied to, the use of North American Indian motifs are well told by the architect himself in an article beginning on page 9. The upper view on this page, of the auditorium toward the stage, shows the domination of two side-wall mural paintings, each in three sections and based on old Indian legends. One of these is shown in the lower reproductions—this one depicts the migration of the assembled Ute tribes to the mountains in the spring.

It is done in a rich Indian pattern, with hand-carved ceiling beams decorated with Indian symbols in brilliant stains. The foyer floor is covered with a specially designed carpet of Indian pattern, executed by W. & J. Sloane. The ceiling is shown clearly in this view of the auditorium, with its war-drum chandeliers and carved beams.

The latter follows a rude structural scheme of early date, that of laying logs and saplings across beams. At the left of the picture is the Old Wishing Well, a fountain actuated by a photoelectric cell. The women's lounge is done in Spanish Colonial style.

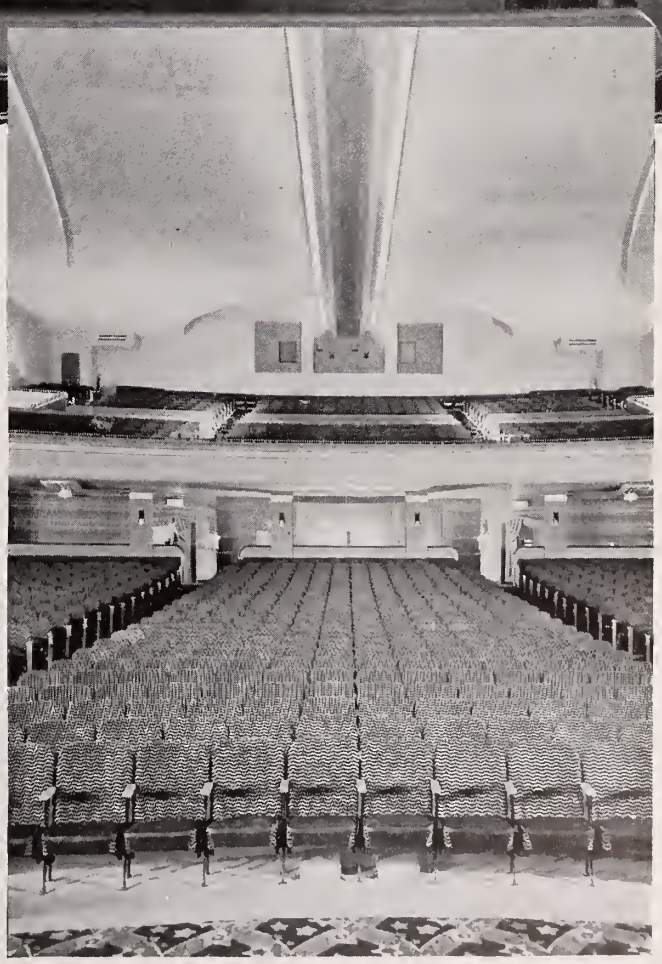
WARNER'S PENN THEATRE

Washington, D. C.

John Eberson, Architect



The Penn theatre interior is of most striking design. It introduces modern patterns and materials into the creation of an atmosphere of make-believe, yet acknowledging a fundamental principle of the modern method — functionalism—in its adaptation of form to the mechanics of motion picture exhibition. The auditorium and other parts are pictured on the following pages. Above and at right are shown the two lobbies. The upper view is of the main lobby, looking toward the doors to the auditorium. These are eight in number, with half of one door joined, in pattern, with half of the next. They are surfaced with Formica, and the pattern is carried out in various shades of blue in this material, with white metal stripping. The pilasters between the doors are also of Formica. At the ceiling, which is done in plaster, air-diffusers have been utilized as decorative bands. The entrance lobby, pictured at right, is similar in style.

Two views of the Penn auditorium, the design of which employs, as its central scheme, a directional wall and cornice pattern carried out essentially in groupings of subtle colorations. The auditorium is of two-floor plan, seating 1,465 on the first level, and 350 in the balcony.

These auditorium views indicate the directional effect of the general design. All forms progress toward the screen. Colorations are similarly progressive, beginning with light shades at the rear and resolving into dark tones at the screen area. In the main, the rear tones are golden, and these proceed through delicates and darker shades of red to a deep burgundy at the screen opening. The soffits of the cornice steppings, however, are blended shades of blue and lavender and burgundy, which also progress through related tones from light to dark. These steppings ultimately effect the termination of the auditorium at the screen frame, there being no true proscenium arch. What appears in the photograph to be fabric strips along the walls are stencilled designs. Illumination is confined to concealed spill-light effects, in color, in recesses flanking the screen frame, and above the air diffuser, which is the solitary decorative ceiling element.

Foyer and lounge areas—the main foyer at the top; above, the men's lounge; at left, the women's lounge. The foyer design completely eliminates square corners. The ceiling slopes to a lighting cove equipped with "surprise pink" Lumiline lamps. The carpeting is of Crestwood weave in a pattern executed in henna, flesh color and red. The walls of the women's lounge are partly painted, partly papered. Furniture is of natural maple. The men's room has a wainscot of wall linoleum. The furniture is of light maple with leather coverings.

KENT THEATRE

NEW YORK CITY

Charles Sandblom, Architect

The Kent theatre is one of a group of new theatres recently opened by Consolidated Amusement Enterprises in the Bronx. Along with the Ascot, the Surrey and the Earle, the Kent is operated according to a new policy being tried out by this New York circuit, which has 16 neighborhood houses flanking the new Eighth Avenue subway line through the Bronx (this policy was discussed in conection with descriptions of the Ascot and Surrey theatres in the March 7th issue). Like the Ascot and Surrey, the Kent has 600 seats. These views show the auditorium looking toward the screen platform and toward the rear. Ornamentation is confined principally to the ceiling, which is in a modified vault inclining in three planes toward a broad cornice behind which are principal sources of illumination. Except for ornamental lighting fixtures of modern design, and pilasters, the walls are plain. Interior surfacing is entirely in plaster, with ornamentation in stencil.

GREENWICH THEATRE

Max Roche, Architect

These views show the forward section of the auditorium and the foyer-lounge of a theatre fashioned out of an old garage building. This remodeling project is discussed in an article beginning on the opposite page. The auditorium walls are treated with a tufted leatherette wainscoting of mulberry, and above this, with horizontal wood-veneer bands, which are interrupted only by the screen frame. The only other wall treatment (the ceiling has painted borders) consists in modern bracket fixtures. The auditorium is entered from the foyer at the left of the view here given. The lounge, in treatment, is continuous with the foyer.

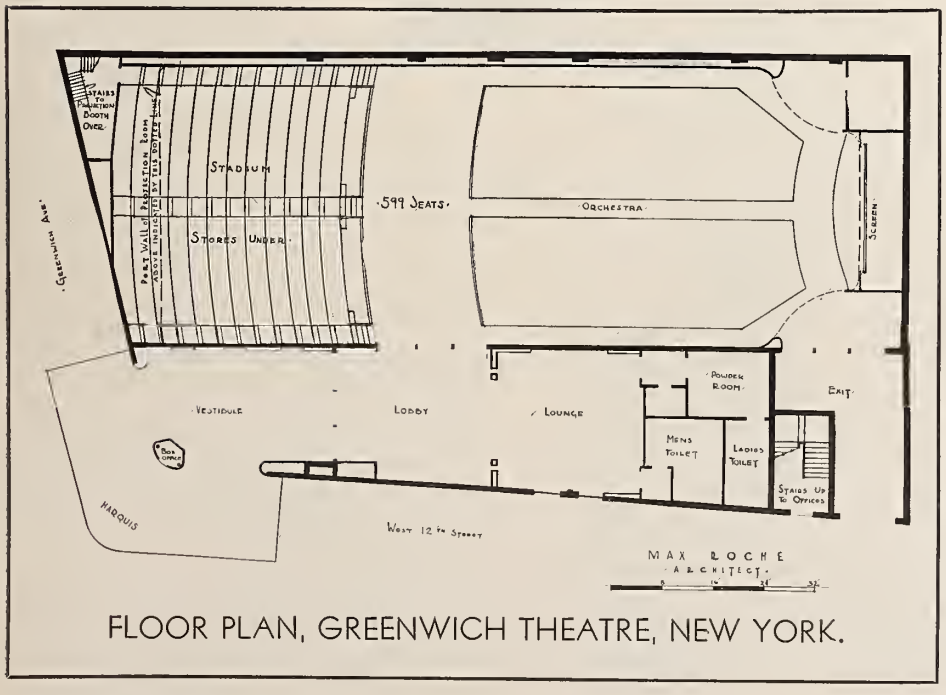
From Stable to Garage to Cinema

• Describing the 600-seat Greenwich theatre, New York, ingeniously fashioned from a building dating back to notorious beginnings sixty years ago

The interior of the first floor of the garage building before reconstruction. The wall in the left background is at the location of the screen. At the right the foyer and lounge were placed.

WHAT CAN BE done to an old building that has served, over a long period, several kinds of usefulness, is unusually well illustrated by the Greenwich theatre in New York City. The reconstruction of this property, located in lower Manhattan (Greenwich Village), has resulted in a cinema modern in architecture and operating facilities. It is a 600-seat house owned by Benjamin Knobel. Max Roche was the architect.

The history of the building goes back to the '70s. Then it was the Columbia Opera House, against which reformers crusaded. But it was an economic depression, not outraged morality, that finally closed the house, and the records show that the building was next used as a livery stable. The transition from livery stable to garage was a logical one with the coming of the automobile. For this purpose, the former theatre building was connected to an adjoining building, and this, along with other garage requirements, necessitated considerable reconstruction.



Thus when examined for remodeling into a modern cinema, the double-structure was found to be spanned by wooden trusses of unusual character, while one of its walls was underpinned by the subway. A second floor had been constructed of concrete and wood, with a ramp leading to the second level. The entire garage building measured 130x75 feet.

RECONSTRUCTION

In reconstruction, the entire second floor under the wooden trusses was demolished to make way for the cinema auditorium. The second floor under the other half of the structure (the building that had been joined to the opera house) was left intact for offices. Two castiron columns which supported two trusses and which formerly carried the balcony of the opera house, were removed and a steel girder substituted, thus leaving a clear open space from the front to the rear wall. A 12-inch brick fire wall was constructed to separate the auditorium from the lounge and foyer on the first floor, and the offices on the second floor, enclosing the auditorium in a space of 5,000 square feet. The theatre building is thus of semi-fireproof construction.

The floor plan (see accompanying drawing) provides for a corner entrance leading into a lobby, which in turn opens upon a foyer, on the left side of which is the entranceway to the auditorium, and which leads to a lounge.

The projection room measures 10x13 feet, with the motor-generator room adjacent. Motor-generators are Robin-Imperial supplying a high-intensity, low-voltage arc (Brenkert Enarc lamp). The projection angle is 10°.

FLOOR PLAN, GREENWICH THEATRE, NEW YORK.

THE FRONT

The front of the building was treated with stucco and painted a cream color. For trim, dark red porcelain enamel metal sheets were added, with aluminum stripping running horizontally around the exterior.

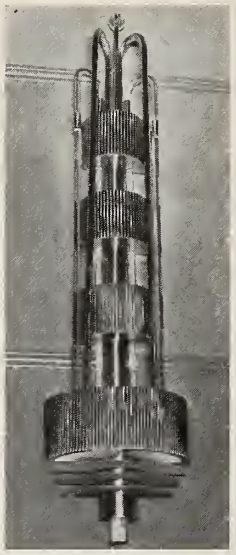
The lobby is finished in stucco.

FOYER AND LOUNGE

The foyer has a mahogany wainscoting to a height of 3 feet, 6 inches. Above this the wall is plastered and painted a warm gray. A ceiling was hung and plastered.

Above are the garage building before remodeling and a similar view of the theatre exterior after reconstruction.

The drinking water equipment of the Greenwich—of novel design in cadmium-plated metal. It is flanked by two cup dispensers of equally novel design, with a cylindrical lighting fixture mounted at the top of the cup receptacle by means of a metal band.



The chair model used in the Greenwich, by the Ideal Seating Company. It is of full-spring construction, at both seat and back. The seat is covered with mohair in a solid tone. The back is velour, with a pattern.

It is shaped to provide for a circular lighting cove, and it is moderately ornamented with stencil designs.

The lounge, which is more or less a continuation of the foyer, is similarly treated. Dominating the interior decoration is a large photo-mural of Washington Square executed by E. H. Blum. Windows face 12th Street, equipped with Venetian blinds. Both lounge and foyer are carpeted with a Crestwood weave.

THE AUDITORIUM

The auditorium is of stadium type, with 350 chairs on the main floor, and 300 in the stadium. Main floor rows number 18, and those in the stadium 13. All chairs, which are by Ideal Seating Company, are of full-spring type with spring backs. They are upholstered with seat coverings of mohair, and back coverings of velour.

Tubed illumination fixture used in the Greenwich auditorium. It is of special design in cadmium - plated metal of copper finish.

In building the stadium, all construction was carried out independently of the front wall because of the subway underpinning. The left wall (looking toward the screen) was furred out with metal lath to clear the piers and provide area for the air-conditioning ducts. A new ceiling was hung from trusses and set down in three successive steps toward the proscenium arch. Walls and ceiling were treated with acoustical plaster, except for the rear wall, where rock wool was used in deference to the color scheme.

The interior decorative treatment of the auditorium consists in horizontal wooden strips the full length of the room and continuing along the front wall, except for the interruption of the proscenium opening. Between the bands, the walls are painted in a progression of shades ranging upward from a leatherette wainscoting through peach to a light tan ceiling. The leatherette of the wainscot, which is 4 feet high, is vertically tufted. The ceiling has stenciled borders following the contour of the wall and ceiling breaks.

AIR-CONDITIONING

Introduction of conditioned air is from grilles along the left wall (looking toward the screen), located about 16 feet from the floor. The air, entering under pressure, has a motion toward the right wall and back at lower levels toward the left wall again, where it is exhausted at the floor. The system provides for 30% recirculation.

Conditioning so far provides only for heating, but cooling facilities are to be added. The boiler room is located under the entrance lobby, and the boiler has a capacity of 6,000 square feet of radiation. It is fired by an oil burner. Stores, which are located under the stadium, and the offices are supplied by direct radiation. For the theatre, the air passes through banks of preheating fin type coils. The duct system, with its returns for recirculation and mixing with fresh air, and provisions for the addition of mechanical refrigeration, supplies the lounge and foyer as well as the auditorium.

The registers in the system have adjustable vanes for varying the direction of the air motion, and all entrances and exits have registers designed for intensified delivery when doors are opened.

Lighting fixtures and certain other accessories are of special design. They were supplied by Joe Hornstein, Inc., through which firm all of the equipment and furnishings were provided.

Correct Uniforms for Theatre Staffs, and Their Maintenance

By HOWARD A. ZEIMER

● What the well dressed attendant of the well dressed theatre should wear, with a tabulation of styles and materials to assist in selection

THE UNIFORMS of motion picture theatre attendants should harmonize with the rest of the furnishings and can be made to express smartness, splendor, cleanliness, refinement and hospitality, regardless of the size or the location of the theatre you are operating.

TICKET-TAKER

Let us begin with the small house that has but a single ticket-taker. The outfit most extensively used for this attendant is a well-cut, form-fitting double-breasted suit. Coat and trousers can be made of the same material, trimmed with some bright contrasting cloth or braid, or a combination of both; or a desired color scheme can be carried out by using the coat of one material and the trousers of another. A military full-crowned cap with a glazed visor usually completes the ensemble.

USHERS

The most popular uniform for use by ushers is the double-breasted short Eton jacket with high-waisted trousers. There is a certain smartness about this type of uniform that has made its choice as an usher's uniform almost universal. Of course, its attractiveness depends a great deal on the skillful blending of colors in the materials and trimmings, in harmony with the furnishings and decorations of the theatre's interior.

This type of uniform also calls for the appropriate choice of accessories; namely, collars, shirt-fronts, ties, etc. Needless to add, such accessories should be changed often enough to have them look clean and fresh at all times—at least twice a week.

Where the standing-collar military uniform is preferred for ushers, it must be borne in mind that the collar of this type of uniform is its salient feature, and unless it is made to fit closely it loses its effectiveness. Since neck sizes vary greatly, and since it is a costly matter to alter military collars, it is not wise to adopt this type of uniform unless it is fairly certain that the employes wearing them will remain for at least a season. White uniform for summer wear, in serge, gabardine and washable materials, have become more and more popular in recent years.

There should be some distinction about the chief usher's uniform to single him out from the rest. This can be attained by the use of additional stripes of braid, chevrons, trefoils, citation cords or epaulets. The title, Chief Usher, embroidered on the sleeve or the breast of his uniform, is very often used for this purpose.

For the large house that employs a footman, the choice of his uniform is most important. It must reflect the impression you wish to convey on your prospective patrons. The error most often committed in the choice of a footman's uniform is that it is too elaborate and overdone. The season of the year is an important factor in determining what he should wear, as to style, color and also the weight of the material.

Starting with the spring, a single- or double-breasted suit of a medium weight fabric is most appropriate. As the summer comes on, it is advisable to change to a cool-looking white or light-colored outfit. This helps to make the general atmosphere more inviting to the patron, even though your house may be air-cooled inside.

How to Avoid and Defend Damage Suits Over Injuries to Patrons

By LEO T. PARKER

● Outlining the legal opinion applying in accident cases and what theatre owners and managers can do to meet it effectively

DURING THE years 1934-35 an unusually large number of decisions were released by the higher courts involving theatre owners, corporations and operators. It may be surprising to many to learn that more than one-half of these decisions were rendered against the theatre owners, corporations and operators. Yet a great majority of these decisions relates to common legal principles encountered every day in the operation and conduct of the ordinary theatre.

Obviously, had the various owners, executives, managers, and employes of the theatres, involved in these litigations, acquired elementary legal knowledge by previous reading, many of these decisions might have been different; indeed, some of these suits might never have been instituted.

INJURY CASES LEAD

The greatest percentage of losing litigations in 1934-35 related to injuries sustained by patrons. This information is remarkable when it is considered that in almost every instances the heavy damages awarded injured theatre patrons may have been saved by the theatre owners had certain well founded rules of theatre conduction and management been followed.

GUARDING AGAINST LOSS OVER INJURIES

IN ORDER to avoid financial losses from law suits filed by injured patrons, it must be kept in mind that the courts have laid down the rule that in order to impose liability for injuries to a patron, by reason of a dangerous or defective condition in a theatre, the injured person must prove that the defect or condition which caused the injury was known to the one in control of the theatre, and that it had existed for a sufficient period of time; that it was the legal duty of the person in control to discover such defect or dangerous condition and make the necessary changes, repairs or modifications to avoid injury.

The outcome of all suits for injuries to patrons depends on whether the manager of the theatre had knowledge, or should have had information, of the danger or defect which caused the injury; and also, whether by the application of an ordinary degree of care, he should have discovered and remedied it.

Of course, a theatre manager is not expected by the law to remedy every condition and defect which may possibly cause injury to a patron. It is only the condition or defect that is likely to effect injury which should be remedied.

ANTICIPATING DEFENSE

In order to build up evidence that may be used, in the event an injured patron files suit, the manager should have competent employes inspect the theatre premises at frequent intervals. Although a theatre patron may prove by convincing testimony that a defect existed which caused the injury, the theatre owner may counteract this testimony, render it ineffectual and, in many instances, avoid liability by proving that no defect was discovered during a recent inspection of the theatre premises. Ability to introduce this testimony invariably results in the court rendering its decision in favor of the theatre owner. See Warner Brothers Theatres, 177 S. E. 629, in which the court said:

"Unless the condition had existed long enough to have given the proprietor opportunity to have seen it in the exercise of due care, he cannot be held liable. . . . Liability could not be imposed upon defendant (theatre owner) unless it was also shown that this condition of the carpet was known to defendant (theatre owner) or had existed for such a length of time that defendant should have known of it. . . ."

In this case the theatre owner introduced testimony proving that an usher inspected the aisles daily, and that a carpet over which the patron tripped was not defective nor dangerous at the morning inspection on the day the injury occurred. And, therefore, the higher court reversed the lower court's decision which held the theatre owner liable in heavy damages.

Compare the above testimony with that offered by the theatre owner in the case of Lothrop Theatres, Boston, 193 N. E. 19. In this case it was disclosed that a carpet was "ragged, worn and torn" and was "lapped" or "rolled" over or "curled up" so that it projected from 1½ to 2 inches above the level of the floor. The carpet had been in use at that place for about three years. A patron tripped on the carpet and sustained severe injuries. Since no testimony was introduced proving that the rug or carpet was not frequently inspected, and it was apparent that the rug had been torn and its edges curled for a long period, the higher court promptly held the theatre owner liable, saying:

"From the length of time the carpet had been on the floor, the extent of its use, its worn and torn state and the elevation above the floor level the finding was justified that the condition was not transitory or of recent origin."

PREPARING EVIDENCE IN INJURY SUITS

THE SAME rule of the law with respect to frequent inspection of carpets and floor coverings is applicable to all other things and accessories in the theatre. In order to avoid liability for injuries to patrons, and incidentally be prepared to win suits which may be filed by injured patrons, theatre managers should adopt the following rules:

1. Be prepared to have employes testify that they inspected the theatre premises the morning the injury occurred, and that the premises, seats, floor coverings, etc., were in good condition, and that steps and other dangerous locations were properly illuminated. If any defective conditions are discovered by inspecting employes, make necessary repairs immediately.

2. If a known dangerous condition exists instruct the ushers to make an effort to direct the attention of the patron to this dangerous condition.

3. Instruct employes that as soon as an injury occurs they shall examine the thing or condition which caused the injury so that they may testify if suit subsequently is filed.

4. Be certain that no oil, soap suds or other slippery substance is permitted to remain on steps, floors, etc., as many thousands of dollars in damages have been paid by theatre owners to patrons injured by these dangerous conditions.

5. Promptly replace burned-out bulbs in seat and aisle lights, because, although a

A CHAT WITH AN INTERESTING PERSON OF THE THEATRE WORLD

MORTON L. CLARK, who says:

Marquees Sell At Point of Purchase

ALTHOUGH one of the youngest ranking executives in the electric sign industry, Morton L. Clark has acquired something of a "Past" in this field. And it is a field, of course, of fundamental concern to the motion picture theatre, since the marquee and its signs are the showman's chief spokesmen.

Mr. Clark comes naturally by his consistent — and persistent — interest in contrivances for "saying it" with electric light. He inherits it from his father, who was a master sign craftsman in Omaha. Young Clark made signs, so to speak, before he could talk. Now, a few years later (relatively), he is vice president and sales manager of the Artkraft Sign Company of Lima, Ohio, a major fabricator of signs, marquees and allied structures, national in its operations.

Before joining the Artkraft organization in November, 1935, Mr. Clark was an executive of the Lusterlite Company in Davenport, Ia. It was there that he conceived and developed the idea of the V-shape marquee. In creating this marquee, the first of which was installed at the Tri-State Theatre Corporation's Omaha theatre in Omaha, Mr. Clark worked very closely with David H. Dewey, in charge of Tri-State's construction activities. Many of Dewey's ideas were incorporated in the initial job. This installation was presented, as a highly commendable innovation, at the MPTOA convention in New Orleans a year ago, by Willard Brown of General Electric's Nela Park research staff. It was immediately acclaimed, and since has been widely adopted for theatres. Since forming his present connection Mr. Clark has made a number of improvements in this type of marquee design, and he has also been instrumental in getting General Electric and Westinghouse to develop a 6-watt lamp for marquee border work.

"People, by the very law of nature, are attracted by, and intuitively follow, light and motion," Mr. Clark told the writer during a tour of inspection through the factory in Lima. "The marquee, therefore, offers the one tremendous means of quickly focusing attention on the theatre. It is at once pleasingly inviting, or definitely repellent, in proportion to the design, lighting and general appearance. It constitutes that vital first impression. It is, in fact, an unmistakable index which reflects the personality and character of the theatre and its management, just as clothes proclaim the man, you might say."

Later in his office—the factory proved to be poorly adapted, acoustically, to an interview—the writer asked him to return to this theme. It apparently had been suggested by practices which Mr. Clark felt entirely out of line with the logic of showbusiness.

"Well," he said, "it happens about like this: Architects and many exhibitors and others connected with theatre design and construction, spend months in carefully planning their lobbies, auditoriums, lounges and so on, yet give the front, with its marquee and illumination elements, only a sort of off-hand consideration—or so it would appear. All too often the result looks like an eleventh-hour afterthought. The marquee, for example, looks like something just tacked on, something dragged in by its heels."

Mr. Clark paused here to explain that this was a general statement, made without any personal or individual reference.

"But here's the point, as I see it," he continued. "Merchants employ experts to dress and trim their display windows. They are mighty careful to arrange the displays in the most appealing manner. Why? Simply to attract attention, to arouse interest in the goods, to create a desire for them, and to bring about the act of purchase. It is nothing more nor less than advertising at the point of sale.

"Now, to get back to the first impression angle: A properly designed, well balanced and correctly lighted marquee instantly imparts a feeling of dignity, comfort and cheer. Thus a patron is intuitively 'sold' on the theatre whether he realizes it or not. This, in turn, makes for better audience reaction."

The writer suggested that the marquee and its electrical sign and attraction board elements were thus really more than mere physical structures.

"They most certainly are," Mr. Clark responded instantly. "In fact, they should never be looked upon as items of expense, necessary evils traditionally accepted as part of theatre construction. To the contrary, they should be looked upon as an asset which pays substantial dividends in increased prestige for the theatre, and consequently greater business and profits. If the marquee is a carefully studied and planned job, rather than a haphazard, slipshod or makeshift affair, the initial cost and subsequent operation are inconsequential compared with the tangible results which accrue. Exhibitors should realize that the marquee is an advertising medium."

Incidentally, Mr. Clark's interest in motion pictures does not stop at the front of the theatre. He is even more than a fan, for he has quite an elaborate home camera-and-projector outfit (16 millimeter), and amateur movie-making is a hobby. Indeed, last year while in the West, he produced an amateur "talkie" (he was then on a trip during which he made more than 50 addresses before civic and fraternal organizations). Moreover—and this must identify him definitely with the theatre—he is an enthusiastic and gifted exponent of the art of magic.

"But," he laughed, "maybe you'd better explain that this is just a hobby, too. Otherwise, I avoid all sleight-of-hand absolutely."—E. H. MAYER.

About People of the Theatre

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

MERLE DEVINE is planning to renovate and modernize the interior of his Peerless, north side Milwaukee house. The front of the house was modernized several months ago. Devine also operates the Violet in Milwaukee.

C. E. HURTT of Yuma, Colo., has taken over the Rainbow at Wilsonville, Neb., from J. LAUX.

The Napa Theatre Corporation of Napa, Calif., will erect a theatre there at an estimated cost of $40,000.

HENRY TOBIN has succeeded to the managership of the Olympia in Olneyville, R. I., left vacant by the death of J. Fred Lovett.

T. & D. Jr., Enterprises of San Francisco, with main offices at 25 Taylor Street, has arranged to remodel the California theatre in Petaluma, Calif. The estimated cost of the work is $40,000.

ABE FRIEDMAN of Sioux City, Ia., has formed the Mapleton, Ia., Amusement Company and taken over the Princess there. It was operated by OPAL BROWN.

The Mingo theatre at Amory, Miss., operated for years by J. A. OWEN, has been sold to M. L. ROSENZWEIG.

The Rialto in Providence, R. I., is being renovated by Ed Fay, independent circuit owner. The staff of the house, including AL CLARKE, the manager, has moved to the reopened Carlton in Providence while the work is going on.

HAL MACON, operator of the State theatre in Statesboro, Ga., will erect a new motion picture theatre there at a cost of $18,000. The new house will seat 700.

PHIL CHAKERES, of the Regent-State Theatre Corporation of Springfield, Ohio, is spending a vacation in California.

A. A. BURRUS, Crete, Neb., exhibitor, has returned, fully recuperated, from Hot Springs, Ark., where he went for treatment several weeks ago.

GEORGE A. SMITH, of the Majestic theatre in Willits, Calif., has announced plans for the remodeling of this house at an estimated cost of $5,000.

JOHN MERCER has been transferred from New York to take over the assistant managership of Loew's Poli in Worcester, Mass. He replaces WILLIAM MACDERMOTT, who has been shifted to a similar post at the Poli in Springfield.

HAROLD SCHOONOVER, manager of the Mazda at Aurora, Neb., believed one of the oldest theatres in Nebraska, has closed that house while a new front and new seating are being installed.

HARRY BLACKSTONE has been named resident manager of the Regent theatre in Arlington, Mass., by E. M. Loew, independent circuit operator.

A. A. HUTCHINSON, manager of the State theatre in Spartanburg, S. C., has been transferred to Lenoir, N. C., as manager of two theatres in that city.

BRUCE MERRILL, who boasts the longest record in film business in Nebraska, hopes to see for the first time in 27 years, Sunday shows in his Lyric theatre at Edgar, Neb. The question comes up at the spring primary election.

NAT HOCHBERG, independent circuit operator in New England, is remodeling both his Town Hall in Cohasset and the Roosevelt in East Weymouth.

The Badin theatre at Albemarle, N. C., dark for the last two or three years, has been reopened under the management of G. A. HUGHES.

WILLIAM T. ROBINSON, who owned and operated the first motion picture theatre in Belmont, N. C., died March 24 at his home in that city. He retired from business some time ago because of ill health. He was 62 years old.

HARRY E. SCHILLER, manager of the Grand at Grand Island, Neb., and Mrs. Schiller, recently attended a family celebration in Kansas City, where Mr. Schiller's parents observed their golden wedding anniversary at the home of their daughter there.

VICTOR A. MORRIS, manager of Loew's Orpheum in Boston for the past 25 years, was presented with a platinum wristwatch and scroll by fellow theatre men at a dinner in his honor. Joseph Brennan, business manager of the M.P.T.O. in Boston, was toastmaster.

ERIC PETERSEN, distributor for Motiograph in New England, has moved his main office from Springfield and is now located at the corner of Winchester and Arlington Streets in the quarters of Comi's Theatre Service and Supply Company.

TOM BROAD, who operates the Broad theatre at St. Mary's, Ohio, has sailed for a tour of Greece.

M. GLICKMAN has taken over the Keith's theatre at Fairhaven, Mass. The house, seating 600, was formerly operated by L. TASK, and before that was the American theatre in which ERNEST COMI was interested. It is being reconditioned.

M. WEINGRUN, owner of a suburban theatre, the Avenue, is having it remodeled with the intention of making it a class-A house.

MRS. NEIL ABLE is erecting a new motion picture theatre at Saluda, S. C.

The Globe in Manchester, N. H., is being remodeled by LUCIEN DESCOTEAU, owner of the Empire in Boston, who has acquired the former situation which was previously controlled by C. J. HOLMAN.

S. W. MILLER has announced plans for improvements to the State theatre, Rhinelander, Wis., as soon as weather permits. Work will include building of a higher pitch to the seating floor, new seats, new decorations and lighting fixtures, as well as a new cooling system.

LAWRENCE MCCRANN, who has been associated with the New York Office of the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., for over thirteen years, has been transferred to the company's sales force in the Hartford territory.

A new theatre is planned in West Haven, Conn., by MICHAEL CASCIOLI, who operates the Park in Allington. The new house will seat about 1,000.

The interests of J. A. HARVEY and H. B. HARVEY in the Pajaro theatre in Watsonville, Calif., have been taken over by West Coast Theatres.

SCHINE'S STRAND, at Delaware, Ohio, recently acquired from HENRY BIEBERSON, has been improved throughout. Schines now have twenty theatres in their Ohio chain, as follows: Athens, 3; Tiffin, 3; Wooster, 2; Piqua, 2; Bellefontaine, 2; Bucyrus, 2; Van Wert, 2, and one each in Norwalk, Ashland, Mt. Vernon and Delaware.

ELLISON DUNN, of Donaldson, Ga., has purchased the Lyric theatre at Fort Gaines, Ga., from George M. Coleman, who operated it for about 20 years. He has changed the name to the Ritz.

Insulation as a Means of Lowering The Cost of Heating and Cooling

● Examining methods of preventing the transmission of heat through theatre buildings so as to reduce air-conditioning charges to a minimum

EVERY MATERIAL used in theatre construction has a certain capacity or ability to pass or transmit heat. Putting it in another way, all building materials exert a resistance to the transmission of heat. Heat is transmitted into or out of buildings by one or more of three ways: by radiation, conduction or convection. Ordinary engineering practice permits us to use carefully coefficients of heat transmission which meets pretty exactly the average resultant of all three of these methods of heat loss or heat gain. As one's familiarity with the coefficients of heat transmission grows, the loss of cooling effect in summer time and the loss of heat in the winter time appears to be a very real thing. Serious consideration, then, of the value of materials and their application in the remodeling of our existing theatres, as well as to the construction of new ones has a dollars-and-cents value.

Proper insulation may be sufficient to bring an under-capacity refrigeration plant up to par and really produce air-conditioning, or it may be just the thing for that theatre which has a boiler that has never really kept the theatre warm. Undoubtedly some type of insulating would have saved theatre operators hundreds of dollars during this past cold winter. By the same measure, it will save many operating hours for many refrigerated theatres, it will make air-washed theatres very much more comfortable, and it will make straight ventilating jobs passable.

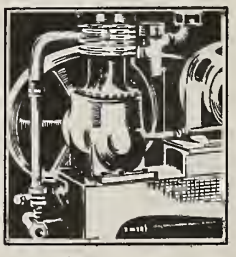
Some form of rock wool is the ideal insulation for theatres: it is fire resistant, vermin-proof and a most effective protection against dampness or moisture. It is comparatively light (in a 4-inch thickness it weighs about 2 pounds per square foot), and it can be applied to any ceiling or to the underside of any roof (steel deck roofs not excepted).

It is customary to use rock or mineral wool in 4-inch thickness for installation in theatres, but of course the exact thickness will depend upon the construction of the building. Four inches of mineral wool have been found sufficient to prevent the penetration of from 80 per cent to 90 per cent of the heat transferred through this area. Rock wool in two basic forms: wool form, which resembles gray, dirty wool just as if it might be shorn from a sheep; and in bat form, which resembles a thick (6-inch) piece of gray cotton batting about 12 x24 inches in size.

The wool form is applied between walls or over ceilings in attic spaces by being blown into place with an air gun. Both walls and ceiling should be treated if this does not require very expensive alterations; however, the application of 4 inches of insulation to the upper side of the ceiling, or to the under side of the roof, has frequently proved highly effective. The cost of any such insulation is either costly or reasonable, in the light of tangible savings thus effected or of added comfort created.

INSULATION AND AIR-CONDITIONING COST

NO DOUBT many theatre managers have conscientiously tried to use the humidifying equipment in their theatre during the winter months, only to give it up as a bad job because of condensation forming on walls and ceiling. Condensation is formed on the walls and ceiling when the warm, more or less humid air comes in contact with cold walls or ceiling. The coldness of the walls reduces the temperature of the layer of air next to it below the dew point of the air, and beads of moisture form on the wall. Proper insulation prevents this condition.



Insufficient moisture in the air inside our theatres in winter is a contributing cause of colds and of nose and throat irritation. With proper insulation, inexpensive humidifying equipment may be added to any heating plant. It is the winter dryness within the theatres that causes paint to peel and plaster to become brittle and chip easily, even whole pieces of ornamental plaster to loosen and fall. Insulate the theatres, then humidify them in winter and the theatre will not only be a more healthful place, but it will be easier to maintain.

In a certain theatre where the heating plant had been inadequate on very cold days, proper insulation was installed last fall. The result has been that during this past winter, the coldest in many years, the auditorium was thoroughly comfortable at all times. There was no other change made in the heating system. Actually, the heating bill is running about 15 per cent less than in previous years.

SUMMER OPERATION

At this season you will be interested to know that the savings and increased comfort in summer is just as real as in the above example for winter. With proper insulation, the amount of refrigerating equipment may often be reduced and, even then, the plant may be operated fewer hours. Naturally operating costs are reduced.

If you are considering air-conditioning this year, consider carefully the possibility of insulating the theatre. Maybe insulation will bring that initial cost and operating cost into line and make it at last possible for you.

Where summer air-conditioning systems that depend on washed or natural air alone for cooling, are employed, the inside dry bulb temperature may often be reduced as much as 4° or 6° by insulating only the roof or ceiling. Here is an actual experience which will give an excellent idea of just what insulation can accomplish.

In a theatre that had the entire roof insulated, the temperature in the fly loft was 93° after the job had been done, whereas before it had been installed the temperature ranged around 142°—a drop in temperature of 49°. In this same theatre the attic temperature of 122° was reduced to 86°—a total reduction of 36. In the auditorium itself, the usual temperature before starting the refrigeration was 86°; after insulating, the corresponding temperature was never more than 80°. This condition permitted a lapse of from two to three hours in starting the equipment, thereby making appreciable savings in operating costs for the total season.

The foregoing facts taken from jobs actually done during the past two years, confirmed all of the calculations made prior to the installation of the insulation. In other words, it is possible to know beforehand just what insulation can do for your theatre, there is no necessity for guessing. Through intelligent analysis of any theatre by an engineer, it is possible to determine with great accuracy just what the benefits are that will be derived from insulation.

A good insulating job works for the theatre twelve months of the year, summer and winter.

INSULATING WITH ROCK WOOL

ROCK WOOL or mineral wool is made in two forms. The more common variety and the one which I have had reference to in this article, is made by mixing certain kinds of stone—flint, for instance—with molten slag from blast furnaces, and converting the whole mass into a fibrous state. The best slag for the purpose is that which is free from iron. The appearance of the finished product is much like that of sheep's wool, being soft and fibrous, but in no other respect is it similar. Mineral wool made by this method ranges in color from an almost white to dirty yellow and mouse gray. The color cannot be taken as any indication of its quality, as all of the qualities peculiar to the stone or stones and the slag are present regardless of its color.

The other method of manufacturing is to take a clear rock, (flint or granite, for example) and raise it in temperature to about 3,000°F. It is the product from this process that is usually referred to as rock wool. This type of rock wool is more pure, being practically free from sulphur, which is usually present in the slag process. Rock wool manufactured by this process is absolutely odorless. The color of this type of rock wool varies somewhat, depending upon the stone it is made of; but wool made of the same rock runs surprisingly uniform in color.

WOOL COMPOSITION

Both kinds of mineral or rock wool consist of a moss of very fine, pliant but rather

Washed Air Cooling Systems Can NOW have

AUTOMATIC CONTROL by Thermostat

Every theatre man who has operated a washed air cooling system knows that it is difficult to regulate it by hand—to keep the audience comfortable at all times, and keep an even temperature throughout the theatre. U.S. AircO engineers have perfected the equalized method of air distribution and the automatic control that solve both these problems—the

Equalized Kooler-Aire

With Completely Automatic Thermostat Control

The "Equalized" Kooler-Aire System assures an even temperature in all parts of the theatre under all conditions. No "dumping" of cold air on the front rows—no overheated areas at the back. Now, in addition, Kooler-Aire Thermostatic Control governs this even coolness automatically—without being constantly regulated by hand.

Automatic Control for Every Type of System

No matter what kind of cooling system you have, no longer will you have to remember it—or guess how much to turn it on or off. Just set the thermostat at the temperature desired—and forget it. It will respond instantly to any change in outside temperature or inside heat load from the audience. The Equalized, Thermostatic Kooler-Aire System is the final step necessary to bring perfect comfort to your patrons at all times—in whatever section of your theatre they may be seated.

elastic, vitreous fibers interlacing and forming an infinite number of very minute air cells. Its great value as an insulator lies in the great number of these very small air cells which it contains, and being consequently non-conducting of heat, it has high fire-resisting qualities which also make it ideal for use in theatres.

In mineral wool made from common slag, it has been determined that 92% of it by volume consists of air held in the tiny cells; in the best grade the proportion may be as high as 97%. From this it seems as if we buy mostly air when we buy insulation for our theatres, but air confined in small cells makes one of the best, or perhaps the best, non-conductors.

After learning how this material is manufactured it is quite easily understood why it does not decay, rot with moisture, or become musty with that objectionable odor. It is also rather sharp and if handled vigorously with the bare hands it will wear the skin from the finger tips—even the finger nails will wear down. It feels so soft at the first touch that it is hard to believe that workmen laying the wool in bat form must wear heavy horse hide gloves, and even these wear through very quickly at the finger tips.

FIRE AND SOUND FACTORS

Rock wool is incombustible and it therefore retards fire in its progress through floors or walls where it has been used. However, we are unable to obtain any insurance reduction because of this since the wool, as wool, is not self-supporting, and if the outer covering of metal lath and plaster or sheathing is destroyed, the wool will fall out of place and thereby destroy its value as a fire break.

Rock wool is not only a heat insulator but also a sound insulator; it would make excellent, although expensive, acoustical material. For sound proofing it is usually made up in quilt form, between muslin, and then stiffened and quilted to ½-inch chicken wire on the outside of the muslin. These quilts come in a 4 x 6-foot, or a 4 x 8-foot size, about 1½ inches to 2 inches thick, rather firmly packed, but not packed hard. It is quite clear, I believe, that if it were compressed or the air cells squeezed out, it would not make an effective heat or cold insulator or sound absorber.

Where there is an attic space between the roof and the ceiling, the wool may be applied directly to the ceiling by either the pneumatic packing method or by packing in bats.

Of these various applications, the attachment to the concrete roof is the most expensive—this will run about 37c per square foot. To a wood ceiling it will perhaps cost about 33c per square foot. Application by the pneumatic method will range in price from 26c to 30c per square foot. Remember when applying this material, by any method, to a slung ceiling, that rock wool will weigh about 2 pounds per square foot for each 4-inch thickness. Most any slung ceiling in theatres operated today should be able to carry this extra weight Should there be any possible question about it, add some more tie rods. In some of the very old theatres where there are suspended ceilings entirely of wood construction, calculate this additional weight carefully. In such a case, it is probably better to apply it to the roof. I, personally, believe that the underside of the roof installation is the best location and really more desirable. —J. T. K.

patron is injured as a result of his own carelessness, and not entitled to damages, he may win the suit by proving that the usual illumination at the place of the injury was defective.

6. Be certain that state and municipality fire regulations are strictly adhered to and in every respect.

7. Do not, as owner of a building, lease or rent the premises for temporary entertainments or public affairs, unless the users agree to assume all responsibilities for injuries to patrons.

8. If the lease is for one year or more the lease contract should contain a clause which requires the lessee to make necessary improvements. If the theatre operator desires to protect himself against liability for injuries he should require the owner of the building to make necessary repairs and assume all responsibilities.

9. Instruct employes regarding their duties, or compel them to read light legal writings on theatre law in order that they may be capable of protecting theatre owners against financial losses from common sources of liability.

REVIEW OF RECENT CASES

IN ORDER that readers may acquire practical knowledge and obtain dependable information of important phases of the law, actual theatre injury cases decided by the higher courts during the past few months will be briefly reviewed. The cases selected are believed to present such unusual phases of the law that theatre owners, managers, executives and employes may acquire valuable information and knowledge not previously explained.

Sometimes an injury results from two conditions, one of which cannot be considered the fault or negligence of the theatre owner. If the negligence of the theatre owner or his employes is directly the cause of the injury, the theatre owner is liable, otherwise he is not liable. This situation existed in Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc. v. Perry, Oklahoma City, Okla., (44 Pac. [2d] 942).

Here a patron, while descending a stairway, slipped on a banana peeling, although, as he testified, he was "proceeding with due care and traveling at the usual rate of travel in descending the stairway." He also proved that the stairway was dimly lighted.

In rendering its decision the higher court explained that the outstanding question was whether or not the degree of negligence, with regard to the lighting system, was the proximate cause of the injury. In other words, proof that illumination of the stairway was insufficient to enable the patron to observe the banana peeling, may result in a theatre owner being liable for an injury under similar circumstances.

COLLECT TESTIMONY

In the event a theatre owner has failed to inspect the premises properly, or for any other reason it appears that the injury resulted from his negligence, it is advisable to learn from the injured patron whether he knew that he was in danger before the accident occurred. This testimony may win the suit.

For illustration, in Loew's Nashville & Knoxville Corporation v. Durrett, Nashville, Tenn. (79 S. W. 598), a woman was seriously injured when she fell down balcony steps that were poorly illuminated, and no usher was present to direct her. However, she stated that she realized that no usher was present to assist her and that she appreciated the danger of falling down the dark steps.

When this testimony was introduced, the higher court promptly held the patron not entitled to damages, although the theatre owner had negligently failed to illuminate the steps properly and did not supply an usher to assist or direct patrons.

The law established in this new decision is that the proprietor of a theatre to which the public is invited and an admission is charged, is under an obligation to use ordinary care and diligence to put and keep the place in a reasonably safe condition for its patrons. Such proprietor is not an insurer of the safety of patrons attending, but he is bound to use ordinary care for their safety and protection, and if an injury results to them from a breach of this duty he is liable. But the duty which the proprietor owes to its patrons does not relieve a patron from the duty of exercising ordinary care for his own safety. And since motion pictures are, and of necessity must be, shown in semi-darkness, any person who is negligent, careless, or who realizes the danger, cannot recover damages for an injury.

EMPLOYE NEGLIGENCE

Another important rule established by a recent court is that a theatre owner cannot avoid liability by proving that the injury resulted because an employe disobeyed instructions. In this case (197 N. E. 54) a patron who was seated in the balcony desired to change seats. She was told by the usher, in violation to the instructions of the theatre owner, to "find your own seat." The theatre steps were unusually dark and the patron tripped and fell. The theatre owner attempted to avoid liability by testifying that the usher had violated his instructions which were that the usher should always conduct patrons to seats.

The court refused to hold the theatre owner not liable on this plea, but held the patron not entitled to a verdict because of his own negligence in attempting to descend stairs known by him to be dangerous.

FAILURE OF PROOF

Neither a theatre owner nor an injured patron may win a favorable verdict by introduction of testimony which is not ordinarily convincing.

For example, in one case a patron who was injured in a theatre sued the proprietor on the grounds that the defective condition caused the injury. However, he attempted to prove the defect by introducing a photograph of the carpet made two years after the accident. The higher court in this case (178 Atl. 740) held the theatre owner not liable, saying:

"The proofs are very slender and depend partly upon a photograph of the carpet made about two years after the accident, the carpet having been in full use during the interim."

LESSEE HELD LIABLE

If the owner of a theatre building leases it to a theatre operator the latter is solely liable for injuries to patrons, unless the testimony proves conclusively that the owner of the building did something to cause the injury, or failed to do something which he should have done to prevent the injury.

In one case, Bates v. Stearns, Wichita, Kan. (44 Pac. [2d] 278), it was shown that a promoter leased a building and made improvements therein which later caused injury to one of the audience. This court promptly held the owner of the building not liable because he had nothing whatever to do with making the improvement involved in the case.

Of course, if the building owner had negligently made the improvements he would have been liable. This Court explained that where a landlord leases property and gives possession of it and control to the tenant, the tenant can sue and recover damages if the landlord interferes with possession of the property, for which reason the landlord cannot be held liable for improvements negligently made by the tenant.

FILM FIRE

Generally speaking, a theatre owner is not liable in damages for an injury caused directly or indirectly as a result of a film igniting, unless the testimony clearly indicates that the film ignited from negligence of the theatre owner or his employe.

For example, in Zaragoza Amusement Company v. Scott, San Antonio, Texas (77 S. W. [2d] 1060), it was shown that a film was ignited in the projecting room, resulting in a commotion among the spectators, some of whom rushed out of the building. Among the spectators was one who, claiming she was injured when some of the others ran over or against her, brought suit for damages against the theatre owner.

In refusing to hold the theatre owner liable the court explained that it was sufficient to say that there was no evidence to support the allegations.

small fans on the mezzanine floor at the front. One of these ventilates the toilet rooms, another ventilates the projection booth, and the third unit in conjunction with a steam heater furnishes heat to the lobby and office.

The auditorium is heated by fresh air coming in at the fresh air intake, passing through the filters and heating coil, then to the blower, where it is carried to the velocity controlling ducts over the stage (numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4 in the accompanying diagrams) and through the air conditioning registers to the respective points 1A, 2A, 3A and 4A in the theatre auditorium.

Temperature is controlled by an electric clock thermostat located in the front of the auditorium and actuating a motorized valve on the heating coil. The heating of the auditorium may be accelerated, if necessary, by opening two duct dampers in the basement, which will recirculate the air through the two bottom registers at the front and the two registers beneath the stage at the rear.

Cooling of the auditorium is through the same blower and duct system used for heating. Ventilation of the auditorium occurs simultaneously with cooling or heating cycle. The proportion of fresh air and recirculated air may be regulated by dampers located in the basement. Control of cooling temperatures is effected by a thermostat located in the front of the auditorium. To eliminate the danger of air entering the auditorium through supply registers over the stage which may be too cold, a temperature limiting stat controlling the cooling coil has been provided. The cooling coils are connected to an 18-ton refrigerating machine.

The system is of the direct expansion type, with Freon gas as the refrigerant. Flexibility of operation in meeting varying warm weather loads is had through the two-speed electric motor-driven compressor, which is entirely automatic. When the thermostat initially calls for cooling, the compressor goes into low speed operation, and if the cooling effect is not sufficient, the compressor motor then operates at high speed. When the reverse is true, the compressor motor steps down from high to low speed, and further to shut-down position if still too cool.

The entire cooling part of the system has been designed to maintain 80° dry bulb temperature with 50% relative humidity in the auditorium when the outdoor condition is 95° dry bulb temperature and 75° wet bulb. Each person will be supplied with 30 cubic feet of air per minute when the theatre is full (based on 300 persons) with a blower capacity of 6,000 cubic feet of air per minute. The refrigerant is cooled by city water, thermostatically controlled by valves to prevent waste.

A fusible link electrical control has been installed on the stage wall, which automatically shuts down the blower in case of fire. This will avoid any possibility of spreading flame or smoke and reduces the hazard of fire.

The operating efficiency of the equipment, the theatre management reports, is very high because of the automatic controls. The heating cost during the past winter season has been exceedingly low, the consumption of oil averaging about 20 gallons per day.

In the Next Issue: Suggestions for Redecoration

Are you going to refurbish the interior of your theatre this spring or summer? If so, you will probably go modern. But not all that glitters is modern. There is true modern and false modern. Madame Modjeska is considered an authority on what is truly modern in interior decorating, and in the May 2d issue of Better Theatres she will offer many suggestions for theatre foyers and lounges, with sketches especially made to illustrate her instruction.

are most appropriate for fall use, and sometimes in the spring. When the severe winter weather comes on, heavy wool-lined overcoats are essential to keep the footman warm and comfortable. He can, of course, continue to wear his spring or fall outfit underneath, and the same cap.

In the larger houses, where an assistant manager or chief of staff is employed, he should wear a dark conservative civilian suit, preferably double-breasted, with gilt or silver uniform buttons. His title, either embroidered on a separate bar pin or on the front of his coat in gold or silver bullion to match the buttons, will complete the desired effect.

PORTERS

The most suitable uniform for porters, who are constantly in view of the public, is a blouse and trousers, with a cap to match. Such an outfit gives him plenty of freedom to work in, while maintaining the general uniformed appearance. Inexpensive washable fabrics in all colors are available for this purpose.

WOMEN EMPLOYES

Where electricians, projection men and property men are so employed that they come in contact with the public, the same type of uniform as that suggested for the porter is perfectly in order.

The uniforming of the female employes, such as the cashier and usherettes, where they are used, is governed more by personal taste and discretion. Whether full dresses, or separate blouses and skirts are used, the important thing to bear in mind is the fact that they must be comfortable and in harmony with the furnishings and decorations throughout the house.

In addition to the uniforms, accessories such as collars, ties, spats, gloves, raincoats, belts and change pouches, umbrellas, shirt-fronts, etc., are used to carry out the desired effects—for footmen, ticket-takers, and ushers especially.

The proper maintenance of uniforms is practically as important as choice of style and material. Unless uniforms are dry-cleaned or steam-cleaned and pressed at least once a month, perspiration and dust causes deterioration of the garments more than actual wear. All well-established uniform concerns are equipped to handle this problem.

In caring for washable uniforms, it is important to choose a reputable laundry which does not use excessive alkalis to facilitate the washing process.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE CONDUCTED BY PETER M. HULSKEN, A. I. A.

• Mr. Hulskin is a member of the American Institute of Architects and has long specialized in theatre designing. In this department he will be glad to answer questions pertaining to preliminary considerations involved in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. Working plans and designs can not be supplied, however, since this department may not assume the functions of an architect. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification.

The Question:

WE ARE ENCLOSING a rough sketch of a contemplated theatre which we might build in connection with another building, though all under one roof. We are wondering if you could give us any advice as to slope, height, and number of seats we could get in this space, allowing for a stage for traveling troupes and local entertainments.

In fact, we would appreciate any advice you might be able to give us along these lines, before we present our proposition to an architect.—B. D.

The Answer:

ACCORDING TO your sketch, there is a space 30x82 feet available for your theatre proper. The front part, 20x25 feet, is sufficient for a lobby and for men's and women's toilets.

For a stage to accommodate traveling troupes, a minimum depth of 18 feet should be allowed. There should be provided at least 12 feet from curtain line to first row of seats, and in the rear there should be a foyer or cross-aisle 6 feet in width.

After taking these items into consideration, there will be left space for 18 rows of seats. For an auditorium width of 30 feet, the best seating arrangement will be 13 seats across the width of the auditorium with a wall aisle on each side, so the maximum seating capacity will be 234 seats. This capacity can be increased by reducing the depth of the office room.

A 3-foot slope in the auditorium will be satisfactory. The minimum ceiling height above the high point of the auditorium floor should be 17 feet.

The Question:

I WISH to build a balcony in my theatre and would like to know the objection to a sloping floor in same, if any. The balcony would extend out 30 feet, 6 inches from back, would have 4 feet, 6 inches drop, or about 1½ inches per foot. I could get in one more row of 25 seats if I used a sloping floor rather than the step plan.—B. W.

The Answer:

I HAVE seen several balconies with a sloping floor, but personally I do not approve of them as I think they are dangerous. There is a tendency in the public mind to draw back when nearing the balcony railing, and in some cases there exists a fear of falling over the railing. Therefore, a level platform gives a more secure feeling of foothold than an inclined floor. Anyway, I think 1½ inches per foot too steep for a balcony incline.

I cannot figure out how you can gain one more row of seats by using an inclined floor. The distance of 30 feet, 6 inches allows at most 12 rows of seats, and usually there is only a 2-inch difference in back-to-back spacing of seats between inclined and stepped-up floor.

The Question:

ENCLOSED PLEASE find rough sketch of the upper floor of a new building which the owner would finish as a small theatre if it would be satisfactory. The building is 43 x 50 feet with an 18-foot ceiling, except at the back, where the ceiling is 25 feet to make room for a balcony with a projection room above it.

It is proposed to put the ticket booth on the landing of the stairs, as you will probably note by the drawing there is a turn in the stairs so that the main landing is near the back of the building. If a balcony is put in, the stairs to it would have to go up near the landing.

How much slope would be needed on the main floor? How many seats would it hold, and what arrangements would you suggest? How far from the screen should the front seats be? How high above the main floor would the balcony have to be? Would wallboard be as good for the wall and ceiling as proper sound board, such as Celotex?—A. M. G.

The Answer:

I AM AFRAID that a floor space of 43x50 feet is inadequate for theatre purposes. After allowance is made for small stage, space between screen and first row of seats (which, according to your plan, should not be less than 15 feet), and 5 feet for cross-aisle, there will be only enough room left for ten rows of seats. The maximum amount of seats obtainable across the width of the auditorium will be 17 seats, planning a wall bank of four seats across along the right wall, and a center bank of 13 seats across with aisles on each side; so the total maximum seating capacity will be 170 seats. The cross-aisle should be located off the stair landing.

If the projection room is to be located on top of the balcony, the largest number of balcony seats will be 90. The slope for the lower floor should be about 20 inches. The distance between high point of auditorium floor and soffit of balcony should be 9 feet. For their acoustical qualities, I prefer sound-absorbing tiles or boards.

V-Shaped Unit Marquees

I HAVE BEEN asked about the adaptability to specific theatre front designs of a new V-shaped unit marquee which includes the sign elements. Examination of this type of marquee construction leaves no doubt in my mind as to such adaptability. Moreover, I find the V-shape, which was looked upon with considerable enthusiasm when introduced some months ago, very efficient with respect to attraction advertising.

Plan Criticism:

[REPLYING TO C. A. F., QUEBEC]

IF POSSIBLE, place ticket booth between outside entrance doors. Start entrance to balcony stairway from foyer. Provide ante-room or vestibule in women's and men's toilet rooms, and place doors as remote as possible.

Place seats in center section, 13 seats in a row with 4 seats in each wall bank.

I cannot find any reason for placing intermediate wall on stage. A cyclorama generally takes care of the screen setting.

First row of seats is too close to screen. Cross-over on top of balcony should be at least 5 feet wide. Increase width of projection room—13 feet, 10 inches is hardly sufficient. A few feet can be taken off toilet and generator rooms.

Stage floor should be lowered 1 foot.

If incline of auditorium floor can be increased, do so; also, increase height of steps in balcony. This can be done by lowering balcony railing—9 feet between high point of auditorium and soffit of balcony railing will be sufficient.

I suggest that you place attraction boards around marquee. Soffit of marquee is too high above sidewalk. If there is a way to eliminate steps at entrance, do so; it will be a great improvement.

Make doors between lobby and foyer with wood panels, and provide corner poster frames at entrance.

Operating Characteristics Of a Two-Way Horn System

● A Descriptive analysis of the Shearer method, based upon specifications released through the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences

The folded horn assembly.

REMARKABLE FOR loudspeakers is the claim of an efficiency of 50% for the Shearer two-way horn system, the technical characteristics of which are described in detail by John K. Hilliard, transmission engineer for MGM, in a paper just released by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Theatre operators, managers and projectionists, however, will find of particular value the specifications for satisfactory sound equipment, included in the same paper.

While it is understood that the Shearer system is to be made commercially available in the near future, the general specifications laid down by Mr. Hilliard apply to any sound system, and therefore may be referred to equipment theatres now have.

The development work that led to the production of the Shearer system, so called because it was directed by Douglas Shearer, head of the MGM sound department, was initiated with the construction of a system of technically ideal characteristics, concerning one of which the author writes that "its size and cost would prohibit its use for theatre installations." With such equipment as a point of departure, results were intentionally varied until a compromise was reached at which sound would be satisfactory, while the bulk and cost of the apparatus necessary would fall within practical theatre limits.

On the basis of these tests a set of specifications were drawn up, of which the following will be of especial interest to practical theatre men:

AMPLIFIER CAPACITY

The amplifier's capacity is equal to one acoustic watt per 1,000 feet of floor area. With a speaker system having an efficiency of 50%, as claimed, this specification calls for 2 watts of amplifier output to each 1,000 square feet of floor space. With speaker systems more commonly met with in theatre work, the efficiencies of which may vary from 25% to as low as 10%, amplifier output wattages at the same rating would be from 4 to 10 watts per 1,000 square feet of floor space.

This specification is unusual in that speaker requirements are more commonly figured against cubical contents, rather than floor area, and may, perhaps, be based upon the strongly directional characteristics claimed for the Shearer equipment.

FREQUENCY RESPONSE

The frequency response is flat within plus or minus 2 decibels from 50 to 8,000 cycles. Mr. Hilliard expresses strong doubt of the practical value of sound frequencies above 8,000, and indicates that with that upper limit, extension of the range below 50 cycles might produce unnaturally bass or tubby sound.

The volume range is placed at from 50 to 60 decibels. Flutter is calculated as no greater than 0.1% (method of measurement not stated).

As to distortion, the paper states that the system "shall not generate objectional harmonics up to the peak power required." The term objectionable is not further defined. Phase delay, as between speaker units "shall be such that the sound will be equivalent to that coming from a single source." This qualification also is not quantitatively defined in the specifications.

OUTPUT LEVELS

In elaboration of these requirements, Mr. Hilliard indicates his belief that amplifier output levels of from 10 to 48 watts represents the minimum power desirable for "most houses" (this may be surprising to many as a statement made in discussing speakers of 50% efficiency). With reference to reproduction above 8,000 cycles, the paper states, "further extension becomes of less and less value, due to the decreasing sensitivity of the ear and the small amount of energy available in this region, and especially because above 8,000 cycles, noise and flutter and harmonics, due to recording deficiencies, become decidedly the limiting factor. Incidentally, since practicaly all recording systems include a low-pass filter with a cut-off in the neighborhood of 8,000 cycles, there is nothing on the film at high frequencies to be reproduced."

DESIGN OF SYSTEM

The Shearer system consists of two banks of speakers, one reproducing sound above 250 cycles, and the other sounds from 50 cycles to 250. An electrical filter network, to supply each speaker with those frequencies to which it is to respond, is described in an associated paper (by Hilliard and Kimball) that will interest engineers rather than theatre heads and projectionists.

The high-frequency speaker bank consists of a cluster of small exponential horns radiating from a common throat and supplied by two dynamic units. The two dynamic speaker units are connected by a Y-coupling to the common sound chamber

• • AND ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES •

A PRACTICAL PROJECTIONIST ARGUES FOR 2,000-FOOT REELS

AN ENTERPRISING projectionist of Palmer, Mass.—John J. Cuddy—presents an argument for the 2,000-foot reel which I believe should be laid before you. In matters of this kind it behooves me to hold no brief for any one. The best interests of the motion picture industry and of projection are and must be paramount to the interests of the projectionist of the organization that represents him, and of any single group. I, myself, hold with Mr. Cuddy that the 2,000-foot reel is already in use in a very large number of our theatres, regardless of any and all objections or attempted restrictions. I, too, hold with Mr. Cuddy that the use of 1,000-foot reels for projection should either be stopped or doubling up should be stopped. And since thousands of our theatres do not have union projectionsists, certainly no prohibition of the union can possibly stop the practice of doubling up. I personally believe that the objection of the organization, based upon the possibility of a reduction of the number of union projectionists employed, rests upon a rather narrow point of view, leaving out other industrial considerations. Here is what Mr. Cuddy has to say about it:

"I have read that certain organizations are denouncing the contemplated change to 2,000-foot reels. If they are sincere in their stand they are to be complimented for sticking to their guns. However, if this attitude is but an expediency, they must be charged with being hypocritical.

"Let us consider the subject sanely. There is nothing to be gained by calling each other names. First of all, how many projectionists receive feature prints in their original form, meaning by that, with every reel not previously cut to be mounted on 2,000-foot reels. The only ones who can truthfully say they receive prints in this condition are the strictly first-run houses. How many of them project their entire shows on single reels cannot be exactly determined. However, I have witnessed performances in some first-run houses and know that at least in those I saw, the prints were being projected on 2,000-foot reels. Hence the argument advanced against the general use of 2,000-foot reels is bunk.

"I have a very interesting record which will prove conclusively that prints are being mounted on 2,000-foot reels by the majority of projectionists. In 1934 the total number of feature films I projected was 85. In 1935 the number was 228. Up to the present time this year, the total is 59, making a grand total of 372. Out of that number only one was received which did not bear evidence of having been mounted on the larger reels. This particular print no doubt was brand new—it had never been used anywhere. So surprised was I at receiving such a print that I did not remount it myself, but instead ran it through on single reels. The reason I remember this incident is that it is the only feature I have projected in the past three years on 1,000-foot reels.

"Doubtless right away arguments will be advanced that perhaps this is the only print I ever received that was new. On the contrary, 70% of the film received where I work is quite new. Most of the prints are only about 30 days old, some are perhaps two months old, and only very rarely is one over 90 days.

"I do not know if this particular angle has ever been mentioned before, but it is my experience that the most serious damage done to motion picture film occurs on the first two or three hundred feet of a reel. The reason for this is not hard to explain. The 10-inch reels now in use have a very small hub; also only about 50% of them are fit to be used. This estimate is not a mere guess, but was arrived at by actual observation of reels received. Certain film concerns attach blank leaders up to 8 or 9 feet in length ahead of actual start mark. Inasmuch as there are no frame lines on this leader, the general practice is to pull this film out, and to drop it on to the floor until a frame line is reached. On the floor it gathers dirt and perhaps oil. What a sweet mess when it is rewound again! Repeating this operation again and again causes the dirt and oil to get further into the print. A tiny particle of dirt may get on the aperture plate or other part on the projector, whereupon, once the reel is started, a continuous scratch may result, continuing sometimes for a hundred feet or more, or even sometimes through the entire reel.

"Threading a film properly nowadays, with all the intricate loops and what not in the sound heads, calls for pretty good judgment. If the projector is started and the film has been improperly threaded, some very serious damage to the print will result. It is just plain common sense to assume that if a projectionist had to use say, 16 single reels of film during a performance, and he did not remount the film, he would have to thread up sixteen times. Now on the other hand, if these same 16 reels were mounted on 2,000-foot reels, it would automatically cut the threading operations down to eight. In other words, the chances of any improper threading are decreased by 50% and the work of projection may receive that much added attention.

"I do not believe the statement now being issued that 'the underlying motive of the move to adopt the 2,000-foot reels is cutting in half the work required, with a subsequent corresponding decrease in manpower,' has much, if any, real basis in fact. It is rather singular that this attitude is taken when, as a matter of fact, the mounting of prints on 2,000-foot reels is now and has been a general practice, with the possible exception perhaps of places where it is strictly not allowed—and very possibly they too violated the rule now and then.

"I am of the opinion—and every truthful projectionist will agree with me—that departments of fire prevention and safety commissions should be the first to realize the advantages to be obtained in allowing 2,000-foot films to be used. The argument that 2,000 feet of film will make a larger and more serious fire than would 1,000 feet is true, but if all records were compiled as to the film fires which occurred, it would be found that film fires occur mostly at the start of a reel, and if that be true it is safe to assume that cutting threading operations in half would also mean cutting the danger of film fires in half. So if my arguments are reasonable, anyone who opposes the use of 2,000-foot reels is unconsciously advocating against a measure which adds to the safety of Mr. and Mrs. Public. I offer my arguments for the adoption of the 2,000-foot reels as follows:

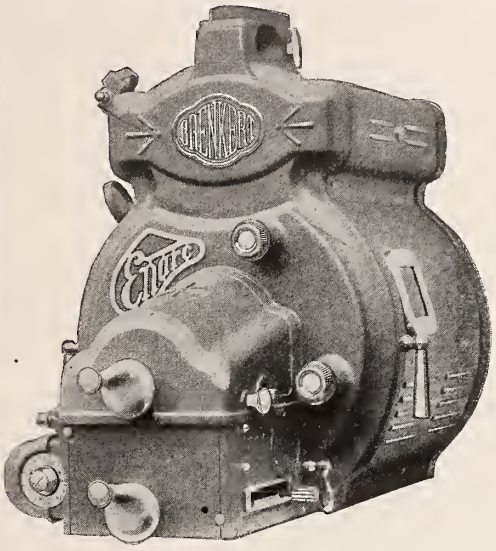
"1. Film will be in better shape, inasmuch as possible damage is decreased by at least 50%.

"2. Transportation costs will be little more, if any more, and neither will transportation be inconvenienced in any way, because it is not any more work to lug a narrow, high film case than the present short, stubby one.

"3. Quality of projection will be improved, because the appearance of scratches, dirt and oil will be largely decreased. The first few hundred feet of film is usually marred by these faults. Whoever saw scratches and dirt on a 30-day-old print after the first two or three hundred feet? Perhaps towards the very end again, yes, but in between—never!

"4. Equipping a projection room with proper magazines to handle the contemplated 2,000-foot reel will not cost the fortune some parties would have us believe. The cost will be so small that if an exhibitor feels he cannot afford to make the purchases, he then should also feel that he cannot afford to operate his theatre. The strange part of this particular argument is that under general conditions, this is the argument which distributing concerns originally gave for their not wanting to adopt the 2,000-foot reel. This threadbare argument is being used by certain parties to scare the already nervous theatre proprietor.



"5. I do not believe, as some parties would have us, that the underlying motive is to cut in half the manpower now employed. That argument is so far-fetched it is an absurdity.

"6. Operating strictly with 1,000-foot reels can never be enforced unless every State puts a ban on the 2,000-foot reel. And if any State enacts such a law at this time, it can not be said that it does so with any view of protecting the lives and safety of the public. It would only amount to a political expediency actuated by the mistaken idea that the 'underlying motive is to cut in half the manpower now employed.'

"Mr. Richardson, I sincerely believe what I have stated. I have nothing to gain personally or politically by the adoption of the 2,000-foot reel. My interest is solely the betterment of projection. But down in my heart do you want to know

Complete Satisfaction in Projection Lamp Ownership

Your purchase of Brenkert projection lamps means more than just ownership of a superb equipment. Thruout its life it carries the reputation and interest of the Brenkert organization embodying the same ownership and management today as when founded a quarter century ago. The personnel, tho old in experience in the art of projected light, is young in years combining that broad experience and resourcefulness which is reflected in the Brenkert product.

Brenkert projection lamps are engineered and manufactured complete in the Brenkert plant, the largest in the industry devoted to arc lamp manufacture. Such manufacturing facilities make possible the excellency of Brenkert products at no higher cost than inferior equipment.

Follow the trend. Buy Brenkert and enjoy complete satisfaction.

Sold and serviced by Brenkert distributors across the continent.

exactly what I think? Well, sir, I believe we will not get the 2,000-foot reel at all, because the parties who not so long ago clamored for it have turned about-face! The distributing concerns stand to lose quite a bit of money initially by the advent of the new reel, and if persistent kicks are registered—why, they will drop the thing and forget it."

SUGGESTING REMEDY FOR LOW ARC VOLTAGE EFFECT

G. R. LA POINT, projectionist of the Strand theatre in Westboro, Mass., writes, "With low-intensity arcs, trouble is encountered under some conditions due to instability which shows up every few minutes in the form of a flickering arc, or the climbing of the flame to the top of the crater. This fault was traced to improper selection of ballast rheostat, resulting in low arc voltage.

"However, in these hard times who wants to buy two new rheostats when the trouble may be overcome by wiping off the loose carbon deposit around the positive carbon crater after each reel. It is this deposit that draws the current away from the crater center. The deposit builds up in a tiny pile on top of the tip of the carbon. This build-up will be noticed in any low-intensity lamp and the granules fall into the arc stream as the carbon burns away, thus flicking the arc stream and flame upward, after which it returns to normal until another bit tumbles down."

That the analysis of the trouble is correct under the condition named I do not question, but it hardly seems reasonable that to wipe off the carbon deposit would stop it, since a considerable length of carbon burns away while one reel is being projected. Wiping off after each reel would of course stop it for the first part of the next reel, but surely the build-up would be again completed within at least the first 200 to 300 feet of the next one, whereupon the trouble would return.

Probably it is a condition that few encounter, but should any of you run into it I would appreciate a report as to what results you get from the wipe-off process. I believe Brother LaPoint's statement that it will be noticed in all low-intensity arcs is not quite what he meant to say, as he previously confined it to those having a too-low voltage.

AT A MEETING OF PROJECTION PIONEERS

RECENTLY I was invited to address a meeting of the Pioneers' Association of Motion Picture Machine Operators of New York City, which is an organization of New York City projectionists none of whom have been in the profession less than ten years, while some have been in it much longer. In fact, there were men at this meeting who were members, together with myself, in the union that preceded Local 306, and that was just about a quarter of a century back.

P. A. McGuire of the International Projector Corporation, was present and delivered a short address, after which he and I were made honorary members of the association. (I believe that brings my honorary memberships in unions and projectionist organizations well up to the 30 mark.)

In an address I told the members that I thought the purpose of an organization of pioneers should be to lead in pointing the way to better procedure, this for the reason that such an association is composed of the older, more experienced men. Ben Norton is president of the Pioneers, while Robert Sanders is financial, and Dr. J. S. Pare recording, secretary.

A PICTURE OF YOUR PROJECTION ROOM

Usually a fellow is interested in seeing where another fellow in the same kind of job does his work, just as he is interested in the other fellow's methods. Therefore, why don't you projectionists with cameras—or with a friend from whom you can borrow one—take pictures of your projection rooms and send them in to me for publication. Commonly, the light from the arcs would give enough illumination for a snapshot. Get yourselves into the picture, if possible. And be sure to name the various pieces of apparatus that constitute your entire projection and sound layout, including the names of the manufacturers.—F. H. R.

ILLUMINATION OF PROJECTION ROOMS

J. O. SMITH of the Paramount theatre in Ashland, Ala., writes, "My operator and I have had an argument we want you to settle. There are four shaded 60-watt lamps in the projection room. I argue that these lights should be turned off, especially the two over the projectors, except when threading and attending to other duties that require considerable illumination.

"My operator says it make no difference; that those lights have no effect upon the sharpness of the screen image. Our light source is Mazda, which gives us a bright picture at 70 feet. We project a 12-foot picture. We would thank you very much to settle this argument. Needless to say, we get a lot of help from your articles in BETTER THEATRES, which we have followed for a number of years."

On page 255 of my new Bluebook is a description and diagram of what I consider the most optically efficient manner of lighting projection rooms. Yes, the lights over the projectors should be turned off. A trouble lamp with an automatic cord rewind reel should be established on the ceiling between the two projectors, and if you do not feel like installing the system suggested in the Bluebook, here is an adaptation of it that will cost but little and be quite effective.

Along the rear wall, near the ceiling and not more than 3 feet from the rear wall, suspend, say, four sockets, each covered by a metal semi-spherical shield, say, 6 inches in diameter, closed at the bottom but open on the side facing the wall. Paint the upper part of the rear wall, also the ceiling as far back as the lamps, gloss white. In two of these shields (painted gloss white inside) install lamps of such wattage as may be found to supply sufficient illumination while projection is in progress. In the other two, install lamps of sufficient wattage to illuminate, in conjunction with the first two, the projection room brightly in time of trouble. Make it an ironclad rule that no lamps except the first two be used while projection is in progress, and that the trouble lamp be used for threading and working around the projectors when added light is necessary.

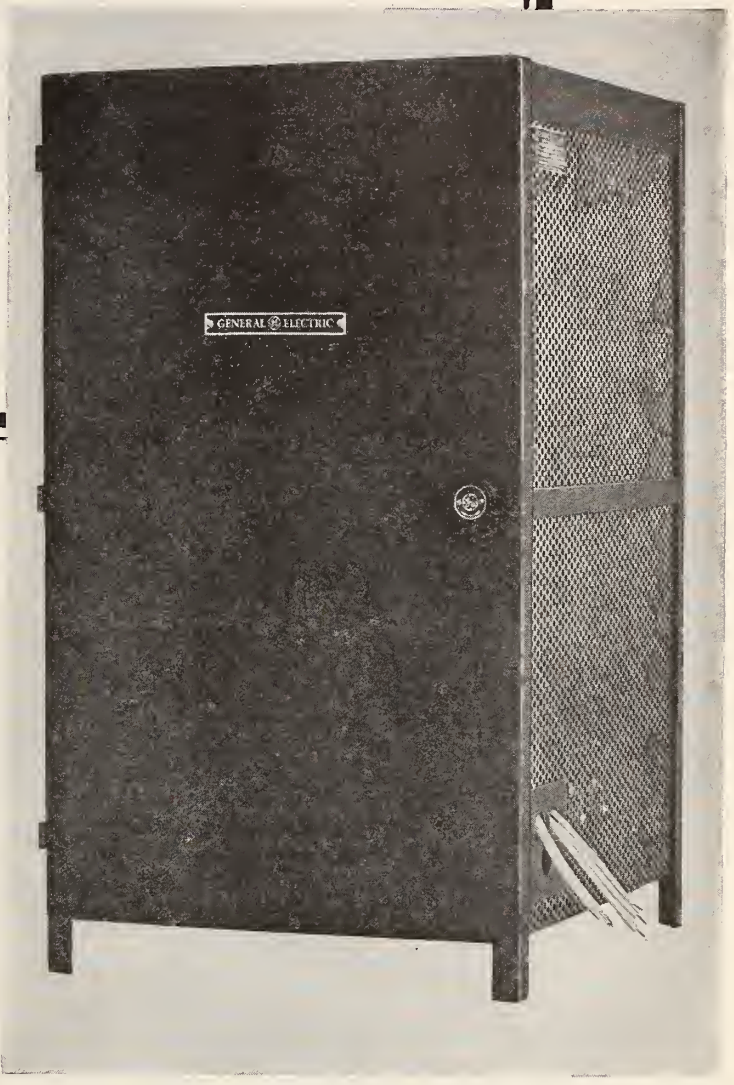
Paint the front wall a dark green or brown, and the wall for 18 inches around the observation ports non-gloss black. You then have ideal conditions for projection.

True, we are creatures of habit, and your projectionist's habit at present being to work with a large amount of illumination, he will doubtless object. But in a couple of days he will grow accustomed to the new way, and unless I miss my guess, if the lighting be maintained strictly as above set forth, in one week he would not go back to the old way if you asked him to.

By what I have proposed, all light comes from behind the man when beside the projectors. It does not shine in his eyes, hence the pupils are relatively dilated and he can see very well indeed. There is little light reflected from the port cover glass, and the wall around the port reflects practically none at all.

FLUTTER ANALYZED AT ENGINEERS' MEETING

FLUTTER WAS the topic of discussion at the March 19th meeting of the Atlantic Coast Section of the SMPE held in the auditorium of the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City. The paper was by Victor Subrizi, who not only gave the large audience a much better understanding of the considerable number of causes of flutter, but also a better understanding of its effect upon sound. The paper was accompanied by stereopticon slides showing, for the most part, oscillograms of sound wave action that causes flutter.



Generally speaking, I believe the greatest interest was aroused by an analysis of the number of things that can cause flutter. For example, it was argued and, I believe, shown by Herbert Griffin of the International Projector Corporation that worn sound sprocket teeth can, and under certain conditions do, set up flutter. It was also argued quite convincingly that it is possible that fault in the intermittent sprocket can

REDUCES CURRENT-COSTS

IMPROVES PROJECTION

INCREASES PROFITS

Hundreds of installations from coast to coast have proved the value of G-E Copper Oxide Rectifiers For Motion Picture Service. They improve projection. And better projection makes for bigger box office receipts. They reduce current-costs . . . save from 5 to 10 cents per hour in cost of current alone.

Those two features—plus many others, such as: smooth and uniform current-delivery, wide range of adjustments, reliability, durability, quietness, coolness and safety — place the G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier Unit in a class by itself.

G-E Copper Oxide Rectifiers For Projection Service are made in two standard sizes: 40-50 amperes for 6-7 mm trim; and 50-65 amperes for 6.5-8 mm trim. All other ratings may be built to order. To operate a spotlight, two units can be connected in series to supply the necessary voltage.

and does at times carry through the lower loop, over the lower sprocket and on down into the sound gate, where it causes flutter. Of this latter I am, however, still unconvinced, though positive statement was made that such action had been demonstrated. Perhaps, but it does seem unlikely, when the absorption power of the lower loop is considered and to that is added the steadying action of the lower sprocket. Be that as it may, however, it gave all of us something to think about.

In the discussion following the paper I asked Mr. Subrizi what, in his opinion, was the minimum amount of flutter discernible to the average person. His reply was to the effect that it would depend upon the character of the sound, but on a broad average, in his opinion, it would be approximately one quarter of one percent from normal, which would mean a differentation in film movement of about 1/1000 of an inch.

SAMUEL R. BURNS, WHO WAS MY FRIEND

TO THE HOST of personal friends and business acquaintances of Samuel R. Burns, late president of the International Projector Corporation, the news that he had passed into the shadows that shroud the shores of Eternity, came as a distinct shock. Because of his ability, his integrity, his loyalty and his kindly courtesy to those of both high and low degree, he had very genuinely endeared himself to us all. And death came when he was only 58.

I have known few men who so completely held the respect and confidence of all who knew him. Dignified he was, yet always genial and unaffected. Shrewd in business, he possessed a character that commanded trust.

Samuel R. Burns first became identified with motion picture affairs when he joined the old Nicholas Power Company as secretary in 1916. Upon the death of Edward Earle in 1924, he became president of the Nicholas Power Company. Upon the amalgamation in 1925 of that organization with the Precision Machine Company, manufacturers of the Simplex projector, forming the International Projector Corporation, he became vice-president and secretary of the new company. Later, upon the formation of the General Theatre Equipment, Inc., he occupied the same positions with that corporation, and also of approximately 200 affiliated companies, one of which was the Fox Film Corporation. He was named president of the International Projector Corporation in 1932.

He also was actively connected with concerns outside the realm of motion pictures, one of which was Enos Richardson & Company, of which he was executive vice-president. This corporation has been a manufacturer of jewelry for almost 100 years.

He is survived by his wife.

ON THE LICENSING OF SCHOOL TEACHERS

IN NEW YORK CITY demands were made a short time ago that school teachers be licensed by the city as motion picture projectionists, the license to authorize the projection of both 35-millimeter and narrow-guage film.

It may be safely assumed that few, if any, school teachers have served an adequate apprenticeship in the projection; also, that very few of them have devoted much time to its study. The proposal is of course designed to authorize teachers to project motion pictures in schools. The proposed action presumably has its basis in the demands of professional projectionists that school work be placed in their hands. Now the teacher's knowledge of projection may be safely summed up as ability to thread a projector, handle a projector light source after a fashion, make a film splice after a fashion, and rewind film. That scarcely qualifies them for a projectionist's tasks, especially when one considers that many young people are involved.

FILM MUTILATION GOES ON AND ON

JACK B. REEDY, projectionist of Boling, Tex., writes, "May I congratulate you on your Comment in BETTER THEATRES, February 8th issue, titled 'How Little Can This Industry Afford To Pay Its Projectionists.' Every word of it is true and should be given very real consideration by both projectionists and the exhibitors themselves.

"I inclose a clipping from one of the major producer's prints which I placed before our audiences a few days ago. May I ask why such outrageous mutilation is tolerated by exchanges. These punches are located four to five frames away from the Standard Release Print signal marks. This abuse occurred in all eight reels of this print, which was otherwise in very good physical condition. Seems to me any person who will deliberately and without good cause treat film thus has no right place in any projection room."

I show you this particular example of outrage. There were two more of the smaller holes in the sample, but I shortened it in order to show the actual full size of the large holes. To learn just why exchanges stand for this sort of thing, you must ask someone wiser than I.

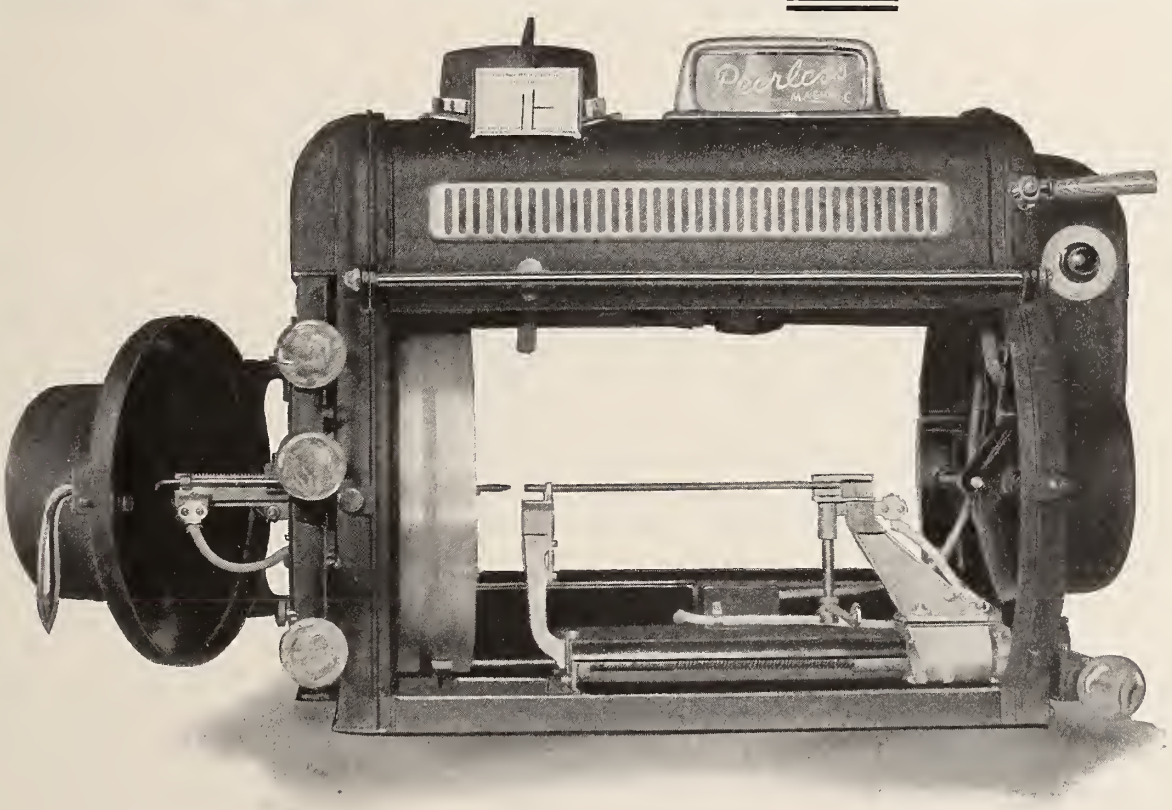
from which the individual horns radiate. The Y-coupling is used as protection against failure of a single unit.

The use of a cluster of exponential horns for frequencies above 250 cycles, in place of one or a few such horns, is to permit distribution of the higher tones throughout the auditorium and to avoid "drummy" or bass sound in the side rows. In very large or deep theatres the rear seats are supplied with their proper share of high frequencies (which are more readily absorbed by the intervening air) through the expedient of increasing the overall high frequency volume, and introducing damping material into those horns of the cluster that serve the seats down front.

The low frequency unit employs large dynamic speakers efficiently coupled to long air columns in "folded" baffles, or horns in which the air column is folded back upon itself, thus increasing its total length without requiring undue depth behind the screen. Two low-frequency baffles may be placed one above the other, or side by side, as the shape of the theatre dictates. Low- and high-frequency reproducers are mounted as close together as possible, in order that the sound may appear to come from a single source. The entire assembly may be flown with the screen where desired. The air-column lengths of low- and high-frequency horns are similar, insuring that there is no time delay between the two sources of sound, and thereby avoiding special installation requirements.



The frequency response curve of the Shearer Horn System, as given, is flat within five decibels from 50 to 8,000 cycles. Other features are light weight, low cost, and relative simplicity in construction and installation.

Acoustical Products and Engineering

PROPER acoustics is today a subject of outstanding importance in motion picture theatres. Talking pictures require specific acoustic conditions.

Almost all problems of poor acoustics may be solved by applying the proper type and amount of acoustical (sound-absorbent) materials on walls or ceiling. The necessary acoustical correction may be calculated upon exact scientific basis, and precise recommendations may be made from a study of plans and interior furnishings, even in advance of construction. Acoustical materials of various types are available and can be quite readily harmonized with any style of interior.

Adapters for Incandescent Projection Lamps

THE Mazda lamp adapter is a device for converting a projector using the carbon arc to the use of Mazda projection lamps. It can be installed in any carbon arc housing by fastening it to the lower carbon jaw. It will operate for both pictures and steroptican slides. The device consists of a bracket, an adjustable arm and reflector located behind the lamp. Prices range from $10 up.

Advertising Novelties

THE thing to be accomplished through the use of advertising novelties, of one type or another is the chief consideration in their selection. Among the popular novelties, however, which have been used by theatres for stimulating matinee business, building up juvenile performances or bolstering business on week nights are balloons, thermometers on which are imprinted pictures of stars, buttons, badges, pennants, confections, toys, etc. A popular children's matinee stunt can be obtained by giving away a variety of novelty toys. Air Conditioning and Ventilating Equipment

AIR CONDITIONING in the theatre has already arrived at a degree of importance making it one of the necessary adjuncts of the modern motion picture theatre. Because in the theatre people are closely associated physically in great numbers, and for the purpose of realizing enjoyment, the atmospheric conditions of the auditorium especially must not be dependent upon the weather or on any other chance factor. Enjoyment of the entertainment is closely connected with comfort, and the popularity of the theatre is of course influenced by its effect upon health.

Air conditioning does not only mean facilities for cooling a theatre during the hot months, but involves distribution of fresh, clean air at proper temperatures and pressures, and without drafts in the breathing zone. This may mean that the system should be capable of functioning in connection with the heating apparatus as well as with the cooling facilities.

Local conditions influence to some extent the kind of an air conditioning system required in any specific theatre. Some could achieve comfortable, healthful air conditions with simpler, less costly ventilating equipment. Others require more elaborate systems, perhaps employing mechanical refrigeration.

Air Filters, consisting in a dust-collecting material of cotton or other type of fabric or mesh on rollers (for automatic cleansing) or fixed in a metal frame, are designed to filter dirt out of the air introduced into the theatre through the ventilating system. They are not only advised for the complete air-conditioning system, but are effective in connection with a simple ventilating system. Dirty air represents a maintenance problem. Air filters, properly installed, minimize this problem.

Ventilating grilles, which are located at the wall openings of air ducts through which the air is introduced into or removed from the interior of the theatre are to varying degrees ornamental and thus prevent these openings from being unsightly. This was once the principal function of grilles, but today a scientifically designed grille gives direction to the air flow, diffuses the air stream and regulates the quantity of air passing through. Grille design has been found an important factor in minimizing or amplifying the mechanical noise of the system. Thus selection of ventilating grilles has an important bearing upon the efficiency of the air-conditioning or ventilating system.

evaporation of water under certain conditions, etc. There are generators of various sizes. Small generators have no moving parts, while larger ones have a small positive blower and filter arrangements for the air that is forced through the apparatus. Units suitable to toilet rooms, lounges and similar small areas are not expensive. Larger units for use in connection with central air-conditioning systems cost in proportion to the capacity of the air-conditioning plant.

Amplifying Tubes

THESE ARE electronic relays by means of which the weak electric currents created by a photocell, phonopickup or microphone, operate to control a stronger current, moulding it to an exact, but more powerful duplicate of the original. This process is continued through a train of tubes until a duplicate of the original sound current is obtained, which is strong enough to operate the loudspeakers.

Anchors for Chairs

THESE ARE KNOWN as Theatre Style Expansion Bolts. In a leading type improved anchor consists of an especially long tapered fin head bolt, conical cup, lead sleeve, washer and hexagon nut. For best results these should be placed into a hole ½-inch in diameter. It is suggested that one use a 17/32-inch diameter drill to allow for wear. The bolt is set head downward into the hole. The setting tool furnished with each order, is a hollow piece of rod, which is slipped over the bolt against the washer, and when driven with a few blows of a hammer, expands the conical cup which spreads out, increasing the diameter of the head of the bolt to the absolute diameter of the hole and thereby allowing no lead to be driven past the head of the bolt, and at the same time expands the lead sleeve into every crevice in the concrete. This feature makes this new bolt hold more, even though the hole in the concrete has been drilled oversize to make up for drill wear.

These bolts come packed 100 to the box, and are completely assembled with the exception of the nuts which are placed in a separate container inside the box. Assembling the bolts in this fashion, without the nuts, saves considerable time in installation by eliminating the necessity of removing the nut from each bolt. After the bolt is securely set in the concrete, the hole in the chair leg, is placed over the bolt and the nuts screwed down tight.

These bolts are made in ¼-inch diameter, in 1½-inch or longer lengths. These expansion bolts will hold chairs tight to the floor up to the breaking strength of the bolt, which is in excess of 2,000 pounds direct pull.

Arc Regulators

AS THE NAME implies the arc regulator regulates the voltage at the arc through automatic feeding as the carbon is consumed and the gap between the carbons increases. The result of this automatic action is a steady light on the screen pronounced superior to that which it is possible to produce by hand. The arc control, as it is frequently called, feeds the carbons in an even manner.

Architectural Materials, Decorative

THESE ARE to be obtained in great variety today, owing to additions made through modern chemical and manufacturing technique. The average person is familiar with such decorative architectural materials as marble, terra cotta, etc. Available now are such other products as those made from glass, chemicals and metals. Prominent among those representing the chemical group are Formica and Catalin, which are known as phenolics. They may be obtained in a variety of colors and patterns. Among the glass products, such materials as Vitrolite and Carrara are colored throughout their composition, while in the case of a glass material like Fyrart, the color is painted on the outer surface and baked in.

Materials made of wood or having the appearance of wood are also being widely adapted to modern decorative schemes. Flexwood, for example, is a veneer available in a number of different woods. Flexboard, on the other hand, is of asbestos composition and is therefore fireproof.

Tiles of ceramic type and also of glass are obtainable for a wide variety of decorative uses in the construction of theatres. Glass tiles are particularly effective in the construction of theatre fronts, being well adapted to novel illumination displays in connection with program advertising.

Batteries, Storage

ONE OF THE uses of storage batteries is to supply direct current to the sound equipment. The batteries are, of course, charged through current rectification equipment operated from the main power lines.

Another important use of batteries in motion picture theatres is in emergency lighting systems which augment the regular source of light power as a safeguard against breakdown of the local system. They are installed for instant service upon such a breakdown, being placed in operation automatically. Besides giving the necessary power for lighting, they are capable also of supplying power to the projector motor and arc for some time. Prices depend on the nature of the installation.

Box Offices

KEEPING PACE with advancement in theatre design the box office has been developed from a rather unsightly necessity to a thing of beauty, modernly equipped for speedy and accurate sale of tickets. It is frequently designed in harmony with the design of the theatre and the display frames.

Attractive box offices are now available to exhibitors as separate units, which means that a theatre owner may obtain a modern ticket booth without necessarily remodeling his entire theatre front. These new box offices are constructed of materials designed to give life and color to an otherwise drab entrance. While it has been an accepted tradition that box offices should harmonize with the general architecture and treatment of the theatre exterior, development in box office construction indicate that the separate box office can be fitted suitably into any theatre design.

Brass Rails and Ornamental Bronze

BRASS RAILS have many uses in motion picture theatres—for separating sections of the lobby and foyer for proper control of traffic, as a means of protection at the edge of the balcony, around the orchestra pit, and so on.

Ornamental bronze has extensive use in motion picture theatres, sometimes merely decoratively, as in the form of plaques, but most commonly for a combined utilitarian and decorative purpose, as represented by organ grilles and other gratings, box office wickets, lighting fixtures, display cases, etc.

Carbon Savers

THESE ARE devices designed to permit the use of positive carbon stubs otherwise too short to be adapted to the requirements of the projection arc lamp. The technique of their use consists essentially in the clamping of a copper cap to the carbon stub, then attaching it in proper electrical contact to a rod having dimensions similar to those of the original carbon. In this way carbons may be used up to within an inch of their original length.

Carbons

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using Mazda light sources).

Modern projection demands the best in quality in projection carbons today, and this demand is being met by the carbon manufacturers through their scientific and research departments with products that have kept pace with modern progress.

The newer development of a positive carbon of different core composition than previous types, smaller in diameter, and non-rotating, has resulted in the attainment of a much whiter projection light at low and medium amperages than is obtainable from low-intensity and hi-low arcs. This carbon, used with a negative carbon of adapted type, is the source of the so-called "suprex" arc. A report of the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, has stated:

"A comparison of the Suprex carbon arc with the high-low arc at a current of from 50 to 60 amperes, showed that the Suprex carbon arc provides a light of equal intensity, but with a more even field, and of course at a much lower operating cost."

This carbon is used with a special lamp and certain rectification facilities developed for it.

Carpets

BECAUSE of the hard wear to which theatre carpets are subjected it has been found that there is no saving in the selection of cheap carpets. Generally, floor coverings and carpets should give an impression of stability and foundation upon which one may walk with security.

The following are standard weaves of carpets, listed in order of price from the highest to the lowest:

1. Chenille.
2. Saxony.
3. American Oriental.
4. Winton.
5. Axminster.
6. Velvet.
7. Tapestry.

Any of the grades from Saxony to Axminster, inclusive, have been used successfully in theatres.

Carpet padding used under the carpet not only provides a softer and more comfortable feeling to the foot but reduces friction and adds many years to the life of the carpet by keeping it away from direct contact with the hard floor.

Carpets also should be selected with a view to the acoustics of the theatre.

Chairs, Theatre

CHAIRS should be so chosen and the seating layout should be so planned as to ensure the maximum seating capacity consistent with comfort, safety, facility of entrance and exit, compliance with local or state building requirements, proper sight lines, elevations and other mechanical adaptations and adjustments.

Talking pictures have injected another element into the problem of seating for higher efficiency, i. e., acoustics. The acoustical properties of the theatre chair are now very important, and for sound-equipped houses upholstered seats have become a necessity due to their sound-absorbent quality. Veneer backs and seats are likely to induce sound reverberation of obnoxious character and may easily mar an otherwise perfect acoustical condition.

Chair Covers

IN ADDITION to giving a pleasing and inviting appearance to the auditorium, chair covers serve the practical purpose of coolness and sanitation. An interior otherwise drab may be transformed into a cool, clean, cheerful looking place through their use.

There are several things that should be borne in mind in connection with the use of chair covers. It should be remembered that auditorium and balcony chairs as a rule require two distinct and different styles of covers. The auditorium chair should be equipped with a cover which covers the entire chair back while the balcony chair need only have a quarter back. This is because of the slope on which balcony chairs are placed.

Working from blue prints provides the most satisfactory way of assuring a perfect fit of the cover for each chair.

Chair pads for veneer seats are also obtainable, and there are also special chair materials which are intended to be used as aids to acoustics.

Chair Fastening Cement

CEMENT of this kind is for firmly attaching into the floor the metal pieces to which the theatre chair is bolted. Into a hole made in the floor, the metal piece itself, or bolt for its attachment, is inserted, then around it is poured the melted cement. In about ten minutes this cement hardens and holds the metal piece or bolt firmly in place.

When used in reseating, the old metal piece or bolt is removed, a new one inserted and the cement poured around it.

Change Makers

SPEED AND ACCURACY are obtained at the box office through the use of coin changing machines which in addition to their time saving facilities offer a valuable protection against annoying mistakes in making change to patrons. With the coin changing machines a light touch at the keyboard is all that is necessary to deliver the correct number of coins to the patron who easily scoops them up from a cup at the side of the change maker. Coins may be delivered either from the right or left side and these automatic cashiers as developed for theatres have been improved in recent months until now they are available in sizes which occupy only about 81 square inches of space in the box office.

Cleaning Compounds

CLEANING COMPOUNDS facilitate routine janitor work and are more or less a necessity to the well kept theatre. There are various types of cleaning materials adapted to different kinds of surfaces and fabrics. A cream cleaner is available for carpet cleaning as well as wall washing.

In selecting his cleaners, the theatre manager should assure himself of their harmlessness as well as fitness for the purpose.

Condensers (Lenses)

CONDENSERS are single glass lenses, unmounted. They are made in various diameters from 2¼ inches to 7¼ inches in diameter; the 4½-inch and the 7¼-inch are the sizes used mostly in motion picture work. The condenser is located in the front end of the lamphouse to gather the rays of light from the light source, and bend them, or condense them into a spot of light on the aperture. They are made in different shapes, some being Plano Convex, some Meniscus or Moon shape, and others Bi-Convex.

Focal lengths for motion picture work are usually 6½-7½-8½ and 9½ inches; condensers 5 inches, 6 inches and 8 inches in diameter are usually used for spotlight projection.

Curtain Control Machines

FEW THINGS leave a finer impression on the theatre audience than the smooth and silent opening and closing of the curtain. This is accomplished by curtain control machines which operate automatically. The curtain can be controlled from the booth or from back stage by the simple process of pressing a button.

Curtain control equipment consists of track equipped with cable and snaps to which the curtain is fastened. In opening and closing the curtain may be stopped at any desired point across the stage and may also be reversed at will.

The motor for operating the curtain is usually placed on the stage or it may be placed in the grids or mounted on a platform. This permits the machine, track and curtains to be flied in addition to open from the center.

A type of curtain control machine specially designed for small theatres with tracks up to 40 feet in length, has been put on the market at a price considerably lower than that of the larger machines.

Curtain Tracks

THE TYPE OF curtain track installed is important for several reasons. It cannot be a makeshift affair, for if it is it may ruin an otherwise good program. Naturally, it must be noiseless and must function smoothly and with little or no effort.

Cutout Machines

THIS IS A DEVICE for making various kinds of exploitation cutouts and lobby and marquee displays. The design for the desired cutout display is traced on ordinary wall board and with this device, the cutout is easily made by guiding the machine over the pattern. A small motor is used and the current from the electric light socket furnishes the power. The machine is convertible into a saw by substituting a saw blade for the chisel to handle harder and thicker materials.

Electric Measuring Instruments

THE DEVELOPMENT and improvement in theatre lighting and projection have thrown onto the shoulders of the electrician, as well as the projectionist, many responsibilities. At their command are factors which make or break the show. With enormous switchboards to control, emergency lighting plants, motors, generators, arcs, dimmers, transverters, magnetic appliances and many other involved and sensitive electrical instruments, it devolves on the theatre to provide adequate equipment for their correct operation. In the list of instruments necessary for finding causes of electrical troubles and of determining projection illumination conditions, are ammeters, voltmeters, ohmmeters, illuminometers, vacuum tube testers and the like.

Film Cabinets

THERE ARE various types of film cabinets having storage capacity from three to twelve reels per unit of various forms of construction so that the reel is elevated or brought within grasp by the opening of the cover. They are generally of double metal wall construction, so that should one reel become ignited in the cabinet, the others are insulated from this heat, and thus saved from any damage. Some of them are constructed so that they can be ventilated to the outside by means of piping.

Fire Prevention Devices, Projector

IMPORTANT equipment has been developed which it is said definitely prevents a film fire in the projection machine. This equipment is a safety control device, that is easily installed and which is operated on the regular line voltage. The main control unit and dowser are mounted on the cone of the lamphouse and act as the main light cut off, taking the place of the regular dowser. The dowser is operated from five distinct points of contact, covering every avenue through which a fire could start in the projector while it is in operation or at a standstill with the film in it. All contact points are very sensitive, and the dowser is instantaneous in its action, yet does not depend upon springs to actuate it.

Floor Surfacing Materials

MANY PARTS of a theatre are suited to use of floor covering other than woven materials, and often composition flooring may adequately take the place of expensive tiles, terrazzo, etc.

Composition flooring is made by a number of companies specializing in this product, and all have their own processes. It may be said, however, that the basic materials are cork or rubber, and natural gums.

Composition floors, due to their resilience, afford comfort underfoot, durable and easy to maintain. Manufacturers offer them in a wide variety of colors and designs so that it is possible to harmonize them with the color scheme and decorative plan of any interior. Special designs can be executed in practically all of these materials, thus giving the floor distinction and individuality. Among the areas where resilient composition floors may be used are the following: lobbies, lounges, smoking rooms, dressing rooms, hallways, foyers, executive offices, etc.

Fountains

FOUNTAINS used in the theatre supply drinking water to employes and patrons, or they may be merely ornamental. If they are of latter type, they are usually incorporated in the decorative scheme of lobby, foyer or lounge, sometimes in conjunction with a pool and statuary. Those supplying drinking water are of the regular types designed for public buildings and may be head in wall (recessed or projecting) and pedestal types. They, too, are obtainable in decorative patterns and materials.

Automatic operation of drinking fountains is possible by means of a mechanism actuated by the interruption of a light beam focused on a photoelectric cell. When the patron bends over the fountain, the water begins to flow; it stops flowing as soon as the light beam is no longer thus interrupted by the patron's head.

Furniture, Lobby and Lounge

THE importance of lobby and foyer areas in a motion picture theatre for the accommodation of waiting patrons, and the demand of the public for pleasant lounges, bring sofas, chairs, table and floor lamps, etc., into the realm of theatre equipment. Because of the hard usage given it, such furniture should be of durable materials. Modern design has developed metal furniture that is entirely comfortable and easily maintained. The lobby or lounge into which it is introduced, however, should have wall and other decorative treatment that is expressive of the "modern" idea.

Hearing Aids

GROUP HEARING aids for theatres, designed to bring the sound of motion pictures to patrons with impaired hearing, consist in suitable amplification actuated by the motion picture sound system, either from the speakers or the soundhead, together with jack-boxes for attachment to the selected chairs, and receiving instruments for attachment by the patron to the jack-boxes. A single amplifier (3-watts) has a capacity up to 50 receivers. The receiving instruments may be either of air-conduction or of bone-conduction type, and usually both are supplied in each installation to meet the preferences of deafened patrons.

Heating Systems and Accessories

HEATING SYSTEMS adapted to theatres are essentially like those for other types of public buildings, but of course the system load factors are quite different because of the number of people confined in a rather small area (auditorium), and the variability of this number during the time period of the performances. Steam heating is commonly and efficiently used for the smaller theatres, but even for these it is of course not amenable to the same control possible with a duct system introducing heated air. In the latter case the fresh air is heated and otherwise conditioned before it enters the theatre, and through the use of automatic control instruments and proper supervision temperature and relative humidity may be kept adjusted to each other for the provision of comfortable, healthful air conditions. In complete air-conditioning, the heating plant is really a part of the whole ventilating system.

In heating systems employing coal as the fuel, automatic stokers not only save labor, but usually are capable of producing savings in fuel consumption because of more efficient stoking. Increase in the use of oil as a fuel has come about as a result of better designed and less expensive oil furnaces. Gas is to be recommended for some localities.

Horn Lifts and Horn Towers

A HORN LIFT is an automatically controlled electrically driven elevator to raise and lower sound horns to their proper places behind the screen. They operate on the hydraulic, cable and drum and screw lift principle, and when the stage is needed for acts, the lift lowers the horn down under the stage. The portion of the stage flooring directly above the lift is attached to the lift, becoming a part of it, and any stage setup located over the lift goes up with it and is ready for use the instant the lift returns to the low level.

Horn towers are structural steel towers on which the horns are fastened. These towers are generally on rubber-tired, ball bearing casters so that they may be moved about silently to properly locate the horns behind the screen. When the horns are not in use the towers can be pushed out of the way.

Lamps, Exciter

THE PURPOSE of exciter lamps is to supply the light energy which actuates the photoelectric cell. It is located in the sound head in such adjustment that its beam of light rides upon the sound track, transmitted or interrupted according to the variations of the track. It is a basic element in the mechanism of sound-on-film reproduction and should be durable and precisely adapted to the particular design of the apparatus used.

Lamps, High Intensity

HIGH INTENSITY projector lamps are of two types—reflector type, and condensing-lens type. Their selection depends on the size of the theatre and other local factors. The condenser-lens type (so-called super-high intensity) is generally operated at from 115 to 130 amperes. The reflector type is generally operated at from 70 to 80 amperes. Lamps in the high intensity class are of the larger type or represent other conditions requiring a higher degree of screen illumination.

Lamps, Incandescent, Projection

INCANDESCENT LAMPS for theatre motion picture projection are usually of the low-voltage type for added efficiency and greater source concentration. They cannot be used on the ordinary lighting circuit without a transformer or regulator. The 900-watt, 30-ampere, T-20 bulb lamp usually provides acceptable results on good screens up to 16 feet wide at throws not greater than about 100 feet.

There are also available 1,000-watt prefocus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane type of filament construction, which is inherently of higher cost but makes possible the requisite source concentration at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus. They are preferred where operating schedules are relatively short, and for projectors of the semi-portable type. Screen results equal or surpass those from the 900-watt lamp. The 1,500-watt lamp requires forced ventilation.

For portable 35-mm. projectors there are the 500-watt monoplane filament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in short T-20 bulbs with medium prefocus bases. All are of the 100-120 volt type. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt lamps require forced ventilation.

For stereopticon projection there are the 500-watt, short T-20 bulb, medium prefocus base lamp; and the 100-watt, long T-20 bulb mogul prefocus base lamp. Both of the 100-120 volt types employ monoplane filaments.

Lamps, General Lighting

THE MANY TYPES of lamps available today make it possible to have light of just the proper quantity and quality. The types of lamps used to a great extent influence the cost of lighting. Lamps themselves vary in cost. Special, expensive types are often used where the more standard types would be satisfactory. Poor and inefficient lamps use up energy and do not give the light they should. Old, dirty and blackened lamps waste energy without a proper return. Lamps of the wrong voltage give too little light, or burn out to quickly.

Incandescent lamps are usually designated by wattage, voltage, bulb shapes and diameter. The diameter of the bulb is given in eights of an inch.

Colored lamps are available with inside spray finish and with natural colors in several sizes. The natural-colored lamps are specially desirable for indirect cove lighting; the inside-colored lamps for exterior displays and where the lamps themselves are seen.

Spotlight and floodlight lamps have filaments that are as concentrated as practicable, and in the prefocus types, placed very accurately with respect to the base. The lives of these lamps are 200 and 800 hours, respectively—the shorter the life the greater the light output for a given wattage. In general, the lamps have round bulbs with wattages of 250, 400, 500, 1,000, 1,500, and 2,000.

Lamps, Low Intensity

THIS CLASSIFICATION is rather general, inasmuch as it refers to all types of projection lamps designed for theatres requiring light of lower intensity. Lamps in this class are Low Intensity, Hi-Low, Alternating Current Reflector Type and Suprex (the latter using alternating current carbons with direct current). All of these lamps are of the reflector type. The operating amperage for these lamps ranges from 15 to 80.

THESE ARE projection lamps designed for the suprex d.c. arc, which gives, through the use of a non-rotating carbon of specific composition, a much whiter projection light at low and middle amperages than is obtainable with low-intensity and hi-low arcs. At 45 amperes, the d.c. arc has a light intensity as high as 7,000 lumens, as much as hi-low develops at from 70 to 80 amperes, while the low-intensity arc has a light intensity of only about 2,000 lumens at 25 amperes.

Lenses

FOR MOTION PICTURE theatre service there are projection lenses and condensing lenses. The latter are also used in projection but are placed in the lamphouse and condense the rays to a spot on the aperture. Projection lenses are objective lenses placed in the projector head.

The prime requirement of a projection less is to give a bright, well defined picture

Strong Lamps are completely manufactured within the Strong factory, where every step in production can be rigidly controlled to comply with the high standard set by Strong.

Every Strong Lamp is backed by an unconditional guarantee to be all that is claimed for it . . . backed by years of knowing how to build projection arc lamps.

Your Independent Theatre Supply Dealer will arrange a demonstration in your own theatre. Or write for your copy of the new, interesting and instructive catalog of Strong equipment. No obligation.

Letters, Attraction Board

CHANGEABLE SIGN LETTERS are widely used by theatres in the marquee and have proved especially popular, because of the flexible manner in which they permit billing of a current or coming attraction. Changeable sign letters are generally made of cast aluminum with the letter part cut out. When used on the marquee these letters can be moved to make an attractive announcement. They are obtainable in large and small sizes and, in addition, numerals, characters, word plates and spacer panels of the same character are also available.

Lighting Fixtures and Decorative Lighting

WHILE lighting fixtures constitute one of the outstanding features of the theatre today their style and application are obviously best determined by the individual treatment of the theatre and its requirements. Lighting Systems, Emergency

EMERGENCY lighting plants are equipment designed to furnish power for supplying illumination and operating the show in the event of a failure of the local power supply.

Emergency lighting plants are made in several types such as the gasoline engine type, water turbine type, motor generator and battery type. In the case of the motor generator type several sources of power are provided to meet every contingency, which, together, form an interlocking type of protection.

Ashcraft Suprex Best in the Field

The pioneers of the Suprex Arc still lead the field by a wide margin—and still give you the finest projection

Don't be misled by claims of "just as good as Ashcraft." Insist upon the real thing in projection arc lamps. First in the field, the Ashcraft Suprex lamp has been steadily improved, until today it has no equal in delivering those quality results desired by every progressive projectionist.

Lights, Spot, Flood

ARE MADE in arc and incandescent types for use on stage—in the booth—in cove lighting, and for head spotting. Most spotlights on the market can be used for spot lighting and for full flood. The arc types are made in sizes of 3 ampere up to 150 ampere. They come complete with stand and attachment cord and connector. Within the last year, the high intensity spot has appeared. It is an adaptation of the high intensity lamp to spot and flood lighting.

The incandescent spotlights are in sizes of from 250 watt to 2,000 watt. The sizes usually used are 250, 400, 500 and 1,000 watt.

The small head spots of 250 watts are used for cove lighting or spotting the head of a singer or organist. The incandescent spotlights come either with floor standard or pipe hangers for border lighting batons.

In stage work spotlights are frequently banked one above the other on a stand and used for flood-lighting from the wings. Prices range from $12 to $500.

Lobby Display Frames

LOBBY ADVERTISING is an obviously effective business stimulant and in this connection the use of lobby display frames easily ranks first in appearance. With the effective display frames now available it is possible not only to obtain a maximum advertising value from their use but also to add materially to the appearance of the lobby. The front of the theatre may now be "dressed up" in excellent fashion with these frames. In the case of new theatres it is common practice to design lobby frames in conformity with the architectural style of the house.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST SHOW!

ANY show is "the world's greatest show, ladies and gentlemen" if the picture is projected through a B & L Super-Cinephor Projection Lens. Why? Because all of the artistry which the actors, the director, cameraman and the laboratory put into the film is projected onto the screen by a Super-Cinephor.

Install a battery of these Lenses. They will be the best bally-hoo artists your show ever had.

Marquees

USE OF MARQUEES BY motion picture theatres is general. They serve a number of practical purposes. They offer theatres an excellent advertising medium while giving to the house an attractive and inviting entrance. During inclement weather they offer protection to waiting patrons.

Marquees are usually constructed of sheet metal and may be obtained in a variety of designs. They are furnished with glass roof or with steel ceiling and metal roof. Numerous interesting standard designs have been developed by marquee manufacturers especially for theatre use. These are easily installed and are shipped to theatres in convenient sections. Suggestions for attractive designs are available. Inquiries should be accompanied by approximate measurements of the front of the building where the marquee is to be used.

Microphones

MICROPHONES in theatres have a variety of uses, ranging from stage program presentations, regular and emergency announcements, to reports to patrons on sports and other timely items of interest. In most cases microphones can be added to the amplifying equipment used for sound-on-film service with little accessory equipment.

Four general types of microphones are available: carbon, condenser, crystal and magnetic. The latter division includes dynamic and velocity (ribbon) microphones. All except the first are quiet in operation, and free from the slight hiss known as carbon noise. Crystal and velocity microphones are available in semi-directional models that are particularly useful in reinforcing stage performance.

you can effect an improvement that is as profitable as it is modern. Theatres report immediate increases in box office receipts, partly because people are inclined to judge a theatre by its outward appearance and partly because the sharp black on white contrast of these new letters affords long range visibility day and night. Motor-Generators

MOTOR-GENERATOR sets are used quite generally for converting a.c. suuply into d.c. for the arc and sound. They consist of motor equipment suitable to the service available as to voltage, phase and frequency and of the proper horsepower, connected through a coupling or on a common shaft, with a d.c. generator armature. This latter may be of a size to furnish from 15 to 600 or more amperes, and at a voltage of from 42 to 100. Ballast rheostats are used to drop high voltage to that of the arc, which varies from about 50 to 70 volts, depending upon its character. These generators are designed to hold their voltage very steady regardless of load and should be quiet operating and free from vibration.

The above describes the Multiple type unit which operates any number of arcs up to its full capacity in multiple and is almost exclusively used in this country. Where only two arcs of the same amperage are burned alternately, as on two projectors, the Series type with its higher efficiency can be used and is still sold largely outside the United States.

Motors, Projector

MOTORS for projection machines are usually 110 volts, 25 to 60 cycles and of 1/10, 1/8 or 1/6 horse power. They may be obtained with variable speed adjustments giving a range of speed of from 150 r.p.m. to 4,000 r.p.m., but with sound-on-film, the motors are now set for operation at one speed regardless of variations in the load.

Organs

ASIDE from detail considerations, the important thing to bear in mind in the purchase of a theatre organ is whether or not the instrument is designed and built to meet theatre requirements. Demands upon an organ to be used in a theatre and in a church, for example, are obviously at variance. The result is that organs for theatres are built along exacting lines, expressly for the work they are intended to perform.

Perfumes and Perfumers

DISAGREEABLE odors are unfortunately a usual concomitant of crowds, particularly in such compact enclosures as the motion picture auditorium. These odors may be effectively eliminated by the use of highly aromatic perfumes, method of diffusion is the simple one of which are diffused throughout the air. One placing the perfume in decorative cones, resembling a vase, at various places along the walls. These cones are made of clay and readily absorb the perfume, which may be said to saturate the cones, and the odor radiates from the latter to quite a large area beyond.

Another widely used method is to spray the air with a perfume at suitable intervals.

A trifle less simple and perhaps more effective method is that of placing perfume in a disseminator located at the ventilating fan so that the evaporated liquid or solidified perfume will carry its fragrance through the auditorium along with the fresh air.

Plastic Paint

PLASTIC PAINT is extensively used for decorating auditorium walls, lobbies and foyers of theatres. With this paint almost any sort of rough texture can be developed from the most refined stipple to the shaggiest Spanish palm finish. Sand swirl, two-tone and other effects can also be obtained in a number of colors and color combinations.

Plastic paint comes in the form of a white powder. Before application it is mixed with water; sometimes, also, with coloring matter. It may be tinted with dry colors before application, or the plastic paint may be sized and then glazed with an oil glaze tinted with oil colors. It may be applied on any type of surface and when thus properly applied and treated it can be washed from time to time with soap and water.

Pop Corn Machines

POP CORN MACHINES offer an excellent opportunity for theatres to increase their revenue, according to information from exhibitors who are operating them. One exhibitor states that in one week he cleared $59 with a corn popper in his lobby. Figures provided by another exhibitor state that in six months he took $967.91, out of which his expenses were $296.94, leaving a profit of $670.97. One theatre circuit in the east is using pop corn machines at five of its houses.

Pop corn machines may be had in a number of sizes and styles, ranging from small models to elaborate machines which also include peanut warming facilities.

Portable Projectors

PORTABLE PROJECTORS are motion picture projection machines which are designed to be set up only temporarily and not for permanent installation in a regular theatre, as a rule, although used there. They are particularly adapted for use in schools, clubs, etc., and may be obtained for installation in connection with leading makes of sound equipment or with sound apparatus built in. There is a model with a heavy pedestal for permanent installation.

Semi-portable projectors are standard motion picture machines which may be utilized for either temporary or permanent installations. That is to say, these machines, while sturdily constructed, are comparatively light in weight and may be moved from rooms or buildings easily. Sound apparatus specially constructed for portable machines is available. Also available are sound-on-film unit projectors of portable type for both 35-mm. and 16 mm. film.

Poster Projectors

THESE MACHINES are projectors operated similarly to steropticons, except that instead of employing transparent slides, matter printed on opaque surfaces can be projected upon a screen. They are used in the making of posters for lobby displays and similar purposes. The artist projects a drawing or photograph from a press sheet or other prepared advertising matter, upon the surface on which he is to make his own drawing, controlling the image size by moving the projector nearer to or farther from the objective. The system of mirrors and lenses in the projector gives an image of the same direction and proportions as those of the original. The artist then merely traces along the projected lines, filling in the colors as indicated.

Poster projectors usually allow the use of original subjects as large as six or seven inches long by five or six inches high. Subjects larger than that can be projected and copied in sections.

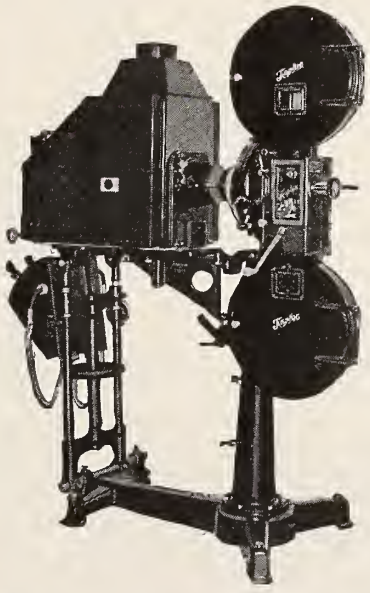
Projection Rooms and Accessories

THE PROJECTION room, or booth, because of the fact that it is one of the nerve centers of the motion picture theatre, is becoming standardized. Not in size, naturally, but in general construction, and the high standard of equipment, etc. The projection room, because of the very nature of the purpose it serves, must be fireproof and ideally ventilated. So that projectionists may remain closely in attendance at all times, toilet and washroom facilities are really indispensable.

There are many things to keep in mind in the purchase of projection room equipment. Certain parts of this equipment must conform to the building codes, it must be practical, it must satisfy the projectionist and it must lend itself to better projection.

The design and layout of the projection room should have the careful attention of the architect or builder at the time the plans for the theatre are being prepared.



The desirable projection room may vary in size but to accommodate two projectors, it should be at least 15 feet by 10 feet, with 12 foot ceiling. This size will also care for a spotlight and slide dissolver. [Projection room equipment is discussed, with manufacturers' listings, under its respective titles.]

Projectors, Motion Picture

PROJECTORS HERE referred to are the standard non-portable 35-millimeter projectors designed for permanent installation, usually in theatres. In addition to the regular large types, smaller, more compact and somewhat simplified projectors are also available for permanent theatre installation. It is the expressed belief of theatre owners and projectionists that practically ideal projection is possible with equipment available at present, provided it is in the hands of a competent projectionist. Modern projectors are the result of many years of improvement and development to meet the ever-growing requirements for the best possible screen results.

All late model standard projectors are either constructed specially for sound picture projection or are readily adapted to any make or model of sound apparatus.

Projection, Rear: Equipment for

THE TERM rear projection refers to the projection of motion pictures from behind the screen. The special equipment consists essentially in a lens of specific design for projection from a point only a short distance from the screen, without reversal of the image; and a screen that is translucent. Standard types of projectors and soundheads may be used.

Public Address Systems

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS provide a means of electrically amplifying sound in stage performances and house announcements. Microphones may be added through the regular motion picture sound amplification system, or through a special amplifier provided for this purpose. Microphonic attachment may be made at several points in the system, making its function available to the manager in his office as well as backstage. Public address equipment is also used for exploitation, at the front of the theatre or on roving trucks.

Rectifiers and Power Units

RECTIFIERS are devices for converting alternating current to direct current for both the projection arc and for the sound system. Some employ Tungar tubes as the essential rectifying agency. Others are of the copper oxide (dry) type. Rectifiers used to transform current for the sound system (also called Power Units) are much smaller than those supplying current for the arc, and are also equipped with electrical filters to insure greater steadiness in the direct current output.

THERE ARE VARIOUS types of these made, from the 10-inch, as used by film exchanges, to the accurately constructed type used on the projector machines. Some have machine embossed sides, wire welded sides, and still another type has die cast sides. Most of the types offered for use on the projectors have large diameter film hubs, which greatly aid in relieving the strain on the projector as well as giving more even take-up tension.

Reflector Shields

REFLECTOR SHIELDS are themselves really mirrors for the projection arc, but are so much less expensive than reflectors that they are recommended by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers as a protection against pitting. They were developed following the introduction of the Suprex arc, which causes considerable pit ting upon the surface of the reflector.

Sound In Keeping With New Interiors

● Let us follow your patrons as they approach your Box Office. They enter the lobby—remodeled to the nth degree: modernistic fixtures, artistic decoration and color scheme. Then to the auditorium where an equally pleasant atmosphere invites them — a cozy seat, clean, fresh air. And now the object of their attendance: To see and HEAR the latest hit of the screen.

Does Grace Moore trill those high "C's" to perfection? Does the audience catch every little click of these flying Rogers-Astaire feet?

Are you giving your patrons every bit of recording which they have paid for in advance? If not, you have over-looked the key to your Box Office coffer. That is where we come in.

Let Le ROY equipment earn increased receipts for you. Our new Master Model sound head embodies the latest developments in design and construction for quality reproduction, long life, and trouble-free operation.

The investment is small and the returns are big.

The enclosed rewinds are made in various patterns, both hand drive and motor drive models. The motor drive type is generally automatic in its operation, stopping at the end of the film or should the film break. Some are made with plain bearings and some have their spindles mounted on ball bearings. Some motor drive types also have multiple speed ranges and accommodate either one- or two-thousand-foot reels. One type also has a detachable grinding and polishing attachment.

Rheostats

AN IMPORTANT item of projection equipment is the Rheostat. A rheostat may be described as a resistor provided with means for varying resistance (opposition). The resistance may be varied by having a contact lever or slider moved over a number of stationary buttons or segments between which sections of the rheostat are connected, by compressing a number of carbon or graphite disc or parts, by using a number of levers or knife-switches for cutting in and out resistance.

Safe, Box Office

THIS IS A SAFE anchored inside the box office into which the cashier may drop silver coins and bills as received from patrons beyond what is needed for purposes of making change. This type of safe has been developed as a result of the many "stick-ups" of theatre box offices in which the robber has obtained receipts running into several thousand dollars. It is widely used in several other trades, the idea, in brief, being that with this type of safe in the box office a theatre is likely to lose only the amount which it is keeping exposed for making change.

Box office safes are made of steel and provided with a slot into which surplus receipts are placed as received, or are equipped with a chute through which the surplus receipts may be dropped. Safes of this type usually make possible the lowest rates of burglary insurance.

Screens

THERE ARE FOUR types of motion picture screens. This classification is based on the character of the finished surfaces, as follows: Metallic, Matt White, Beaded and Translucent (or rear projection). The latter type is not in general use, and for the purposes of this description will require no further mention.

Sound screens are of two types, porous and perforated. A porous screen is one on which a reflective surface is built on a loosely woven fabric, leaving the openings in the cloth unobstructed to permit the passage of sound. A perforated screen surface is applied on a closely woven fabric, first making an opaque sheet, which is then perforated with minute holes to permit the passage of sound.

Screens should be selected largely by the width of the theatre and its projection equipment or light source.

Screens are again classified as to their reflective properties into three general classes: Diffusive (matt white), semi-diffusive metallic (silver or gold fibre), and directive (beaded). The white is the only one of the above types which could be used satisfactorily in a theatre of any size, and only then with high intensity projection. Because it diffuses the light almost equally to all the seats, it is a necessity in the extra-wide auditoriums. Due to their higher reflective properties, the metallic and beaded surfaces will produce satisfactory brilliance and detail when used in conjunction with the more economical projection units, making a substantial saving in current. Since the beaded screen has the highest reflective surface, it should be used with incandescent projection lamps.

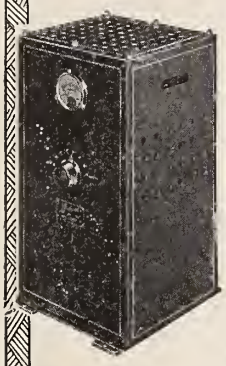
SYNCROFILM
ANNOUNCES
A 35 MM SEMI-PORTABLE SOUND PROJECTOR

Now the smaller theatres and schools may have the same quality of sound and projection that is shown in the de luxe theatres. Simplicity, ruggedness and fine workmanship are combined with so many features in the new Syncrofilm 35 Semi-Portable Sound Projector that it is the greatest value for the money we have ever offered.

The Syncrofilm 35 Semi-Portable Sound Projector may be used with any arc or incandescent lamp house. It is mounted on a special Syncrofilm stand, or it may be mounted on any Powers 6B or Powers 6A stand, thus it may be added to existing equipment.

Weber has never sacrificed quality to price, but Weber methods are such that quality can be produced at a price. The same is true of the complete line of sound and projection equipment we manufacture. It has been done in the new Syncrofilm 35 Semi-Portable Sound Projector. Write for full details.



Geneva type intermittent may be removed as unit for quick continuation of show in rare case of breakdown.
Cooling shutter and automatic dowser for safety.
Adjustable tension on film gate.
Focus and framing adjusted from outside case.
Lens holder accommodates ½ size and ¼ size lenses.
Monochrome exciter cuts 10,000 cycles on density or area sound track.

Screen Masks and Modifiers

LARGER SCREENS HAVE come into rather general vogue recently, due to the elaborate type of productions now being produced which, with the use of special lenses have enabled theatres to present outstanding scenes with greater effect and scope. The many opportunities to use the full screen to give added value to important scenes have brought about the development of the screen modifier, or mask which, automatically operated, permits framing of the screen at any desired size. The screen modifier, or mask, was first used in connection with sound-on-film to compensate for the sound on the edge of the film. This equipment is now being used in many other ways, especially in achieving ingenious opportunities for titles, announcements and special trailers.

Screen Resurfacing Service

TO INSURE proper screen illumination without increasing power consumption or incurring the risk of glare, the screen surface should be kept as reflective as possible. In spite of regular cleaning routine, however, screens gradually get soiled, and in instances in which it is not felt that a new screen is warranted, one has recourse to resurfacing.

Exhibitors have used a flat white paint to resurface their screens. However, due to the greater necessity today for an immaculate screen, the practice of resurfacing is increasing, and as a result specific materials and expert methods are available. One of these materials is sprayed on, after the screen is washed, and is of such character that it does not clog the perforations, and that it restores to the screen a high reflective power. One of the characteristics cited in a resurfacing material now on the market is its penetrability, causing it to permeate the texture of the screen fabric, restoring its original tightness.

Seat Patching Materials

A SMALL HOLE—made by accident or wear—soon becomes a big tear when nervous fingers find it. Chair seats may be kept in repair and worn or maliciously damaged coverings quickly made usable with quick patching kits now available.

Recent development in fabric glues has made possible these patching kits that may be used by even inexperienced help.

Shutters, Projection Port

THE PORT SHUTTER is made entirely of metal with a metal sliding suspended on a cord in which is connected a fusible link. In case of fire, the fusible links melts and the fire shutter automatically drops over the port hole in the booth. They are made to fit standard openings, such as projection port holes, stereopticon port holes and spotlight port holes. Prices range from $9 to $25.

Signs, Electric

THE THEATRE operates and prospers with the help of its electric signs. They carry the name of the theatre, they announce the attractions, they direct traffic within the theatre. Because of this importance of electric signs in theatre operation, steady has been their improvement, in both effect and efficiency. Attractions boards, for example, can now be more legible with less lamping. Impressive combinations of incandescent and gas-tube lighting are available. And instead of the electric signs of today being mere appendages, they form integral parts of the architectural and decorative pattern, both inside and outside the theatre.

Slides

SLIDES ARE DIVIDED into four different classes: Song slides, advertising slides, announcement slides and special advertising slides. Song slides have come into vogue within the last few years.

A patented slide, having a paper frame and a composition transparency flexible enough to be placed in a typewriter, permits the management to prepare its own slides, at a moment's notice if need be, and is thus particularly useful for special announcements.

Soundheads

APPARATUS mounted between the projection head and the lower or take-up magazine, consisting of steadily-moving sprockets, film guides, and sound "gate," and containing the exciter lamp and the photoelectric cell, is termed the soundhead. The function of the soundhead is to guide the film through the path of the exciting light, which is interrupted and varied on its way to the photocell by the markings of the sound track. A soundhead must guide the film through the path of the light with a perfectly steady and unvarying motion.

Speakers and Horns

HORNS AND SPEAKERS used in sound installations are air columns with a belled outlet, or magnetic or electro-dynamic cones (in baffles or horns), used to project the sound waves created by the amplified electrical pulsations derived from the sound system. They usually number two or more, depending upon the size or shape of the theatre and the desired provisions for covering the frequency band. In addition, a monitor speaker is used in the projection room.

Sound WAS ALWAYS A PAIN IN THE NECK TO ME and a costly one at that

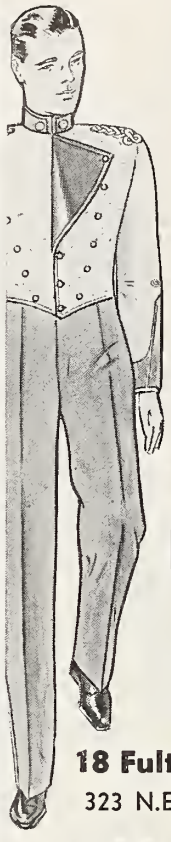
I knew that the big houses in the big towns, with their expensive sound and projector equipment, were getting a lot of the trade that should be walking up to my box office.

I tried this and that combination without getting the sound that had patron appeal. And all the while I was getting no richer . . . until

I happened upon OPERADIO AMPLIFIER and MATCHED SPEAKER UNIT. That did the trick for me. Sound that was really good sound and at a price that left some shekels to spend on the wife and kiddies.



Boys, when you've got sound trouble, call in an OPERADIO man. That's the house that gives you a square deal and stands behind you and their products 100%.

Bulletin 92 tells all about their equipment. Why don't you write for it today? Address Dept. MP.

Stage Scenery and Draperies

DRAPERIES ARE an important feature of theatres today. They accent color and give softness and richness to an interior. Architectural lines of doorways and archways are usually distinctively hard and draperies are the mediums by which these lines are softened to give a pleasing appearance.

Stereopticons

STEREOPTICONS are used for the projection of lantern slides and effects, illumination being supplied by incandescent or arc lamps. They are made in single units and also for double and triple dissolving. Many unusual effects are possible with the modern stereopticon as developed for theatre use. They can be obtained for as low as $26.00 for Mazda type.

Switchboards

CONTROL OF LIGHTING through the use of switchboards makes possible the wonderful lighting effects achieved in motion picture theatres today. Switchboards for this work are built in many capacities. Scenes for unusual lighting effects may be pre-selected by such a board and the theatre flooded with appropriate lighting scheme at a proper cue by the simple method of throwing a switch. Lighting control systems are being adopted by theatres of lesser size that heretofore have considered such installations as being only for the larger metropolitan houses.

Manufacturers of this type of equipment are glad to furnish engineering service and consult with exhibitors and architects on various phases of these lighting control systems.

Temperature Control Apparatus

TEMPERATURE control apparatus of the automatic variety can be installed on any type of heating, ventilating or air-conditioning system to maintain desired conditions. Apparatus sensitive to temperature, either inside or outside, or relative humidity, or pressure will operate instantly or with time lag, valves and dampers, or start and stop oil burners. There are two main classes of equipment, pneumatic and electrical. Pneumatic equipment requires a small compressor, a storage tank for the air which operates the various units, and the necessary pipes or tubing connecting the units. Electrical equipment requires either a low or high-voltage source of power and wire connecting the various units to be operated.

Tickets

THEARTE TICKETS are available and used in many forms as roll tickets, folded tickets, reserved seat tickets, and ticket coupon books. Roll and folded tickets of the more usual denominations are carried in stock. Tickets are commonly sold in even multiples of 10,000, the price decreasing with additional thousands ordered.

Tickets are made for use with ticket issuing machines and are consecutively numbered. This enables accurate check of tickets sold for each day. Stock tickets may be obtained for 50 cents a roll. Special printed roll or center hole folded tickets range in price from $8 for 10,000 to $158 for a million. The admission price must be printed on each ticket, by order of the government.

Ticket Choppers

A MACHINE FOR punching tickets dropped in box as patron enters theatre. The ticket chopper guards against the resale of tickets. Mutilation of the ticket consists of perforations made on the ticket, which, however, is done in a manner that does not prevent accurately checking results. Ticket choppers are made in several wood and metal finishes, and are operated by electricity, or hand and foot. Prices range from $75 to $250.

Upholstery Material

NOT ONLY appearance, but acoustics advise upholstered theatre chairs,

SAVE OPERATING COSTS AND MAKE CARPETING LAST LONGER

It has been demonstrated many times that carpets will last longer if deeply imbedded grit is removed before it cuts the threads.

The Spencer Portable Vacuum Cleaner removes grit, dust, and dirt of all kinds. You can make carpets, decorations, and sound and projector equipment last longer by keeping them clean with a Spencer Portable.

You will also improve the appearance and attractiveness of your house with a Spencer Portable, and because of its speed and efficiency, you can reduce your cleaning costs.

More than 1,000 theatres are equipped with Spencer Portable or Central Vacuum Cleaners. We can arrange a demonstration of the Spencer Portable in your theatre at your convenience.

in contradistinction to veneer chairs. Sound-absorbing padding and fabrics aid in maintaining the proper sound level regardless of the size of the audience.

A popular fabric used in this connection is mohair, which combines beauty with important sound properties. Upholstered material of this nature may be obtained in a variety of colors and executed in interesting patterns and designs. It is claimed for this material that it will not fade, does not mat down, and can be kept fresh and clean with little effort. Use of mohair for upholstering is said to produce a marked elimination of reverberations in the theatre auditorium.

This is true, of course, of any upholstering material able to absorb an amount of sound equivalent to that absorbed by patrons. Because of the necessity of creating an absorption constant, so that acoustic qualities of an auditorium are maintained independently of the size of the audience, upholstered chairs have supplanted those of veneer type in the motion picture auditorium.

As a result of advancements in the manufacture of the material, imitation leather is also to be regarded as suitable for theatre chair upholstering. New chairs may be purchased from the manufacturer or dealer finished in this material, and it is available for reupholstering. One feature of imitation leather, aside from its relatively low cost, is that it may be cleaned easily. It is procurable in a wide range of colors and also may be had in patterns.

Usher Signal Systems

THE USHER SIGNAL SYSTEM provides a sending station at each aisle, equipped with numeral push buttons that give any total of seats that aisle might have. The usher registers on this station the number of vacant seats available, which information is transmitted to the floor or head usher, depending on the size of the theatre. In the larger houses the floor usher relays the information to the head usher. The head usher sends total of all aisles and floors to the doorman who directs the people to the different sections of the house where the vacant seats are waiting.

Vacuum Cleaning Equipment

APPARATUS FOR cleaning carpeting and fabrics by suction is to be considered more or less necessary for proper maintenance of the theatre. Brooms and brushes are useful, but cannot be considered substitutes for suitably designed vacuum cleaning equipment, which not only cleanses more effectively, but does so with less time and labor.

The unusually large and elaborate theatre is sometimes best served by stationary equipment with pipes leading to the various levels, where the hose is attached. To the average theatre, however, unit cleaners of heavy-duty type with a high degree of portability are best adapted.

To make little odd jobs of cleaning easier, as in small offices, lounges, etc., it is frequently worth while to augment this larger equipment with a cleaner of the common domestic type.

in the center of the marquee ceiling, are Indian signs representing the four ages of man, while others representing the four seasons of the year decorate the four corners of this area.

The theatre facade itself is of buff stucco. The balcony and carved columns are of wood, but the look-outs, simulating the ends of rough poles thrust through the walls, are of reinforced cast cement, forming a permanent piece of construction. The central feature is a brilliantly-hued design worked out in coach enamel between wooden columns on a smooth cement background. All trim on the exterior is stained to imitate aged wood. The ever-present pueblo ladders are used to dress up each side of the built-up center structure of the front.

Even the sidewalk beneath the marquee is laid in colored cement in a simple blanket design (such as was woven by the Southwestern Indians before the traders, with an eye toward increased sales, insisted upon more elaborate color work). The box office is faced with vari-colored glazed tiles and is recessed slightly from the building line in a small vestibule opening into the entrance lobby.

THE LOBBY

The lobby, which measures 10x19 feet, is small, in keeping with the recent policy of throwing all available space into a roomier foyer. [See Plan A]. It has an depicting the buffalo hunt as portrayed in native sand paintings. Shadow boxes decorate the lobby and advertise coming attractions.

THE FOYER

The foyer is a T-shaped room, the main section 22x50 feet, with the portion taken from the lobby adding an area 20x19 feet. It contains stairways on either side to the balcony and basement sections, the ascending and descending stairways being placed above each other to conserve space.

The foyer floor is covered with a rich carpet in an Indian pattern especially designed and copyrighted for this particular theatre by an Eastern manufacturer. It blends rich red, yellow, brown and green tones.

Wherever plain draperies are used here and elsewhere throughout the building, they are of buckskin fabric in a natural shade. Brilliant harmonizing borders in rich colors enliven the foyer drapes.

The beams overhead are hand-carved and decorated with the corn flower, the squash blossom, the arrow, the serpent, and the thunderbird.

The heavy wooden furniture, elaborately hand-carved by two native wood-carvers brought to Colorado Springs from the Taos country, is an adaptation of the best old Spanish pieces still to be found in the Southwest. Settees, chairs, tables, benches and chests were built at the job, and the total expense, including the carving and finishing, was found to be moderate.

THE AUDITORIUM

The auditorium proper seats 802 on the first floor, and 285 in a small balcony. The heavy lines of adobe construction are retained in massive curved buttresses rising to the ceiling. The eye immediately flashes to the stage, which, in a simple opening, is draped in buckskin cloth richly embroidered with gold in appropriate Indian designs. The stage opening is 28x21 feet, with a stage 22 feet in depth equipped for vaudeville as well as the showing of pictures. The proscenium spandrels contain an elaborate blank decoration and examples of Southwestern pottery, over exits to the rear. The auditorium is illuminated with a three-color lighting system, featuring blended shades of red, amber and blue. Midnight blue tones from concealed neon tubing on the stage side of the ceiling beams furnish unobtrusive riding lights.

The chandeliers resemble war drums, and are ornamented on the upper edge with figures of Indian riders in silhouette.

On the side walls are murals, which were executed by Lloyd Moylan of the Broadmoor Art Institute of Colorado Springs. They are the largest Indian murals in America, each measuring 25x40 feet. In the small murals at the side of the arched ceiling on which is a large painting immense central paintings he has pictured the things most cherished by the Indian—his teepee, his horse, the cold spring water, and the mountain sheep.

Leaving to the murals and decorative features of the stage the focal points of interest, the remainder of the auditorium has purposely been kept quiet in treatment. The beams above are given glints of color with simple stenciled designs in Indian patterns. Decorative work on the exterior and throughout the interior of the theatre, other than the heroic murals, was executed under the direction of Norman E. Palmquist of Kansas City, Mo.

SEATING

The seats, with cushions of dark brown leather and backs of rough-weave material in orange, henna and brown, provide a colorful note. In various sections of the auditorium hearing aids have been installed for the accommodation of deafened patrons.

AIR PROVISIONS

The auditorium is provided with a washed-air system only, because Colorado's comfortable summer climate and the lack of humidity in the atmosphere in most cases make further air-conditioning unnecessary.

In keeping with the general late trend toward reduced second floor capacity, the balcony is small, containing only 285 seats. Steps from the balcony section reach a mid-story landing, which connects with a second flight of stairs leading to a second-story corridor in the front portion of the building. [See Plan B]. This corridor opens into a manager's office, 9x14 feet, balcony toilets for men and women, and the projection room, which is 11x20 feet.

BASEMENT LOUNGES

Perhaps the most interesting part of the Ute, from the tourist's standpoint, is the basement section containing lounges for men and women and the Museum. [See Plan C]. Contrasted with the more modern native craftsmanship of the Southwest, exhibited in the foyer lounge, the lower rooms carry one back to memories of the Spanish Colonial, early American, and cowboy eras.

The main basement lounge is known as the Pioneer Room. It has a flagstone floor, rough plastered walls, and a wooden ceiling which simulates the early custom of laying small saplings and logs diagonally across the beams to help form the roof. In one corner is a fireplace adapted from early Zuni constructions found in ranch-houses built over a century ago in the Santa Fe country. The Ute fireplace, however, is equipped with thoroughly modern electric logs.

Another interesting object in the Pioneer Room is the Wishing Well, a novelty planned to conform to local legends surrounding the Manitou mineral springs, to which the Indians made frequent pilgrimages from the plains or mountains. The legend of magic which is being built up around the stone well is that if one stands before it and makes a wish, and the water rises to gurgle over the heap of stones within the mouth of the well, the wish will be fulfilled. The initiated know that the water is controlled by means of a beam of light focused upon the front of the well by a photoelectric cell concealed overhead.

The women's basement lounge opening off the Pioneer Room is carried out in the simple dignity of Spanish Colonial design. Large easy chairs insure comfort, and a large keyhole mirror gives apparent depth and much charm to the room. Adjoining this lounge are a poudre room and toilet rooms.

On the opposite side of the Pioneer Room, the Cowboy Room presents something different in men's lounges. The lounge is finished with a flagstone floor and rude dado of peeled slabs. Hides and cattle brands from famous ranches of the vicinity adorn the walls and the woodwork. Half-logs and rude planks formed the foundation of comfort in furniture during the era represented, and the idea is carried out in detail in this room. The door to the adjoining men's toilet is of crude slabs. During construction some wag lettered a splintered board "To the Stables" and nailed it to this door, and it was considered so appropriate that the sign was allowed to remain when the theatre was completed.

ANOTHER RCA FIRST!

RCA's invention of NOISELESS RECORDING builds box office

EVERY RCA Photophone invention and development and policy has been aimed at one of two things—to increase attendance by giving audiences ever greater illusion of "presence" on the screen; or to guard and protect your increased receipts.

NOISELESS RECORDING was one of the first of these developments. Think back to the first talking motion pictures. They were noisy, full of hiss and static. As a novelty they were great. But permanent business cannot be built on mere novelty. RCA Photophone attacked the problem of scratch at its source, and solved it. Sound became clear, free from outside noises, marvelously attractive to audiences on an entertainment basis.

This is but one of RCA Photophone's many contributions to your success. It always pays to do business with the leader.

RCA FIRSTS These RCA Firsts all increase your profits: Rotary Stabilizer . . . A-C Operation . . . High Fidelity . . . 90-Day Factory-Defect Guarantee . . . Liberal Maintenance and Service.

FIRST NOISELESS RECORDING!

Noises came from dust and dirt on the track, and from stray light going through its unexposed portion. See (A). To end these noises, RCA invented a "biasing ground noise reduction device." Film outside of track is dark. See (B) Nothing but useful light goes through; the area to collect dirt and scratches is small. This is a major triumph—ANOTHER RCA FIRST that BUILDS BOX OFFICE.

SMUT LUST

UNDER the aromatic title of "Back to Smut," one Mr. Dalton Trumbo has contributed to a recent issue of a studio periodical published in Hollywood a curious and altogether remarkable denunciation of the forces of decency and the self-regulatory efforts and devices of the motion picture industry.

Mr. Trumbo's expression is interesting in its contradictions, being a professed expression in behalf of the screen and being the while so much at variance with the policies and performances of the industry which has set up and subscribed to the Production Code Administration, including conspicuously his current employers, Warner Brothers, on whose staff he is listed as a writer.

The whole matter of what he has to say, to be sure, is important only in that it is an articulate and frank exposition of a certain minority state of mind in that community which can do the industry no good. He begins:

> This is in the nature of a confession. Not so long ago I had to work for a living. I was staff writer for a publication which sincerely advocated a moral clean-up of pictures. I was in direct communication with the leaders of a great many reform groups throughout the country. . . . Now, three years later, they have won their fight. They have succeeded in saddling the motion picture industry with the most appalling set of rules ever devised for the emasculation of free expression. I was a dupe and most of them are fools. . . .

THE glib Mr. Trumbo did not use any of the considerable space at his disposal to submit samples of the more "appalling rules" or to present any gory displays of emasculations resulting from the rules. Such exhibits would be necessary to support the indictment of the Production Code—which document, by the way, he does not directly mention. In fact, he directly mentions nobody, nothing—thereby avoiding any facts invasive of his theme.

One can gather, however, from Mr. Trumbo's lively screed, by inference, what he deems to be "free expression."

The idea of "free expression" is revealed in his slogan-title, "Back to Smut," and apparently not so much for freedom as for profit because of his declaration:

> If the development of movies is to be on to Elsie Dinsmore or back to Smut, then I say by all means let's get back to Smut and be quick about it. It might be a good idea for producers to hold a round-robin and begin the retreat together, because I have a sinking suspicion that if one of them jumps the gun and beats the rest back to green pastures, he'll make enough money to buy his brothers out by Friday week. . . .

THAT'S Mr. Trumbo's freedom. It may be added that if one could get the Broadway and Times Square concession for the vending of gold-bricks, heroin and evesflesh, without hindrance, he also could make a lot of money—Smut money.

It perhaps did not occur to Mr. Trumbo, when he said in his "confession" that he wrote for a clean-up "because he had to make a living," that the implications might also extend to some aspects of his current expression, too. If he is now writing in behalf of Smut for the love of it, he's classified, and if he thinks he is doing it for hire, directly or indirectly, there's a name for that, too.

If one must speak of Elsie Dinsmore, one also recalls "Little Women," in perhaps a kindred category, which, as we recall, did rather well.

Meanwhile grosses on the competent product of the period, all produced under the ministrations of the Production Code, appear adequate.

In fact, business has been so good that even Mr. Trumbo seems to have been able to escape from the job where he says "I had to work for a living," into the movies, where, one would assume from his context, things are different.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

For the Minors

Lowering of the age limit from 16 years to eight years for children who may attend motion picture theatres unescorted, the segregation of children eight to 16 years in special sections and employment of a matron to supervise them are among provisions of a bill pending in the New York state legislature which has the approval of all interests concerned, including exhibitors. The measure is accepted as rectifying a long standing problem. See page 27.

'Diligence'

Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, chief proponents of the Neely-Pettingill anti-block booking bills, conceded this week that "only the utmost diligence on the part of friends of the measure can insure its enactment." Likelihood of passage, however, is considered elsewhere to be negligent.

Regardless, Allied, in explaining its position following the hearings, charged that the printed record of the testimony "will stand as a monument to the lack of merit in the distributors' case." The organization's post-hearings observations appear on page 68.

School Films

While motion pictures are far from perfect for school purposes, they are useful in extending the experiences of children to new places, different strata of society and into various occupational fields, the annual convention of the Eastern States Association of Professional Schools for Teachers was told in New York late last week by Paul G. Cressey, associate director of motion picture study for New York University.

Other speakers discussed programs by which the Schools Motion Picture Committee and other organizations analyze photoplays and recommend approved films.

New York City is already utilizing radio broadcasts in about 100 of its schools, said Associate Superintendent Joseph M. Sheehan.

Hearing

Hearing on the petition of the reorganization committee of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., asking an order for sale of assets and property of the company and receivership was fixed for April 28 by Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in chancery court at Wilmington, Del., this week.

The petitioners, the reorganization committee, are acting under the plan of agreement and reorganization of August 31 last, and they declare the sale of the assets and property of GTE and of the receivership estate should be ordered and offered in such parcels as may appear appropriate after the hearing.

United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, receiver for GTE, under the committee's proposal, subsequently would report on the sale to the court, whereupon the action would be heard generally, at which time the court might determine all further matters relating to the consummation of the sale, terminating of the receivership, discharge of the receiver and consummation of the plan and agreement of the reorganization.

Chancellor Wolcott approved the action taken by the debenture holders' committee constituted under a deposit agreement dated Feb. 10, 1932, relating to the 10-year six per cent convertible gold debentures of GTE and by the reorganization committee on November 20 last, in declaring the plan operative.

SMPE Program

The program of 50 papers to be read at the spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, set for April 27th to 30th, at Chicago's Edgewater Beach hotel, indicate that motion picture engineers and scientists today are engaged in refining existing equipment and technical practice, rather than developing radically new methods for producing, distributing and exhibiting motion pictures. The nature of these improvements is described in the program, which appears on page 62.

U. S. Leads

American films exhibited in Germany for the first three-quarters of the current season, from last July to March, totaled 28, a slight decline, although grosses from American product did not suffer comparatively. The American pictures were divided as follows: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 11; Paramount, eight; Twentieth Century-Fox, four; Columbia and Universal, two each, and Radio, one.

Imports from other countries were: Austria, 11; France, eight; England, three; Poland and Hungary, two each; Sweden and Czechoslovakia, one each.

Ufa is expected to take over the assets of Terra Company, Berlin producer and distributor, and is offering Terra studio facilities, raw stock and printing, in return for which Ufa is to handle Terra's pictures. Herbert Staab, formerly with Ufa, has joined Terra as a production supervisor. At the present, however, some of the Terra films are to be made at the Ufa studios at Neubabelsberg and Tempelhof.

Patents

Investigators for the Federal Communications Commission in Washington revealed this week that they are making a thorough study of the patents owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to determine whether this ownership makes possible a "telephone monopoly."

A study will be made, it was said, to determine whether any patents were obtained by "freezing out" inventors. The investigators are also accumulating a mass of data on the cost of manufacturing telephone equipment. This work is done by the Western Electric Company, a sister company of A. T. and T.

Meanwhile, the public hearings in the commission's investigation of the company have been recessed until April 14th.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Standardizing

The standardization of the recorded volume level on trailers and newsreels to conform with the sound volume of feature pictures will be undertaken immediately by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in accordance with a decision reached at the first meeting of the year, it was announced in Hollywood this week. Recommendations of the sound recording sub-committee under the chairmanship of William Koenig have been approved.

The council was informed that the recorded volume level on a large number of newsreels and trailers inspected by the committee was much higher than the normal volume of features. The reports pointed out that although a moderate increase in volume level is desirable from a standpoint of showmanship, the great discrepancies existing at the present time detract considerably from the program.

More Theatres

Canada's theatres in operation increased during 1935 virtually 10 per cent, according to a report released at the annual meeting of the Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association last week in Toronto.

Colonel John Cooper was re-elected president and Henry Nathanson, M. A. Milligan, J. P. O'Loughlin, Clair Hague, A. W. Perry, Leo Devaney, H. M. Masters and H. O. Paynter were named to the board of directors.

Film rentals, the report disclosed, were slightly less for 1935 but indications for 1936 were believed to be promising.

RCA Plan

The recapitalization plan of the Radio Corporation of America, approved by the directors on January 31, was endorsed at a special meeting of stockholders Tuesday afternoon. Joseph P. Kennedy, former film executive, who was paid $150,000 for devising the plan, attended the meeting to explain its provisions.

The stockholders held their annual meeting immediately preceding and reelected these directors for a term of three years: Newton D. Baxer, Cornelius N. Bliss, Bertram Cutler, James G. Harbord.

The recapitalization plan in brief calls for retirement of all Class A preferred shares; borrowing of $10,000,000 at 2½ per cent from banks; exchanging of Class B preferred shares at the rate of 1 1/5 shares of new convertible preferred and one common share for each preferred share, and the right for five years to convert each new preferred share into five common shares.

Redemption of the A preferred stock will eliminate annual dividend requirements of $1,734,600.

RCA said the plan is regarded as benefiting the holders of common stock by eliminating all dividend arrears on the B preferred and reducing the annual charges ahead of the common stock by more than $2,000,000, assuming the exchange of all B preferred. The conversion when fully consummated will eliminate the first preferred stock and make the common stockholders the sole owners of the assets and earnings of the company, RCA announced.

In a statement read at the meeting, P. A. Powers, president of Celebrity Pictures, said that if the book losses on the sales of Electrical and Musical Industries, a British company, and RKO investments had been charged to earnings in 1935 instead of to a special reserve, there would have been a net loss instead of a net profit.

New Plan

An increase in Sunday adult admission prices becomes effective in Milwaukee theatres April 12th. Early prices are abolished and all houses will charge their top fees all day Sundays. Two theatres, however, the Riverside and Princess, are maintaining the old sliding scale, but with increased prices.

The members of the committee that drafted the new schedule inclue Charles Trampe, president, Film Board of Trade; H. G. Fitzgerald, general manager, Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises; Harold Mirsch, manager, Warner Theatres; A. D. Kvoll, manager, Saxe Amusement Management, Inc., and George Fischer, Harry Perlewitz and Al Bartelt, representing independent interests.

Approved

A steady and impressive stream of film entertainment has been flowing from producer to the Producers' Association for approved code seal numbers in Hollywood the last two months, reports indicate. Ninety-two features and 45 shorts have gone to exhibitors with an approved code number during this two-month period.

These new figures, added to the list previously approved, make a total of 1,194 features and 750 shorts given seals in close to two years. Many of these pictures were re-released, but a greater majority consisted of entirely new product.

Restriction

The president of Germany's Federal Film Chamber has indefinitely extended his decree prohibiting the erection of new film theatres, according to Assistant Trade Commissioner Rolland Welsh in Berlin.

An additional clause provides that, in cases where building permission has already been granted, the permit expires unless the house is put in operation within six months after the permit is issued.

Two of the larger Berlin theatres at which American pictures are ordinarily introduced to the German public, the Marmorhaus and the Capitol, have been purchased by UFA, largest German producing organization. UFA already possesses 15 theatres in Berlin, including a number of first-run houses, but this is the first step on the part of the organization to exhibit American films on a large scale.

Business

With the first year of Warner theatre decentralization plan completed in New Haven on March 1, it is reported that I. J. Hoffman, in charge of operations in southern New England on a percentage basis, has received a large bonus, which he has shared with district managers, theatre managers and other executives over his circuit. It is estimated that business in this territory was double the amount of last year.

Stock Appraisals

Justice Aaron J. Levy in the New York Supreme court this week granted by consent the application of Munson G. Boremus, owner of Fox Film Corporation stock, for appraisal of 900 shares of Class A common stock. The court order granted similar applications to Arthur Eisele, Charles F. Eisele, Estelle R. Gold, Julius C. Vogeler, Jr., and Orra B. Mead. The appraisers appointed are Millard H. Ellison, William E. Forst and Morton L. Panken.

Double Bills

Of approximately 66 theatres operating in Boston 30 per cent are using double features regularly. Single feature houses are the Metropolitan and RKO Boston, which have stage shows; the Howard Atheneum; Fine Arts, which handles foreign product; the South Station, showing only short subjects, and Keith's Memorial.

PIONEER FETED. (Left) Luncheon at the Warner studio, at which J. L. Warner, production head of Warner Brothers, first to exploit sound, was host to D. W. SIGNED. To contribute her own brand of heart-throbs to the excitement supplied by Buck Jones. She is Marla Shelton, and has been signed by Universal to play opposite the strenuous Mr. Jones in "The Phantom Rider."

PRELUDE. To the wedding of Edmund Lowe and Rita Kaufman. Swiftly it followed these, their greetings, upon the groom's return from England, where he made "Doomed Cargo" for GB.

LOVE NOTES. At least that's what Gary Cooper (if we've read the script correctly) is putting into it. And Jean Arthur thinks the results are good, so what? Things are much this way throughout Columbia's "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," in which Cooper stars with Miss Arthur opposite.

THE PROOF. Is offered at right, just in case you have never believed that Marie Wilson, Warner comedienne, has eyelashes more than five-eighths of an inch long. This diagrammatic photo should end the controversy.

NEW ASSIGNMENT. Lee Garmes (left) met by John Ojerholm, Hecht-MacArthur production manager, upon arriving from England. Garmes will be associate director of "The Monster," Hecht-MacArthur production for Paramount.

CARTOON PRODUCTION RESOURCES EXPANDED. Members of the production staff of Terry-Toons, Inc., which Paul Terry, head of the company now releasing through Twentieth Century - Fox, has extended as part of a program increasing personnel and negative investment 15 per cent. Pictured are:

Seated: Jose Carreon, George Cannata, Edwin Donnelly, Connie Rasinski, Hugh M. Shields, Mr. Terry, Philip A. Scheib, musical director; Mannie Davis, head of the story department; William A. Weiss, secretary and treasurer of the company; George Gordon, head of the animation department; and Al Ivanoff. Second row: Paul J. Sommer, J. Alan Klein, Joseph Rasinski, Philip Santry, Julie Dean, C. O. Sachs, Jr., Mike Prendergast, Harvey Eisenberg, Esmeralda Fernandes, Vincent Eletto, Carl Meyer, Thomas J. Morrison and Rocco Eletto. Top row: Ralph Pearson, John Foster, Vivie Risto, Lou Marcus, Dan Ward, Robinson McKee, Armand D'Angelo, Raymond Kelley, Frank Schudde and Walter Gleason.

INTRODUCES PROTEGEE. Lily Pons, opera star who returns to the screen next fall in RKO Radio's "Street Girl," accompanying, at a press reception in New York, Jean Dickenson, young soprano whom she is sponsoring.

FIRST CONTRACT. Of National Screen Accessories corporation in New England, being signed by Edward Anson, president of Interstate Theatres, in the presence of Harold Stoneman of the circuit (left), and M. Van Praag, of National Screen Accessories.

OPPOSITE. Henry Fonda and Margaret Sullavan backing each other up, as it were, in "The Moon's Our Home," a new Walter Wanger production in which they are co-starred. It is scheduled for early release by Paramount.

INDUSTRY MEETS APRIL 16 TO SEEK SELF-REGULATION

Distributors Formally Invited to Confer with MPTOA Committee to Settle Upon Improved Trade Practices

BULLETIN

Establishment of a federal commission to govern motion pictures was recommended Wednesday by a federal bureau to the Administration for eventual consideration by the President.

Block booking, overbuying, clearance-zoning and "monopolistic practices" were held to be matters best regulated by the Government.

The report was submitted to the Department of Commerce by Daniel Bertrand, formerly of the NRA Motion Picture Code Division, on a federal assignment surveying NRA accomplishments and failures.

"Only a federal commission would seem versatile enough to cope with the industry's complex problems," the report said, adding that a federal commission would clear the air of "suspicion" that the business is monopolistically dominated.

Complete investigation of the industry, and of all its books and records, "at considerable expense and time," was asked.

Such action as requested would require Congressional legislation, which is an impossibility at this session.

The report recommended for membership on the commission Will H. Hays, Terry Ramsaye, Sol A. Rosenblatt, John C. Flinn, Tyree Dillard, David Palfreyman, Nathan Yamins, Ed. Kuykendall, Abram Myers, Pat Casey, George Browne, Louis Krouse, Steven Newman, John T. Knight, Joseph Weber, Frank Gillmore, and Professors M. P. McNair of the Bureau of Business Research, and Howard T. Thomas, Graduate School of Business. both of Harvard.

The motion picture is approaching probably the most serious attempt in years to establish voluntary self-regulation for governing distribution and exhibition trade practices in order to create a harmonious relationship between the buyer and seller of motion pictures.

Theatre owners of the country, as represented by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Edward L. Kuykendall, president, will meet with sales, corporate and legal representatives of the large distributors, in New York, on the morning of Thursday, April 16th, at the Cinema Club, to place in operation the machinery for effecting such self-regulation.

The distributors were invited formally and individually on Wednesday morning, by letter, to attend with the MPTOA's executive committee.

Of the MPTOA's executive committee who have definitely agreed to represent the owners, four already are preparing to travel to New York for the purpose: Mr. Kuykendall, Lew Pizor, Philadelphia; Charles Williams, Omaha; Oscar Lam, Georgia; L. C. Griffith, Oklahoma City.

CANCELLATIONS

by MARTIN QUIGLEY

THE forthcoming conference between exhibitors and distributors on trade practice adjustments promises to afford an opportunity for the solution of a number of problems which have long afflicted the business of renting films. That there is much room for improvement in the trade practices governing the renting of films is a viewpoint against which there is but little argument. It is to be hoped that out of the approaching conferences, which are being entered into in a friendly and cooperative spirit on the part of both the exhibitor representatives and the distribution executives, there will issue an agreement which will provide for a better and sounder way of doing business.

Many of the existing trade practices surrounding the renting of films are the result of no deliberate and thoughtful plan; they are rather a conglomeration of trade habits which have taken growth upon the distribution machine through the years. That some of them are unreasonably burdensome and obnoxious to all except the most advantageously situated exhibitors is a matter of common knowledge. It is both logical and sensible that exhibitors and distributors should now, with better business conditions returning, enter seriously upon the task of rearranging these matters, to the end of a fairer deal for all concerned.

A SIGNIFICANT development in the light of the approaching conference is the observation made recently before a legislative hearing in Washington by Mr. Sidney R. Kent, who has long been one of the most forward-looking and forward-thinking men in the industry on matters of distribution. Mr. Kent indicated that he would favor a practice under which pictures would be available for screen inspection before being offered for sale. This is a practice which has long been a legal requirement in England and to it are ascribed many beneficial accomplishments. The industry in the United States may not yet be ready for such an innovation but it obviously would entail many marked advantages over present arrangements.

The exhibitors will approach the forthcoming conference with a proposal calling for an unconditional twenty per cent cancellation clause in all rental contracts. That every exhibitor, irrespective of the conditions surrounding his theatre, should enjoy some substantial cancellation privilege is obviously an essential requirement if he is to function efficiently and constructively.

When the distributor offers a group of pictures without definite and thorough knowledge of the nature of these pictures and when the exhibitor accepts the offer, the latter, in order that he may attune his operations to many factors with which he must contend, must have the election as to the elimination of a certain percentage of the group in question. Such a cancellation arrangement has of course been widely in vogue for some time—at least as far as principle is concerned. In actual practice, however, the cancellation privilege has been tied with conditions which involve or actually negate the privilege. The exhibitor should have a plain, uncontestable right under the contract to exclude on his own judgment a reasonable percentage of the pictures called for in any contract.

WHAT the percentage in definite figures should be is obviously a matter for discussion and negotiation. If the contract is to be more than merely a product reservation, the cancellation privilege must be limited, but it should not be so limited that it robs the exhibitor of the freedom of action necessary with which to deal with the special and individual problems that confront his particular theatre. But whatever the figure is, the clause which gives it effect in the contract should be plain and unmistakable and should be tied to no conditions which under ordinary circumstances render it ineffective or tend to do so.

Among the exhibitor proposals at the forthcoming conference will be several questions involving seller and buyer relations upon which no ideal solution will probably be found now or at any other time. The intricacies involved in marketing film seem to make this a condition out of which there appears to be no complete escape. But this is not a denial of the fact that many helpful and constructive adjustments are possible if both parties to the conference approach their task in a spirit of fair play.

TRADE PRACTICE SESSION APRIL 16

Still to be heard from are Jack Miller, Chicago; Morgan Walsh and Samuel Pinanski, Boston.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists and Universal have already privately said that they will attend.

The conference on April 16th will be to establish the preliminaries, opening to a general round-table discussion. All delegates will be invited to suggest solutions of existing problems in order to effect a serious and official consideration for self-regulation, for correcting abuses and for adjusting distributors' sales policies where they now injure the owner.

A distributor spokesman on Wednesday acknowledged that a general belief exists among the large companies that some such procedure should be followed, adding that the sales interests are in sympathy with the exhibitors' plea for establishing regulatory machinery and proper trade practices. They are entering the conference with the idea of starting negotiations that will bring a general settlement of the distributor-exhibitor issue.

Industry leaders have variously had such a Utopian status in mind since the "5-5-5" industry conferences of more than a decade ago, when the motion picture came closest to self-regulation, down through the years to the most recent case of regulation as forced by the Roosevelt Administration under the Blue Eagle of the NRA.

The complaints of exhibitors against so-called distributor and distributor-circuit "aggression" are becoming louder, frequently echoing in federal court actions on grounds of anti-trust law violations. Too, the distributors are finding stronger opposition from interests outside of the trade, as evidenced at legislative hearings on proposals to effect governmental regulation of certain trade practices—principally, block booking.

The MPTOA has been campaigning for months for an industry round-table to arrive at a solution for distributor-exhibitor troubles. After touring the country to determine at first hand the specific complaints of owners, MPTOA's President Kuykendall presented to the organization's directors a program of procedure. This the board ratified at its meeting at Miami, last month, and subsequently presented, as a formal commitment of its aims, to the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House of Representatives during the recent hearings on the Pettengill anti-block booking bill. The program advocated by the MPTOA contains 10 general provisions as follows:

(1) A reasonable and unconditional minimum rejection privilege in all exhibition contracts for ten (10) or more feature pictures bought at the same time.

(a) Removal of the conditions and restrictions in the so-called "N. R. A. 10 per cent clause" now in use, which takes away the exhibitors' right to reject pictures; if he does not buy and license at the same time every single picture released by the distributor and/or offered to the exhibitor; if he fails to request in writing the cancellation of the picture within 14 days of the actual release in the exchange territory, which is frequently impossible for the exhibitor to determine; if the film rentals average over $250 per picture; if he is unable to book the pictures exactly as they become available; or if he is in default in any respect at the time on any of the terms, conditions and obligations of his contract.

(b) An increase in the number of pictures that may be rejected (it is clearly understood that no exhibitor is required to reject any pictures) from the present conditional 10 per cent to an unconditional 20 per cent of the total number of feature pictures licensed.

(2) The establishment of readily available local joint boards or grievance committees of bona fide local theatre owners and local branch managers of the distributors for the organized investigation, conciliation or arbitration of trade disputes, to which any exhibitor can present a complaint or grievance for such local board to hear, investigate and endeavor to work out an adjustment or voluntary agreement between the parties involved. It is intended that these local boards should be composed of business men experienced in and familiar with our business, that their proceedings should be informal and their recommendations for the adjustment of disputes and differences subject to acceptance by the parties.

"We believe these readily available facilities for impartially ascertaining the facts in commercial disputes, bringing the parties to the dispute together and mediating their differences will relieve our business of much costly and unsatisfactory litigation, but they will deny no one their 'day in court' if they insist," said the report.

(3) Unreasonable clearance, either in time or area, not based on actual competition, secured by private contracts or agreements without the knowledge or consent of subsequent run exhibitors.

(a) The growing necessity for an openly negotiated and published uniform maximum clearance and zoning plan in each metropolitan center, to limit clearance within a defined maximum for each theatre or run, to provide a definite and uniform availability for subsequent runs of like classifications, and to encourage reasonable admission scales by offering earlier availability to theatres charging higher admissions, and to prevent unreasonable clearance not based on actual or probable competition between theatres.

(4) "Overbuying" of pictures to deprive a competing exhibitor of needed attractions for his theatre.

(a) Encouraged by unrestricted double featuring.

(b) Prompt release of pictures rejected under "selective" contracts.

(c) Involves questions of theatre policy, genuine competitive buying and bidding for pictures, reasonable booking requirements of specific theatres and frequently expert and unbiased judgment of the suitability of attractions, which can only be determined fairly by an impartial local committee qualified by personal experience and knowledge to judge each separate situation on its merits.

(5) Unfair cut-rate competition between theatres, frequently forcing the sale of motion picture entertainment below cost, demoralizing and cheapening the business and ultimately and inevitably ruining the quality of pictures for all theatres. Rebates in the form of:

(a) Premiums, giveaway and gift nights.

(b) Lotteries, pseudo-contests and prizes.

(c) Two-for-ones, coupons, merchants tickets and indiscriminate use of "advertising" passes.

And also cut-rate competition in the form of:

(a) Two or three feature pictures for one admission, the so-called "double and triple featuring."

(b) Unreasonably low admission scales underselling other theatres playing the same pictures, but required to pay much higher film rentals for them.

(6) Control of the non-theatrical exhibitions of professional entertainment pictures, to prevent unfair competition with an established theatre.

(7) A standard form of exhibition contract, reduced to essential clauses, understandable in language to intelligent exhibitors who are not lawyers, with no trick clauses giving unfair advantages to the distributor added thereto without the actual knowledge of voluntary consent of the exhibitor, and with a uniform provision for the enforceable arbitration of all contract disputes.

(8) The separate "score charge" still made by some distributors, which has never been justified by them. This is particularly unfair on percentage contracts.

(9) Arbitrary designation by a distributor of the days of the week a percentage picture must be exhibited regardless of suitability.

(10) Forcing excess and unwanted short subjects with feature picture sales.

Of special significance to the approaching MPTOA-distributor meetings is the interpretation placed by industry attorneys on the United States supreme court's recent decision in the Sugar Institute case. More extensive rights for trade associations in establishing rules and regulations to mitigate trade evils than have been acknowledged heretofore are believed by film lawyers to be indicated in the decision.

Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes delivered the opinion, which embodies specific references to the nature of concerted action which may be taken by trade associations to improve condi-

FILM MARATHON AT PORTLAND THEATRE

The State Theatre management at Portland is familiar with double and triple bills, but regards them as a mere dash of entertainment, so it recently went in for a septuplet bill. No objections were offered when some of the patrons preferred to call it a film marathon.

The lobby cards read:

If You Can Take It — Come and Get It
One performance of each of the following:

3 P.M.	6:27 P.M.
"The Clairvoyant"	"Pursuit"
4:10 P.M.	7:29 P.M.
"Silk Hat Kid"	"Dante's Inferno"
5:18 P.M.	8:49 P.M.
"Air Hawks"	"She"
	10:25 P.M.

The last title proved to be a joke, because some of the younger patrons who had sat through the entire show heard something when they finally reached home.

tions by eliminating "illicit practices." Industry attorneys have studied the opinion and at this point see in it the possibility of a direct application to the establishment of rules and regulations of trade practices by exhibitors, on the one hand, and distributors on the other.

Parts of the opinion could have been written to order as a guide book for the impending conferences between large distributors and the MPTOA, it was said. The opinion, for example, states that while the restrictions of the Sherman Act are "designed to frustrate unreasonable restraints, they do not prevent the adoption of reasonable means to protect interstate commerce from destructive or injurious practices and to promote competition upon a sound basis."

Allied States Association, Nathan Yamins, president, and Abram Myers, board chairman, in an open statement from national headquarters at Washington, this week, belittled the efforts toward the industry discussions, declaring: "Frantic efforts are being made to offset the effects of the magnificent work done by Allied leaders by the familiar device of 'industry conferences'." These conferences, Allied charged, look to "slight temporary concessions in the way of an enlarged cancellation privilege." (MPTOA hopes to obtain a 20 per cent cancellation privilege at the industry sessions, supplanting the present 10 per cent.)

The "magnificent work" referred to in the Allied statement presumably is the organization's sponsorship of the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking bill in Congress and the participation of Allied's leaders in the recent hearings on the bill in the Senate and House.

Allied urged its membership to turn out en bloc at the organization's forthcoming annual convention at Cleveland, where, it was said, "those attending will be called upon to make decisions which will affect the welfare of the independent exhibitors for many years to come." Allied did not disclose the nature of its program. In any event, it is unlikely that Allied will sit in on the trade practice conferences between the MPTOA and the distributors. The MPTOA feels that as sponsor of the sessions it is concerned only with its own participation, and that Allied will have to come in of its own initiative.

Telegrams requesting that the New York Independent Theatre Owners' Association be permitted to take part in the conferences on trade practices between the M. P. T. O. A. and distributors were sent by Harry Brandt, president.

In the telegrams, which were dispatched to Ed Kuykendall as well as all the company heads and the Hays office, it was pointed out that the I. T. O. A. is not affiliated with any national organization and it would contribute to a full understanding of exhibitor problems if included.

Text of Letter from Exhibitors Calling Distributors to Self-Regulation Conference

The presidents and general sales managers of the eight large distributors in New York received on Wednesday morning a letter from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president, calling for an industry meeting on April 16th in New York to effect self-regulation in order to lighten exhibitor burdens of trade practices described as unfair, and to establish machinery for developing amicable relations between the exchange and the theatre. The letter went to:

Columbia Pictures Corporation, Jack Cohn, vice president; Abe Montague, general sales manager.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, Nicholas M. Schenck, president; Felix F. Feist, general sales manager.
Paramount Pictures Corporation, John E. Otterson, president; Neil F. Agnew, general sales manager.
RKO Distributing Corporation, Ned E. Depinet, president; Jules Levy, general sales manager.
Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Sidney R. Kent, president; John D. Clark, general sales manager.
United Artists Corporation, George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general sales manager; Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign sales.
Universal Pictures Corporation, Robert H. Cochrane, president; James R. Grainger, general sales manager.
Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Harry M. Warner, president; Major Albert Warner, vice-president in charge of sales.

Dear Mr. ———— :

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was held at the Miami-Biltmore Hotel, Miami, Florida, on March 5th and 6th. This was a two-day conference of 24 representative theatre owners who had been sent there by the regional and state trade associations of theatre owners throughout the country, in each instance as their representative on our Board of Directors. During the executive sessions of the Board, there was a long and detailed discussion of unfair competitive practices in this business, in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures, of the abuses and injustices that occur and the urgent need for a serious, sensible organized effort for self-regulation and self-discipline in our own trade practices in this industry.

MPTOA has repeatedly offered to cooperate with any sincere group or organization of exhibitors, distributors or producers to regulate and control unfair competitive practices, remove abuses and prevent injustices in our own business. We have stood ready and willing to do this at any time. We cannot do it alone, without reasonable cooperation. Several of the trade practices on which complaints are constantly made and which are the subject of insistent litigation and agitation among exhibitors concern primarily two competing exhibitors, but the business is so interlocked that the distributors are substantially affected by these controversies.

Several of the more important matters require a modification of sales policies and active cooperation on the part of the distributors to remove the abuses or effectively solve the problem. We realize that there are many obstacles to overcome, both legal and practical, in securing these benefits for theatre owners and for the good of the whole industry. Most of the progress that has been made in the past towards a solution of trade practice problems and self-regulation in commercial practices has been either completely wiped out or abandoned. We believe that the time has come when this job should again be undertaken. While progress in these matters has been very discouraging to us, our Board of Directors (by the only resolution adopted at the annual meeting) recommended that conferences be undertaken between an MPTOA committee and the President or General Sales Manager of each of the distribution companies, either separately or jointly, to seek a reasonable solution of these problems.

I am prepared to bring a committee of representative theatre owners from my organization into New York City for a preliminary conference on these matters on and after April 16th, and I want to arrange for a meeting with either you or your General Sales Manager at a suitable place with our committee for a preliminary discussion of these matters. We want to lay our major problems and complaints on the table for your serious consideration at such preliminary conference with a view of continuing these negotiations until we are able to arrive at a serious, sensible solution of the problems presented. My organization has vigorously opposed governmental regulation or interference in the commercial operation of the motion picture business as we believe that organized self-regulation and self-discipline in our own trade practices is the only practical way to solve our problems satisfactorily. We appeal to you to give us your sincere cooperation in developing a plan or plans that will accomplish these purposes.

At the public hearing on the Pettengill Bill before the House Sub-Committee, I was urgently requested by the Sub-Committee to file a memorandum setting forth the trade practice matters which our Board of Directors proposed be taken up for discussion with the distributors in conferences and negotiations seeking a practical plan of self-regulation to remove certain abuses about which exhibitors generally complain and which are the subject of a considerable amount of litigation and controversy. I am enclosing herewith a copy of the memorandum that was filed with the Congressional Committee. These are the matters which we consider to be of major importance. [Editor's Note: MPTOA'S platform for correcting trade practice abuses, referred to in the foregoing, appears on page 14.]

Will you please advise me promptly if you or your General Sales Manager will meet with the Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on and after April 16th if I assemble members of the Executive Committee in New York for the purpose of such conference. I will appreciate a prompt reply.

E. L. KUYKENDALL, President.

LOVE, LOYALTY, TREASON

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

DRAWN directly from the pages of history, the subject matter of "Mary of Scotland" shares with many recent and not so recent pictures of distinction the substantial advantage of romantic fact over fiction as story material. What has been and is being done with this material is in the best tradition of fact-to-film translation and as the production takes on rounded form, moves toward completion, the familiar murmur of mounting expectancy spreads through the film colony, gains credence.

Although the treatment being given the story faithfully preserves the panorama of historical events, emphasizing their import, significance and influence, its values as an emotion-stirring romantic drama are receiving full attention. Entertainment potentialities are many and varied, ranging from the beauty of a great love and patriotism, through a skein of shocking treason, treachery and disloyalty, of conflict mental, physical, political, religious and martial, to the horror of stark tragedy. It is the story of Mary Stuart, whose greatest loves were the loves of country, national pride and religion, a queen whose devotion to her loves brought down upon her the wrath and vengeance of another queen, Elizabeth of England; the story of a woman who loved "well but not too wisely" and thereby lost her head on the executioner's block.

Pandro S. Berman, producer, selected the Maxwell Anderson stage play as the basis for the screen adaptation. Naturally given the benefit of much research for authenticity in the detail of settings, costumes and props, the screen play was completed by Dudley Nichols. John Ford, who is noted for his screen portraits of despair and tragedy, as evidenced by "The Informer" and "Prisoner of Shark Island," was assigned as director. These men won the Academy awards in their respective fields this year.

Choice of stars and principal supporting players seems to have been an exceptional example of casting intelligence. Katharine Hepburn has the title role. In such pictures as "Bill of Divorcement," "Morning Glory" and "Little Women" she demonstrated her ability to rise to the dramatic heights here required. In the part of John, Earl of Bothwell, Mary's swashbuckling strong right arm and the only man who ever claimed a place in the inmost recesses of her womanly heart, Fredric March has a role packed with courageous dash and gallant abandon. As Rizzio, Mary's dandified but loyal adviser who went to his death that his queen might live, will be seen John Carradine, currently outstanding in "Prisoner of Shark Island." The part of Lord Darnley, whom political expediency forced Mary to marry without love, is essayed by Douglas Walton. Ian Keith is Mary's treacherous brother, whose ambitions to sit on a throne led him to sacrifice her life. John Knox, the religious reformationist who first hated, then loved, but finally denounced Mary, will be played by Moroni Olsen, who had the same role in the New York Theatre Guild presentation. Elizabeth is Florence Eldridge, a noted stage actress and March's wife.

The time of the story is the late years of the 16th Century and the locales are Scotland and England. Production settings run the scale of artistic and architectural beauty from the re-creation of a fogbound seacoast village to the lavishness of the English court. Among the more pretentious settings are replicas of Elizabeth's apartments and boudoir in Whitehall Castle; interiors and exteriors of Holyrood Castle, Mary's home in Scotland and the site of many stirring incidents in the picture; the courtroom in Forheringay Castle, scene of Mary's trial and condemnation; the great hall and chapel at Dunbar Castle; the prison in Lochlevan Castle where she was held; the galleon on which Mary crossed from France to Scotland to claim her throne, and the square in which she was executed.

Other players in important parts whose commercial name values are recognized are Alan Mowbray, Donald Crisp, Robert Barrat, Leonard Mudie, Monte Blue, Lawrence Grant, Doris Lloyd, Lionel Belmore, Wyndham Standing, Murray Kinnel and dozens of others.

The intimate drama and romance of a hapless queen and hapless woman, the story deals only with elements and ingredients that are deeply human. Mr. Berman and Mr. Ford bring it to the screen fully confident that its appeal will establish it high on the list of the many pictures with which they have been associated.

BETRAY "MARY OF SCOTLAND"

The Case for and Against Longer Feature Pictures

Hollywood Confident, Exhibitors Skeptical, as Running Times Lengthen

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER

There may be more of coincidence than significance in the fact that the best picture of 1935 by vote of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences was also the longest picture of the year. "Mutiny on the Bounty" ran 133 minutes.

There unquestionably is more significance than coincidence in the fact that five productions just opened or in immediate prospect are scaled to run considerably longer. They are:

The Great Ziegfeld (MGM) 184 Min.
The Goldwyn Follies (UA) 180 Min.
Anthony Adverse (WB) 150 Min.
Romeo and Juliet (MGM) 150 Min.
The Green Pastures (WB) 135 Min.

There is no justification in the record for the easy assumption that any of these was or is being produced in heroic linear dimension on the slick theory that length and merit have come to mean the same thing—that is, box office—in screen product. All but the second named were well on the way toward completion before the Academy awards were voted, and in speaking of that one, then as a part of the agenda of his production activities for the coming season, Samuel Goldwyn had this to say in January:

"If the public will sit through two bad pictures that consume three hours of time, there is no reason why it shouldn't sit through one good picture that will run that length. The same holds true of enduring one bad picture in order to view a good one. And the sooner producers start fighting fire with fire, by releasing pictures that are so long and at the same time so good that they can't be teamed with another picture, the better it will be for the entire film industry and the theatres themselves. Hereafter, I, for one, intend to disregard what is called normal length and, in so far as possible, produce pictures that will stand on their own feet independently of any other feature attraction on the program."

The Bernhard Credo

Nor was the hope of winning a gold-plated statuette the reason why Warner Brothers' "A Midsummer Night's Dream" ran only 60 seconds shorter than "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, propounded his advocacy of longer features in this language:

"Increase the length of motion pictures and it will accomplish a twofold purpose. First, it will increase theatre patronage, will have better entertainment than shorter length pictures. Secondly, it will eliminate one of the greatest evils of the entertainment world today—double feature bills.

"Our investigations have proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the public would rather see one good full-length feature and a program of balanced short subjects than two full-length features on the same bill. I had the good fortune to see 'Anthony Adverse' in the cutting room at about two and one-half hours in length. I told Jack Warner and Hal Hollis I would like to see this picture go out in that length, as in my opinion 'Anthony Adverse' as a two and one half hour show would convert those who favor double features to the single feature plan of operation."

No doubt there is more of coincidence than significance in the fact that both Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Bernhard emphasized elimination of the double billing practice, for both gentlemen are too well versed in the ways of their profession not to realize that even "Mutiny on the Bounty" came in for its share of program pairing and that, so long as Woolworth stores sell scissors over the counter with no questions asked, exhibitors, if they will, may exercise arbitrary control over running times of pictures they exhibit.

Quite as indubitably there is more of

AGE LIMIT LOWERED IN STATE BILL ON MINORS INDORSED BY THEATRES

Children Barred During School Hours and Seat Must Be Available for Each, New York Measure Provides

New York State's minors, contributing a large portion of theatre receipts, will be regulated less stringently in their attendance than heretofore. A solution finally has been reached for the long standing problem of when and under what conditions children less than 16 years old may attend motion picture theatres in the state. Various interests involved have agreed upon a program in the form of the Joseph-Swartz bill pending in the legislature at Albany.

The measure was sponsored by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York as a substitute for certain prohibitions in the present antiquated statute which has been found unworkable and a stimulant to circumvention of the law on the part of unescorted children.

At the same time, the Assembly prevented imposition of more drastic regulation and extended censorship on film theatres by killing the Andrews and Breitbart bills, both on the subject of minors' admittance. These measures are yet to be disposed of in the Senate.

Exhibitors of New York City, the largest center affected, have taken the lead in seeking adequate remedies, and the Joseph-Swartz bill with amendments has been approved by an exhibitors' legislative committee, headed by Senator J. Henry Walters of RKO.

Eight Years Now Minimum

The present limitation against the admittance of unescorted children under 16 years has been lowered in the bill to eight years, and only children under eight will still have to be accompanied by a parent or authorized guardian. The bill gives municipalities the right to pass local laws to license theatres pursuant to these conditions:

1. Children 8 to 16 years old may be admitted unattended but shall be seated in a section segregated from adults on the orchestra floor. Such section shall be specified in the theatre license, but provision may be made for varying the size of the section at different periods.
2. A seat in such section shall be provided for every child, with no standees.
3. Such children "shall not be admitted to such a theatre during the time when their school classes within the city are in session.
4. "One matron and such other assistants as may be specified in such local law" shall be provided by the management for the supervision of the children. The matron is to be licensed by the municipality on payment of $2 annual fee, to be paid by the management.

No Double Censorship

The bill further provides that the local law may provide "other and additional conditions or limitations" but shall not require "any additional approval of and shall not prohibit the exhibition of any motion picture film duly licensed by the education department of the state of New York." In contrast to this clause, other bills would provide for double censorship of films shown to children, either by a local commission or the state censors.

It is also provided that the local ordinance may prescribe penalties for violations. Such an offense normally would be classed as a misdemeanor, and the penalty, it is believed, would be a revocation of the theatre's license. In addition to these licensing provisions, the usual fire and police regulations would apply.

The Joseph-Swartz bill declares that the admission of minors under the specified conditions to duly licensed theatres shall not be deemed a violation of the penal law, which prohibits the admittance of youngsters under 16 to theatres, saloons, dance halls, pool rooms and other places.

Theatres Accept Plan

The pending bill, which amends the general city law of 1909 and the penal law which is much older, is the only proposal on the subject which has been found acceptable by theatres and other interested factors. It is an upshot of the police drives in the city of New York which since January 4 have resulted in the summonses against almost 300 persons, members of theatre staffs and "professional buyers' of theatre tickets for children. It was introduced in the Senate by Lazarus Joseph, Democrat, of the Bronx, and in the Assembly by Arthur Swartz, Democrat, of Buffalo. In the Assembly it is in the hands of the committe on rules, and is on the Senate calendar on order of third reading and may be called up for passage on Senator Joseph's request. Observers believe that it will receive the approval of both branches.

In addition to exhibitors and city and state authorities, among those interested in the legislation are the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and the National Board of Review, which has opposed censorship features of other bills on the subject.

Recent revival of the police campaign against theatres for violation of the minor's law prompted the New York Daily News to comment as follows: "It is probably too much to expect the legislature to repeal this fool statute. But it does seem that Mayor LaGuardia could well let it rest in peaceful non-enforcement. Why try to clamp it on a public which, children and grownups alike, has no respect for it and will go on consistently violating it with happy, wholesome horselaughs?"

The annual stockholders' meeting of Twentieth Century-Fox will be held in New York April 21, when 12 directors are to be elected. A board meeting will be held immediately following, and all officers are expected to be reelected.

Edmund Breese Dies; Started in Pictures in 1914

Edmund Breese, veteran actor, died in New York Monday at the Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled. He was taken ill last Thursday at the Hotel Beverly and was rushed to the hospital on Saturday. Up until the time of his illness, Mr. Breese had been playing one of the star roles in the Broadway production, "The Night of January 16," which closed Saturday night.

Mr. Breese was born in Brooklyn, June 5, 1871. His first stage appearance was in "My Awful Dad" in 1895 at Eureka Springs, Ark. He made his first appearance in New York at the Grand Opera House in 1898 in "Monte Cristo." From there he went to Boston for four years with James O'Neill in stock, returning to Manhattan to play Shakespearean roles and later in such shows as "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Trilby" and "Christopher Jun." He then alternated between New York theatres and the road for several years, taking parts in such successes as "The Bishop's Carriage," "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Invader," "The Third Degree," "Just A Wife," "The Spendthrift," "Why Marry" and "Welcome Stranger."

In 1914 he started his picture career. He appeared under production supervision of Richard A. Rowland in Metro's "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," and was also used in such early pictures as "The Walls of Jericho," "The Spell of the Yukon," "The Master Crook," "The Early Bird," "The Temporary Wife," "A Man's Home," "Beyond the Rainbow." Since the advent of sound he had roles in "Tol'able David," "Kismet," "The Last Parade" and more recently in "International House," "Duck Soup," "Laughing at Life," "Ladies Must Love," "Above the Clouds," "Come On Marines" and "Beloved."

Marilyn Miller Dies Of Toxic Poisoning

Marilyn Miller, dancing star of Broadway, whose career ranged from Florenz Ziegfeld's "Sally' in 1920 to the recent "As Thousands Cheer," died Tuesday morning at Doctors Hospital in New York of a toxic condition brought on by a sinus infection. At her bedside were her third husband, Chester O'Brien, and her two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Sweeney and Mrs. Claire Montgomery. Her mother also survives. She was born in Evansville, Ind., Sept. 1, 1898, and her real name was Mary Lynn Reynolds.

Miss Miller began her career at the age of five when she toured vaudeville with her family as the "Five Columbias." Following her debut on Broadway under the banner of Lee Shubert, she joined Mr. Ziegfeld.

On the screen she appeared in "Her Majesty Love," for First National.

BOX OFFICE CHAMPIONS SHOW TURN

significance than coincidence in the facts, concealed neither from these gentlemen nor other readers of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, that the average screening time of Box Office Champions rose from 90 minutes in January, 1935, to 104 minutes in November, and that the net increase for the year, January to January, was 9 minutes to an average of 99 for the eight pictures displaying top earning capacity in that month. That the gross earnings of January 1936 Champions were greater than those of January 1935 Champions scarcely requires documentation.

Reasons, opinions and objectives notwithstanding, the exhibitor clearly is in for a sequence of long features, and the problem of what to do with them and what he can make them do for him is, as always, his own. On the bright side of the prospect may be ranged such ponderable expectancies as:

(B) Longer runs.

And on the other side must be arrayed in parallel formation such dismal potentialities as:

Presumably these and other possibilities have received long and thoughtful consideration with full weight accorded all trustworthy and pertinent data. In any event, it is manifest that a thorough trial of the longer feature policy is to be made and that certain more or less far-reaching changes in the form and content of the motion picture program as generally constituted are certain to result. There is less enthusiasm for the experiment from the field of exhibition than from Hollywood.

Richards Deplores Long Programs

An especially well informed and incisive spokesman for the exhibitor point of view was E. V. Richards, who has guided the destinities of the Saenger Theatres corporation, New Orleans, safely through more crises than any producer ever has crammed into one negative.

Mr. Richards said:

"I believe we are in a mass business and perhaps $2 and $5 films do not belong in popular price houses. The programs should never exceed two hours and 20 minutes, and all the previous socalled big runs were in a few spots for exploitation purposes and proved out that way.

"We have never had but one really profitable roadshow picture and that was really before pictures as we know them—all else has been an anticlimax to the tank town since 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

John Balaban Sees Consequences

Far-reaching consequences were foreseen and discussed by John Balaban, speaking with the seasoned authority of the Balaban & Katz experience in theatre operation which has sustained that organization in acknowledged exhibition leadership in the Middle West for two decades. Mr. Balaban said:

"The experience with 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' is, of course, behind us. This picture was shown at several of our theatres and the engagement was a profitable one. The picture, besides playing downtown, was exhibited at LaGrange and Evanston (suburbs of Chicago) on a roadshow basis at the following increased prices: Matinee, 50 and 75 cents; evening, 55 cents to $1; and the business was very satisfactory.

"From all reports, 'The Great Ziegfeld,' three hours long, contains a sufficient amount of entertainment to warrant the length.

"The exhibition of pictures in this length might require changes in the usual method of operation, such as limiting the short subject program to possibly a newsreel and cartoon, increase in admission prices, and so on.

"It will also be impossible to double-feature these pictures, and stage shows will probably have to be eliminated during the weeks such pictures play.

"Similar problems present themselves now in connection with the two-hour pictures, such as 'Mutiny on the Bounty' and 'Captain Blood,' although on a smaller scale.

"A picture is as 'long' as its quality. If you go on a two-weeks vacation and get plenty of relaxation and it is an enjoyable one, the time passes very quickly. By the same token, if you go to a theatre and see an enjoyable and relaxing picture, even though it be three hours in length, the time will also pass very quickly.

"We know of no reason why good pictures should be limited in length. The only requisite is that there must be enough 'meat' to sustain the interest. Pictures long in footage, if also 'long' in entertainment value, will be a credit to the industry."

Roy W. Adams, whose notably intelligent and competent proprietorship of the Mason theatre at Mason, Mich., dates back to those jittery days and nights when the five-reeler was an experiment, was not so optimistic.

Said Mr. Adams:

"With reference to current and coming specials of unusually long footage, I suppose we'll have to take them if they come that way. However, in the past we have too often been given specials with long footage which would have been much more entertaining and forceful if they had been materially shortened.

"The average theatre manager cannot run a big special every time he changes his bill, and the alternation of long and short feature releases promises a complication of the problem of arranging a balanced program and maintaining a running schedule.

"I doubt if the time is ripe in this territory for advanced admissions or extended runs in small situations."

Sees Distinct Advantage Possible

A brighter view of the prospects, particularly as of the larger cities, was voiced by Edward Austin, Interstate Theatre Corporation, Boston, who held that "a feature that will run three hours may be of a distinct advantage to the exhibitor."

"Of course," Mr. Austin continued, "there have been several features released in the past whose running time was 70 to 80 minutes and these pictures have done a terrific business because they have been chock full of entertainment. If a three-hour feature is to be padded with a lot of nonsense and non-entertaining value, it can be of a distinct disadvantage. However, if the feature is of entertainment quality, I believe it will certainly help the prestige of motion picture entertainment. I don't believe, however, that you can get an advanced admission.

"In regard to the run, if a three-hour feature is good enough you most certainly can extend the run, even in the smallest situation. Naturally, in regard to double feature towns, my personal opinion is that a good three-hour feature would be enough of a show without the bother of booking some mediocre feature.

"In the single feature situations the three-hour picture would be no problem whatever. As a matter of fact, the exhibitor could use this feature for ballyhoo and most certainly should be able to run it on double playing time. By that I mean, if the exhibitor has a two-day play he should be able by means of ballyhoo to extend it to four days."

Seasoned, deliberate W. J. Powell, whose LoNet theatre at Wellington, Ohio, is regarded by many as an admirable reflector of small town audience reaction, analyzes the matter in terms of current experience, thus:

"The patrons of this theatre are prone to praise or criticize with a freedom that is almost unprecedented in small town experience. And it is especially noticeable that I

"MASS BUSINESS," SAYS RICHARDS

Typical of exhibitor opinion on the subject of longer feature pictures, published herewith, is the following expression by veteran E. V. Richards, Saenger Amusement Corporation, New Orleans:

"I believe we are in a mass business and perhaps $2 and $5 pictures do not belong in popular price houses. The programs should never exceed two hours and twenty minutes, and all previous socalled big runs were in a few spots for exploitation purposes and proved out that way.

"We have never had but one really profitable roadshow picture and that was before pictures as we know them—all else has been an anti-climax to the tank town since 'The Birth of a Nation.'" have scarcely ever heard a word of praise for a feature with a two-hour running time, no matter how excellent or outstanding a production it may have been. On the other hand, they will sit through a good double feature program and leave the theatre with enthusiastic praise.

"TIME NOT RIPE TO RAISE PRICES"

"To illustrate my point, personally I would classify 'Mutiny on the Bounty' as the finest picture of the last six months. The audience reaction was nil. Last evening the patrons walked out after a double feature program, consisting of a Western and 'Every Saturday Night,' quite effusive with commendation.

"In my limited experience I would say that a feature should not exceed 100 minutes in length at the utmost. I have found two types of programs most suitable for my small town and rural patronage, namely: an outstanding feature supported by short subjects, approximately two hours in length, and a double feature program not exceeding a running time of two and a half hours."

Frankly skeptical about contemporary product long or otherwise, W. H. Brenner, who has operated the Cozy theatre in Winchester, Ind., successfully through the ups and down, innovations and experiments of 18 years, said:

"The long features that have been released in the past have not proved to be good box office and I don't believe the pictures can be made that will hold the attention of the average patron more than two hours.

Intelligence and Interest

"The problem seems to be to make pictures with enough intelligence so they will hold the interest of all. I am more concerned about the future of this business than I have ever been before. The pictures may be just as good as they ever were, but the folks who pay their money into the box office do not think so."

D. E. Fitton, whose Lyric theatre at Harrison, Ark., has been represented regularly in the "What the Picture Did for Me" columns of this publication for many years, felt that "feature pictures of 80 to 90 minutes are of correct length," explaining: "This gives time for shorts. When longer than this, with very few exceptions, they are padded.

"It is possible a feature of three hours or more once or twice a year would go over. And the exhibitor could sell reserved seats and run one show, thus making a change. I have never raised admissions since the advent of talking pictures and, personally, I am against double billing."

Viewing the matter from the splendid isolation of his Elted theatre, Absarokee, Mont., Ted Stump, a smallest of small town exhibitors and publisher of the only newspaper in his community of two hundred plainsfolk, foresaw benefits and prescribed restrictions. "I can see no reason," said Mr. Stump, "why the motion picture cannot add dignity and prestige by the production of feature pictures of a length commensurate to that of plays and musical comedies on the legitimate stage. It might be wise, though, to incorporate the 'intermission' period by having a logical part of the picture so marked.

"Naturally, such productions would necessitate changes in the operating policies of the theatres. A continuous showing would not fit in with the exhibition of these pictures, but rather it would be one of afternoon and evening performances. Higher admission prices would be natural and expected. Past experience has shown that the public will pay more for pictures which are recognized as super-productions.

"All in all, I think the standard of the industry would be raised and a new and, I believe, more prosperous era would be inaugurated. I do not believe, however, that such productions should take the place of the present pictures, but should be in addition to the present output. Two such productions each year from each company would give the motion picture a higher standing artistically, a more substantial standing financially, and would be welcomed both by the exhibitor and the public."

Inquiry need not be pursued indefinitely to piece out a reasonably accurate pattern of exhibitor attitude toward the manifestly impending sequence of longer feature pictures.

Clearly there is no generally prevalent belief that these more expensive productions may be counted upon confidently to bring about an increase in admission price levels.

Evidently there is widespread doubt as to the availability of story material adequate to the requirements of sustained entertainment interest.

Contrariwise, a certain enhancement of prestige appears definitely expected to accrue.

Fortunately, the industry has precedents to which producer and exhibitor may turn with profit and in which they may find common ground.

Exhibitor doubt and producer confidence rose in unison not unremindful of their current flight in 1915, reaching a pitch well beyond their present ascendancy on March 3rd of that year when "The Birth of a Nation" went into the Liberty theatre, New York, on a two-a-day basis with best seats at $2. (It is of pertinence to the present text that the picture was in 13 reels and held the screen for 208 minutes exclusive of the intermission period which, as Mr. Stump suggested for today's super-productions, was announced on the screen.)

Everybody had told D. W. Griffith that a motion picture audience would not sit through a production of that length, and had hinted to everybody else what must be the matter with Mr. Griffith if he thought it would, but the next morning's papers and subsequently several thousand box offices told a different story. Whereupon ensued a swift cycle of long pictures, most of them symbolizing highly regrettable misplacements of confidence, and with September 23rd came the redoubtable Mr. Griffith, flanked by competent Thomas H. Ince and resourceful Mack Sennett, to attempt multiple duplication of his two-a-day success in the most ambitious and calamitous production-exhibition undertaking yet dreamed of.

The First Triangle Program

The initial Triangle program, presented at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, on that date, was memorable in more than its box office aspect.

Mr. Griffith's contribution to the three-ply program that was intended to revolutionize the industry, starting with the exhibition branch thereof, was a five-reeler entitled "The Lamb," Douglas Fairbanks' first picture.

Mr. Ince's offering was to have been the later unforgettable "The Coward," in which Frank Keenan and Charles Ray touched their all-time highs, but it was necessary to substitute "The Iron Strain," a scarcely less memorable production and Dustin Farnum's finest vehicle.

Mr. Sennett turned in "My Valet," still regarded in many quarters as the funniest comedy he ever made, in which, having employed Raymond Hitchcock at great expense only to discover him not at all comic without benefit of voice, the producer himself acted the role of the valet, with Mabel Normand alongside, and stole the picture to everybody's hilarious satisfaction.

13 Reels Too, But—

This Triangle program had a total linear dimension of 13 reels, precisely equalling that of "The Birth of a Nation," and was presented in identical manner, twice daily at $2 top and with a 30-piece orchestra performing a specially written music score. The newspapers were expansive in praise, with three of the period's top-flight productions as ample justification, and Triangle Model theatres, duplicating the Knickerbocker policy, were opened in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and other major cities, while the program was sold as a unit to exhibitors far and wide on a brave, bold and foredoomed pledge of sustained production quality.

It was several months before exhibitor, producer and paying public learned that three good pictures—and the early Triangle programs were tops by common consent—do not equal one "Birth of a Nation." (It is notably pertinent to a consideration of the 1936 trend that in those historic double feature programs neither feature was selected as an added or supplementary attraction and the Sennett comedy was in no sense a "filler.")

Of the long pictures from other sources that followed upon the success of "The Birth of a Nation" only Vitagraph's J. Stuart Blackston production, "The Battle Cry of Peace," managed to achieve for itself a small niche in the hall of film fame, and of this noble experiment, released late in 1915 and shorn of its provincial exhibition profits when the temper of the country was turned warlike, it must be recorded that principal emphasis was laid upon the presence therein of "5,000 National Guardsmen, 800 G. A. R. Veterans, 5,000 horses and 8,000 supernumeraries." Whether length or bulk was meant by the first adjective in the "bigger and better pictures" cry then resounding through the industry was a debatable point.

As the Triangle bubble wobbled into a pick-and-choose program service and then burst, taking with it much air from the sails of long, high-priced, two-a-day picture advocates, Mr. Griffith, unconvinced, came again to New York with yet another picture of his own production and a serene determination to try again.

The Fate of "Intolerance"

Into the Liberty theatre where, on March 3, 1915, he had unreeled "The Birth of a Nation" to an awed and idolatrous world, he brought on September 6, 1916, his "Intolerance." Again the length was 13 reels, the price $2, the run at two-a-day and the orchestra playing a special score. Again the press applauded.

What happened to "Intolerance" is an openly secret sorrow of the industry, but it proved conclusively enough for the satisfaction of two decades of producers that linear measure, presentation technique, admission price and related physical factors do not necessarily add up to guarantee of audience satisfaction. It reiterated the suggestion, so often made, before and since, by expert, by experience and by amateur, not to say box office, that story substance and narrative skill are indispensable requisites of screen entertainment.

As far as they go, these precedents would seem to argue that there is no substantial reason for becoming excited about the present trend toward longer pictures. But there are other precedents which may be interpreted as indicating otherwise, notably that one almost obscured by the mists of thirty years which witnessed talking pictures, mechanically synchronized and faithfully reproducing the dialogue of the day, meeting cool indifference on their introduction to the American public.

Perhaps it is only technically accurate to describe as talking pictures the simultaneously visible and audible performances of Eva Tanguay, Blance Ring and others that the Cameraphone brought to the big cities in 1903 and to the little ones sporadically, under this and other names including the magical one of Edison, from then until toward 1910. Perhaps they were animated images, rather than pictures in the modern sense, and maybe the needle that scratched the oversized wax cylinder back-screen, timed by cable connection with the projector in the booth, made the labor of illusion a little too strenuous for eyes and ears still untaught to work at the business of being entertained.

Blame falling where it may, the speedy passing of this and subsequent attempts to combine eye and ear entertainment mechanically was of a character to convince all but the unconvinceable Warner brothers that there was nothing practical in the idea. How wrong that series of conclusions was, and how faulty the gaudily assorted reasons summoned to support them, is of too recent record to dwell upon.

Of this precedent it has been said that the technological progress made during the years, in development of sound recording and reproduction methods, made possible the ultimately successful combining of the audible with the visible. As many thoughtful persons can be found who say that years of training were necessary to condition human reception of sight impressions and that preparation for the addition of sound impressions required a longer period. While as many more might be found who would argue that a public satisfied with the jerky, flickering, dramatically meaningless films of 1905-10 should have been at least as well satisfied with the materially further advanced sound recording of the period.

These are theories. The Warner success with Vitaphone and the developments that While exhibitors ponder the assured prospect of longer feature pictures, formulate plans for program revision and frankly doubt feasibility of raising admission price levels, "The Great Ziegfeld," running 184 minutes, opened Wednesday night of this week at the Astor theatre on Broadway, New York, with two performances daily at $2 top.

followed, in common with the longer pictures coming from Hollywood today, are facts.

Another precedent, still inconclusive, invites exploration. Like the finally materialized dream of talking pictures, the dream of pictures in natural color has persisted from almost the beginnings of the screen. Like the long feature, the color picture is in mounting favor in the studios at this time.

Experiments in color pictures date back to hand-colored importations from Pathe Freres, Paris, which looked pretty good in their day (circa 1907). There was, for memorable example, Louie Fuller's serpentine dance. Because these were expensive to produce, and because folk went to picture shows because they were picture shows, neither knowing nor caring what they were going to see, these tediously prepared prints passed quietly into oblivion after brief and unspectacular trial.

Next the Over-All Tints

The next use of color, following almost immediately, was by application of over-all tints, presumably predicated on some more or less definite idea of thematic emphasis. Edison films of the period led in adoption of the tint policy, followed, after a considerable hesitancy, by Biograph, which achieved a much less satisfactory result and presently abandoned the vari-hued and often mottled sepias it inflicted upon the exhibitors and patrons who had begun to respect the AB symbol.

Just when the tinting stopped is not of record. It fell into neglect, dropped by the wayside through tacit agreement of producers and because nobody really cared. But the dream did't die, any more than the dream of stereoscopic motion pictures has died.

As a matter of record, approximately 40 pictures released in 1930 were in color, in part or in whole. And then, as in the case of the tinted films of Edison and Biograph, and prior to that in the case of talking pictures, interest in the process lagged without fanfare and black and white again became standard.

What the Independent Said

What exhibitors thought of color in 1930 may be summed up in the fact that they didn't appear to consider it a thing to write letters about. They mentioned it occasionally and casually in their reports to the "What the Picture Did for Me" department, discussed more or less idly, altogether detachedly, the likelihood of its becoming standard or not, displayed no unanimity of opinion as to its box office significance if any.

What producers thought of it was attested by their pell mell resort to its use, accompanied by grandiose advertising announcements of the resultant product. The tapering off was marked, as is pattern performance for the industry, by a practically total lack of expression for or against. Nobody said it was very good or very bad, or anything else about it, in which negative circumstance the protagonist of the conditioning school of thought may or may not find support for a contention that the public simply wasn't ready for color in 1930.

Reintroduced with Disney

But with the adoption of color by Walt Disney for his Silly Symphonies in 1932 the process was pleasantly reintroduced. Perhaps the addition of color to animated drawings was a lesser hurdle for the public imagination, habitually relaxed with the flashing of the word Disney. In any event, the Silly Symphonies tended to prepare the public eye, by small doses of color regularly administered, for "Becky Sharp," produced wholly in color and in complete sympathy with the objectives thereof.

The gossip about "Becky Sharp" was decidedly pro and con, not to say widespread and protracted, and now, whether because of the picture's record as an attraction or as a topic of conversation, Hollywood interest in the process, latterly spurred by "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," has been revived, as reflected in early product announcements for the 1936-37 season.

Color is not footage, however.

Sound is not length.

Novels are not pictures, although there is interest in the fact that Herve Allen's best-selling 1,200-pager, "Anthony Adverse," was followed by a mad succession of oversized and overstuffed books of similar length to which the public paid as scant attention as to the long features that followed the success of "The Birth of a Nation."

Nor is the loudspeaker the screen, else there would be point in observing that the gentlemen who produce the major radio programs seem to have agreed, with one or two exceptions, that 30 minutes is normal program ceiling.

What is the proper length for a motion picture?

How much entertainment does the public want at a sitting?

How much is it willing to pay for it?

Nobody but the public really knows and it will be a little while, though evidently not long, before it speaks in its unmistakable terms of box office. Meanwhile the mills of the Hollywood gods grind swiftly and exceeding big.

TREND OF THE STAGE ON OPPOSITE TACK

As feature pictures of longer screen duration gain favor among producers, Noel Coward, stage idol and bellwether of legitimate theatre practice, leads the older medium in the opposite direction, presenting three one-act plays as an evening's entertainment at the Phoenix theatre in London. Mr. Coward explains:

"The idea of presenting three short plays in an evening instead of one is far from original. In fact, if one looks back over the years, one finds that the 'triple bill' formula has been used, with varying degrees of success, since the earliest days of the theatre. However, during the last quarter century it has fallen from favor.

"A short play, having a great advantage over a long one in that it can sustain a mood without technical creaking or overpadding, deserves a better fate, and if, by careful writing, acting and producing, I can do a little toward reinstating it in its rightful pride, I shall have achieved one of my more sentimental ambitions.

"The primary object of the scheme is to provide a full and varied evening's entertainment for theatregoers, who, we hope, will try their best to overcome any latent prejudice they may have against short plays."

Northwest Allied for MGM Plan

Northwest Allied is the latest exhibitor unit to accede to the request of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to eliminate hangovers with the end of the 1935-36 releasing season.

Company officials said this week that with few exceptions theatre owners are realizing the advantages to be gained from signing the agreement to accept eight films in place of 10 scheduled pictures which MGM for studio reasons will not be able to deliver this year.

Northwest Allied had received numerous queries from members as to what action they should take and some opposition was indicated. The organization withheld its recommendation pending receipt of advice from headquarters of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors in Washington.

S. G. Lebedeff, vice-president of Northwest Allied, announced that the unit had decided "there is no harm in accepting the rider and the majority of exhibitors in the twin cities have signed it." He said there is no objection by Northwest Allied "due to the fact that the company is not taking out good pictures and giving us poor ones in their place." The eight films offered as replacements "should be as good or better than the ones the company will not make for the 1935-36 season," he added.

R. H. Workman, MGM branch manager in Minneapolis, said he had not received any objections.

Gabriel Joins Paramount

Gilbert W. Gabriel, dramatic critic of the New York American, who recently sold a novel, "I, James Lewis," to Paramount, has joined the studio's scenario department to work on the adaptation of his book. He returns to his paper when that is completed.

SPITZ IS KAO PRESIDENT; AYLESWORTH CHAIRMAN

Equal Balance of Power Is Maintained Between RCA and Meehan Interests

Leo Spitz, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, was elected president of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, and M. H. Aylesworth, chairman of the board of RKO, was elected chairman of the board of the theatre subsidiary at the annual meeting of the stockholders in New York Wednesday afternoon.

Continuation of an equal balance of power on the KAO board between the RCA and M. J. Meehan interests was effected with the election of new members. KAO said in a statement that "in pursuance of a plan accepted by all factors," the stockholders "voted to bring about a closer relationship" between KAO and RKO and that the RKO management is to be extended to the theatre company "so that authority may go with responsibility."

Major Leslie E. Thompson, who retired as president of KAO, will remain in an executive capacity with the new president, it was announced.

Under the formula accepted by all factors, Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman, and six other directors, are retiring from the KAO board. They are: David Sarnoff, president of RCA; Frank Altschul, of Lazard Freres; W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of Radio City Music Hall; Jay Eddy of Harris Upham; M. J. Meehan and Major Thompson. The new directorate will be composed of Mr. Spitz, Mr. Aylesworth, L. P. Yandell, assistant treasurer of RCA, these designated by Mr. Sarnoff as the RCA representatives; Malcolm Kingsberg, P. J. Maloney and Munroe Goldwater, as the Meehan members, and Donald K. David, the "neutral member."

Mr. Kingsberg also was elected vice-chairman and Leon Goldberg treasurer.

KAO said: "Mr. Swope took the chairmanship at the unanimous request of the board one year and eight months ago, in an effort to bring about a reconciliation between the Meehan group and the RCA interests. This was successful. In March the company voted a dividend on the preferred stock, the first to be paid since 1931. The first quarter of this year closed with the indicated net earnings higher than has been enjoyed for several years.

"KAO's new setup is in line with the development of the reorganizational plan which, it is hoped, will take RKO out of the proceedings now existing under 77B. Also, other steps to integrate RKO into a single working unit are being undertaken."

In passing on a bonus paid Mr. Swope, the board voted him a resolution of thanks for his services. Mr. Swope said in a statement that "the directors were leaving to the new management a going concern in good financial condition, with the practical certainty that the year will show perhaps double the dividend requirements for the preferred."

The KAO statement referred to the recent purchase of 50 per cent of the holdings of RCA and RKO by Lehman Brothers and Atlas Corporation for $5,000,000, with an option to purchase the remaining 50 per cent for $6,000,000 within two years.

The changes are viewed as a realignment in advance of the pending reorganization of RKO.

Major I. E. Lambert has resigned as counsel for KAO, effective April 10. He may enter campaign work for Governor Alf Landon of Kansas, contender for the Republican nomination for president, a schoolmate of his.

Dramatists Favor Royalties Change

Members of the Dramatists' Guild Wednesday afternoon approved an amendment to the basic agreement adopted last month, providing for a 60-40 division of royalties in the film sales of plays between producers and playwrights, in place of the former sliding scale arrangement. The new amendment still gives the larger share to the playwright.

Meanwhile, the League of New York Theatres announced that 67 managers have agreed to operate under the league's own contract in acquiring and producing plays without regard for the Guild. Sidney Howard, Guild president, reiterated that he would not reopen the Guild's basic agreement to "endless discussion."

BATTLE OF "ECSTASY" OPENS ON NEW FRONT

In sequel to the recent fight of Eureka Productions, Inc., to have Metropolis Pictures, Inc, refrain from using the word "Ecstasy" in a picture advertised as "Ecstasy of Young Love," counsel for Eureka last Friday sought to have the appellate division of the New York supreme court issue contempt citations against Metropolis, of which Martin J. Lewis, is president, Joan of Arc Pictures, Inc., and S. S. Krellberg, operators of the Bijou theatre.

Eureka alleged the defendants were in contempt in failing to remove the word "Ecstasy" from the billing of the film now being distributed as "Young Love" until more than 24 hours after a temporary injunction so ordering was handed down by the appellate division. A decision was expected late this week.

A hearing has been scheduled for April 17 on Eureka's injunction and damage suit involving Metropolis' use of the title. It is alleged that the distributors of "Young Love" sought to mislead the public.

Jacques Koerpel announced this week that he has resigned as president and director of Eureka and has disposed of his interest in the company, of which Sam Cummins is general manager.

Verschleiser Services Are Held in Hollywood

Funeral services were held in Hollywood Sunday at the Home of Peace Chapel on Whittier Boulevard for Ben Verschleiser, who died at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital Saturday. He was 49 and and is survived by his widow, Rose, and three children, two daughters and a son. The remains will be sent to New York, where a second service will be held at an announced date.

Mr. Verschleiser was born in New York on Sept. 29, 1887, and had been active in Hollywood as a supervisor for a number of years. In 1933 he produced "Devil's Mate" and "Broken Dreams" for Monogram. In 1934 he supervised "A Woman's Man," "Money Means Nothing" and "Jane Eyre" for the same company, subsequently resigning to join Universal. His last picture was "Three Kids and a Queen."

'A CONNECTICUT YANKEE' PROVES UNQUALIFIED HIT ON RETURN ENGAGEMENTS!

Tested in two widely diversified situations, "A Connecticut Yankee" showed it retained all the box office draw that made it one of Will Rogers' greatest pictures.

AT THE APOLLO, INDIANAPOLIS:

Almost equalled the great "Country Doctor" run! Reported K. T. Collins: "Audience reaction on return of 'Yankee' very good, some praising the opportunity of seeing it again, others welcoming it due to not witnessing first showing. Receiving many inquiries as to the return of other Rogers attractions. Believe public entitled to see better Rogers films and believe theatres will profit greatly therefrom."

AT THE STRAND, LOUISVILLE:

Ran neck and neck with business piled up by "Shark Island" and "King of Burlesque!" Wired F. J. Dolle: "Doing excellent business. Audience reaction comparable to Rogers' latest releases. Photography and sound proved a revelation. Will date other situations without delay."

INDUSTRY HAS INNING NEXT WEEK AT COPYRIGHT REVISION MEETING

Exhibitors Want Minimum Penalty Clause Removed, Distributors Favor Retention; Warner's Music Suits Now 169

Retention of the statutory $250 minimum penalty clause as a deterrent against film bicycling and switching, elimination of the same penalty for "innocent" infringements, especially in music copyrights, and categoric opposition to American affiliation with the International Copyright Union will be urged by representatives of the motion picture industry at Congressional hearings on copyright revision in Washington next week.

In advancing reasons for discarding the minimum damage penalty, exhibitor spokesmen, headed by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, are expected to launch an attack on the policies and practices of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

The exhibitors are scheduled to be heard Monday, and producer and distributor representatives Tuesday and Wednesday, winding up eight weeks of hearings during which all conflicting interests will have given their views to the House patents committee which has under consideration three bills for bringing up to date the copyright law of 1909.

As the fight against the music interests waxes more intense in the national capital, there were these developments:

1. Judge D. F. Wright, contesting a legal maneuver by ASCAP, appeared in the Washington state supreme court and again charged that the Society is a monopoly.

2. The organized broadcasting industry sees in anti-trust and criminal suits against ASCAP the most promising method of breaking the "music trust."

3. Warner Brothers on Wednesday announced 36 additional suits brought for alleged unauthorized use of its music, bringing the score of such litigation to 169 suits.

The House committee will conclude its hearings with testimony from E. P. Kilroe of the Twentieth Century-Fox legal department, chairman of the producers' copyright committee; Milton Brylawski, Washington attorney for the committee, and Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Mr. Hess will oppose elimination of the damage penalty on the ground that it acts as a check against unlicensed exhibition of motion pictures.

On the other hand, the exhibitor representatives will urge passage of the Duffy bill removing the minimum damage clause, on the ground that it is an aid to ASCAP in its music tax "extortions" and that numerous instances of music copyright infringement are "innocent," these copyrights being extremely complicated.

Mr. Kilroe and Mr. Brylawski will speak on phases of copyright protection relating to film production. Mr. Kilroe said the producers want definite provisions and are not greatly concerned with the form of the legislation so long as pictures are adequately protected.

Meanwhile, the supreme court of the state of Washington late last week took under advisement ASCAP's latest maneuver in its long-drawn-out controversy with the authorities of that state.

The move dealt with the transfer of the ASCAP ouster suit, prosecuted by the state attorney general, from the court of Judge D. F. Wright of Thurston County to the court of Judge Wilson in the same county. Judge Wright, who last year restrained ASCAP from operating in Washington and appointed Tracy Griffin of Seattle as receiver, appeared before the supreme court and reported monopolistic conditions still existed. Judge Wright refused to transfer the case at a recent hearing, and ASCAP appealed.

Music consumers, and more particularly the broadcasters, at the present time are most concerned with the dual contracts which they are required to consider as a result of the resignation of Warner Brothers from ASCAP.

Both organizations have asked users to take out long-term contracts. Of the two, the Warner contract is the most favorable, although the broadcasters have not abandoned their demand for royalties based on use.

While ASCAP's contract calls for a percentage of gross receipts from advertising plus an arbitrarily fixed sustaining fee, Warner is offering a contract based on the advertising rate card and also has agreed that where a local rate exists that shall be the basis. This, it is said, has proven a benefit to the small stations, many of which depend upon local advertising for 95 per cent of their revenue.

Adding to the broadcasters' troubles, a nationwide boycott against music published by non-unionized houses and a boycott against sheet music not bearing the union label has been called by Local 802, New York, of the American Federation of Musicians, in the strike of 300 arrangers, copyists and proof readers for higher wages and union recognition. The local appealed to the 130,000 musicians in the federation to refuse to play orchestrations that do not bear the union lithographers stamp.

A total of 19 music publishers of 92 against which the strike had been called had signed the union agreement this week. A committee representing the Music Publishers Protective Association was to start negotiations with the union this week.

NEW REGULATIONS IN CANADIAN BILL

New copyright regulations and control of copyright fees and royalties, including those collected from motion picture exhibitors, are contained in amendments to the Canadian Copyright Act to be introduced in the House of Commons at Ottawa by Fernand Rinfret, secretary of state.

The amendments also will provide for a copyright Appeal Board, but exact details of the proposed legislation will not be known until the bill is introduced.

The Government bill will supersede a measure sponsored by W. K. Esling, member from Kootenay West, and it is intimated that it will cover the ground contained in the private member's motion.

Move Foreign Department

The foreign department of Republic Pictures has moved from the Rockefeller Center, New York, to 1776 Broadway.

Attorney for Music Users' Association Charges Composers' Society Makes Club Out of $250 Damage Penalty

Charges of racketeering on the part of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers were placed before the House patents committee on Tuesday by Harry L. Katz of Baltimore, counsel for the Music Users Protective Association.

Laying before the committee a copy of a complaint against the Society filed by his organization with the Federal Trade Commission last year, Mr. Katz urged elimination of the $250 statutory minimum damage penalty, asserting that the Society was using it as a club over the heads of small music users.

Mr. Katz submitted to the committee a number of specific instances of alleged unfair practices he charged to ASCAP, including that of a Maryland theatre owner who paid a license of 10 cents a seat. The exhibitor, according to Mr. Katz, also operated a broadcasting station and a dance hall, both under ASCAP licenses, and was approached by the Society with a demand for still another license for a phonograph used in the lobby of his theatre to exploit the shows.

Charges Threatening Letters

When the protective association was in formation, the witness declared, men active in its development received threatening letters from the Society, in which they were ordered to cease their activities or face suit for libel, and where they had approached ASCAP licensees to urge them to join the protective group they were threatened with suits for "aiding and conspiring in infringement."

In its complaint to the Federal Trade Commission, the association, of which Mr. Katz said a number of motion picture exhibitors were members, charged that the monopoly exercised by ASCAP made it "economically unsound" for exhibitors and others to purchase rights from individual composers and publishers not affiliated with the Society.

Blamed for Unemployment Increase

The complaint charged that the Society constantly releases "propaganda to the public to the effect that it seeks to protect the small individual composer, while the facts actually show that the said composer is manipulated by the publishing members of the said Society, many of whom maintain composers on fixed salaries, small in amount, bound by contracts by which the said publishers derive all profits."

It also was alleged that "the ranks of the unemployed musicians have been greatly increased due to the activities of ASCAP demanding exorbitant license fees from people employing orchestras in public places, such fees having increased over 500 per cent in the last five years, as a result of which orchestras have been taxed out of existence."

Quick reference information on product started and completed and a panorama of the news of the week

12 Films Start

Twelve pictures started during the week. Five were finished. In both groups, only two features look to be in the important production classification.

Paramount started four pictures. "And Sudden Death," adapted from the recent Reader's Digest article on careless automobile driving, will present Randolph Scott, Frances Drake, Tom Brown and Terry Walker in the principal roles. Charles Barton is directing. "Good for Nothing," featuring Virginia Weidler, Henrietta Crossman, Leif Ericson and Elizabeth Patterson, is being directed by William Shea. "Rhythm on the Range," a musical western, stars Bing Crosby, supported by Bobby Burns, Frances Farmer, Samuel Hinds, Lucille Gleason, Martha Raye and Bessie Patterson. Direction is by Norman Taurog. The fourth, a comedy romance, "Three Cheers for Love," will present Eleanore Whitney, William Frawley, Robert Cummings, Billie Lee, Louis DaPron, Roscoe Karns, Ann Noble, Grace Bradley, Elizabeth Patterson and John Halliday. Ray McCarey is directing.

Two pictures were started by Radio. In "Last of the Bad Men" will be seen Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson, Margaret Callahan, Tom Tyler, Ray Mayer, Henry B. Walthall, Harry Jans, Harry M. Thomas and Alan Curtis. Christy Cabanne is directing. "Mis Majesty Bunker Bean" will feature Louise Latimer, Owen Davis, Jr., and Berton Churchill. Co-directors are Edward Killy and William Hamilton.

At Universal work began on "Crash Donovan." The cast lists Jack Holt, Nan Gray, Andy Devine, John King and Douglas Fowley. Edward Laemmle and Jean Negulesco are collaborating on direction.

Most important of the newly started quota is Warner's "Charge of the Light Brigade," adapted from Tennyson's epic poem. Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland are starred, supported by Nigel Bruce, Patrick Knowles, E. E. Clive, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Lumsden Hare, David Niven, Spring Byington, C. Henry Gordon and many others. Michael Curtiz is directing.

"Fer de Lance," a dramatic mystery, was started by Columbia. The cast includes Edward Arnold, Lionel Stander, Joan Perry, Russell Hardie, Thurston Hall, Nana Bryant and Martha Tibbetts. Herbert Biberman is the director.

Beaumont Pictures started "Senior Jim," the cast for which names Conway Tearle, Barbara Bedford, Fred Maletesta, Alberta Dugan and Billy Mack. Jacques Jaccard is the director.

"Pinto Rustlers," a western, was put in work by Reliable. Tom Tyler is featured, with Catherine Cotter, Earl Dwyer, Al St. John, George Walsh, Lafe McKee and Bud Osborne in the cast. B. B. Ray is directing.

At Victory Pictures "Rio Grande Romance" started. It will present Elliott Nugent, Maxine Doyle, Nick Stuart, Joyce King, George Walsh and Fuzzy Knight. Bob Hill is directing.

Two pictures were completed by Columbia. "And So They Were Married" features Melvyn Douglas and Mary Astor, with Edith Fellows, Donald Meek, Margaret Armstrong, George McKay, Olaf Hytten, Wade Boteler and Gene Morgan. Elliott Nugent directed. In "Blackmailer," William Gargan, Florence Rice, H. B. Warner, Nana Bryant, Wryley Birch, George McKay, Drue Leyton, Paul Hirst, Kenneth Thompson, Boyd Irwin, Sr., and Alexander Cross will be seen. Direction was by Gordon Wiles.

MGM finished and previewed "Absolute Quite." Cast names are Lionel Atwill, Irene Hervey, Raymond Walburn, Stuart Erwin, Ann Loring, Louis Hayward, Robert Gleckler, Bernardine Hayes, Wallace Ford, Charles Trowbridge and Edwin Maxwell. George B. Seitz directed.

An important feature of the finished group is Republic's "The Harvester." The complete cast is Alice Brady, Frank Craven, Russell Hardie, Ann Rutherford, Cora Sue Collins, Emma Dunn, Eddie Nugent, Joyce Compton, Roy Atwell, Spencer Charters, Russell Simpson, Phyllis Fraser, Fern Emmett, Burr Carruth, Lucille Ward, Harry Bowen and "Buck" the dog. Joseph Santley directed.

Last of the finished pictures is "The First Baby," Twentieth Century-Fox. Johnny Downs and Shirley Deane are starred, supported by Marjorie Gateson, Gene Lockhart, Dixie Dunbar, Willard Robertson and Hattie McDaniel. It was directed by Lewis Seiler.

Full Summer

Darryl Zanuck has called off his 10-week European vacation and has issued orders to his production forces at Twentieth Century-Fox to work full speed throughout the summer. . . . Many major company executives have arrived in Hollywood from New York. Among them, A. W. Smith, Jr., Charles Einfeld, Albert Warner, Norman H. Moray and Gradwell Sears from Warner; John E. Otterson and Adolph Zukor from Paramount. Will H. Hays is also here on a periodical trip to the Coast. . . . Walter Futter, independent producer, and Tom Keene, western star, are having legal entanglements over an alleged breach of contract. . . . Joseph H. Steele resigned as assistant to Larry Weingarten at MGM to join Sam Briskin's production staff at RKO. . . . Jacob Karp, Paramount studio attorney, planed to New York for a week of business meetings. . . . Glendon Allvine has been made editorial board chief at Paramount succeeding Jeff Lazarus, who goes to Europe on a vacation. Mr. Allvine resigned from Pioneer to take the post. . . . Max Reinhardt has been set to direct "Danton," dominant figure in French history during the later part of the eighteenth century, as his next spectacle for Warner. . . . James P. Normanly, vice-president of the Bank of America, goes to Universal as comptroller succeeding Henry Clark, who has been with the company for a number of years. . . . Release date on the Walter Wanger film "Fatal Lady" will be delayed due to a cutting room fire which destroyed five reels of the master print. Three reels of the "Palm Springs" master print also were destroyed. The negatives were unharmed. . . . The Academy Research Council has started to work out suitable standardization of recorded volume levels on trailers and newsreels to approximate feature picture volume. . . . Albert Persoff and Betty Roberts have resigned from the RKO story department in a series of changes which placed Robert Sparks in as story editor. . . . Projectionists in all Fox West Coast houses are back on their regular wage scale, which was slashed during the FWC bankruptcy proceedings. . . . Albert J. Lewin, associate producer with MGM for the last 12 years, has been signed to a new long-term contract. Mr. Lewin is connected with the Thalberg unit. . . . Soundmen's local 695 IATSE is preparing to put into effect the decision granted in Washington, D. C., allotting studio sound jurisdiction to IATSE. . . . Bernard Sarecky resigned as serial film supervisor at Republic to join Universal. J. Lawrence Wickland succeeded Mr. Sarecky.

Color and Locales

Color seems to be intensifying Hollywood's interest in the far corners of the earth. All over town, actors and directors and technicians are getting themselves fitted for travelling outfits and pith helmets and mufflers and other garments suitable for strange climes.

Samuel Goldwyn will send a company to the South Seas this year to film "Hurricane." Selznick International already has a staff dressed in sand goggles and sun clothes in the desert near Yuma, Arizona, for "The Garden of Allah." "Ramona" starts next month at Twentieth Century-Fox; it will be made almost entirely on location all over Southern California.

Walter Wanger's "Spawn of the North" Company will be on hand for the salmon run up the cold Columbia river. Pioneer's "Life of Custer" will be filmed in the dusty passes and rocky canyons where Custer actually made his last stand.

Not one of the announced color films, so far, is planned for studio shooting.

"PUBLIC DOMAIN" ISSUE GOES TO SUPREME COURT

MGM Appeals to Highest Tribunal from Ruling 'Letty Lynton' Plagiarized 'Dishonored Lady'

The extent to which producers in Hollywood may draw upon the "public domain," socalled, as the source of supply for motion picture story material, is about to be determined by the United States supreme court—and thus a motion picture plagiarism suit reaches the highest tribunal in the land.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation has asked the supreme court in Washington to hold that its feature production, "Letty Lynton," was based on material in the public domain, petitioning the high court to hear its appeal from the United States circuit court decision of January 17th. The circuit court had reversed a decision of the United States district court in 1934, the circuit court declaring that "Letty Lynton" plagiarized the copyrighted play, "Dishonored Lady," by Edward Shelden and Margaret Ayer Barnes.

Playwrights Sheldon and Barnes had won a damage verdict from the circuit court's decision, totaling $21,000, plus attorneys' fees, based on the specific showing of the feature in 84 theatres, as assessed at the minimum penalty of $250 a theatre showing. This is the stipulation for violations under the United States Copyright Act. Thus, MGM theoretically faces possible gross penalties of some $2,000,000 for copyright violation on the basis of the $250 minimum penalty clause of the Copyright Act for exhibitions in the 8,000 theatres in which MGM admits the picture has been shown.

The supreme court this week gave the plaintiff playwrights until April 24th to file a brief protesting MGM's appeal. The high court then will take the matter under advisement to determine whether it will grant MGM's plea for a hearing.

Story Source from Real Life

An important and far-reaching precedent is at stake, centering about the source of original story material based on actual happenings in life. The subject of the film was taken from a novel by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, the film rights having been purchased from her by MGM and a scenario prepared. The play written by the plaintiffs also was based on the same incident—the sensational poisoning trial in Scotland in 1857 of Madeleine Smith, who was acquitted of murder. Intimate details of the trial were published in a series of "Notable British Trials" in 1927, which also was admittedly the basis of the Sheldon-Barnes play.

In the treatment accorded the case in the series of "Notable British Trials," emphasis was placed upon the story of a "beautiful and extraordinarily passionate" girl and her tragic affair with a "singing and guitar-playing lady killer." However, efforts to picturize the play were unsuccessful, due to the opposition of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, MGM told the court, and so Mrs. Lowndes' version eliminated the scenes which originally caused Mr. Hays to ban the Sheldon-Barnes copyrighted play.

Appeal Based on Public Domain

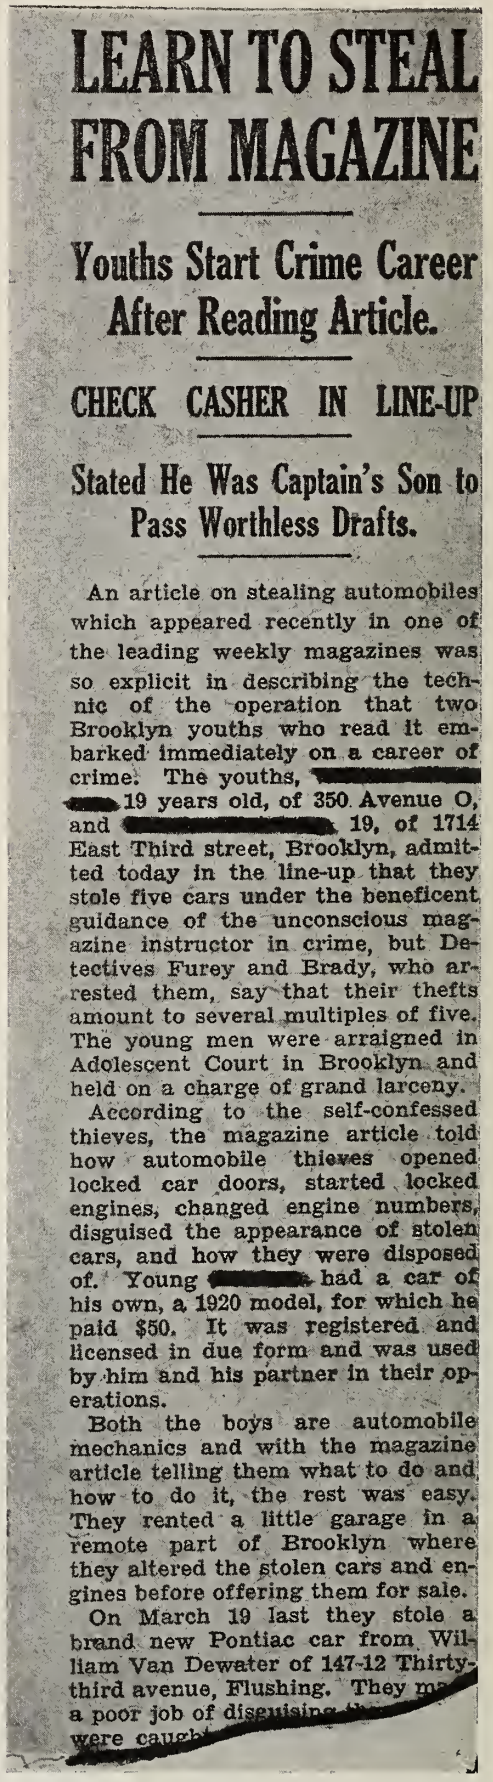
In its petition for review, counsel for Metro contended that the differences between the play, novel and picture were so broad as to eliminate the charge of plagiarism in view of the fact that the original material is in the public domain. In support of this contention MGM argued that numerous plays and pictures had been built around the same subject, citing "Oliver Twist," which was said to have been the basis for four films and seven plays. Too, "Abraham Lincoln" has been the basis for five motion pictures and 23 plays, and "Scarlet Letter" for four motion pictures and 21 plays, added MGM.

Differences in the plots, characterizations, characters and "emotional results" as among play, novel and motion picture were claimed by MGM in the brief which was filed with the supreme court this week.

It appears that if the supreme court refuses to hear the MGM appeal, or refuses to grant the relief asked thereof, the way may be paved for other suits of a similar nature against distributors who have produced material similarly taken from public domain, when that same material previously had been based on a play or other work prior to the production or release of the picture.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer released "Letty Lynton" on April 30, 1932, as directed by Clarence Brown from Mrs. Lowndes' novel. John Meehan at that time was credited in MGM's publicity announcement with the writing of dialogue continuity, and Wanda Tuchock, with the scenario.

Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, Nils Asther, Lewis Stone, May Robson, Louise Closser Hale, Emma Dunn, Walter Walker and William Pawley were in the cast, playing, respectively, the characters "Letty Lynton," "Jerry Darrow," "Emile Renaul," "Mr. Haney," "Mrs. Lynton," "Miranda," "Mrs. Darrow," "Mr. Darrow" and "Hennessey."



The motion picture first played the Capitol theatre, a Loew-MGM theatre, on Broadway, in New York.

"Pine" Suit Off Until May

Trial of the suit for damages against Paramount Pictures involving the dramatic rights to "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which was scheduled to begin in the New York supreme court this week, has been postponed to the May trial calendar.

MGM Holds Eleanor Powell

Eleanor Powell, who made her screen debut in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Broadway Melody of 1936," has been signed to a new contract by the company. Robert B. Sinclair, Broadway stage director, also has been signed by MGM to direct.

CHECK CASHER IN LINE-UP

Stated He Was Captain's Son to Pass Worthless Drafts.

An article on stealing automobiles which appeared recently in one of the leading weekly magazines was so explicit in describing the technic of the operation that two Brooklyn youths who read it embarked immediately on a career of crime. The youths, [redacted] 19 years old, of 350 Avenue O, and [redacted] 19, of 1714 East Third street, Brooklyn, admitted today in the line-up that they stole five cars under the beneficent guidance of the unconscious magazine instructor in crime, but Detectives Furey and Brady, who arrested them, say that their thefts amount to several multiples of five. The young men were arraigned in Adolescent Court in Brooklyn and held on a charge of grand larceny.

According to the self-confessed thieves, the magazine article told how automobile thieves opened locked car doors, started locked engines, changed engine numbers, disguised the appearance of stolen cars, and how they were disposed of. Young [redacted] had a car of his own, a 1920 model, for which he paid $50. It was registered and licensed in due form and was used by him and his partner in their operations.

Both the boys are automobile mechanics and with the magazine article telling them what to do and how to do it, the rest was easy. They rented a little garage in a remote part of Brooklyn where they altered the stolen cars and engines before offering them for sale.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by the Hollywood staff of the Motion Picture Herald

The First Baby

(20th Century - Fox)

Comedy

This production follows the light dramatic domestic comedy atmosphere of such films as "Alice Adams," "Ah Wilderness" and "Gentle Julia." It is the second in the series of American family pictures this company is making; "Every Saturday Night" was the first. "The First Baby" is the drama, comedy, love interest and serio tragedy of the typical small town American home. Dealing solely with incidents and situations with which all are familiar, it concentrates its story and potential amusement on two young folk who get married, suffer the galling sting of "in-law" trouble, and have the fun and excitement that ensues when the greatest event of their lives nears, the birth of the first baby.

Possessing a gay and familiar atmosphere with human interest its keynote, the story is an original screen play by Lamar Trotti. Direction is by Lewis Seiler, credited recently with "Here Comes Trouble."

For the young leads in the picture, the producers have selected two of their more promising juveniles. The girl is Shirley Dean seen in "King of Burlesque" and "Charley Chan at the Circus." The boy is Johnny Downs. Seen in "College Scandal," "The Virginia Judge" and "Coronado," he is currently featured with Irvin Cobb in "Everybody's Old Man." A third youthful player, Dixie Dunbar, who was in "King of Burlesque," is featured. Supporting the younger players, but with each part important in the story, the producers have gathered a group of veteran performers. Jane Darwell, now in "Captain January" and "Little Miss Nobody," is the boy's mother. In the role of his mother-in-law, a character that carries much of the story's comedy and serio-drama, Marjorie Gateson will be seen. Gene Lockhart has been chosen to play the part of Miss Gateson's henpecked husband but the happiest man alive when the baby arrives. Other players who will be seen are an as yet unnamed baby, Willard Robertson, and Hattie McDaniel.

Bullets or Ballots

(Warner)

Drama

Probably the outstanding exploitation feature of this production is that in it Edward G. Robinson, original creator of the vicious gangster screen character in "Little Ceasar," et al, turns cop. After accepting the role, Robinson sinks his heart into it. As the picture will come up on the screen, it promises to be the best characterization in which he ever has appeared. The story is an original by Martin Mooney, New York newspaper reporter whose uncovering of the Welfare Island prison scandal and exposure of various rackets landed him in jail, to make him the subject of much public interest. In the picture Robinson, first becoming a harness bull, puts fear of the law in gangsters' hearts. Later, apparently fired for assaulting a superior officer but actually a participant in a faked brawl that makes it possible for him to become an undercover man and thus get in on the inside of gangland secrets, he leads the way to the wiping out of a group of desperate trigger men, dying himself, but not before he has put the finger on the higher-ups. Accompanying the motivating drama of the story is a novel romantic love interest contrast that concerns Robinson and Joan Blondell.

As Robinson's racketeer enemies will be seen three of the screen's toughest gangster character portrayers: Humphrey Bogart, who presented a grim, cruel character in "Petrified Forest"; Barton MacLane, remembered particularly for his work in "Black Fury," and George E. Stone. As the vivid drama generally is carried by this quartet, romantic contrast is by Joan Blondell, who, incidentally, is the only featured feminine player. Others who will be seen are William Marrigan, Frank McHugh, who carries the comedy relief; Addison Richards, Pierre Watkins, Joseph King, Joseph Crehan, Norman Willis, Wallace Gregory, Richard Purcell, Louise Beavers and Frank Faylen.

The screen play for Mooney's original is the work of Seton I. Miller, who collaborated on "G Man" and "Frisco Kid," and direction was handled by William Keighley.

Special Investigator

(Radio)

Drama

Answered in this picture, vividly dramatized, is a topic that continually engages public attention: why do lawyers defend criminals whom they know to be menaces to society? It is answered in a manner that promises to be entertaining and interesting. In "Special Investigator," the hero who has won fame and fortune finding loopholes in the law that would free criminals everybody knows guilty, is shocked when he learns that his own brother, a G man, has been killed by gangsters. Getting a clue to the suspect's locale, a girl of course being woven into the case, he first, at great personal danger, poses as a friendly country lawyer. But with the motive for revenge burning his soul, he gets the goods on the killer and brings him to justice.

The story is based on a published novel by Erle Stanley Gardner, author of the popular "The Case" series. The screen play is by Louis Stevens, Thomas Lennon and Ferdinand Reyher. The picture is being directed by Louis King.

Richard Dix, currently in "Yellow Dust," is starred. The supporting cast includes Margaret Callahan as the girl; J. Carrol Naish as the killer of Dix's brother, Owen Davis, Jr., and thus the object of his vengeance; Ray Mayer, Harry Jans, Joseph Sawyer, Sheila Terry, J. M. Kerrigan, Jed Prouty, Russell Hicks, Ethan Laidlaw and Si Jenks.

Earthworm Tractors

(Warner)

Comedy

In the person of Joe E. Brown this film will bring to the screen Alexander Botts, the whimsical supersalesman hero of William Hazlett Upson's popular Saturday Evening Post "Earthworm Tractor" comedy-business-adventure stories. With the full flavor of Botts' amazing and comic achievements preserved, the production is further embellished by the inclusion of a novel and intriguing love contrast.

It's a combination of several Upson stories, to which has been added much that is different. These sequences have to do with the moving of the mansion of a celebrated motion picture star and incidents connected with the rebuilding of Warner's studio. They were incorporated into the originals by Richard Macauley, also a Post writer; Lee Traub and Hugh Cummings. The picture is being directed by Ray Enright.

Botts always seems to manage to do the wrong thing and get in dutch with his prospects and his salesmanager, Gilbert Henderson, but he always has a ready alibi for his misadventures and somehow, with the luck of a seventh son, is fortunate enough to come through with a grand selling coup. Supplementing the fun of these situations is a romantic story wherein Botts, in love with a home town girl, loses his heart to the daughter of his most obstreperous customer.

As Brown is starred in a vehicle that should give him ample opportunity to parade his fun-provoking talents, the supporting cast is composed of a group of familiar Warner players. Included are Dick Foran, as Brown's salesman rival who, when Joe E. falls in love with June Travis, marries his old girl, Carol Hughes. Guy Kibbee will be seen as the star salesman's toughest customer and his companion in the climactic hair-raising escapades. Joseph Crehan is Gilbert Henderson. Others in

Speed

(MGM)

Thrill Action Romantic Drama

While this production carries a formula romantic love interest story, its background is entirely non-formula. The title tabs what that is. As it will be brought upon the screen, the background promises to be an equal if not more important element from a commercial and entertainment standpoint than the motivation. It's the thrill of speed, the excitement and danger of a great automobile manufacturing company's testing ground where new models are subjected to the most tortuous trials to meet the demand for more speed. It's speed, adventure, drama and near tragedy at the Indianapolis Memorial Day race classic; speed on the roaring road and speed on the dry salt lake beds of Utah where the Bluebird (and the incident, highly dramatized, is reproduced in the picture) made its amazing 300 plus miles an hour record.

The production, directed by Edwin L. Marin, is from an original story by Milton Krims and Larry Bachman, with screen play by Michael Fessier. It is entirely timely in content. Further, it is one that readily should lend itself to interesting exploitation.

While speed and the engines and contrivances that make it are the real heroes and heavies of the story, the cast that will interpret the story features, in the main, younger players. Wendy Barrie is the girl. The practical inventor and racer is James Stewart, of "Next Time We Love" and "Wife vs. Secretary." His rival in industry and love is Weldon Heyburn, a scientific technician. Una Merkel has a sympathetic role. Comedy is supplied by Ted Healy and his new stooge., Patricia Wilder, to be seen as a dumb telephone operator. The veteran in the cast is Ralph Morgan.

DIXIE STORMS HIT 31 THEATRES, AS INDUSTRY STAGES FLOOD BENEFITS

Costs in Theatre Property and Lost Admissions Now Estimated at $25,000,000 Before New Tornadoes in the South

The corporate managements of the motion picture engaged this week in their first comprehensive study of the final net damages suffered from the recent floods—damages that are now estimated in all of their potential relations to property destruction to theatres, and lost rental and admissions income, at upwards of $25,000,000.

Financial statisticians had hardly delivered the results of their flood surveys, which tell income fluctuations by a glance at a graph, when, without any warning, a series of tornadoes raged throughout Dixie, leaving 440 persons dead under mountains of debris, hundreds injured and another property devastation running into untold millions of dollars.

Fortunately, the Southern storms of the weekend visited sections of comparatively meagre populations, thus finding no more than 31 theatres in their wake. And although actual property damage to those theatres is negligible, there will be few, if any motion pictures shown until the stricken communities accomplish the more immediate business of rehabilitation.

Industry Aids Red Cross

While local and federal governmental forces rallied to aid the storm-ravaged cities of the Southland, the motion picture was continuing everywhere to add to the fund of the American Red Cross to aid sufferers of last month's floods in the north east. Over 500,000 destitute and needy will be helped by the monies raised during the week of April 27th by the amusement industries—stage, screen and radio, contributing through special shows, percentages of income and other plans worked out by a committee including Major Edward Bowes, H. Wayne Pierson, Eddie Dowling, Gene Buck, Eddie Cantor, George M. Cohan, Howard Cullman, Donald Flamm, Morris Gest, Charles L. O'Reilly, Lee Shubert, Major Albert Warner, and a dozen leaders in American civic life.

Theatres Assess Themselves

Typical of the action being taken to aid the flood sufferers was the decision of Cleveland's Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, whose membership comprises practically all of the subsequent run theatres in the Cleveland area, as well as the smaller downtown Cleveland theatres, to assess every theatre in the organization $10 for a fund to present to the Red Cross for flood relief.

Cleveland first run theatres held a midnight benefit show—hundreds of theatres elsewhere acted similarly. Hollywood studios are raising $90,000 for the Red Cross and approximately 200 theatres in the South are planning benefits to raise funds for the relief organization.

And as these benefits for flood sufferers were at their height last weekend, the newest catastrophe struck in the south. Twenty-two small cities and towns in seven states felt the wrath of the tornadoes, and fatalities were left behind in 13 of them.

The MPTO of Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas on Tuesday appointed a tri-state committee to aid in relief work of tornado stricken communities. Committee members are: M. S. McCord, H. D. Wharton and L. F. Haven, Ark.; R. X. Williams, W. F. Tyson and W. C. Elkins, Miss., and W. F. Ruffin, Tenn.

Bearing the brunt of the elements were Tupelo, Mississippi and Gainesville, Georgia. Gainesville, the "Queen City" of the Georgian Mountains, reported 178 dead, Tupelo lost 206. The Lyric theatre in Tupelo was at once commandeered by authorities for service as a hospital and morgue. The Strand is the only other house in that town. In Gainesville there are four theatres: Rex, Ritz, Royal and State. The Royal suffered probably the worst damage of all of the 31 theatres in the storm line. The Ritz also was severely damaged. Total damage to the properties, operated by Lucas and Jenkins, was $175,000.

Pestilence—the ever present companion of storms and floods—cast its shadow across both cities and elsewhere in the stricken area, threatening box-office receipts of the immediate future.

The Woods theatre, at Cordele, and the Acworth theatre, in the town of the same name, both in Georgia, were in the storm belt. Likewise the Princess, at Booneville, Miss., where six died, and the Coffeyville theatre, at Coffeyville, Miss., which reported ten killed.

Theatres in Storm Area

In Alabama, the Bay theatre was in the heart of the storm at Red Bay, where 13 lost their lives. The Elk, Princess and Grand, at Grenada, and the Lyric and Roxy, at Huntsville, also in Alabama, were in the midst of another half dozen casualities.

Columbia, Tenn., lost 13 lives, many of them patrons of the town's lone "movie"—the Princess.

Other theatres in the storm lane include the Landers and Melba, at Batesville, Ark., and Gem, at Melbourne, Ark., where one death each was reported; the Carolina, Criterion, Lyric and Strand theatres, at Anderson, S. C., and the Carolina, Criterion, Central, Imperial, National, Palace and State, at Greensboro, N. C.

The storm also hit the towns of Lavonia, Ga.; Auburn, Miss.; Elkwood and Grenada, both in Alabama; Clifton, Flintville, McNairy and Lincoln, Tenn., and Lacrosse, Ark., but there was no word of theatre casualities in these towns, if any theatres exist. Few if any of those places have regular theatre structures.

The first estimate of lost theatre receipts in the Dixie storm area, while not tangible, but heavy, took into consideration the report by the American Red Cross that the series of tornadoes constituted the third worst disaster of its kind in the history of the country. The Red Cross files, going back more than 40 years, listed the Florida hurricane of September 16, 1928, the worst, resulting in 1,810 deaths. Tornadoes in a tri-state area including parts of Illinois, Indiana and Missouri took 796 lives March 18, 1925.

Meanwhile, the Wall Street Journal, of Dow, Jones, financial news service, in reporting damages to the industry from the recent eastern floods, observed that, "In spite of unusually severe winter weather in February and floods in New England and Pennsylvania in March, income of the amusement companies on the average has been running comfortably ahead of the same period a year ago. Last year film rental income was good but theatre box office income was lagging. Now improving public buying power is being reflected in a pronounced upturn in theatre earnings.

"The large amusement companies owning theatres did not suffer any relatively large property damage from the floods in Pennsylvania or Connecticut," continued the Journal. "Closing of houses due to lack of power and poor attendance in flooded districts were more important factors. This loss of income, however, probably will not offset the gains in the country as a whole.

"There are at least 80 theatres in the Pennsylvania flood area in addition to houses in Connecticut, Ohio and West Virginia from which film revenues will be temporarily reduced.

ALLIED URGES SUPPORT FOR NATIONAL CONFAB

"H. M. Richey and Pete Wood are at work on their plans to make the Cleveland convention the outstanding success it deserves to be," announced Allied States' national headquarters at Washington this week, urging Allied members everywhere to cooperate. "If you cannot sense the great issues which will emerge as a direct result of the Neely-Pettengill hearings, your faculties are not alert," the national bulletin commented.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

JOHNNY SCOTT, Los Angeles Times reporter, went scouting about Hollywood's studios the other day to determine whether the motion picture is paying off a long-standing obligation to the people who helped make it the fourth rating business in the world. Mr. Scott found that almost everywhere the producers are doing what they can to give the once-greats a chance to "come back" and, in some cases, take a few unfortunates off the relief rolls to which they had been depending for sustenance after once having made salaries of thousands weekly.

The mere mention of their names will send the hearts of many an old-timer fluttering.

Arriving at the Warner Brothers' studio of Jack Warner, at Burbank, Mr. Scott found on that lot such formerly noted players as Paul Panzer, famous as the "Perils of Pauline" heavy; Andre Beranger, comedian; Leo White, who teamed with Wallace Beery in Essanay comedies; Jack Richardson, comic; Jacqueline Saunders; Stuart Holmes; Tom Wilson, once a great blackface funster; Pauline Garon; Clara Horton, child star.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has followed suit in this as yet unofficial practice of utilizing ex-celebrities. At this studio it is more or less up to the individual producer or director. For instance, in "San Francisco," starring Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, appear a whole host of once-famous people. The list is a sort of glimpse through the years, and includes:

Jean Acker, Valentino's first wife; Gertrude Astor, known as the best-dressed star in 1919; Mary MacLaren, Harry Myers, Rosemary Theby, whose star shone brightest about 1911; Frank Mayo, notable of the early Universal days; Myrtle Stedman, Wilbur Mack, Bob Ingersoll, Arthur Belasco, Ernie Adams, Flora Finch, Fritzi Brunette, of Famous-Players and Goldwyn in the 20's; Naomi Childers, Vitagraph and Metro star; Helen Chadwick, of First National, Goldwyn and Paramount films; Pat O'Malley; Kenneth Harlan and others.

Remember Helen Holmes, of Keystone, Kalem and other once-famous film companies? She is playing a part in "Poppy" with W. C. Fields at Paramount. Heinie Conklin and Phyllis Crane are in "F-Man," and that former ace of villains, Mathew Betz (of "Wedding March" fame) is appearing in "Florida Special."

Marie Prevost, absent from pictures for some time, recently returned in fine style, playing with Carole Lombard in "Hands Across the Table." On the strength of this, she was given a part in "Thirteen Hours by Air." Pat Somerset is in "Reunion."

Bryant Washburn, Jack Mulhall, Hank Mann and Chester Conklin, all favorites ten years ago, recently played at Paramount.

The outstanding example of a "comeback" at RKO is that of Marie Osborne, who as an infant star was known as Baby Marie. Until recently, Miss Osborne had been acting as stand-in for Ginger Rogers, but now has a nice part in "Special Investigation," with Richard Dix.

Hollywood Men Folk in Easter Fashion Parade

A THING OF BEAUTY is a joy forever, and so at this glorious Springtime it is our wish to spread joy and cheer and beauty everywhere, using as the occasion the inspiring reportorial account for King Features of Hollywood's fashion parade at Eastertide, from the fluid and flowery pen of that great connoisseur de fashions, Monsieur Ted (Cook-Coo) Cook:

> HOLLYWOOD.—As bells tolled and sirens sounded, the best-dressed men of the Movie Capital prepared to quietly, but firmly, observe Men's Fashion Day. Little organized groups of best-dressed men will go from house to house ringing door bells and urging sloppy dressers to put on neckties, crease their trousers and dust off their shoes with their toupees. At noon there will be a fashion parade with organized cheering. Four men have been selected as grand marshals: Adolph Gable will wear his new 5-6-8 cap, his madras socks (his sore throat is better, by the way) and his "Scorcher" pants. Clark Menjou (No. 5250) will appear in his double-breasted lizard skin vest with silk lapels. "And," he says, "my button shoes won't do me no harm in front of them candid cameras." Bing Powell will wear his Prince Albert, or Morticians' Special, which, by the way, is lined with purple waterproof silk, and can be used informally as a dressing gown when turned inside out. It is shower proof. Rear position in the parade has been assigned to William Crosby who has promised not to wear his bow tie, but, instead, will display his Spring Top Coat and Turfman's Derby. The coat permits full hip swing, while the hat is lined with cork and can be used to muffle a microphone. It holds exactly one peck of oats, or, with snap-on wire handle, can be used as an emergency stable bucket.

Frederick W. Goudy, noted as the father of the type face that bears his name, is depicted in Paramount's current Pictorial short subject in the act of typemaking, tracing type creation from the drawings through the process of moulding and to the finished product. Mr. Goudy uses only two letters of the alphabet in his motion picture re-enactment. They are "MQ."

Sherman Rogers, scenarist, told it to Irving Hoffman, who told it to Beau Broadway—and here 'tis:

Mr. Rogers, in Hollywood, was summoned to the office of a studio executive to describe a new story idea.

"It's about a boy and a girl who meet on a ranch in Arizona," started Sherman, "and . . ."

"Where's the menace?" asked the executive.

"And in the second reel they fall in love. You can imagine the wonderful scenic backgrounds out there, marvelous for a romantic scene, and . . ."

"But where's the menace?" repeated the executive.

"After they pledged their love, they . . ."

"WHERE'S THE MENACE?" demanded the exec.

"It's YOU!" Sherman screamed, and walked out.

Anyone requiring a substantial reason why vaudeville—what's left of it—continues on the downgrade, will find it in a Billboard advertisement in which one William McNally, of New York, offers his "Bulletin No. 19" for sale, containing: "15 screaming monologues, 7 roaring acts for two males, 6 original acts for male and female, 23 sure-fire parodies, 1 great ventriloquist act, 1 roof-lifting female act, 1 trio, quartet and dance specialty, 1 musical comedy, tab and burlesque, 16 corking minstrel first-parts, McNally minstrel overtures, 1 grand minstrel finale, 41 monobits, blackouts, review scenes, dance band stunts and hundreds of jokes and gags"—all for the price of one (1) dollar!

To those motion picture producers in Hollywood who have spent as much as $150,000 for a single manuscript for use in making a film we call attention to Mr. McNally's boast that the 117 manuscripts which he offers, together with "hundreds of jokes and gags"—for $1—are, he advertises, all "New, Bright, Original Comedy."

Let no Hollywoodite henceforth complain about the high cost of good story material when they can get enough for their whole season's program from Mr. McNally for about 57 cents.

March of Time's issue No. 3, of the present series, tells a dramatic story in pictures about the inside situation of a problem that is most perplexing to LaBelle France, namely, mass escapes from Devil's Island, the world's most dreaded penal colony.

Several times a year an ill-fated ship laden with convicts consigned to France's La Guyane, which most of the world calls Devil's Island, heads in at a French Guiana port to discharge its cargo of misery. Across the dock plod France's most desperate criminals—men who have left 4,000 miles behind them. For in the colony's dark history few who once set foot here ever return. Ahead are years of hard labor filled with the one slim hope—escape. But to escape through the swampy jungles, the shark-filled waters, help from the outside is necessary, and expensive.

In the dingy dives of Marseilles today March of Time shows French police looking for clues of a new and flourishing business—escape from Devil's Island in exchange for 20,000 francs—$1,300—or your money back.

France for years has counted on the natural barriers of jungle, ocean and river against this escape. But today off the shore of La Guyane disguised speed boats lurk by night. To many a Devil's Islander, from folks back home, comes a secret message. Then the world hears of a mass escape, as the activities of the Marseilles ring does its work.

Paramount purchased for production the other day a manuscript titled "Hell and High Water," consummating the arrangement when the flood disaster was at its worst. Tri-States Meet; N. W. Allied Set;

Various exhibitor organizations in all sections of the country concerned themselves this week with meetings for the discussion of taxation and other adverse legislature proposals, the election of new officers and the drafting of resolutions protesting the "unethical" actions of supply dealers.

In Memphis, the Pettengill Bill and taxation occupied much of the time at the meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee at the Chicsa hotel, according to President M. A. Lightman. Other events scheduled on the program included advance showings of coming product interspersed between business conferences.

Despite vigorous statements in New York that he would not again be a candidate, culminating last week in a definite declaration that he would not accept, Harry Brandt this week yielded to persuasion and accepted the nomination as president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association.

Other nominations were: Bernard S. Barr, first vice-president; George Rudnick, second vice-president; Leon Rosenblatt, treasurer; Maurice Brown, secretary; David Schneider, sergeant-at-arms. The election meeting will be held at the Hotel Astor April 29.

With J. B. Clinton, president, scheduled to be on hand for the "showdown" on election of a new president, Northwest Allied meets April 20 and 21 in Minneapolis. Several factions in the organization are reported mending their political fences this week in preparation for the coming election, the chief feature of which appears to be the attempts at ousting Mr. Clinton in favor of Benjamin Berger, Abe Kaplan or C. L. Peasley.

In Omaha, at a session of the Nebraska, Iowa and Dakota Exhibitors Association, a resolution criticizing as "unethical" the entrance of supply houses into the promotion of theatres in the territories where the organization is represented.

The next meeting of the Independent Exhibitors of Massachusetts, Inc., New England Allied affiliate headed by Nathan Yamins, will be held April 14th.

A business managers' committee representing all the studios was selected to accompany Victor H. Clarke, studio labor contact man, to New York for the basic agreement conferences with union heads.

Technicolor Shows Gain

The increase in color production is reflected in the report of Technicolor, Inc., and subsidiaries on Tuesday showing a net loss of $3,472 after taxes and charges for the year ending December 31, 1935, against a net loss of $282,608 in the preceding year.

C. W. Higley Dead; Former Fox Director

Charles Wellington Higley, a former director of Fox Film Corporation, died of heart disease Tuesday in New York. He was 70 years old.

Mr. Higley was elected a member of the Fox board in 1930, and in 1931, following the company's reorganization, was reelected to assist in the refinancing program, retiring in 1933.

He was president of the Hanover Fire Insurance Company of New York, the Fulton Fire Insurance Company of Chicago and a director in a number of corporations. He was born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He maintained his residence at Hinsdale, Ill.

Fanchon-Marco To Make 4 Films

Film production plans of Fanchon and Marco are approaching consummation, with four pictures scheduled for major company release in 1936-37, two to be released in the fall, Mike Marco announced in New York over the weekend. He also said that 12 stage show units are planned for the new season, on the basis of one a month. The film releasing company will be announced soon.

F. and M. has organized a film producing subsidiary, Hollywood Pictures Corporation, financed mainly by itself. Lester Cowan, formerly associate producer with Columbia and at one time secretary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has been made associate producer.

"Waltz King" and "Dance Congress," both musicals, will be the first to get under way, each budgeted at a cost of approximately $400,000. Both are originals, the first written by Billy Wilder and Al Ruskin, the second by Allen Rivkin. The casts and directors are now being engaged, said Mr. Marco.

Among the stage units planned for the new season is a Mickey Mouse Circus, featuring Singers' Midgets, which opened at the San Diego Exposition this week and is scheduled to tour the country under canvas. It also will be available to theatres. There will be a unit with Olsen and Johnson, one with Pinky Tomlin, also a radio type of show, and "Texas Centennial Follies," featuring an "all-Texas" cast. The shows will be assembled around one or more "name" attractions.

Despite its court troubles over the St. Louis theatre situation, F. and M. is willing to add to its theatre operations, said Mr. Marco. The circuit's Ambassador in St. Louis has been placed on a continued run policy, after the Fox, which is a first-run.

Orders Details in Suit

In his suit for a share of the $500,000 profits which he said the producers realized through his idea, Peter Llanuza, New York cartoonist, must furnish a bill of particulars to Columbia Pictures Corporation, Justice Ferdinand Pecora ruled in New York supreme court Tuesday. The cartoonist alleged misappropriation of an idea for animated shorts which he says he disclosed to Columbia. Other defendants are Walt Disney, Winkler Film Corporation and Charles B. Mintz.

Museum Holds Fourth Showing

The Museum of Modern Art Film Library held its fourth program of motion pictures Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in the auditorium of the Dalton School in New York, with only members of the museum invited.

The fourth program, under the general title of The German Influence, consisted of two features: "Hands," produced in Germany in 1927 under the direction of Stella Simon and Miklos Bandy, and "Sunrise," produced by Fox in 1927 and directed by F. W. Murnau.

Arrangements are being completed for the program for next month when the present series, "A Short Survey of the Film in America," will be concluded with "The Talkies." It will include early experiments in sound-film and a scene from "The Jazz Singer" as well as the feature "All Quiet on the Western Front" and the first Mickey Mouse ever released.

March of Time In 5,200 Houses

The March of Time reel is now showing in 5,200 theatres in the country, an increase of 500 per cent since RKO took over distribution of the reel last August, according to Roy E. Larsen, president of The March of Time, Inc. Details have been completed for the 1936-37 season, he said this week.

The reel is being shown in 720 houses in the United Kingdom, 200 in Australia and 450 in 19 Spanish speaking countries, through RKO Export, Mr. Larsen said, bringing the world theatre total to 6,600. A new production and research office has been opened in London, with John O. Grierson as editorial adviser, Mr. Larsen further revealed.

Time, Inc., and subsidiaries, including The March of Time reel, reported earnings this week of $2,249,823 after federal taxes, expenses and other deductions for the year ended January 4th. This was an increase of $466,729 over the preceding year. After dividend requirements on the $6.50 preferred stock, the earnings equaled to $9.74 a share on 228,084 shares of common outstanding.

Commercialism in Films Is Subject of Debate

The San Francisco Center motion picture luncheon last week at the St. Francis Hotel was suddenly changed from a staid symposium into a warm debate when Mrs. Hulda McGinn, executive secretary and manager of the California Theatres Association, took the floor and defended the industry against accusations of commercialism made by Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, featured speaker of the day, who said that pictures were giving the wrong impression, particularly abroad, of American life, ideals and "morality of our women." Mrs. McGinn's rebuttal was that all pictures "could not be adapted to the child mind."

Small Town Girl

(MGM)

Comedy Drama

Modern in atmosphere and tastefully produced, this looks like a show to engage the attention of both patrons and exhibitors. It differs radically from the formula comedy drama romance in that for a greater part of the picture, the hero is pretty much of a "heel" while the heroine is the kind of girl that everyone sympathizes with and wants to love. Carefully directed, with plenty of action to counterbalance the dialogue, the two leads, Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor, give exceptional performances, and their work is adequately embellished by the contributions of the supporting cast. The picture moves to a semi-intimate theme, but nevertheless has considerable human interest quality.

Small-town girl, Kay Brannan finds no inspiration in continually associating with the same folk doing and saying the same things day in and day out. A football crowd en route to the Harvard-Yale game thrills her to ecstasy. On the return trip, Bob Dakin, first asking directions, persuades her to pilot him. Follows a gay night club party, at which Dakin gets pretty cockeyed. The result is a "gin marriage" to Kay which Dakin fails to remember upon awakening.

The episode at first is considered by his father and mother as just another escapade, but is looked upon by Priscilla, to whom Bob is engaged, as something that should not interfere with their romantic association. For appearance's sake, the couple go on a yachting honeymoon, in which sequences Captain Mack and So-So check in grand comedy, but for the most part it's a loveless honeymoon, as husband and wife continually demonstrate their apparent lack of affection for each other.

Later, established in a luxurious apartment, love is still missing as Doctor Bob renews his association with snobbish Priscilla. But a little boy upon whom he has been operating approaches a crisis. The hospital calls. Kay thinks he is there. When she realizes the deception, she goes to Priscilla's apartment, drags her husband out to complete the operation. Heartsick, she returns home where persons are real. Again with Elmer, her small-town Romeo, she learns that Bob is bound for Reno and divorce. But the heel turns hero. Again he comes dashing into town. He knows now whom he loves and who loves him and back to Boston they go.

As the love interest of the story is unusual, so is the drama. Only the comedy is as it might be were the regular formula followed. Still, all combine to make human interest, inspired by sympathy that accrues to the girl, the quality that is the feature's outstanding commercial and entertainment asset. As this tends to lessen the possibility of the attraction having a too sophisticated atmosphere, it would be well to devote considerable attention to it in marketing the picture. While there are many elements in the feature, both from story and production background angles that can be made the basis for shrewd showmanship, it does not appear that it would be unwise to concentrate quite a bit of publicity upon Miss Gaynor and Taylor.

Previewed in Wilshire Theatre, Los Angeles, first-run neighborhood house. Though long drawn out in several situations, which undoubtedly will be trimmed, the picture held the attention of the audience, which seemed to be highly appreciative of the work of the starring players.

Big Brown Eyes

(Paramount-Wanger)

Comedy, Romance Drama

There's a lot in this picture to interest audience. Likewise there is much to occupy the attention of showmen. Basically, in story interest, quality of acting and novelty of narration, it's the kind of picture that leads itself to favorable word-of-mouth advertising. Motivated by a gay comedy romantic premise, supplemented by situations which provoke tense drama and melodramatic crime and murder mystery into which an angle of gangster-political connivance is interwoven, the show is alive with peppy dialogue, fast moving action and engaging situations that create quite a number of surprising twists, and it is well acted and directed.

As a glib tongued hotel barber shop manicurist, Eve Fallon meets many colorful folk, cops, crooks and the run-of-the-mill. Pretty much in love with detective Danny Barr, she nevertheless does not hesitate to resort to satirical abuse to keep the affectionate Danny in his proper place. A gem theft takes place and as Danny investigates, Eve becomes convinced that all his attentions to Mrs. Cole are not strictly in line of duty.

Simultaneously with Eve's losing her manicurist job and catching on as a sob sister reporter, there's a child murder. Questioning Bessie, a frightened eye-witness, Eve gets a lead that causes her to suspect mug Benny Battle, and tips off Danny. Benny is in jail when Eve prints a fake story that Benny has named the killer. Fearing the gang's vengeance more than he does the cops, Benny confesses, naming Cortig as the killer. There's a gang-politician controlled trial and Cortig is freed. Eve is fired for printing fake stories and Danny quits the force.

The story takes a melodramatic twist. Master crook Morey conspires with jewel thieves Butler and Don to put Cortig on the spot. His killing witnessed by Danny, the murderers grab him. As dramatic suspense ensues, Morey makes a deal with Butler to deliver jewels to Eve. She manages to tip off police and as Danny makes sensational escape, Morey and Butler are nabbed in the barber shop. Follows the romantic fadeout.

Previewed in Los Angeles Paramount Theatre. While enjoying picture's spatting love interest, audience also came under spell of show's suspense packed drama. For a "B" class regular picture, it was the recipient of more applause than is ordinarily given more pretentious features.

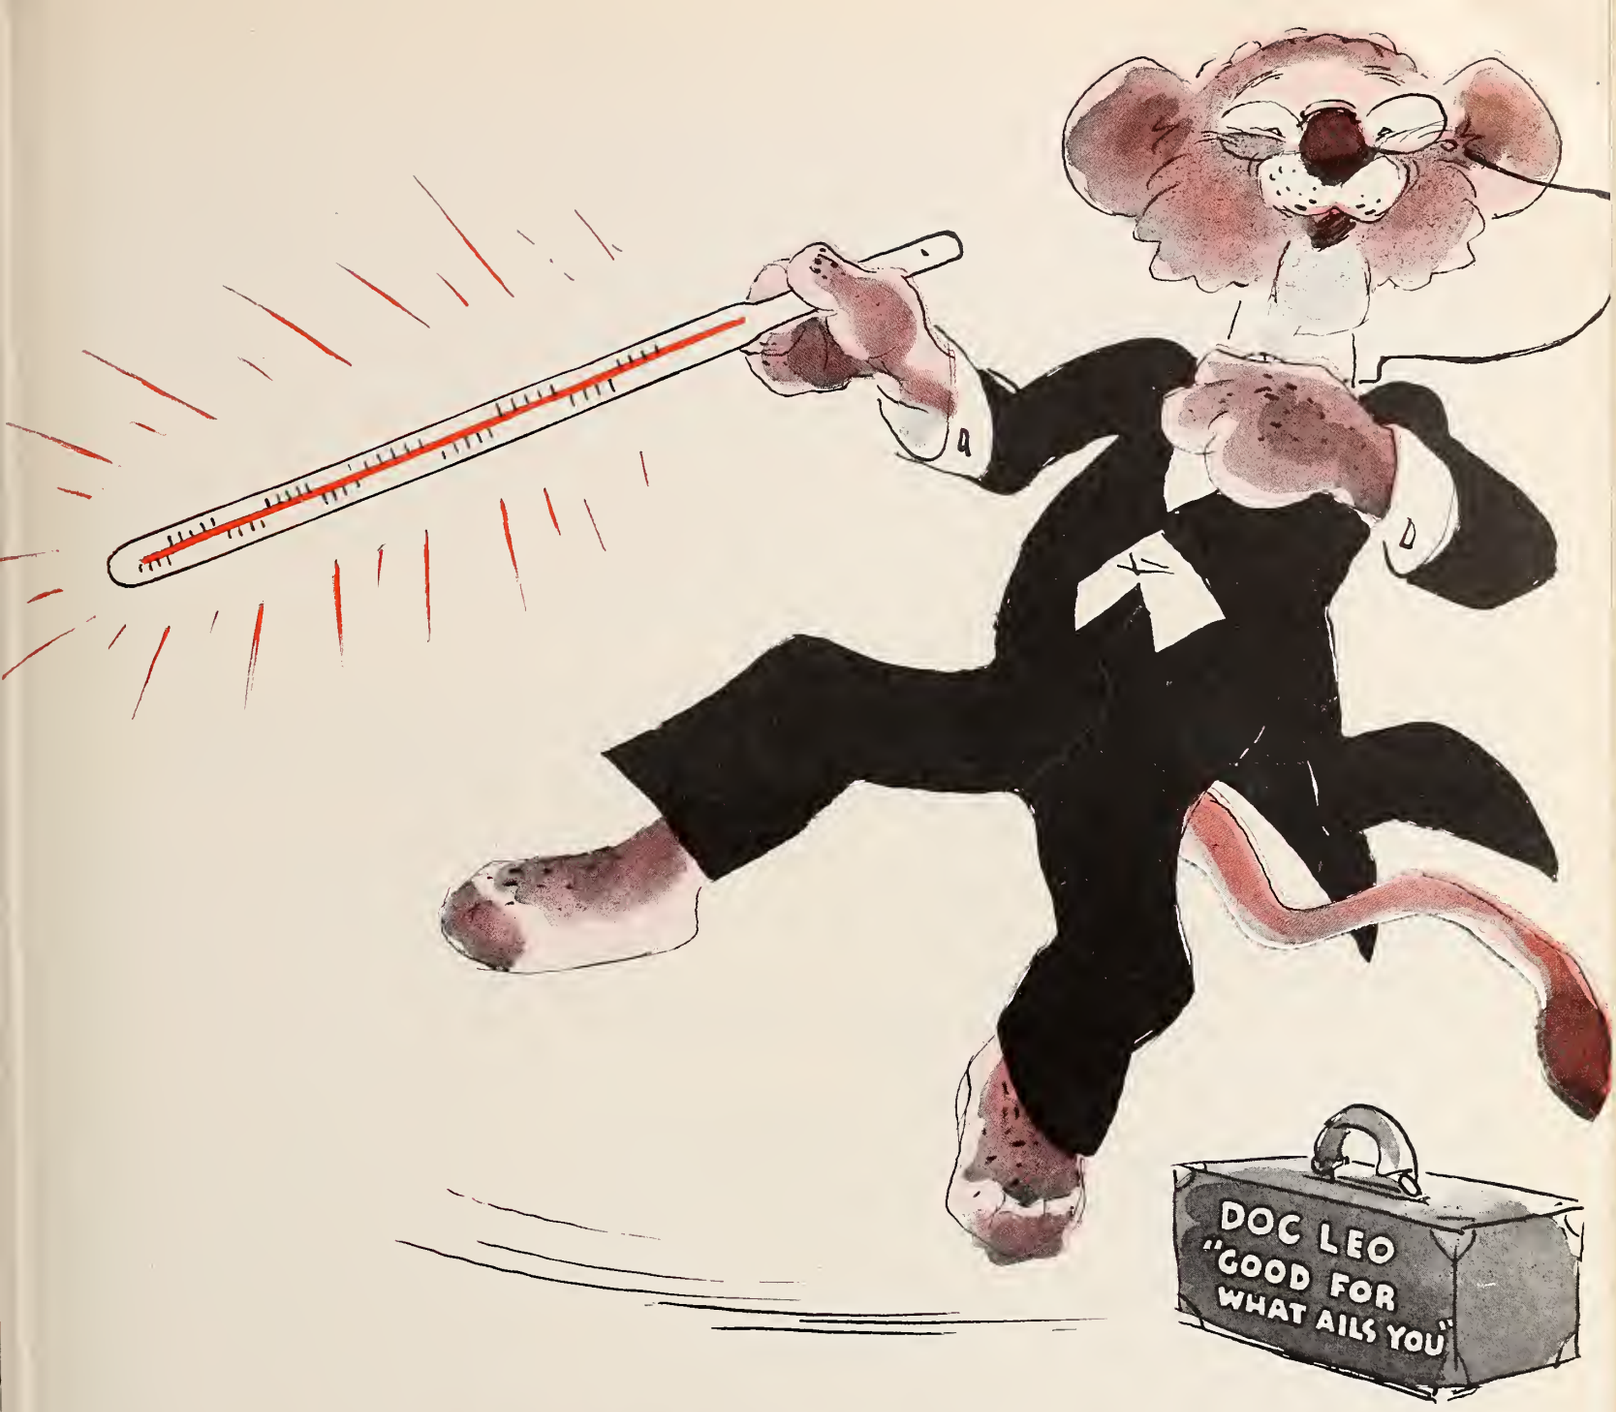
The Witness Chair



(RKO Radio)

Drama

This is the dramatic story of a murder and a courtroom trial. Practically all the action takes place in a business office and the courtroom. It is the story of a woman who killed to protect the good name of the man she loved and the future welfare of his daughter. Generally serious as it deals with a woman who is suffering in a dire quandary—knowing that she is the killer, but watching an innocent man on trial for his life with the web of circumstantial evidence weaving tense and tight—it has several exceptional comedy moments, mainly accounted for by minor players in the cast. As the trial proceeds in court, narration resorts to the flashback technique to illustrate witness' evidence.

For clarity and understanding, information that naturally should not be revealed in advance to prospective audiences, secretary Paula Young, aware that Whittaker is going to abscond with the firm's funds and elope with his partner's daughter, Connie, accidentally kills him in a struggle for a gun as she is calling the police. Books are audited and partner Trent is arrested for the crime.

Moving into court, Paula, as a spectator and witness, listens to the parade of witnesses whose testimony is tending to trap Trent. Undergoing terrific agony, as she sees the web being drawn tighter, and unable to control herself longer, Paula makes a sensational confession of the crime. As the motive and action of it are explained and illustrated, Trent is exonerated and there is a promise that her resultant trial will result in release on the grounds of accidental self-defense killing.

Outstanding showmanship availability is the theme the picture follows. Though Miss Harding gives a characteristic dramatic performance and the work of supporting players is of high class, the idea of withholding the motive for the crime and the identity of the killer until concluding sequences, makes it possible for exhibitors to invite audience into the courtroom and let them be jurors.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Moon Is Our Home

(Paramount-Wanger)

Comedy

Here's comedy tightly packed with worthwhile hilarious farce entertainment quantity and at the same time brimming over with ready-made exploitation availability. It's finely pitched, nonsense from start to finish. That quality is the inspiration for its comedy, romance, drama, action and dialogue. The audience started to laugh with the first few frames. It laughed throughout the running. At the end it gave the picture enthusiastic applause.

The first surprise in the picture is that it takes its stars, Margaret Sullavan and Henry Fonda, completely out of the dramatic characters that previously have been theirs and makes them funny comedians. The second surprise is that, despite its insane madness, the picture is distinctly human.

Principally the show deals with two persons, both are temperamentally nutty and live upon a stratosphere plane far beyond the ordinary mortal's ken. Cherry Chester is a Hollywood movie star, who can bust things up and kick 'em around in the most approved fashion; she can change from a spitting wildcat to a cooing dove in an instant. Anthony Amberton is a famous world adventuring author, always frantically pursued by women wanting his autograph. Both have heard about and hate each other. Both love and detest their public.

Unknown to each other, both are on the same train bound from Hollywood to New York. Each thinks the welcoming mobs along the line are paying homage to her or him. Cherry lands to stage a tantrum in her grandmother's house when she learns she must marry willy-nilly Horace. To escape it all she takes a barouche ride. Autographing volumes in a store, Anthony is sickened by a dose of Cherry Chester perfume and fleeing the frantic females, he leaps into Cherry's carriage. Both of them want to get away from it all, to be alone on a hill top.

Anthony goes to snow-covered New Hampshire. So does Cherry. They know each other only as Sara Brown and John Smith. The snow sport episodes being riots of glee, Sara loses a bet and has to marry John. Aided by a few whiffs of Cherry Chester perfume which Sara wafts around to make herself seductively attractive, their volatile temperaments clash and Sara runs away.

In New York at what is supposed to be Horace's New Year engagement party to Cherry, husband and wife again meet. It's great while they still believe they are Sara Brown and John Smith, but when Horace, finding them engaged in a knockdown, drag-out battle all over the floor, introduces them as Cherry Chester and Anthony Amberton, everything explodes into a serenity that only persons who live in the stratosphere can understand, but which, nevertheless, makes uproarious entertainment.

The Song of the Saddle

(Warner)

Western Drama

The vengeance motivation of "The Count of Monte Cristo" animates this Western drama in which Dick Foran, as the character called The Singing Kid, manages, between stagecoach holdups and similar dramatic incidents, to sing a couple of song numbers which do not detract from the earnestness of the plot presentation. They do afford cause for billing Dick Foran as the singing cowboy, which may be the best exploitation angle.

Highlights, in the action sense, are, in addition to the stagecoach incidents, the murder of the hero's father and the burning of his covered wagon, the interrupted lynching of the hero's friends, the western games, the assassination in ambush of a horseman mistaken for another, the death by bullet of his likewise misidentified accomplice, the wrecking of a fleeing stagecoach and consequent death of the villain, to mention only a few of the more forthright melodramatics. Shooting is plentiful and quite a bit of plain and fancy horsemanship is displayed. There are several long shots of mountains and grazing lands. The period is 1850 and 15 or 20 years later.

Dick Foran is cast as Frank Wilson, Jr., whose father was murdered, when the boy was small, by Phineas Hook, a fellow pioneer who has become wealthy and unofficial boss of the western settlement which is principal scene of the action. Foran, grown to manhood and educated, returns to wreak vengeance on Hook and the two aides who participated in the murder. He meets his childhood sweetheart and falls in love with her again.

By misleading Hook into believing a fleeing horseman, really one of his aides, is himself, Wilson brings about the assassination of one of the three enemies. Later he misleads Hook into believing that he, Wilson, will enter his door at a specified time, and arranges for the other aide to enter at that time, to be shot down by Hook. Hook plots a stagecoach holdup for which Wilson will be blamed, but the hero turns the tables and, when Hook is discovered and flees by coach, pursues him until the vehicle careens over a cliff to its own and Hook's destruction. Then Wilson and the girl set out for California.

Reviewed at the Beacon theatre on upper Broadway, where the picture was paired with "Road Gang" on a double feature bill quietly received by a sparse dinner-hour audience.

The Country Beyond

(20th Century-Fox-Wurtzel)

Melodrama

This adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's novel is a melodrama of life, love and crime in the snow covered north. It's pretty much formula Northwest Mounted Police romance and drama stuff. Though the various players give convincing performances, two dogs—one a hero, the other a menace—are the real stars of the show. Mainly an action picture, although abounding with expected substantiating effects, the picture is one that probably will appeal more to specialized action lovers and youngsters than to any other class of audience.

Young Corporal King has influence enough to be assigned to a frontier post. Self assured and cocky, he is given the usual, thorough going over by hardboiled Sergeant Cassidy. Then he meets a girl, Jean Alison, and it's love at first sight. Cassidy's job is to wipe out a ring of fur thieves and smugglers. It develops that Jennings is the key figure and that Jean's father, Alison, is a sort of a confederate. Jennings has a vicious dog, Wolf, whom he has trained to kill any suspected enemies. When contrabrand is found in Alison's possession, he and his daughter, who doesn't know that her father has criminal tendencies, set out to warn Jennings. Their trail is picked up by Cassidy and King. As Hale is killed by Jennings, the picture builds to its melodramatic climax in which King and Jean are menaced by Wolf, only to have Buck arrive in time to stage a thrilling battle with his canine enemy and make possible the romantic fadeout.

Built for thrill and drama, with plenty of excitement although quite a bit of it forced and theatrical, the picture seems to be the kind of material for the kids and for those who like action and entertainment.

Previewed in Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles. The audience reacted impressively to the dog sequences.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Absolute Quiet

(MGM)

Comedy Melodrama

This can be considered a crime mystery melodrama or a comedy. Both elements are mixed in such helter skelter fashion that it's up to the man who plays it to determine how to tab it. There are about nine different motivations for the basic plot and climax, which naturally gives the show quite an episodic character. The mystery is certainly confusing as to why and what for; the drama is natural to what might have happened to such a heterogeneous collection of folk gathered in the particular locale and under the circumstances. So is the comedy.

Ordered by a doctor, the heavy seeks the confusion of an isolated ranch to rest his nerves. However, he conveniently takes along his married secretary, a charming miss. What happens thereafter is bedlam. A plane brings a governor, his stooge, a newspaper reporter, a passe actor in love with the heavy's cast-off girl friend, and a few others. A couple of escaped convicts also drop in. The heavy wants to get something on the governor; the governor would do likewise, the actor wants to get to Hollywood, the reporter wants to flash news of the event to the world, but the fleeing convicts don't want any more company, so they cut the light and phone wires to prevent intrusion. Ensues a lot of weird goings on which threaten to ruin many lives, until finally the fleeting convicts get killed and the heavy drops dead, things are fixed up for the secretary and her husband, and the reporter has a real story to print.

Though the picture hops and skips around pretty much, there are several acceptable individual performances, with Lionel Atwill, Wallace Ford, Ray Walburn, Stuart Erwin and Irene Hervey doing good work.

Essentially a program picture, the picture really does not call for any kind of campaign.

Till We Meet Again

(Paramount-Lewis)

Dramatic Romance

Drama is the keynote of this romance of a man and a woman who love each other more than they do their countries. It's a spy story, but it is not a war story even though all action is projected against the turmoil of the World War. Quite intelligently and just as evidently to concentrate audience attention upon the dramatic situations in which the lovers find themselves, there are no war conflict scenes in the picture. Though the atmosphere of its horror and danger is continually present, it is included to intensify the situation in which it is the duty of one spy to trap another.

Alan Barclow and Elsa Baranyi are in idyllic love in Vienna when war breaks out. Answering the call of his country, Alan returns to England just before they are to be married. He becomes a superspy and Elsa, returning to Germany, is similarly engaged. Alan, under the lash of Captain Minton, and Elsa, driven on by Ludwig, gather information that wreaks havoc with their respective enemy countries' plans. Alan is ordered into Germany to catch the German spy. The lovers meet, but the call of personal love is stronger than that of duty. Amid situations that continually have both in dangerous spots, as Ludwig knows there is a British spy in the country, both sicken of the horror of it all. Fleeing, pursued and menaced by Ludwig's soldiers, both escape to Holland and internment for the duration of the war.

Treating as it does the most dangerous game in the world, spying in war time, and thus a subject of more than ordinary interest to the public, the romantic counterpart to the drama has a character to stir emotions. Lovers, victims of national hate, ordered to bring about the doom of each other, the work of Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael is convincing and believable. Exploitation of their name values, plus forceful description of the picture's story and production quality, looks to be the medium that would arouse maximum interest.

Comin' 'Round the Mountain

Western

Harking back to the era of the Pony Express with California as a background, this outdoor romance production combines the requisite component parts for well balanced fare for the inveterate as well as the casual western audience. The highlight is a cross-country race to determine the competitive worth of horseflesh for duty with the Pony Express. The race is one to quicken the audience pulse.

The plot is typically western with nothing new to distinguish it from numerous others, yet this doesn't detract from the presentation. A Pony Express rider is set upon and robbed of a package of money needed to forestall a sheriff's sale of a ranch. The rider obtains a leave of absence from the Pony Express to track down the robbers. The man who engineered the theft turns out to be the neighboring ranch owner, eager to consolidate both ranches and marry the girl who owns the mortgage property.

Gene Autry as the Pony Express rider turns in his usual excellent performance, interspersing two or three songs. In fact, the entire cast was well chosen. Ann Rutherford is the girl, Roy Mason the heavy and Smiley Burnette contributes most of the comedy relief. Bob McKenzie makes much of his small part as the marshal.

"El Diablo," a highly spirited horse, plays an important part in the proceedings. Autry escapes from the desert when the animal, runaway from the girl's ranch, strays there. The horse later is set free to rejoin a herd of wild horses, and assumes leadership after besting the former leader, a pinto. The pinto is stolen by Mason, painted black and entered in the big race as a thoroughbred. "El Diablo" beats the pinto by a length. Mason's trickery is disclosed when the two horses attempt to renew their fight. The stolen money is recovered, the ranch is saved and Autry marries the girl.

Exploitation might be best directed toward children, but the production has material to interest adult patronage.

Western Melodrama

Much plain and fancy riding, trick and ordinary shooting, claim jumping, cattle driving and primitive justice, the struggle between Colt and Blackstone law, make up the substance of this western. There are many shots of rugged open country and mountain ranges. Dialogue is at a minimum and action, which is swift and continuous, carries most of the narrative.

John Wayne's riding and shooting ability are mentionable in advertising. Intentionally or not, there are a number of startling horse falls and pile-ups.

Vengeance is the motivating element of the story, tempered with legally directed defense of settlers' rights. The love interest is subordinated to these, but the formal fadeout is achieved logically. Two character men carry a humorous strain which is intermittently recurrent.

The story opens with claim-jumper Stiles and his men taking possession of a million acres of cow country, killing ten-year-old John Clayborn's father and mother when they refuse to give up their property. Ten years later the boy returns to the community as John Clay, lawyer, and leads the oppressed independent ranchers in a legal attempt to recover their rights. Lawful means succeed in a measure, but continued murder and pillage by Stiles' men make adoption of gun tactics necessary. John has met and fallen in love with Belle, daughter of a rancher killed by Stiles' agent, who at first misinterprets his leadership as ulterior in motive, but this misunderstanding is cleared up and John leads the ranchmen in a final attack on the Stiles forces which results in the elimination by death of the claim jumper and his men. John and Belle marry.

FALL AND WINTER THEATRE

The trend of business of motion picture theatres in twelve key cities of the United States, during the fall and winter seasons of 1933-34, 1934-35 and 1935-36, is compared in the chart on this and the adjoining page. The graph is based upon MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S weekly compilation of box office grosses from the larger representative cities of the country.

GROSSES FOR THREE YEARS

The gross from the twelve cities during the week ended September 1, 1935, was taken as 100 per cent in drawing the comparison, and all other grosses were rated on this basis. The cities considered were the following: Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Hollywood, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York, Oklahoma City, Omaha, Portland, Ore., and San Francisco.

of this importation outfitted with English subtitles, on the film, interpreting the story for American audiences. The picture is almost wholly without comic relief and the story is told largely in terms of swift-moving action.

For audiences of Russian background or sympathies the names of Pushkin, Ivanovsky and Livanov, author, director and star, afford exploitation material.

For general purposes the depictment of pre-Soviet Russian civilization and a production kinship to "Potemkin," emphasized in various quotable critics' reviews prefacing the picture in its New York run at the Cameo theatre, are chief available angles.

The story is of Vladimir Dubrovsky, son of a Russian nobleman illegally deprived of his lands by Kirila Troyekurov, his wealthier neighbor and former friend. Seizure of the Dubrovsky lands brings about the death of the Senior Dubrovsky, which the son first avenges by burning the house while four of Troyekurov's agents are in a drunken stupor within. Young Dubrovsky then leads his serfs and volunteers who join his band in a campaign of reprisal, looting estates, killing aristocrats, befriending the peasantry, until, taking advantage of an opportunity to masquerade as a French tutor employed by Troyekurov to teach his daughter, he falls in love with the girl and finds himself torn between his intention to lead his followers in an attack on the estate and a desire to save his beloved.

His masquerade is successful, but his followers become impatient, and in restraining them his identity is discovered. He learns that Troyekurov is compelling his daughter to marry a nobleman and, arriving too late to prevent the ceremony, is shot by the nobleman. When his followers start out to raid the Troyekurov stronghold in reprisal he attempts to follow but dies of his wounds. The raid is conducted and the picture ends with Dubrovsky's second-in-command killing Troyekurov.

Reviewed at the Cameo theatre, intimate theatre on 42nd street near Broadway, directing its program especially to Russian clientele. Audience reaction was audibly favorable.

Three Little Wolves
(U.A.)
Disney Triumph

The Three Little Pigs of unforgettable box office memory return in all their pristine porcine rotundity and charm as intended victims of three little wolves coached by their vengeful parent, the Big Bad Wolf himself. The diligent pig is busily engaged in constructing an automatic "wolf pacifier" while his playful companions sound the wolf alarm to annoy him. The Big Bad Wolf disguises himself as Bo Peep and the little wolves as her sheep, enticing the little pigs into their lair and preparing them for the oven. The diligent pig discovers their danger and comes to the rescue with his machine, an elaborate, Rube Goldberg type of apparatus that is screamingly effective. The subject is a sheer triumph for Disney, who must have known the hazard involved in returning the Three Little Pigs in a manner to circumvent the almost inevitable anti-climax expectable in view of their original success. "Three Little Wolves" is the eminently qualified result. It is immensely satisfying, manifestly advertisable, altogether excellent.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Popular Science No. 4
(Paramount)
Instructional

Varied avenues explored by scientists in this subject are skyscraper resistance to earthquake, electrical cooking devices, analysis of caterpillar metamorphosis, construction of a miniature airplane and X-ray photographing of a living person. The production is in color throughout. Topics are not routine. Treatment is serious, save for humorous touches in narration. A studious item, possibly useful in connection with a feature comedy or musical, probably a little stiff for purposes of balancing a drama.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Betty Boop and Little Danny
(Paramount)
Average Cartoon

Betty Boop opens this brief flight into the fanciful by singing a song about physical culture in her gymnasium, after which she becomes involved with a runaway vibrator and sends little Danny for an electrician. He is variously delayed and rescues her by accident rather than design after she has been reduced to a shadow. Ensuing laughter returns her to normal size, but doesn't stop there. It's about average for the series.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Mickey's Grand Opera
(U.A.)
Mickey Mouse at Tops

Walt Disney may have turned out a better Micky Mouse comic at some time in the past but the name of none intrudes upon the memory of nine hilarious minutes afforded by this one. Mickey is director of a grand opera starring Donald Duck and Diva Hen, but his dog gets into trouble backstage with a magician's hat full of rabbits, birds and assorted animal life, chasing and being chased by same on stage and off while the stars, orchestra and all hands struggle bravely with the score. Voice effects are excruciatingly keyed to character, music and action, with Donald Duck stealing the show as to laughs. Color is effectively but not obtrusively employed throughout. The subject is suitable for any and all kinds of programs, theatres and audiences.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Winged Champions
(Paramount)
Ornithological Study

Ted Husing's glib narration contrasts effectively with the often superlative shots of birds on the wing—ducks, geese, swans, even pelicans—obtained at various sanctuaries and breeding grounds. The information given is interesting in itself and the camera achievements are noteworthy. A well rounded, carefully prepared, all-purpose Sportlight.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Paramount Pictorial No. 9
(Paramount)
Routine Miscellany

William L. Finley's method of studying bird habits is the first and best of three items combined herein. A brief inspection of Lake Patzcuaro and its Indian fishermen is next. The subject closes with Charles Haubiel playing "Swanee River" in the manner of six famous composers, a dull business too often done by too many pianists.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Elmer Elephant
(U.A.)
Color Comic

Elmer Elephant's proboscis is ridiculed by his less favored rivals for the affection of popular Tillie Tiger, at whose birthday the action takes place, and he is in despair until fire threatens the life of his beloved, and he is able, with the aid of his versatile nasal appendage, a giraffe and a trio of pelicans, to save her life and win her hand. The humor is legitimate, the action steadily accelerated and the final situation achieved with completely successful blending of excitement and humor. The subject is among the better Disney productions since adoption of color.—Running time, 8½ minutes.

Warner Acquires Modern Studio for Dubbing in Spain

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER
in Barcelona

Warner-First National, S. A., has just acquired exclusive use of the commodious and completely equipped studios of Trilla y La Riva, in the Palacio de Metalurgía, in the Montjuich Park grounds of the Barcelona '29 Exposition, for an indefinite period, for dubbing purposes. A condition of the contract is that Warner-First National acquired full and exclusive rights to production. René J. Huet, director general of the Spanish affiliate of the American producing and distributing company, said Warner had no intention of employing the Trilla y La Riva studios for original production, for the present, at least, but that the work of dubbing under the new arrangement would start at once. Among those to be dialogued in Spanish are "White Lights," "Dinky," "Special Agent," "The Irish in Us," "Doctor Socrates" and "Front Page Woman."

Mr. Hust said the use of the studios had been acquired in order to avoid the vexatious delays and interruptions his company had experienced in attempting to dub pictures in small, independent producing studios, where, from time to time, work upon dialoguing would be terminated suddenly by withdrawal of a technical expert or camera man or sound recorder for another picture in production in the same or another studio. Oftimes the studios thus transiently employed were found to lack requisite technical and mechanical equipment and specialized personnel.

By the terms of the new contract, Trilla y La Riva henceforth will concentrate exclusively upon the dubbing of Warner Brothers English-language films. It is expected that 18 films will be dialogued this year.

The Monjuich studios are among the best equipped production and dubbing plants in Spain and have two huge stages with all necessary accessories. The technical equipment is wholly of Spanish, and mostly of Catalan local, manufacture, the only foreign apparatus being a traveling crane camera of French patent. In dubbing in the past for Artistas Asociados, S. A. (United Artists), and other affiliates of American distributors, Trilla y La Riva has produced excellent results, due in part to splendid management and up to date and comprehensive equipment and in part to the high quality of acting personnel recruited for the dubbing process from the first theatres of Madrid and Barcelona and the native screen profession of the country.

ENGINEERS' EMPHASIS ON IMPROVING EQUIPMENT IS CONVENTION'S TOPIC

Technicians Concentrating on Refining Existing Mechanical Procedure Rather Than on New Apparatus, Papers Show

Scientists and engineers vested with the technical development of the motion picture today are engaged in improving existing mechanical procedure and practice, rather than the development of radically new apparatus.

This trend in motion picture engineering may be accepted as being indicative of the high stage of development already reached in the equipment used for producing, distributing and exhibiting motion pictures, and becomes apparent from the nature of the half hundred technical papers that will be read by motion picture scientists before the spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, April 27th to 30th, at Chicago's Edgewater Beach hotel.

A majority of these papers will deal with the development and improvement of specialized equipment, and the refinement of production technique—embracing such apparatus as rectifiers, lighting systems, volume indicators, exposure meters, lamps, carbons, screens and the like.

Of the seven technical sessions to be held, five will be devoted to sound, lighting, laboratory and projection, film slides and apparatus and equipment in general.

Colonel H. N. Schwarzkopf, superintendent of New Jersey's State Police, and receiver of considerable attention in the Hauptmann kidnaping case, will discuss the application of sound motion pictures to criminal identification. The Colonel has in mind a plan for extending the use of sound films in crime solution.

The engineers will listen to discussions on film libraries, photoelectric cells, variable-density recording, ultraviolet light in sound recording and printing, acoustics in their relation to music scoring stages, sound stages and small theatres; sound waves, projection screen brightness, projection practice, lighting problems of the screen, incandescent lights, trends in carbon arc for motion pictures, film preservation, projection and projectors, color in motion pictures, raw stock, visual education, advertising projectors, 16 mm. and 35 mm. film, and other equipment and practices.

An exhibit of newly developed motion picture apparatus will be held in the convention hotel.

Douglas Shearer, of MGM's Culver City studio, together with RCA, will conduct a symposium on essential improvements achieved in sound-film recording and reproduction in adapting conventional methods to the high-quality reqirements of motion pictures.

F. H. Richardson, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's technological department, will discuss projection.

The delegates will visit the Underwriters' Laboratories in Chicago and the plants of Chicago's various laboratories, studios and equipment factories. The semi-annual banquet will be held on Wednesday evening, April 29th, at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

In charge of the convention will be W. C. Kunzman, convention vice president; James I. Crabtree, editorial vice president; and the following convention committee chairmen: O. M. Glunt, financial; G. E. Matthews, papers; E. R. Geib, membership; Will Whitmore, publicity; H. Griffin, projection; O. F. Neu, apparatus.

"CAPTAIN JANUARY" INJUNCTION ISSUED

The United States circuit court of appeals in New York Tuesday ordered a forthwith injunction issued restraining Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and Rural Pictures Corporation from proceeding any further with the production and distribution of "Captain January," starring Shirley Temple.

The injunction was ordered after a reversal of a district court decision in the injunction and accounting suit brought against the film company by L. C. Page and Company which claims it acquired all motion picture rights to the novel, "Captain January," in 1923. The silent film rights to the book were sold to Principal Pictures, to which Twentieth Century-Fox paid $6,666 along with $13,333 to Mrs. Laura E. Richard, authoress of the story, for the sound rights.

Page and Company allege they own the rights to the picture and upon this are basing their suit for an accounting and it is because of this they asked for the injunction.

UNIVERSAL ADOPTS UNIT PRODUCTION

Laemmle's Interest Formally Transferred; 36 Features Next Season, 8 Buck Jones Westerns

Formal transfer of Carl Laemmle's controlling interest in Universal Pictures Company, Inc., to Universal Corporation, the Standard Capital-Charles R. Rogers purchasing group, was completed over the week-end with the payment of $4,000,000 which, in addition to the $1,500,000 deposited on March 14th, complied with the terms of the option taken on Nov. 1, 1935.

At a meeting of the board of directors of Universal Corporation following completion of the transfer last Thursday, J. Cheever Cowdin, president of Standard Capital Company, was elected chairman, R. H. Cochrane president and Charles R. Rogers executive vice-president. Other members are Paul G. Brown, Philadelphia capitalist; Garrettson Dulin, of Dulin & Company, Los Angeles; Lawrence W. Fox, Jr., vice-president of Standard Capital Company; William Freiday, New York banker; J. Arthur Rank and Leslie W. Farrow, representing the British interests participating in the purchase; Adolph Ramish, Los Angeles banker; and Budd Rogers, brother of Charles R.

Following the meeting of Universal Corporation directors, the board of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., met and elected Mr. Cowdin chairman, Mr. Cochrane president and Mr. Charles R. Rogers executive vice-president. Other members of the board are Messrs. Brown, Freiday, Budd Rogers, Simon Klee and Meyer Schine, the last two representing the first preferred stockholders. Other officers of the company retain their positions.

Voting Trust Arranged

All the stock of Universal Corporation has been placed in a voting trust. Voting trustees for a period of 10 years are George N. Armsby, long associated with Mr. Cowdin, Dr. A. H. Giannini, and Messrs. Brown, Cowdin, Dulin, Rank and Charles R. Rogers, James P. Normanly, vice-president of Bancamerica corporation and active with Dr. Giannini in the banking business, is expected to become comptroller of the Universal studio on April 14th.

One of Charles R. Rogers' first official acts as executive vice-president was to announce that the company will institute the unit system of production and that 36 pictures will be made next season, not including a series of eight Buck Jones westerns. Work on 14 productions still to be completed for the 1935-36 season will be pushed steadily, with acceleration during April, May and June.

Four serials are scheduled, the first being "The Phantom Rider," now in production, and another, "Ace Drummond," adapted from a cartoon strip. Henry MacRae and Bernard Sarecky will alternate on serial productions.

Eleven writers and four directors have been added to the studio staff since the new owners of Universal took control. The directors are Ralph Murphy, Walter Lang, Edward Buzzell and Arthur Lubin. William Koenig is general manager of the studio, Fred S. Meyer is his executive assistant, Rufus LeMaire is executive assistant to Charles R. Rogers, and William Fender is in charge of studio operations. Dan Kelley continues as casting director, Edward Brymer as wardrobe designer and Martin Murphy as production manager.

New Administration Building

First among the pictures for production are "My Man Godfrey," with William Powell and Carole Lombard featured, and "It's a Small World," co-starring Joan Bennett and Joel McCrea. Work is scheduled to commence before May 15th on "Everybody Sings," a musical comedy, "Reno in the Fall" and "Roxana."

A new administration building for writers, readers, the casting office and producers is expected to be built within six months.

No successor has been named to the post of story department head in New York, vacated by the resignation of Miriam Howell.

James R. Grainger, general manager of distribution, announced that the annual convention of sales managers will be held in New York on May 25th. Story conferences at Universal City were expected to be concluded this week with the lineup of production for next season virtually complete. Charles R. Rogers and William Koenig are expected to attend the convention.

Plans for paying off accumulated dividends on first preferred stock by issuance of new stock in exchange were said to be receiving consideration. An official statement issued by the company disclosed that a substantial amount of new working capital had been appropriated to facilitate the signing of new talent and the increase of the production schedule.

Legion Classifies 6 Films For General Patronage

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the Legion of Decency in its listing for the past week, 6 were termed as unobjectionable for general patronage, four as unobjectionable for adults, and two as objectionable in part.

The new pictures and their classification are: Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage—"Little Miss Nobody," "Message to Garcia," "The Pride of the Marines," "The Singing Kid," "Sky Parade," "Treachery Rides the Range." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults—"Big Brown Eyes," "Der hohere Befehl," "Mystic Mountain," "Unguarded Hour." Class B, Objectionable in Part—"La Signora Di Tutti," "Robin Hood of Eldorado."

CINEMA

The New Pictures

Things to Come (London Films) is a $1,400,000, two-hour cinematic summary of the history of the next 100 years. It marks the début of Herbert George Wells as a screen-writer. It places Alexander Korda's London Film Productions Ltd. on a par with Hollywood for production power as well as brains. It tells an extraordinary story which, while it may not convince cinemaddicts, is likely to captivate them (see pp. 44 & 45).

Since what happens to anyone now old of no consequence to anyone now old enough to enjoy the cinema, the notion of producing a film of which the longest and most spectacular portions deal with 2036 seems, at first glance, distinctly original. Originality it is. It is during preference for doing, insofar as possible, only what has been done before. Actually, nothing interests people more than what interests people more than matters. Things to Come is therefore prescribed entertainment and a concern them. magnificent tribute to the sound showmanship that has made Producer Korda the kingpin in England's booming cinema industry.

Beginning in 1940, the picture voices author Wells's current theory that the other world war will start this year. The operations of that war will be the destruction of Everytown, which looks very much like London, by a fleet of airplanes would throw a highly practical scare into contemporary audiences. The second portion of Things to Come contributes a reduction of Fascism which should cause it, to be banned in Germany and Italy. The climax of the picture is an [illegible] of H. Wells-ian Utopia than that foresighted author has ever divulged to his reading public. As a spectacle, Things to Come compares favorably with its Hollywood rivals. From Intolerance to The Crusades, but it differs from all predecessors in its class by denouncing a cerebral rather than an emotional response. Its climax is reached not when two lovers are reunited but when an unmarried couple are required to leave each other interested in the cosmos than each direction of the moon thus seen in the direction of the World, Raymond Massey, to start the Wellsian motto: "All the Universe or nothing"—which shall it be? . . .

All the trimmers fall at the dingy house when streetcar Street where London-ites has offices, they are likely to be surprised when a fatigued-looking young man who has suffered behind its desk room into a comfortable but shabby suite office, then gets down to business. "I am Mr. Korda," he says. Korda looks and acts like anything but a Hollywood cinemagnate. A Hungarian journalist who got interested in the cinema in 1916, he reached Berlin in 1925. His first silent picture, Helen of Troy, was one of the best silents left Hollywood in 1926. Director Korda left Hollywood in 1931, however, he had had enough of its methods to last him a lifetime. The picture which made Korda was produced on a shoestring in 1933 and starred Merle Oberon, got its start in the cutting room of Charles Loudon of Prudential Assurance Co. Ltd. It also gave him a chance to explore on a grand scale his own ideas about cinema production, crystallized by a distaste for things of the U. S. industry.

Producer Korda's start as a journalist left him with a respect for the profession of writing. His sojourn in Hollywood convinced him that the importance of writers to the cinema had been vastly underrated, only less [illegible] than the importance of the cinema to writers. From this it was a short step to the conclusion, that the payroll of London Film Productions Ltd. was the proper place for an author like H. G. Wells. Few writers of comparable distinction have ever worked in Hollywood. Most of these have either laughed at or despised their jobs. Author Wells, who was on the set most of the time Things to Come was in production, was so delighted that he promptly declared he would concentrate on writing "for the screen hereafter. He now considers films "the greatest art," expects them "to oust both opera and stage. . . ."

The world: "All the Universe or nothing."

With enormous backing, a nucleus of a company in which one of his brothers (Vincent) is an art director, Producer Korda (Zoltan) is ready to attack the U. S. market. Year arranged to attack the U. S. market. Year arranged to Great Britain's 42nd (15,000 theatres to Great Britain's 42nd (15,000 on a large scale by buying a partnership in United Artists, which releases his pictures in the U. S. For years the English cinema industry functioned in controlled earth suburban garden backyards and a few vacant lots at Elstree. Producer Korda bought an enormous tract of land at Denham and set about building a $5,000,000 studio which, now almost complete, is as big and as well equipped as anything in Hollywood.

Before starting on Things to Come, the Films had been made before the Denham ture, which was made before the Denham studios were ready to function, Producer Korda installed a Special Effects Department under Ned Mann. More astounding than the gigantic outdoor sets constructed under Art Director Vincent Korda were Mr. Mann's miniatures: a space gun 70 feet high (see cut) with tiny puppets running around it on moving belts; hundreds of model airplanes apparently capable of carrying armies; a sky-darkening air-force swooping over the Dover Cliffs.

Since The Private Life of Henry VIII put new capital and new life into the British cinema industry, U. S. producers have been debating whether the brains behind the shabby desk in Grosvenor Street were really capable of supplying them with serious competition for the world cinema markets. Last week for the answer. Things to Come may or may not entrance U. S. cinemaddicts but it is likely to make bigwigs in Hollywood scratch their heads about a future much more immediate than 2036.

Playwright, Editor, Producer, Background of William LeBaron

Producing 60 Paramount Pictures More to His Measure than Editing Collier's

William Le Baron's father was an editor and the boy set out in commendable compliance with parental ambition to emulate his forebear in the pastepot and pencil tradition, but eighteen months as managing editor of the then struggling Collier's Weekly turned out to be somewhat more than enough of that for a young man who preferred to write plays. His recent assignment to oversee the production of sixty pictures a year for Paramount is more to his measure than the business of sending fifty-two editions of a weekly magazine to press.

The editor's son was born in the city in Illinois geared to the tick-tick-tick of Elgin watches on February 16th, 1883. He was ten years old when the first great World's Fair was produced in Chicago, only forty-two miles away, and eighteen when the iniquitous Midway where Little Egypt did her stuff had been reformed into the sedate campus of the austere, unsuspect University of Chicago. Here he came in 1901 and for three years assimilated the culture of the class room. His fourth and final college year was spent at New York University, the territorial distribution of his twenty-one years affording an editorially trained young man a rather complete familiarity with rural and metropolitan modes, manners and morals, extremely useful at the sending end of a directorial megaphone.

He was married on June 26th, 1908, to Mabel H. Rollins, and the pen that he liked better than the editorial blue pencil in that year wrote his first play, "The Echo," of which barely that lingers in the shallow memory of Broadway. To that forgetful street he gave serious attention forthwith and in 1911 presented it with the fruits of his study, "A la Broadway," of which but little more is recalled by the present generation of first-nighters and program-hoarders. But the pen pushed on.

Writing and Producing

In 1912 it wrote "The Antique Girl" in collaboration with the similarly diligent quill of one Cecil B. DeMille and, independently, "The Trained Nurses."

In 1913 the Le Baron solo product was "The Earl and the Girls" and the collaborative enterprise, achieved jointly with Alexander Johnstone, bore the provocative title of "The Red Canary." The pen was developing a fondness for music and in 1917 Mr. Le Baron enjoyed the cooperation of the late Victor Herbert in devising "Her Regiment," but labored alone in the writing of "The Very Idea," of which several persons said just that.

It was in January, 1918, that he assumed responsibility for punctual and profitable publication of Collier's Weekly, which he relinquished in July of the following year, but not even the relentless rotation of weekly editions kept him from writing "Back to Earth," "I Love You" and "Apple Blossoms," in which Fritz Kreisler and Victor Jacobs joined him, and for the next five years he was dividing his time between writing plays and producing pictures with no discernible preference, surely no diminution of output.

He made "Cimarron" and "Humoresque"

His plays, from 1920 to 1925, were: "The Half Moon," "The Scarlet Man," "Nobody's Money" and "Oh Baby," on his own. He wrote "Something to Brag About" with Edgar Selwyn. He revised his "I Love You" of 1919 as "Moonlight" in 1924. He translated "The Yankee Princess" and "The Love Letter" from the Hungarian originals.

The step from the editorial desk of a weekly magazine to the director generalship of a motion picture producing organization cannot be tossed off as a routine maneuver, even when the individual to be satisfied with results is himself a journalist and presumably conditioned to a normal temperamental expectancy. But the first Cosmopolitan production to bear Mr. Le Baron's signature dissolved whatever doubts the most chronic skeptics may have had as to the wisdom of the appointment. The picture, released on May 9th, 1920, to roll up tremendous grosses and return again and again to screens that couldn't get enough of it, was "Humoresque."

There was plenty of surprise about "Humoresque," one of those pictures that catch distributor and exhibitor napping and only the public somehow tremendously loves. Possibly the playwright wasn't quite sure, even then, that the producer wasn't just lucky. He could have obtained confirmation simply by raising his voice. At any rate, the playwright kept his hand in for another five years, midway in which period the producer turned out the picture that most consider Marion Davies' all-time best, "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

In 1924 the producer joined Famous Players-Lasky, taking charge of its Long Island studios, and continued as an associate producer until 1927, when the newly established Film Booking Offices' studio in Hollywood required experienced attention. He was made vice-president in charge of production. Two years later, with the ebb and flow of transitions, mergers and absorptions, he was vice-president in charge of production for RKO. It was in this phase of his development that he produced the mighty "Cimarron," a picture as greatly admired by his fellow craftsmen as by the thousands of exhibitors whose box offices it prospered and the millions who paid to see it, as witness the winning of the Academy award in 1931.

In 1933 Mr. Le Baron returned to Paramount, again as an associate producer, and associates describe him as so altogether happy in this relationship that he had to be sold gently the idea of assuming complete production responsibility. With the Mae West box office receipts among the concrete manifestations of his satisfaction with the pre-appointment status, it is not difficult to comprehend a certain degree of reluctance to broaden his field of endeavor. An equivalent degree of insistence is no less susceptible of understanding.

Production Without Groove

The Le Baron production talent is versatile. No groove guides his skill. Outstanding pictures, in addition to the widely different "Humoresque," "Cimarron" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower," are "Beau Geste," "Rio Rita" and "I'm No Angel." A chronological listing of his works intersperses these with "Street Girl," "Terror Abroad," "College Humor," "She Done Him Wrong," "The Old Fashioned Way," "It Ain't No Sin," "Too Much Harmony," "All the King's Horses" and "Klondike Annie."

The man is tall, trim, affable. The scholar is present but the practical business man speaks. His language is of the profession, direct, succinct, clear. Upstage is a word to write into stage directions. Box office and art are compatible terms. Individuals are fellow human beings. Grosses are effects, pictures the causes thereof. What it takes to make them, from scribbled script to preview, are things William Le Baron has learned about in twenty-six intensely active, voluminously fruitful years.

The organizations which have claimed him as member key his personality. They are: The Author's League of America, the Society of Dramatists and Composers, the Psi Upsilon Fraternity, the Lotos, Players, Coffee House and Dutch Treat Clubs.

ALLIED ADMITS "UTMOST DILIGENCE" NEEDED TO PASS PETTENGILL BILL

Myers Charges That Distributors Used "Desperate Measures" at Hearings to "Retain Monopolistic Privileges"

Although charging that the printed record of the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking bills hearings of the last few weeks "will stand as a monument to the lack of merit in the distributors' case," Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors this week conceded that "only the utmost diligence on the part of the friends of the measure can insure its enactment."

Elsewhere the bill is considered as having little chance of emerging from committee because of the complexities of Congressional procedure in the comparatively short time remaining before adjournment.

Technically, the bill now is in the hands of the Congressional printer, who, after publishing the voluminous testimony of the hearings, will submit it both to the Neely Senatorial sub-committee and the Pettengill sub-committee of the House of Representatives, for their study. They in turn will report to their respective interstate commerce committee and interstate and foreign commerce committee. When printed, the testimony will cover many hundreds of pages.

From Allied's national headquarters at Washington this week came the observations of Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel and board chairman of the "desperate measures" to which the distributors resorted during the hearings "to retain their monopolistic privileges."

Myers Cites Examples

"Outstanding examples" cited by Mr. Myers from the distributors' participation at the hearings are as follows: "(1) It was contended that the bill by permitting the exhibitors to pick the best and shelve the rest would ruin the industry, but both Sidney Kent and George Schaefer said that they would support a bill which would permit the selling of only one picture at a time after it had been printed and previewed.

"(2) Mr. Kent and Mr. Schaefer denied that the affiliated theatres were privileged to select their pictures beyond the 10 per cent cancellation, but Ed. L. Kuykendall (MPTOA), to whose association the affiliated theatres belong, admitted that they did buy selectively.

"(3) Mr. Kent testified that since Sidney Samuelson (Allied) had a 'closed' situation he did not have to buy in blocks and that if he did it was to keep pictures away from his competitors—sic!—but Mr. Samuelson replied that not only did he have to buy from Fox Film in blocks and take all the shorts into the bargain, but that exhibitors in surrounding towns also played Fox product.

"(4) Great indignation was expressed because Mr. Myers at the Senate hearing had characterized compulsory block booking and blind selling as 'a cloak for dishonest and oppressive practices,' but Mr. Kent and Mr. Schaefer freely admitted and attempted to justify such practices as substitution of pictures, juggling of price allocations and designation of playdates."

"The foregoing," added Mr. Myers, "and many other instances of inconsistency and insincerity in the testimony of the opponents of the bill, caused the chairman of the House Committee (Congressman Pettengill) to remark that he had never encountered such a mass of contradictions before."

The hearings—beginning on February 27th before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate and ending on March 26th before the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House—"were the fairest and most comprehensive ever held on motion picture legislation." Allied added that "stronger opposition to this bill from outside sources than to any bill before the present Congress except the Public Utilities Act has been reported."

The Allied chairman drew a fine line in describing the identities of the bill's proponents and opponents, declaring:

"The proponents consisted of two main groups—the civic, educational and religious group under the leadership of Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, chairman of the Motion Picture Research Council's committee on legislation to abolish compulsory block booking and blind selling—and the bona fide independent exhibitors headed by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied.

"The public interest, Mrs. Bannerman stated in closing, is at every point in direct conflict with compulsory block booking and blind selling," continued the Allied post-hearing analysis. "This interest is threefold: First is the interest in the protection of children from harmful pictures; second is the interest in developing this new art through free and open competition; and, third, is the interest in community freedom in the selection of pictures as a fundamental principle of self-government implicit in the Constitution."

In addition, Mr. Myers' statement said, "The interest of the bona fide independent exhibitors is to be able to select from the product of any producer those pictures which meet the wishes of their patrons in the local communities which they serve."

"The foregoing," continued Allied, "represent the aims and aspirations of the proponents of the Neely-Pettengill Bill."

Three Groups of Opponents

On the other hand, it was said, "The opponents of the bill consisted of three interrelated groups: First, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.—the Hays organization; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, a closely related group composed almost entirely of affiliated theatres, and a few women leaders of film councils—all called and introduced by C. C. Pettijohn, attorney for the Hays organization."

The Allied statement proceeded to belittle distributor witnesses "purporting to represent civic, educational and religious groups," adding that while "a few MPTOA leaders were called and a few inserted statements in the record, so far as listeners can recall only one, Thallheimer, of Virginia, claimed that his association had gone on record against the bill. None testified as did the Allied leaders, that the bill had been discussed pro and con in open meetings and the sentiment of the exhibitors obtained on a full understanding of the measure."

MPTOA spokesmen later this week pointed out that, contrary to Mr. Myers' charges, 22 active theatre owners appeared in opposition to the bill; that Mr. Thallheimer's Virginia exhibitor association is not a member of the MPTOA, and that all of the MPTOA affiliated organizations were actively opposed to the bill and went on record in that connection when the board of directors of the national organization, meeting in Florida, cooperated with Ed. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, in drafting his statement for the Pettengill committee hearing, and gave its approval.

CHARGE CAMPAIGN OF DEFEATISM

"Certain trade papers are carrying headlines to the effect that the Neely-Pettengill Bill is dead, without a scintilla of proof to support the claim," headquarters of Allied States Association of Motion Pictures charged in a special bulletin this week. "Some are doing this maliciously, some to curry favor with the Big Eight and some possibly to cover their failure properly to support the bill.

"The fact is that due to the intervention of certain emergency matters and the fact that the printing of the hearings has not been completed, Chairman Pettengill has not called his sub-committee into executive session on the bill. He expects to do so this week.

"Exhibitors are cautioned to keep their feet on the ground during this period when the full force and influence of the organized industry is directed to confusing the issues, distorting the facts and playing politics. Caught unprepared because they did not think hearings would be granted, the Big Eight are seeking to make up for their miserable showing in Washington by a campaign of discouragement, falsification and mud slinging."

'Fauntleroy' Smash $100,000 Despite Holy Week

(Best Exploitation: Music Hall)

In the Holy Week Handicap, toughest event of the year for pictures, only 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' and Charlie Chaplin's 'Modern Times,' latter on second run, are showing any speed at all. The going is rough for all the others, rain on Monday and Tuesday (6-7) contributing to slow up the pace.

Outclassing everything else, 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' will return a handsome stake to the Music Hall, chances looking sanguine for $100,000 on the week. Picture holds over 'Fauntleroy' was well sold on its engagement at the Music Hall, both in advance and after opening of run, with United Artists cooperating on the merchandising. Hall spent more than customary in advertising the picture and in addition to other exploitation, there were special broadcasts.

PRODUCERS AND UNIONS TO SET NEW STUDIO WAGES AND CONDITIONS

Unions in Basic Agreement Are Expected to Bargain for Shorter Week, Higher Pay at Sessions Next Week

Negotiations for a basic studio labor agreement for the year ending March 1, 1937, get under way in New York April 14th, with wages and working conditions to be agreed upon between the producers' labor committee, of which Nicholas M. Schenck is chairman, and heads of all studio crafts.

The 1936 agreement expired March 1, and the negotiations are starting later than usual. With complete jurisdiction of union personnel at the studios given to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators, no untoward conflict is anticipated, but the unions in the basic pact, including the IATSE, electrical workers, scenic workers, musicians, carpenters and teamsters, are expected to bargain for a shorter work week and increased compensation.

Pat Casey, studio labor representative, arrived in New York over the weekend, intending to remain two months. Other arrivals for the conferences were George E. Browne, international president of the IATSE, and Steve Newman, IATSE studio representative on the Coast.

Directors of the MPPA in Hollywood named a special studio committee Tuesday night to accompany Victor H. Clarke, studio labor contact for the producers, to New York for the meeting with the unions.

IATSE Jurisdiction Settled

Meanwhile complete jurisdiction over soundmen in the entertainment field was decided in favor of the IATSE at conferences in Washington between Mr. Browne and Dan Tracy, president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, settling the long standing dispute between the two crafts which precipitated the studio technicians' strike in 1932.

The settlement gives Local 695, IATSE, in Hollywood, jurisdiction over almost 1,000 soundmen in the studios, and became effective April 1. The soundmen comprise the last of the labor groups to come under the IATSE closed shop arrangement effected January 2. Demands for a new agreement covering wages and working conditions for soundmen will be presented at the basic pact conference in New York.

As a result of its 100 per cent studio jurisdiction, the biennial convention of the IATSE of the United States and Canada, to be held the week of June 8 in Kansas City, will be in the nature of a "victory celebration," and Mr. Browne's reelection is expected. The general executive board will meet for a week before the general convention opens, and the districts about three days before.

Another development was the settlement of the strike against the New York Republic exchange by the Film Exchange Employees Union, Local 20,043. Nine of the 11 employees who walked out several weeks ago were taken back, one was dismissed and whether the remaining member will be returned to work will be submitted to arbitration, with Gabriel Hess, counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, as the arbitrator.

The union agreed to an open shop and the absolute right to hire and discharge by Herman Gluckman, Republic exchange operator. It was agreed that the minimum wage shall be equal to the average minimum paid by the other exchanges, and the work week remains 44 hours. Collective bargaining will be continued, in accordance with the law, Mr. Collins said.

An upshot of the settlement is that the union is deferring its drive to organize other exchanges in New York and elsewhere, although it has locals in St. Louis and a few other cities, said Mr. Collins. Efforts had been made to unionize Columbia and Warner. The new union is under the direct jurisdiction of the AFL, and other unions, such as Local 306, IATSE, assisted with their moral support.

Picketing Injunction Withdrawn

During the strike, which started January 1, the exchange employees' union picketed theatres playing Republic Pictures, as well as the exchange. Harry Brandt sought an injunction to restrain picketing of the Globe on Broadway, but withdrew the suit following the settlement.

Projectionists in all Fox West Coast houses in Los Angeles went back on the full union wage scale last Wednesday, following an agreement signed by the circuit with Local 150. Salaries were restored to the 1933 level. The contract extends to Sept. 30, 1938. The local is conducting negotiations for similar wage increases with Warners and the independents.

In Portland, Maine, the state supreme court dismissed the petition of Keith's theatre, Frederick E. Lieberman house, for an injunction to stop picketing by operators and stagehands. The court held picketing is neither an unlawful nor oppressive means of bringing about employment of union labor.

Perennial measures for two men in a booth have appeared this year in state legislatures and city councils, including the legislatures of New York and New Jersey.

Public opposition has developed in St. Louis against such a measure pending in the board of aldermen.

A bill making licensing of operators mandatory and otherwise regulating their employment has been rejected by the city council of Charlotte, N. C.

For the fourth consecutive term, Glenn C. Kalkhoff has been reelected president of Local 164, IATSE, in Milwaukee. Other new officers are: Adam Schneider, vice-president; George Wittman, treasurer; Charles Hoover, recording secretary; Oscar F. Olson, business manager.

Paramount Holds Studio Conference

Conferences in Hollywood between Paramount Pictures' New York executives and studio production chiefs to determine the production schedule for 1936-37 will continue all this week, during which time the stories and stars set for next year's pictures will be determined.

Attending are John E. Otterson, president of Paramount; Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; William LeBaron, managing director of studio production; Watterson Rothacker, Russell Holman, New York production head; Henry Herzbrun, vice-president of Paramount Productions, Inc.; George L. Bagnall, treasurer; Chandler Sprague and Fred Leahy, assistants to Mr. LeBaron.

It was announced after the first week's conferences that Paramount Pictures, Inc., is in the best financial shape since 1930, with film rentals at the highest figure since 1931. Paramount's own theatres are leading last year's averages in box office returns. The negative cost of the pictures made in the last few months has been materially decreased, it was announced.

The contract talent list is being built up and negotiations are pending for several additional important screen names to align themselves with Paramount. In the past month ten new players were signed and there are now 87 players on the contract list. There are 69 writers now preparing scripts for future pictures.

Important players will be borrowed from other studios on a star-exchange basis. In no case will the studio loan out its own personnel without getting a needed player in return. The schedule is being arranged so that Paramont will not be forced to loan out its players to keep them busy.

Hearings on five appeals from orders reducing or disallowing application for fees in the Paramount Publix reorganization which were scheduled for Monday were not reached on the United States Circuit Court of Appeals calendar. The appellants are Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, counsel to the Paramount trustees; Cook, Nathan and Lehman, counsel to the stockholders' committee; Kuhn, Loeb and Company and its counsel, Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood, and an accounting firm retained by the stockholders' committee. The five appellants originally asked more than $1,000,000 in fees and were allowed less than $500,000.

The postponed March meeting of the Paramount board was not held this week as planned. The next meeting is April 23. The postponebent of the monthly meeting scheduled for March 26, because of a lack of a quorum, was followed by the announcement that the board would meet within two weeks following that date, despite the absence in Hollywood of John E. Otterson, president, and Adolph Zukor, chairman. No business of sufficient urgency to require a meeting in the absence of the president and chairman is at hand, however, resulting in the decision to dispense with a meeting until the next monthly session, it was said.

PATHE FORMS PREMIER: ALPERSON IS PRESIDENT

Announces Program of 26 Features Annually; First Division Dissolved, Exchange System Used

The Pathe rooster that crowed long and lustily in the dawn of the motion picture industry will herald the re-entry of Pathe into production and distribution in August according to steps taken and plans formulated this week.

Facts:

Pathe Film Corporation announced formation of Premier Productions, Inc., to produce and distribute motion pictures.

Plans were announced whereby First Division is to be dissolved and the distribution machinery so known utilized by the new Pathe subsidiary.

Roy E. Larsen, president of The March of Time, quashed early reports that his company would participate in the new set-up, emphasizing that distribution through RKO Radio would continue under a long term contract still in force.

Edward Alperson was named as prospective president of Premier.

Pathe Film Corporation announced a net profit of $213,360 for the four months' period from August 15, 1935, date of its inception, to December 28th.

Pathe withdrew from production and distribution in January, 1931, in the deal which saw its facilities transferred to RKO-Radio, terms of the transaction specifying that Pathe would not re-engage in production or distribution for a period of five years. This agreement lapsed in January of this year.

Separate from Laboratory and DuPont

Pathe Corporation was formed last August as successor to Pathe Exchange, Inc., under a plan of reorganization, and has engaged principally in the development and printing of motion picture films. It owned a 49 per cent interest in the DuPont-Pathe Film Manufacturing company until last July, when it sold about one-third of its stock holdings to DuPont. It has held an 80 per cent financial interest in First Division through its holding company, First International corporation. Under the new setup Pathe's laboratory and DuPont Film Manufacturing company interest will be separate from the company's motion picture activities.

The magazine, Time, likewise owns an interest in First Division, acquired at the time when it founded its screen production, The March of Time, originally distributed through First Division exchanges. Time still owns that interest, a fact which gave rise in early reports to the belief that the publication was represented in the formation of the new Pathe subsidiary.

Kolbe Is Expected to Be Chairman

Announced intention to conduct Pathe picture activities separately from its laboratory interests is in line with a decision reached by the company shortly after election of Frank F. Kolbe, a partner in Young & Kolbe, financial firm, to the presidency of the company. Mr. Kolbe is expected to become chairman of the board of Premier, which has been set up as a Delaware corporation with a capitalization of $1,000,000. He also is expected to head a new company to be known as the Pathe-DuPont Holding company, formed to take over the Pathe interest in the DuPont Film Manufacturing company and the Bound Brook laboratory.

Robert W. Atkins is executive vice-president of Pathe. Edward L. Alperson, chief film buyer for National Theatres, is expected to be named president of Premier, and Carl Leserman, assistant to Gradwell Sears, western sales manager for Warner, is reported as probable choice for the general sales managership. William T. Powers, attorney for National Theatres, is mentioned as favored for appointment as general counsel.

26 Features Minimum

Production plans contemplate the handling of a minimum of 26 features a year and a series of westerns or action pictures. A Hollywood trip for the purpose of signing independent producers and lining up product is scheduled as one of Mr. Alperson's first activities. It is believed that the first production under the company brand will be ready for release in August.

The Pathe Corporation financial statement covering the period from its formation on Aug. 15, 1935, to Dec. 28, showed a profit, after depreciation, interest charges and provision for Federal income takes, of $213,360. The corporation had a loss of $4,187 from operations for the period, but received non-operating income of $223,383 consisting chiefly of dividends ($210,000) from the DuPont Film Manufacturing company, which was about $73,000 in excess of its equity in the reported earnings of that corporation for the period covered by the report. Cash on hand and in banks was shown as $480,987.

In emphasizing the inaccuracy of early rumors linking his organization with Pathe in the formation of Premier, Roy E. Larsen, president of The March of Time, said, "Since last August when RKO-Radio took over the distribution of the March of Time the number of theatres showing regularly each month's new issue has increased over 500 per cent. In accordance with the long-term deal entered into at the beginning of this season, adjustments to meet marketing conditions are to be made at the end of each 12-month period, but in view of the excellent progress of the first nine months both here and abroad the next year's details have already been completed and approved."

The board of directors of Pathe is expected to take up at its next meeting a plan whereby holders of Pathe stock will receive stock in Premier. No details considered in connection with such a program have been officially discussed.

Hays Announces 'Rogers Week' for All Film Houses

Plans for a Will Rogers Memorial Week, to be held in all motion picture theatres from May 22 to 29, in memory of the screen star, were announced in New York this week by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

All persons in and out of the industry will be urged to participate. The week also will mark the dedication of the Will Rogers Memorial hospital at Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks, formerly known as the N.V.A. Sanitarium and Lodge, which has been presented to the Will Rogers Memorial Commission. Among the purposes of the services in May will be to raise funds to maintain this hospital.

The general committee which will work with Mr. Hays in May include M. H. Aylesworth, R. H. Cochrane, E. W. Hammons, Sidney R. Kent, Carl Laemmle, John E. Otterson, Mary Pickford, Joseph M. Schenck, Nicholas M. Schenck, Spyros Skouras, Leo Spitz, Harry M. Warner and Adolph Zukor.

The executive committee consists of Major Leslie Thompson, chairman; Harold Rodner, Joseph Bernhard, John Balaban, Ed Kuykendall, N. J. Blumberg, Joseph Vogel, Nathan Yamins, Leon Netter, Charles C. Moskowitz, Charles L. O'Reilly, Charles Skouras, Ed Alperson and Harry Brandt.

The promotion and advisory committee are Mark A. Luescher, chairman; Oscar Doob, Robert Gillham, Charles McCarthy, S. Charles Einfeld, Mort Blumenstock, Sam Dembow, Jr., John Dowd, L. Wingate, M. H. Gowdthorpe and William Chambliss.

The distribution committee consists of Felix F. Feist, Abe Montague, Neil F. Agnew, Ned E. Depinet, Albert Warner, J. R. Grainger, John D. Clark and George J. Schaefer.

The exhibitors committee represents a cross-section of the entire country from coast-to-coast including C. H. Buckley, Albany; Arthur Lucas, Atlanta; Samuel W. Pinanski, Boston; A. C. Hayman, Buffalo; H. F. Kincey, Charlotte; Jack Miller, Chicago; I. Libson, Cincinnati; Martin G. Smith, Des Moines; W. S. Butterfield, Detroit; Charles Olson, Indianapolis; E. C. Rhoden, Kansas City; M. A. Lightman, Memphis; H. J. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee; J. B. Clinton, Duluth; Irving Jacocks, New Haven; E. V. Richards, Jr., New Orleans; L. C. Griffith, Oklahoma City; Charles E. Williams, Omaha; Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; John H. Harris, Pittsburgh; J. J. Parker, Portland, Ore.; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis; Harry David, Salt Lake City; Morgan A. Walsh, San Francisco; Hugh W. Bruen, Seattle; Frank R. Durkee, Baltimore, and Morton G. Thalhimer, Richmond.

Campaign headquarters have been established at room 414, 1619 Broadway, with a branch at the offices of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission, 570 Lexington Ave.

TAXATION HANGS ON AS LEGISLATIVE PROBLEM

Alabama Exhibitors Fight 10 Per Cent Tax Proposal; Kansas Special Session Expected

Taxation continues the chief legislative problem of the motion picture, as opposing legislators, and exhibitors, too, fight the issue in the closing days of the few state legislatures still in session:

Alabama owners were fighting vigorously against a 10 per cent tax proposal.

Kansas owners were concerned over a threatened special session to raise funds for social security programs, a 10 per cent theatre tax having been suggested as one source of revenue.

Maryland enacted a one per cent admission tax, to raise $400,000 annually.

Missouri's governor refused to call a special session for new taxation.

New Jersey legislators made a fourth attempt to effect new theatre taxation.

Pennsylvania set a special session for May 4th, but no new theatre tax proposals were expected.

West Virginia film interests are fighting a sales tax.

In New York, distributors continued their fight against the city sales tax, while state legislators in Maryland, Massachusetts and Oklahoma City were attentive to other bills that would affect the industry.

Theatre owners were putting up a vigorous fight in Montgomery, Ala., against the proposed 10 per cent ticket tax. Representatives from all parts of the state attended a hearing there last week. Among them were L. J. Duncan, Lanette; Howard Schussler, Fairfax; Louis Rosenbaum, Florence; T. E. Watson, Montevallo; Mack Jackson, Alexander City; William Griffin, Cullman; T. D. McMinn, Cullman; Roy Martin, Opelika; Lester Neeley, Marion; E. Dixon, Gadsden; G. P. Bonazia, Decatur; Charlie Crute, Huntsville; W. J. Ray, Greenville; Walter Brackin, Union Springs; Glenn Crouch, Troy; C. B. Grimes, Tuscaloosa; L. R. Towne, Selma; R. Kennedy, Birmingham; William N. Wolfson, Montgomery, and Sam Thornhill, Tallahassee.

In Topeka, Governor Landon was expected to call a special session of the Kansas legislature to devise a social security program. The legislative council appointed a special committee to report April 15 on the constitutionality of the means under consideration to bring the state program into line with the federal plan. The question of taxation to finance the program, if it is approved, has arisen. Suggestions have included a sales tax, beer levy and a 10 per cent tax on gross receipts of theatres, which would yield $450,000 annually, according to estimate. Theatre interests prefer the sales tax.

A tax of one per cent on the gross admissions of all amusement enterprises including theatres was passed by the Maryland General Assembly and the measure now goes to Governor Harry W. Nice for signature. If approved, the bill will become effective at once. Proponents of the measure said it would raise $400,000 annually as part of the fund for relief.

Out in Missouri, however, Governor Guy B. Park declined to call a special session to supply relief funds, now depleted. He regarded the calling of an extraordinary session unwise and foolish, and said that legislators' answers to his recent questions on such a session did not indicate that it would result in relief legislation of an effective nature.

The fourth effort to pass a luxury tax measure in Trenton for the state of New Jersey, including a levy on admissions, again met defeat in the legislature by a vote of 27 to 32. Another bill providing for an amusement tax is expected to come up this week.

On the other hand, while a special session of the Pennsylvania legislature was set for May 4 to provide money for both direct relief and flood relief, the amusement industry did not expect to be taxed with additional levies. In a number of areas theatres suffered great losses and, in unaffected parts of the state, theatre owners were expected to help their flood-stricken colleagues.

Pittsburgh distributors, through their legal representatives, announced this week that they did not intend to pay West Virginia's sales tax on film sold there through their offices. The West Virginia tax act imposes a levy on the gross income of corporations doing business in that state. In the film industry, distributors from Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky were affected, but attorneys declared that motion pictures were in interstate commerce and therefore were beyond jurisdiction of state legislation.

In New York a show cause order was granted by the appellate division of the supreme court in connection with the application of two Brooklyn theatres, operated by Harry Brandt, for the right to appeal to the court of appeals at Albany from a decision denying them an injunction to restrain the city of New York and major distributors from collecting the two per cent sales tax. The order is returnable April 17th.

In Baltimore the bill permitting Sunday shows in Howard county was passed by the state legislature.

Commissioner of Public Works William F. Callahan of Boston condemned 120 billboards under regulations that recently went into effect after litigation had been dropped.

A legal battle over a proposed initiative petition of the city of Ada, Okla., on the question of whether Sunday shows should be permitted, reached the state supreme court this week as Iven J. Young, president of the Alva Ministerial Alliance, and others, appealed to the court from an order of Albert Chamberlain, ex-officio clerk, in overruling their protest against an election that was to have been held Tuesday.

AMPA Nominations Made for Annual Election

Gordon S. White and Herbert S. Berg were nominated for reelection as president and treasurer, respectively, by the nominating committee of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers for the annual elections next Thursday.

Others on the slate are: For vice-president, Charles Leonard; secretary, Ralph Lund; directors, the officers and Monroe Greenthal, S. Barret McCormick, Paul Benjamin, Marvin Kirsch, Tom Waller, Milton Silver and George Gerhard; for the trustee vacancy, William Ferguson.

Hal Horne heads an opposition slate, with himself for the presidency.

Anti-Trust Suit at Lincoln Dismissed

Distributors benefited this week in new developments in the attacks being conducted against them in the courts by independent owners on alleged anti-trust charges. The long-pending $440,000 State Theatre Company's suit at Lincoln, Neb., was dismissed; certain distributor defendants in the St. Louis-Fanchon and Marco action were given a further extension to file answers; Kansas City courts denied the independents' application for an injunction on the pending clearance and zoning suit, while independents in New York failed to act in a threatened action against distributors who allegedly force short subjects with features.

The State Theatre Company's $440,000 conspiracy suit against Twentieth Century-Fox, Vitagraph, Universal, Paramount, United Artists, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and RKO Lincoln Theatres Corporation was dismissed this week without prejudice on the petition of the plaintiffs, J. H. Cooper and Robert Livingston.

Paul Good and Loren Laughlin, attorneys for the plaintiffs, said the action had been taken without prejudice, and that they were prepared to move for early trial in federal court of their $1,353,000 suit on the same charges and against the same defendants brought by G. L. Hooper, Topeka; G. O. Monroe, Beatrice, and Cal Bard of Lincoln.

The defendants in the State Theatres' case denied that any settlement had been made out of court.

More Time in St. Louis Case

In New York, all defendants not previously served in the new government-Fanchon and Marco action against Warner, Paramount, RKO and individual defendants were given until April 16 in which to file answers or make motions, under an order signed Monday by Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson in the United States district court.

Attorneys for the defendants conferred in New York this week on developments in the case and on future procedure. A decision is expected to be made soon on whether to file answers or make a new motion on or before April 16th.

Kansas City Fight Carrying On

In Kansas City, Emanuel Rolsky, president of the Independent Theatre Owners, and one of the plaintiffs in the anti-trust suit of nine independent exhibitors against Fox Midwest and major distributors, this week said the plaintiffs in the action were planning to carry the fight on Fox zoning to the limit. On March 28 Judge Merrill E. Otis denied the plaintiffs' application for a temporary injunction on the grounds a clear case had not been presented. The defendants have until April 16 in which to answer.

The suit of the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York against the major distributing companies on the alleged forcing of short subjects will be delayed for a week or two while papers are being drawn to be presented to the court of appeals in Albany following the appellate division's ruling sustaining the city's two per cent tax on film rentals.

Answer to Question No. 11

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 16.—(A) Just what functions do rheostats perform in connection with the light source? (B) Why are carbons copper coated? (C) How may the projectionist obtain information concerning equipment he is not acquainted with? (D) Carbon diameters are quoted in millimeters (mm). Just what part of an inch is one mm.?

Bluebook School Question No. 11 was: (A) Describe correct method of soldering a wire to a binding post. (B) Where should a motor-generator set be located? How should it be supported and why? (C) How does a P. E. cell "see" frequency?

(A) G. E. Doe says, "We don't solder wires to binding posts, Dad. Evidently you meant to say lug, but said binding post instead. [Correct. —F. H. R.] First remove the insulation from a length of the wire-end equal to the depth of the lug hole, less about one-sixteenth of an inch. To do this, cut directly into the insulation, but not quite to the wire, since if the knife blade cut even the smallest bit of a ring around the wire it will act just like a diamond on glass, and may cause the wire to break very easily at that point. Sometimes it does and sometimes it does not. The effect is a little uncertain, but anyhow the wire is weakened.

"Clean the exposed wire thoroughly. By means of a suitable tool, made by bending over the end of a piece of good steel wire and sharpening it, scrape the interior of the lug clean. Next, using a blow torch by preference, having fixed the lug in a vise so that the hole stands upright, apply a bit of rosin, or if the lug is not a small one, use solder flux to both wire end and lug, heating the lug with the torch and turning it upside down to drain out all surplus solder or flux. Return lug to vise and, using solder wire by preference, melt it full of solder. Warm the wire slightly and insert it into the solder-filled hole, holding it perfectly still until the solder has hardened. I usually have a cup of cold water handy, and as soon as the wire is thrust into the solder, have my helper pour water on, whereupon the job is finished."

In his answer to Section A, Dale Danielson cautions against using anything but rosin core solder for inside work. He says, "Never, under any conditions, use anything but rosin core on inside work, especially if it is work on a delicate sound system part.

"Now that is news to me, and I would like additional data on the subject. By that I mean I did not know the use of a good flux was inadmissible on inside work, provided no excess be used. Let's hear from some of you chaps on that point. Also, where did you get that information, Brother Danielson?"

(B) C. Hawkens says, "A motor-generator should be located in a room adjacent to the main projection room, in which position it will be under the immediate care and observation of the projectionist. If in a more inaccessible place it will almost certainly not have the care it should have. It should be so located that there is ample room on all sides, so that a man may work upon it rapidly and conveniently. A suitable drop light should be provided. A support should be provided that will absorb all vibration. This is most cheaply and effectively done by coil springs placed as per Bluebook instructions on page 314."

(C) Barney DiVietti says, "The P. E. cell 'sees' frequency as a series of light and dark spaces. The shorter the time between them, the higher the frequncy of the reproduced sound."

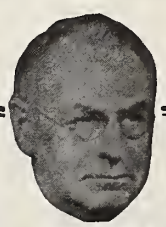
Addresses Scheduled on Trip to Middle West

On April 11 I shall begin a trip which will take me to the spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in Chicago. On the way, however, I shall stop over in several cities and address meetings of projectionists, exhibitors, theatre managers and exchange managers on projection topics.

The first stop will be New Haven, Conn., where I will address a meeting arranged by Local 273, Motion Picture Local Union No. ——, which I believe, intends to invite locals from other nearby cities, also exhibitors, theatre managers and exchange managers. Next comes Springfield, Mass., where I will address a meeting called by Local 186, which, I understand, has invited Holyoke and one or two other cities. Then comes Utica, N. Y., and a meeting of Local 337. I think the locals in three nearby cities will also be on hand.

Then on to Syracuse, N. Y., where the meeting will be called by Local 376, which, I believe, is inviting at least three other locals to attend. In Rochester, N. Y., I shall remain two days, addressing a meeting arranged by Local 253 and possibly other locals.

In Buffalo, Local 253 is arranging the meeting and is inviting Local 121 at Niagara Falls, which I understand will attend in a body. They expect also to have exhibitors, theatre managers and exchange managers present.



In Toronto they don't have shows on Sunday, and they have planned large doings. Hamilton, Ont., projectionists, Local 303, will attend in a body.

After Toronto comes Erie, and Local 621 is having as their guests the locals from Jamestown and Dunkirk, N. Y., Warren, Meadville, Sharon, New Castle, Kittaning and New Kensington, Pa., and Astabula, Ohio.

In Cleveland, where I will remain two days, exhibitors have indicated interest in getting theatre and exchange men together. The National Carbon Company has very graciously offered to provide a hall in one of the big downtown hotels, with refreshments.

Next on my itinerary is Toledo, where the Toledo Amusement Managers' Association, under Martin G. Smith, is arranging for a joint meeting of all exhibitors, managers, exchange managers and projectionists (Local 228), plus theatre men from the surrounding territory.

On the way back from Chicago I have "dates" with the IA unions in South Bend, Ind; Lima, Ohio; Mansfield, Ohio; possibly in Canton and Sharon, in Williamsport and in Harrisburg.

149 Producers in India, Says Annual Publication

Thirty-eight studios and 149 producing companies provide the national motion picture product of India, according to the 1936 Annual Issue of The Moving Picture Monthly of Bombay, of which R. K. Dele is editor. There were 123 features released in 1935, according to a detailed chart and a Production Index. One theatre per 50,000 population is the average of show houses. Many additional details are presented in the departments headed "Matters That Matter" and "Spotlights."

Improvement in product released in recent months has been attended by a definite increase in attendance, writes the editor, paralleling the development in America with the comment that "the public has learned to 'shop' for its entertainment."

Teachers Attend Sound Demonstration

Two thousand of the school music supervisors attending the Music Educators National Conference in New York met last week at the Center Theatre in Rockefeller Center for the showing of a picture describing and demonstrating the latest advances in sound film recording and reproduction, especially ultra-violet light recording, which was described by James Frank, Jr., of the RCA Photophone Manufacturing Company. Music from Max Reinhardt's next picture, "The Eternal Road," and which is being recorded by the ultra-violet light, was heard in public for the first time.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS SHOULD RAISE ADMISSIONS, DECLARE DISTRIBUTORS

KRS Action Checked "Coupon" Arrangements with Other Businesses and Cut Rate Tickets, Says Annual Report

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Discussing attempts on the part of a certain number of exhibitors to reduce prices in the last twelve months, the annual report of the Kinematograph Renters' Society, written by Secretary Frank Hill, says:

"Would it not be to the industry's ultimate benefit for producers, renters and exhibitors to strive for quality rather than quantity and would not exhibitors particularly be doing a service to themselves and the industry if they also sought ways and means whereby admission prices could be increased, however slight that increase might be?

"There might not be any necessity for increasing the minimum prices of admission, but a readjustment of seat values might very well bring about the desired result."

In further references to this point, Mr. Hill expresses the view that higher admissions must come "if higher standards of production and exhibition are to be maintained and improved upon," and suggests that serious thought should be given to the problem now that "the country's trade is definitely on the upgrade."

The report, recording the opposition of the KRS to the practice of "coupon" admission by arrangements with manufacturers of proprietary articles, and also to the practice of issuing "privilege" tickets at reduced rates to railway employees and others, emphasizes that KRS action was successful in checking these practices and indicates that further action may be necessary to compel general observance of the three hours 15 minutes program limit. It concedes that this problem cannot be solved "by the Society barring from trading perhaps a large number of exhibitors in various parts of the country," but indicates that progress has been made toward a solution by other means.

Gaumont-British Rejoins KRS

At the annual meeting of the Society, John Maxwell, who retired from the presidency in favor of D. E. Griffiths of First National, after two years of office, referred to the "booking circuit" controversy as a major problem of the year and instanced the value of "the cohesion of the members" as the deciding factor which led to termination of this dispute by Gaumont-British withdrawing its action against the Society.

It later was announced that Gaumont-British had rejoined the Society. As an inevitable sequel, the withdrawal of the resignation of 20th Century-Fox may be expected at any moment. With this event, the KRS again will become once again a body including 100 per cent of representative distributing companies operating in this country.

This fact undoubtedly has been duly noted at the headquarters of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, where a very definite degree of embarrassment exists as a result of the recent card vote on the London & Home Counties amendment to rules, at the annual meeting, which has made it one of the functions of the CEA Council to fix a maximum price for films and to "secure that rentals paid by members shall not exceed the maximum."

The power of the CEA over its members, in a disciplinary sense, is limited to expulsion. It is now, presumably, legally within the authority of the Council to throw out any exhibitor discovered paying more than 40 per cent for his programs—accepting that figure as the generally favored maximum.

As a matter of commonsense as against theory, exhibitors will continue to bid against each other for big films. If the CEA, as an association, attempts to enforce the price regulation policy, it will come bang up against the KRS, fresh from its victory over G-B and, as just pointed out, presenting a solid front of distributors anxious for more rather than less from the box office.

The interesting point is whether the Council can evade the new powers so inconveniently entrusted to it. The left-wingers, from London and elsewhere, can be depended upon to force the issue. If they get a Council majority and an "official maximum price" is stated, there is danger of a serious split in the CEA. The wide division of opinion which exists has been shown already in criticisms of the means by which the amendment to Rules was carried; it is claimed that the card vote of 351 to 71 is unrepresentative of the whole association and a referendum already is being asked. There is, in short, an obvious lack of unanimity in regard to a policy which depends on absolute agreement to have even a chance against the massed strength of distributors.

Color and More Color

Color continues to provide a leading news item. J. H. Whitney, over here for the Grand National among other things, announced two Technicolor features to cost $500,000, to be made at London Films studio at Denham, one for Pioneer and one for Selznick International.

Harmonicolor Films, a new company, had a luncheon for the press and showed a two-reeler at the Curzon which revealed this two-color process as one yielding effects which at least were not open to the charge of garishness. Claimed for Harmonicolor, a French process, is that it calls for no special studio lighting and that its printing cost is only slightly greater than that of black and white; the film is colored on both sides and demands some increase in projection lighting, but no optical changes in the projector.

Mr. Whitney's general view on color may be summarized as a belief in eventual abandonment of black and white for all supers, providing a color output of ten per cent of the total and this ten per cent composed entirely of big films. Like other recent visitors from America, he cited "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" as the subject responsible for a big slide to color on the part of Hollywood studios.

Woolf - Universal Holding Company

GCS Corporation, Ltd., formed with a capital of £1,225,000 (1,175,000 preferred cumulative preference £1 shares and 1,000,000 deferred ordinaries of one shilling value) is the holding company which it was announced would acquire from the Portal-Rank-Lindenberg-Farrow syndicate its interest in Universal. The new corporation's formal objects also include acquirement of 90 per cent, or more, of the issued capital of the C. M. Woolf company, General Film Distributors, Ltd.

Censorship Endorsed by Churches

The notable feature about a congratulatory visit paid this week to Lord Tyrrell, president of the Board of Film Censors, by a deputation from the Public Morality Council was a statement from the Bishop of London, official spokesman of the Council, that that body preferred the BBFC to a statutory censorship authority from whose decision there would be no appeal.

It is not long since the name of the Archbishop of Canterbury, official head of the English church, was associated with influential efforts to set up a state censorship.

Sir Thomas Malone, representing the (Catholic) Archbishop of Westminster; Free Church delegates and nominees of such welfare bodies as the YMCA and the Mothers' Union were in the deputation.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended April 4, 1936, from 109 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $966,525, a decrease of $125,825 from the total for the preceding week ended March 28, 1936, when 110 theatres in 18 large cities aggregated $1,092,350.

Dear Herald:

Hurrah, hurrah, for the snow is all gone
And the robins are scratching for worms on the lawn;
The blackbirds are singing their songs in the trees
And everyone's happy in this soft summer breeze.

Yes, sir, we have crawled out of our dugout and have looked madam Spring right square in the face without batting an eyelash and thanked her for giving Old Man Winter a kick in the pants that sent him up north to grow up with the country. We never did like him anyhow.

It is very likely that most people like musical shows, and those who do will surely like "Follow the Fleet," but personally we are not overly strong for dancing, but then that macht nicht aus to RKO. Those of you who like dancing will surely like the dancing of Fred Astaire and Gingers Rogers, for they know how to dance.

Our interest in the picture was largely centered on Harriet Hilliard and Randolph Scott, and this caused us to wonder why we don't see them oftener in pictures. When the critics are rating a picture according to the beauty of the actors they should not overlook Harriett Hilliard, and when you hear her sing "I Am Here But Where Are You?" you won't overlook her either. If beauty has anything to do with it, Miss Hilliard should be wearing the blue ribbon, and our judgment is too that Randolph Scott should rank well up to the top of actors. RKO can justly feel proud of "Follow the Fleet," the same as they did "Top Hat."

Then, again, we saw a pretty good picture at the Moon the other night. It was a railroad picture and a considerable number of folks are interested in railroads, some financially and some not.

George O'Brien and Irene Ware were responsible for making this pretty good entertainment. George was the son of his father and his father was general superintendent of a trans-continental railroad and George was his rubber stamp clerk, and George didn't like his job, there wasn't enough action in it, so he quit his job and went out to hunt a new one.

The Blake railroad was a little jerkwater line similar to the Spearfish canyon line in the Black Hills of South Dakota and George made application to the Blake line for a job. The superintendent of the line was a lady, Miss Irene Ware, and she gave him the job of Superintendent of Maintenance, otherwise known as "Track Walker."

From here on business began to pick up. George and the engineer and fireman of the Blake line stole a trans-continental engine and rushed to Denver to beat some crooks from stealing the Blake line, and they got there just in time to head them off, and George bought the line and afterwards sold it to the trans-continental and the superintendent of the trans-continental (which was his father) suggested to George and Irene that they should live in Chicago, which seemed agreeable to both of them, and our guess is, from the action, that they were married. It is a somewhat improbable story but it makes very good entertainment, if you don't digest it too closely. Railroad stories are always interesting, and "Whispering Smith" is a pretty good picture.

We don't know how much they are paying love-song crooners to croon over the radio, but, anyhow, our radio has a switch on it.

Maybe you don't know Harold Schooner of the Mazada theatre at Aurora, Nebraska, but that's probably because you haven't traveled Nebraska very much. Harold was born in the full of the moon on Friday the thirteenth and that is likely what makes him such a good theatre operator, and his reputation reaches from away back yonder to clear out there. Harold is a constant reader of the HERALD, and it is from this source that he acquires such a knowledge of the business. He says he is going to remodel his theatre and put in a new front, but we can't see any use in doing that for it is a pretty good looking place as it is. Anyhow, he wants us to renew his subscription to the HERALD for him. His check is further proof of that request, and we are going to have it done, too. We wish Harold would stop staying out so late of nights.

But speaking of Kansas we are reminded to say that when the weather settles and the roads get so we can travel we are going down to the "Sunflower" state and visit those Jayhawkers, and we hope the boys will have the cows milked and the chores all done by the time we get there, and we hope also that they will treat us as nice as they did when we were down there before, and, if they do, that will be plenty good enough. The facts are that you can't beat those Jayhawkers very much.

There ought to be a poem dedicated to Kansas, but we can't write it for we can't find any word to rhyme with Kansas, although we have been wracking (what we call our brain) to find it, but—

If you should ever want to go
Into some state where things are great,
This much we think that you should know
That "Bleeding Kansas" is the state.

When we first came to Nebraska we could go out and kill eight or ten jack rabbits in an evening, but we were told yesterday that they paid the alphatbetical boys $135 for killing six of 'em. Gosh, but jackrabbit meat is getting high.

Somewhere out in Nebraska is a town called Elwood, and Elwood has a theatre operated by J. M. Reynolds, and J. M. is known as a popular theatre operator, which is probably due to his constant reading of the HERALD. J. M. didn't want his subscription to the HERALD to expire so he sent us a check to take care of the matter for him. J. M. is a constant attendant at Sunday School but somehow he always goes on Wednesdays, the Elwood folks are funny that way. Thanks, J. M., your check will be sent in.

A letter we have just received from Bob Ballantyne of the Scott-Ballantyne Theatre Equipment Co., Omaha, inclines us to believe that he is still sober as usual. He tells us that Regina Molseed, secretary of the Film Board, says that she wants us to remember that this is Leap Year, and if she wants to lead somebody to the altar it will be none of our doggone business. Regina is somewhat headstrong that way. We hope she is a little different from Lola Gentry, secretary of the Film Board at Los Angeles, and Mildred Early of the HERALD office at Hollywood. Bob says he wants us to come down to Omaha and see him, but we'll betcha that Regina suggested that. Thanks, Bob, for your check.

"When the moon comes over the mountain,
I'll be alone with my memories of you";
And when the snow covers up our lawn fountain,
We'll be out with our snow shovel, too.

In closing (and Ernie says there must be a closing) we hope that Charlie Ruggles, Edward Everett Horton, Dick Powell, Stuart Erwin, Eddie Quillan and a lot more of the boys out in Hollywood will remember that this is Leap Year, as Regina suggested, and while the pathway to the altar will look smooth and strewn with American Beauty roses, they should remember that just beyond the altar are a lot of pitfalls, but then, what if there are, Reno isn't very far away.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Beacon

BIG BOY RIDES AGAIN: Guinn "Big Boy" Williams—not so good. Does not compare with "Cowboy Holiday" from same star. Started out like it would be a fine picture with excellent story, etc., but it turned out to be no good. Even the cbildren complained. Williams lost what following be made with "Cowboy Holiday" and "Powder Smoke Range." He was absolutely "no go" in this. And it looks like he could afford a haircut once in a while. This, I hope, is my last from this star in many a day.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Chesterfield

FALSE PRETENSES: Sidney Blackmer, Irene Ware.—This picture is very slow and draggy and does not even come up to program fare. There is decidedly too much talking and very little action. It does, at no time, keep the audience entirely interested. I played tbis picture on a "Dish night" and received very poor comment on same.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

HAPPINESS C. O. D.: Donald Meek, Irene Ware—A fairly entertaining program picture that can be placed on the weekend of a double feature program. There are many laughs and interesting situation accompanied by some good acting in spots. Exhibitors can book this picture without any unfavorable comments from their patrons.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Tbeatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

LADY IN SCARLET, THE: Reginald Denny, Patricia Farr.—A very good program picture with a fair mystery angle. There is comedy, suspense and a fairly good plot aided by some acting by the leads.—Tbeodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Columbia

CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS, THE: Richard Arlen, Charlotte Wynters—An adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's famous novel, this picture will never become as popular as the book, due to its mediocre production. There is some suspense, romance and action which keeps this production in the program class.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS, THE: Richard Arlen, Charlotte Wynters—This is a fine program picture. A good story, clean and entertaining, and the stars fine. The whole cast very good. Moral lesson and we should have more like this to get people coming back to the show that have been driven away on account of the rot in pictures. Played March 27-28.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

CASE OF THE MISSING MAN, THE: Roger Pryor, Joan Perry—A fair program picture tbat will do very well on a double feature program. It has action, suspense and good comedy. Exhibitors can play this one without any fear.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT: Peter Lorre, Edward Arnold—Played this with Cash Night and did average business. Played March 7.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborbood patronage.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT: Peter Lorre, Edward Arnold, Marian Marsh—A very well done production with splendid acting and a marvelous story. This picture has but one fault. It is very morbid and has very little comedy. Best suited for class houses where splendid acting and story can be best appreciated. Played this picture over a weekend to satisfactory results.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

DANGEROUS INTRIGUE: Ralph Bellamy, Joan Perry, Gloria Shea—A simply written and produced little story that is, as one patron described it, "crackerjack entertainment." Our patrons are beginning to recognize Gloria Shea and comment upon her pleasing performances. Ralph Bellamy does not appear as handsome as usual, much to the chagrin of a host of feminine admirers, especially middle-aged matrons.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

DESERT VENGEANCE: Buck Jones—An old reissue but a pretty good western with enough action to satisfy the bargain hunters who want two pictures on weekend programs.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ESCAPE FROM DEVIL'S ISLAND: Victor Jory, Florence Rice, Norman Foster—A good picture with a Devil's Island background that is a little different than the ordinary. There is action, romance and good plot to bring this one above the ordinary level. Played this one over a weekend to favorable comment.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Tbeatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

ESCAPE FROM DEVIL'S ISLAND: Victor Jory, Florence Rice—Better than they have been coming from Columbia. This one shows some care in directing and has a good story. It has action and the drama carries along to a logical ending. It is a good weekend picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GALLANT DEFENDER: Charles Starrett, Joan Perry—This well produced western of average entertainment quality meant little as a box-office attraction due to its cast weakness. Charles Starrett is a personable young actor who seems to please our patrons, yet will not draw them to the theatre.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

GRAND EXIT: Edmund Lowe, Ann Sothern—A good program picture that moves along at a rapid pace. With a fire insurance background, some very good fire scenes and nice acting by Lowe and Sothern, Columbia has turned out a good program picture with the necessary snap to bring it above the ordinary class.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GRAND EXIT: Ann Sothern, Edmund Lowe—A very good program picture. Very interesting story and well acted. Gave satisfaction on a double bill, but it would stand alone as a good feature. Played March 25-26.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Micb. City and country patronage.

GUARD THAT GIRL: Robert Allen, Florence Rice—Pretty good show, ran as other half of a double bill and it pleased the bargain hunters.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HELL SHIP MORGAN: George Bancroft, Ann Sothern—This is another that shows crude directing and not much story. Just another picture that will set the exhibitor on his way to the relief role. When Columbia makes them bad, they are bad.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK: Jean Arthur, Herbert Marshall—A swell little picture that the audience liked very much. It was cleverly directed, good story and fine portrayal of the roles.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LONE WOLF RETURNS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Gail Patrick—A most entertaining little film with smart dialogue and clever incidents. The suave Lone Wolf would be a favorite with patrons should more films be made and he appear in more stories. Some clever comedy by Robert Emmet O'Connor as the Lone Wolf's valet. Played this one on Bank Night and did not have a bad comment. Running time, 67½ minutes. Played March 25-26.—Frank Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MUSIC GOES 'ROUND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Harry Richman—The title gives the wrong impression, and as a result, many people were disappointed as they expected to see something fast and hot; on the contrary, it was refreshing and soothing. The songs were beautiful, photography excellent, and singing superb. If you are in a locality where patrons appreciate good music and singing, forget Farley and Riley and their "Round and Round" music when you exploit. Played March 8-10.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

ONE WAY TICKET: Lloyd Nolan, Peggy Conklin—Columbia has a knack of turning out very good program pictures. This one can be classed as "good action fare." Acting by the leads is very well done. Story moves along at a rapid pace to a build-up climax. Played this one on a double feature to favorable comment.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theature Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

PARTY WIRE: Jean Arthur—In going over our film date book the other day we came across this picture whicb we failed to report upon when we played it montbs ago. Were it not for the fact that this film is so strikingly original and highly entertaining we would not send in such a delayed review, but such a commendable picture deserves a recommendation no matter how long it may have been released. We seldom play a program picture which meets witb the unanimous approval of every patron and the house staff, but this simple little story received such a response.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

REVENGE RIDER: Tim McCoy, Billie Seward—Below average western picture. Did a nice weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SHE COULDN'T TAKE IT: George Raft, Joan Bennett, Walter Connolly—A very well done production with very good acting by all concerned. Dialogue and plot move along at a very rapid pace with Raft, Bennett and Connolly very well cast. Columbia has helped itself greatly in the production of this picture. Book it by all means.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

TOO TOUGH TO KILL: Victor Jory, Sally O'Neill—The corpus delicti is the exhibitor that has to run this type. Reaching for heroics tough on tbe exhibitor and tougher on the audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

First Division

JAVA HEAD: Anna May Wong, Elizabeth Allan, John Loder—A very splendid picture from this company. Good plot, very fine acting and a real story makes this topnotch entertainment. With the proper exploitation, this picture will result in good grosses. "Exhibitors, beware!" This picture is of the dramatic type; therefore, do not expect too mucb action from the same. But in those houses that desire class entertainment, I recommend this one highly.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RED WAGON: Charles Bickford, Raquel Torres—This picture is classed as a "special" by this releasing unit. I wish, at this time, to take exception to that classification. I rate this one no better than a "poor program picture," little action, very draggy and exceptionally poor acting and also poor direction. Foreign product has still a long way to go to even hold a candle to production as it done here.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

ROAD TO RUIN, THE: Helen Foster—This picture is splendid for exploitation. As far as the story, acting and picture itself, I cannot speak very highly for same. This exchange supplied me with suitable lobby display and with a little effort on my part, it went over very big. I played this picture midweek to two splendid days of business. "Showmen, attention!" You will be surprised what a little exploitation and effort will mean to your box office.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

First National

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—A good picture that pleased. Stuart Erwin did well, also the grounded flyer who was the victim of the crack-up. It was full of action and the usual feud between Jim and Pat so everyone was satisfied. It didn't draw as well as it should have, due no doubt to a big crowd at Bank Night the preceding night.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

I FOUND STELLA PARISH: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—A real heart-interest drama. Sybil Jason is cute (as the expression goes) because she is not asked to do too much; she is, for the time being, not another Shirley Temple. Ian Hunter does fine work in this that is worthy of mention. Kay Francis is at her best. This had some extra drawing power for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—A nice picture that went over fine. Running time, 109 minutes. Played March 13-12.—Beatty & Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Town and country patronage.

SONG OF THE SADDLE: Dick Foran, Alma Lloyd—Saturday patrons are harder to please than any other class, but they seem to like this type western better than those that aren't musical or at least with one or two songs. Don't know what we will do if the major producers stop making westerns—the small companies can't make the westerns these larger ones can. This type draws all classes of patronage. This one pleased okay. Running time, 57 minutes. Played March 27-28.—Frank Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR, THE: Paul Muni, Josephine Hutchinson—One of the best pictures that we have run for quite a while. The patrons who really appreciate worthwhile pictures will turn out and while we could have seated a lot more the picture did enough to pay out and it made boosters out of the people who can really boost. It won't hurt you to run this picture and it will certainly please your patrons, if you can get them in to see it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR, THE: Paul Muni, Josephine Hutchinson—We've long tried to tell our people what a fine actor Paul Muni is, and this grand picture sold him 100 per cent. Did only a fair business because we played it too early to get any benefit from the world of newspaper publicity it has since had. Expect to play it another day. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 15-16.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

GB Pictures

EVERGREEN: Jessie Matthews, Sonnie Hale—This was the first foreign made picture we have ever shown. Everything considered, it went over beyond my greatest expectations. Some of the men, especially from across the sea, told me it was the best picture they have seen here; and everyone liked Jessie Matthews herself. How could they help it, I ask you? I overheard at least a hundred remarks: "Boy, what a team she would make with Fred Astaire!" How about it, GB and RKO? You'd have the box-office champion of all time! Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 28.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FIRST A GIRL: Jessie Matthews, Sonnie Hale—A very satisfactory picture, and pleased all our patrons. The dancing and singing numbers by Miss Matthews, supported by strikingly beautiful choruses, were especially fine. Lots of good comedy enlived the production. We did better the second night than the first.—N. W. Huston, Liberty Theatre, Columbus, Kan. General patronage.

Invincible

TANGO: Marian Nixon, Chick Chandler—A very good program picture that certainly did surprise me. I was in a spot for a week end picture and this one was the only one available for me. I expected the worse when I booked it, but after viewing same was very pleasantly surprised. The picture had good comedy, action and very few dull spots. There is also a musical angle which makes this picture good program entertainment.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Liberty

DIZZY DAMES: Marjorie Rambeau, Lawrence Gray—A very slow moving picture that entertained in spots only. Can rate this one no better than "just passable entertainment" with nothing to get excited about.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

OLD HOMESTEAD, THE: Lawrence Gray, Mary Carlisle, Fuzzy Knight—This picture is fairly well done. There is comedy, romance and some good acting. The only fault I could find with the production was that it did not keep a rapid pace, going off on tangents at times, due, I believe, to poor direction. Nevertheless, we can rate this as "fair program fare." I played this picture over the weekend to satisfaction.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Mascot

HARMONY LANE: Douglass Montgomery, Evelyn Venable—A splendid picture from any angle. Clean and entertaining. Story fine and acting extra good. Gave 100 per cent satisfaction here. We played it as a benefit for the PTA, and they sold a lot of tickets besides at the box office. Played March 19.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

STREAMLINE EXPRESS: Victor Jory, Evelyn Venable—A nicely done production which has a touch of almost everything. This picture can boast comedy, action and romance nicely knit together. Jory and Venable are a very splendid team and their acting is highly commendable. Exhibitors can book this picture without any fear.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

STREAMLINE EXPRESS: Victor Jory, Evelyn Venable—Pretty weak. Will do O. K. on double bill. Vince Barnett is only good part of the picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AGE OF INDISCRETION: Paul Lukas, Madge Evans, Helen Vinson—This is one picture that's well worth playing. I personally enjoyed this picture. Thought it should have been a special. Play it by all means.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

AH, WILDERNESS!: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Edic Linden—A very good show with a capable cast that pleased an average or maybe a little better than average midweek crowd. The oldtime scenes were enjoyed by the older patrons and Wallace Berry is a good bet in this town, so we were satisfied.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

AH, WILDERNESS!: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore—Positively not for children. This is a very poor show to have Wallace Beery in it. This is not a special by any means. Played March 22.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BONNIE SCOTLAND: Laurel and Hardy—Fine. Pleased almost everyone. Silly in spots but why not? Hope "The Bohemian Girl' is as good. Why can't better titles be given these Laurel and Hardy productions?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural partronoge.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell—Fine picture. There's not much use of my reporting this late, because everyone knows it is very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

EVELYN PRENTICE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Powell at his best. Court scene in last reel is exceptional. This picture is handicapped by its title, which means nothing to the average theatregoer. Seemed to please everybody.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Town and country patronage.

EXCLUSIVE STORY: Franchot Tone, Madge Evans—A very good show with plenty of action and story. Stuart Erwin rates high with me and my patrons and he does a swell job in this and most pictures that he makes. It drew average business and pleased the patrons who see them all. Play it and you won't need to worry about the comments; they'll all like it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LAST OF THE PAGANS: Mala, Lotus Long—This picture caused us more headaches than anything we have run this winter. Our Bank Night crowd simply didn't go for it and I couldn't blame them much. One picture like this is enough for a while and "Eskimo" did business, but the beauty of the tropical islands of California just don't seem to appeal to my Patrons.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LAST OF THE PAGANS: Mala, Lotus Long—Remember "Eskimo" of two years ago? If your patrons liked that one, this one will please them for, notwithstanding the vast difference in the settings of the two pictures, the two are in many respects remarkably similar, and both gave us good results. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 20-21.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—Although this picture is brutal and cruel it is a sure box office. Business good. Roads and weather bad. Running time, 130 minutes. Played March 2-4.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Town and country patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone—What more can be said about this great classic? Played March 10-12.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Brothers, Kitty Carlisle, Allan Jones—Another hit from MGM. The Marx Brothers at their best. This picture good for any spot in the week. Tune hit "Alone" now quite popular, so drew quite a few music lovers. Their machine gun type patter keeps patrons in stitches and many came back twice. Play this up big. Running time, 108 minutes. Played March 27-28.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

PERFECT GENTLEMAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Cicely Courtneidge—Now Metro has one that should stay on the shelf. This one is the biggest flop in years for Metro. Frank Morgan is just too silly for words. Plenty of adverse comment. Played March 25.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

RENDEZVOUS: William Powell, Rosalind Russell—A very good show, only a poor title which kills the show to begin with. If you have a way to get them in, then you can be assured that they will be satisfied with the entertainment because it's a spy story with lots of thrills. Running time, 10 reels. Played March 15-16.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RENDEZVOUS: William Powell, Rosalind Russell—Splendid picture fare, but one which flopped in a big way in this town. Those who came out liked it and said so, but it certainly meant nothing at this box office. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 22-24.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Excellent picture in every way. Personally did not think it as good as "Naughty Marietta." Some of our patrons were of the same opinion, while others thought it better. A few feet of color at the lake would have added to the beautiful scene. Played March 22-23.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—There comes a time in every showman's life when he cocks up his spirits and proudly presents a show like this. People raved and raved and then some more. Every bit as good as "Naughty Marietta" and many liked it better. Jeanette MacDonald is the only actress I know of who is good looking and can sing and act well at the same time. Played March 29-31.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy Even better than "Naughty Marietta" and better B. O. MGM pictures seemed to be better lighted and photographed. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 15-17.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Calif. General patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—One of the finest screen productions of all time. We had splendid response from schools on this and as a consequence business was above what it would normally have been on this type picture. Running time, 126 minutes. Played March 8-10.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—A picture that anyone should be proud to run, but you'll have plenty of room for your crowd because costume pictures simply don't draw in the smaller situations. We did enough to pay expenses and have some left but in all fairness to Metro this picture should do standout business because it is full of entertainment.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—A great picture. Ronald Colman's best. Isabel Jewell's bit, as the little seamstress, outstanding. Running time, 126 minutes. Played January 12-13.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

WHIPSAW: Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Excellent drama, filled with suspense; best Suday business in months. Played March 22-23.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

WHIPSAW: Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—We like to see Miss Loy wear pretty clothes, but she played the part in this perfectly. Tracy also good. A picture you can show on your best days. It's above the program type. Played March 18-19.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

WHIPSAW: Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—About as clever a battle of wits between the detectives and the jewel thieves as has been seen in some time. We ran this on a doube bill with Gene Autry in "Sagebrush Troubadour," and no doubt "Whipsaw' did its full share to give us an above average Sunday and Monday.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WIFE VS. SECRETARY: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy—I call this a good program picture but not a special. Story thin and too many stars. All good, but Jean Harlow stole the picture. It is good clean entertainment. Gave satisfaction to the majority but all of these stars have bone better pictures. That's what the customers said. Played March 15-16.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

Monogram

HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER, THE: Norman Foster, Charlotte Henry—A very well done program picture. In trying to abide by the demand for clean pictures, exhibitors will do themselves justice to play this one. It is a simple story of simple people, very splendidly acted and directed. Churches and schools will certainly back you in this picture.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

NUT FARM, THE: Wallace Ford—This picture was rated as a "special' by this organization, but I rate it as especially terrible. I tried to pass this one up, but finally had to play it. There is nothing good that I can say about this one. Everything is to the bad.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

WOMEN MUST DRESS: Minna Gombell, Gavin Gordon—Fair program picture. Better on dual bill.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ANYTHING GOES: Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman—The best Crosby picture in a long time. Plenty of what it takes to make satisfactory entertainment and our patrons turned out well for a midweek showing and enjoyed the picture immensely. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 18-19.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BRIDE COMES HOME, THE: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—A very good picture and one that was really enjoyed by better than average business. Claudette Colbert is a good drawing card in this town and she can handle this type of story very nicely. Play it and satisfy your comedy hungry patrons. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie—Another supposedly super-colossal special from Paramount, but positively terrible at the box-office. The Paramount releases for the past couple of months have been so poor that I would have been better off paying for them and shelving 'em. What's the difference?—Played Mar. 17-18.—Oscar A. Brothman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

DESIRE: Marlene Dietrich, Gary Cooper—Very entertaining, well directed. Dietrich's best. Cooper fine. Good for any day of week.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Calif. General patronage.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE: Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins—Substituted this for one of Paramount's weak sisters and did excellently. Played March 13.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—A very good picture that pleased a better than average crowd but we didn't make any money. It was a lot of fun and everyone enjoyed it so we believe that it will do business and deliver entertainment.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY: William Boyd, Paula Stone —Our first Hopalong western but it was a western and the old big hat boys sure did like the action. Hope the rest are as good but I understand that this is about the best of the four that are released.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—These Hopalongs please them all. Better than the usual run of westerns. However, I think the "The Eagle's Brood" is the best one of them all. Played March 21.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

KLONDIKE ANNIE: Mae West, Victor McLaglen —Whoever said that Mae was through is all wet. She comes to town in the best story yet. Our patrons liked her role in this one better than any other. What Hearst saw objectionable in this one is beyond me. It's no worse than any other she's made. Business above average with a real Oklahoma sandstorm at its worst. Don't make the mistake of trying to sell this one as being "hot" 'cause you might have some to be disappointed. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 22-24.—Frank Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST OUTPOST, THE: Cary Grant, Claude Rains, Gertrude Michael—We booked this picture with some misgiving after reading key city criticisms which had been more than unkind, even though we learned long ago not to take such reviews too seriously. It was pleasant to discover they were again wrong. This picture is sound entertainment of an unpretentious sort and the fact that it was built around several clips from old adventure films does not detract from its amusement value. Our only regret was its box office weakness due to a nameless cast.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

NEVADA: Larry Crabbe, Kathleen Burke—A well produced and acted western that is a major product in every respect. As part of a double program it received a good audience response.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

ROSE OF THE RANCHO: John Boles, Gladys Swarthout—This is just a programmer. It has some music which helps it but outside of that there isn't a thing in its box office draw. Boles, the singing star of "Rio Rita," is the best plug. Play him up. Remind the ladies of "Only Yesterday." Running time, 82 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

SO RED THE ROSE: Margaret Sullavan, Randolph Scott—Not a bad picture, but another floppo! Played March 8-9.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

TWO FISTED: Lee Tracy, Grace Bradley—There was really a lot of fun in this picture and it did very well as an Owl Show on Saturday night.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TWO FOR TONIGHT: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett —Sixty minutes of unfunny hokum devoted to shooting seltzer around. It wouldn't even have been funny as a two-reeler. Played March 3-4.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Gail Patrick, Dean Jagger—Better than average western and good enough to do extra business on weekend bills. Paramount usually have good settings for their westerns and you can't beat their photography.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Puritan

BORDER CABALLERO: Tim McCoy, Lois January—Plenty of action in this one. Pretty fair show. However, the running time is 55 minutes instead of 64 as listed in the Release chart. Running time, 55 minutes.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage. (The running time of "Border Caballero" has been changed from 64 minutes to approximately 59, according to the Puritan home office.—Ed.)

RKO Radio

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—A knockout for weekend showing in small town situations. This pulled and pleased, so everyone was satisfied. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 20-21.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Robust entertainment that displayed strong box office vitality and pleased all who saw it. Exceptionally good for any date and every type of patronage.—J. W. Noah. New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

FANG AND CLAW: Frank Buck—Another of the popular very much animated travelogues, which in many respects is superior to previous releases of this nature. This pulled quite well and pleased. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 6-7.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FANG AND CLAW: Frank Buck—Drew better than any picture for the past two months. That is the answer to the question of its appeal to our people. Played March 7.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont. Del. Small town patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—A mighty fine picture. Pronounced by our patrons as this team's best. Ginger came near stealing the picture, though no actor on the screen has a thing on Fred Astaire. It is one grand entertainment and we did a good business (for this town) on it. All the cast fine. Direction perfect. Played March 22-24.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

FRECKLES: Carol Stone, Tom Brown—Good show, but business very poor. Basketball over the radio kept them home for all final championships. Good comments. Played March 20-21.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HOT TIP: James Gleason, Zasu Pitts—A fairly amusing picture. Zasu Pitts not quite so funny as she has been in some of her productions. Just an average comedy. Played February 22.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

I DREAM TOO MUCH: Lily Pons, Henry Fonda—A splendid production, but one that had no appeal at the box office in this situation. However, those who came generally found it fine entertainment. A grand picture personality, this Lily Pons, and a voice that is a revelation. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 4-5.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

IN PERSON: Ginger Rogers, George Brent—I think it is mostly the plot that is the matter with this one. When an actress plays the part of being an actress, it seems to gum up the whole works. We may know that the play is all make-believe, but we do not like to be reminded of it every minute or two. I would say that it should give the satisfaction of an average program picture. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 27-28.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

JALNA: Ian Hunter, Kay Johnson—No box office for us. Too much talk and no action. Just another picture. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 13-15.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Town and country patronage.

LADY CONSENTS, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall, Margaret Lindsay—A good program picture. Acting excellent by all three. Played March 20.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Dorothy Wilson, Preston Foster—This picture probably will or has been liked in larger towns, but it flopped for me. What's wrong, RKO? You are not delivering like I thought you would. Hope the present year product improves over "She," "Pompeii," "Becky Sharp," "Break of Hearts," and a few others.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF PETER GRIMM, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Helen Mack—A most unusual picture of supernatural theme. Used as a preview showing, this clicked well with patrons. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 6-7.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

FEDERAL AGENT: Bill Boyd, Irene Ware, Don Alvarado—Republic would do well to eliminate the Winchester productions from its program as they do not compare favorably wtih the pictures made by the home studio. This latest Bill Boyd action drama is a slight improvement over his previous films for this company and will get by as a Saturday booking. Boyd's fans of the old days were disappointed in his latest appearance, and they are becoming fewer with each new picture. This was part of a double program with "Laughing Irish Eyes."—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

FORBIDDEN HEAVEN: Charlotte Henry, Charles Farrell—A very slow moving picture from this exchange with really no credit to the stars. Acting, direction and plot are very slow.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

FORBIDDEN HEAVEN: Charlotte Henry, Charles Farrell—Played on a Bargain Night picture. Just about worth 10 cents to your customers if they are not too particular. Played March 24.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

FORCED LANDING: Esther Ralston, Onslow Stevens, Sidney Blackmer—A mystery picture with an aeronautical background that can be classed as "good program fare." Action and suspense are fairly well handled with a good performance from the leads.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

LAUGHING IRISH EYES: Phil Regan, Evalyn Knapp, Walter C. Kelly—A good follow-up to "The Spanish Cape Mystery" and "Hitch Hike Lady." The first half of this clever musical drama has a slight tendency toward slowness but the pace is soon speeded up until there is high tension at the end when Phil Regan does the expected and wins in a prize fight with K. O. Schultz. The music and fine singing of Phil Regan are the real substance of the film but there is a naive charm about the whole picture. An oldtimer who makes a brief hut welcome appearance is none other than Betty Compson, who is still as lovely and capable as ever. The sets and photography are first rate but the sound is only fair.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

HITCH HIKE LADY: Alison Skipworth, Mae Clarke—A good program picture that moves right along. The leads are very nicely cast with good acting by all concerned. The direction of this picture is noticeahly well done. Played this picture over a week-end to favorahle comment.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RED RIVER VALLEY: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—Drew extra well and pleased the Friday and Saturday crowd 100 per cent. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 13-14.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

SAGEBRUSH TROUBADOUR, THE: Gene Autry, Barbara Pepper—Gene Autry and his pal, Smiley Burnette, are making westerns that please. There is something about them that gives them a different air from most westerns. In this, it is the masquerade ball incident that lifts it out of the rut of ordinary westerns. Attendance on this above average for the Lenten season.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SPANISH CAPE MYSTERY, THE: Helen Twelvetrees, Donald Cook—A well done mystery picture with acting and suspense well handled. This picture seems to move right along. Credit due to Helen Twelvetrees, Donald Cook, Berton Churchill, who are the leads in this production.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

TUMBLING TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Lucile Brown—Republic has discovered another western star. Gene Autry is tops as a Western actor. With a good story, real action and some very splendid singing, this musical western moves right along to make swell outdoor entertainment. Book it by all means. The review also goes for "Melody Trail" and "Sagehrush Troubadour," starring the same Gene Autry. This resume on the Western picture also holds for the "New Frontier" and "Lawless Range" starring John Wayne. Repuhlic has, without a douht, turned out some of the finest western productions this year. They are "Class A" and can he played without any hesitation.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

TWO SINNERS: Otto Kruger, Martha Sleeper, Cora Sue Collins—A very well done dramatic picture that is a trifle slow in spots. The acting is capahly handled hy Kruger and Sleeper. Cora Sue Collins, the juvenile star, does a a great deal to lift this out of the program class. With a leading role in a picture, this youngster can really go places.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

WESTWARD HO! John Wayne, Sheila Mannors—A very splendid western picture that has everything one desires in the outdoor action type. A splendid story, very good acting and good direction makes this top western fare.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

$1,000 A MINUTE: Roger Pryor, Leila Hyams—A good program picture that moves at a rapid pace. There is comedy, suspense and action nicely knit together, resulting in good entertainment. The entire cast does well with very pleasing results.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Scandinavian Talking Pictures

VARMLANNINGARNA: Swedish Cast—All talking in Swedish, here is a picture which will make history in the foreign cinema field, if it has not already. Beautiful and inspiring, settings heyond compare, all enacted out of doors and real true settings; no backgrounds of canvas or painting. It is an epic in the picture husiness and the American producers better be on their toes as it seems to me that the foreign pictures are getting far ahead of some American pictures. The singing in this picture was superb, as well as fine recording. Evey tone was reproduced and came through very well indeed. The story of the play is taken from an old play of the Swedish people; it is a national play like our plays on "Lincoln," etc. One must see this picture before one can grasp the great idea it has in store for you. One does not have to know Swedish to enjoy the picture. Of course, one may lose the jokes and great humor which is all throughout the entire picture. However, you see the heautiful acting which is an art in itself. Every exhihitor should play this picture. It is a milestone for him who does so. What this country needs is a picture which is taken from real life and portrayed on the screen as a story that is beautiful and understanding. Not the high living, hut just the real life of our neighbors from across the sea. We should he proud of them. We should give them a chance to express themselves. They truly have a heautiful thought in their national play and one might keep posted on it and may profit hy seeing it. In regards to the box office angle on this picture, it will he a great success in that line if you get all of the Swedish people interested in it. They will turn out to see it all right. Just tell them it is all Swedish talking and it is their national play. We also played the latest Swedish news events and other shorts. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 22-29.—Alhert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Swedish speaking people and college grad iate patronage.

Supreme

SMOKY SMITH: Boh Steele—Fine western. Better than average. Bob Steele is fast hecoming our best het for westerns. Believe he is gaining more popularity than Buck Jones. Somehow most all his westerns are fine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BAD BOY: James Dunn, Dorothy Wilson—Not a had picture; a little too short; husiness off. Fox, however, usually has a pretty consistent lineup throughout the year. Played March 19-29.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighhorhood patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cohb, Rochelle Hudson—A bit dragged out, but will set well with the audience. Cohb is not another Will Rogers, but presents a new type of character combined with a good story that will find a spot in everybody's funny bone. Played March 25.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers—This is the only picture that ever filled the house every night for three nights. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 14-16.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye—Very good picture of this type. Nothing to rave ahout, but little above program class. Played March 15-16.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, Dixie Dunhar—Satisfactory. Fox came down to earth on this one. They were up in the clouds on "Music Is Magic" and "Metropolitan." Dixie Dunbar is a comer and Arline Judge was a perfect foil for Jack Oakie. Baxter also good. As long as Fox does not get "Arty" with their musicals, the exhihitor has a chance to make some money, but when they go high-hrow, as they did in the pictures I mentioned, it is just too bad for the hox office and the audience as well.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia Ctiy, Ind. General patronage.

LITTLEST REBEL, THE: Shirley Temple, John Boles—The first Shirley Temple that didn't do standout husiness hut it was plenty cold and stormy for three days so we are bringing it hack and hope to recover some of our loss. This is a very good picture and I know it will please, if we can sell it on a return. Shirley will draw the kids and that's an excuse for papa and mama, so they all come, and I believe we can convince them that they should see it. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LITTLEST REBEL, THE: Shirley Temple, John Boles, Karen Morley, Jack Holt—Another Shirley hit. Bill Robinson practically steals the show. He gives the hest performance of his career. Better advise your customers to hring an extra handkerchief. They'll need it. Plenty of tears in this one. Played March 29-30.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLEST REBEL, THE: Shirley Temple, John Boles—Shirley Temple is still "America's Sweetheart." To say this is her best, or that "Curly Top" was hetter than this, is merely to quihhle as to which is more perfect, the rose or the lily. The one who included the apple incident hetween Lincoln and Shirley deserves a medal. Business on a par with the other Shirley Temple pictures.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MUSIC IS MAGIC: Alice Faye, Ray Walker—This is a very poor musical. Only one song in it and no one of the cast can sing it, not even Alice Faye. Ray Walker turns in a very nice performance of its kind. Zanuck should be an exhibitor and try to pay the bills with shows like this. Boy, would he tear his hair. Played March 26-27.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

NAVY WIFE: Claire Trevor, Ralph Bellamy—Pretty good picture and it sure was a surprise. People really liked it hecause it was just a little different, with suspense and action. Then, of course, there was the romance and forgotten wife, which did complicate and mix matters up for a final unraveling.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—A swell little show. While listed as a programmer, it is as good as some other majors' specials. This show has music (a dandy little tune which will have the patrons humming as they leave the show). Comedy hy Geo. Givot, and Withers. Sell it, it will pay the B. O. Running time, 76 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighhorhood patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—This little star is a good drawing card in this town and she usually pleases her followers, so we are satisfied. It is hetter than the ordinary program hut not worth as much as Fox collects.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—A gripping story, superh direction and acting make this one of the most outstanding pictures of the year. Will please everyone. Played March 12-14.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—Good picture that didn't draw. Guess it was a little too heavy. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 18-19.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew—This is really something new in Movies. An improhable story with improbahle characters presents real entertainment. Everyone well pleased. McLaglen's hlarney hrings a delightful humor to the audience. Running time, 95 minutes.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Freddie Bartholomew, Victor McLaglen—What a honey this. Since McLaglen received the award, this holds true more so. The acting in this show of hoth McLaglen and Bartholomew will satisfy any type of audience. There is action, laughs and heart throbs. In plugging Vic McLaglen don't forget the star of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "David Copperfield." Play up the kids in this show, their F. B. helps sell seats. Running time, 72 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighhorhood patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—A good picture, not Will Rogers' hest hut still good and pleased. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 19-21.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Town and country patronage.

THANKS A MILLION: Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak —Nothing hut praise, hut poor film spoiled the husiness for me the second night. Give us more like it, it's so much different, and Dick Powell is far the hest singer we have heard yet. Running time, 10 reels. Played March 22-23.—Rudolf Duha, Royal Theatre, Kimhall, S. D. Small town patronage.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN: George O'Brien, Barhara Fritchie—Good western that drew better than average on Friday-Saturday. These Fox westerns come as near heing worth the money as any we run, and they don't sit in the balcony and laugh at them like some of the horse operas we get from the other producers. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WHISPERING SMITH SPEAKS: George O'Brien, Irene Ware—Played this on Friday and Saturday douhle hill hut I know that they laughed all during the last two reels so it pleased and "ain't that something?" Comedy producers for Fox should screen this and find out what it takes to make people laugh.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY: Edward Everett Horton —It was a good little picture and the hargain hunters gots a big kick out of Horton when he finally turned out to he a hig shot. Drew average husiness on week-end douhle hill.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DARK ANGEL, THE: Merle Oheron, Fredric March, Herbert Marshall—A woman's picture that the men liked. Romantic and sad but virile enough to receive a one hundred per cent endorsement from the masculine patrons. It is well produced in the usual impeccable taste of a Goldwyn production.—J. W. Noah, New Liherty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

GHOST GOES WEST, THE: Robert Donat, Jean Parker—This is a British produced picture and they did a good job of directing. Donat and Jean Parker did good work in the roles they had, hut, as with all foreign produced pictures, they do not pull. In spite of the fact that Donat was in "The Count of Monte Cristo," the picture did not take in the rental, and that was not the fault of the production, hut the small town audience seems to have a complex.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columhia City, Ind. General patronage.

GHOST GOES WEST, THE: Robert Donat, Jean Parker—Our folks didn't care for this one. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 11-12.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—Failed to make expenses. Some of the oldtimers, including myself, liked it, hut the younger folks could not see it at all. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 2-26.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

SPLENDOR: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—Whether you like the story or not, this picture is a pleasure to look at. The hest photography I ever saw. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 2-3.—

George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

STRIKE ME PINK: Eddie Cantor, Ethel Merman—Proved the most popular of all this star's pictures we have ever played. Typical Cantor, except the ending, which is good old slapstick and chase stuff, but which got the laughs just the same. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 15-17.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

DANGEROUS WATERS: Jack Holt, Robert Armstrong—Fair program picture; played with Cash Night and did average business. Played March 21.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

FIGHTING YOUTH: Charles Farrell, June Martel, Andy Devine, Ann Sheridan—The usual rah-rah and three minutes to play. This picture attracted a small crowd which seemed fairly well pleased but there would doubtlessly have been more complaints had there not been a double program. Newcomer June Martel is the only outstanding personality in this routine college film.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

GREAT IMPERSONATION, THE: Edmund Lowe, Valerie Hobson—Well acted but missed fire as entertainment by poor cutting, script or direction. Played March 19-21.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Calif. General patronage.

INVISIBLE RAY, THE: Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Good of the kind. Great acting. Impossible story (to date). Not quite as horrible as most of their pictures but I can't see this type of picture as good entertainment. Children won't come to see them and the old folks will not patronize the theatre if they can't take the kids. People want to be pleased; not scared to death.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

KING SOLOMON OF BROADWAY: Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Page—Very, very good, but no business; bad roads and too much going on this week. Running time, 8 reels. Played March 18.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING SOLOMON OF BROADWAY: Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Page—While this production was quite interesting, it is not more than an average picture. Probably better for city than for a small country town. About an average show. Played February 29.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—A 110 minutes of real and reel entertainment. John Stahl has put real time and effort in making this box office smash hit. The throbs will get the ladies. The men must be sold. The following brought out more men admissions than in the last two years. What every father should see and preach to his son. Have a father and son matinee. Running time, 110 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—I think that this is one of the best pictures that I ever looked at and while we didn't do any record breaking business, I know that the picture was the talk of the town for a week or more and if we decide to play a return on it, I am positive that it will do more business on the return than it did on first-run. You can't go wrong on a picture like this, and the later you play it the better. We ran it hot.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER LAST NIGHT: Edward Arnold, Constance Cummings, Robert Young—If your patronage has an aversion to pictures presenting drunks and an excess of drinking you have a knotty problem before you in selling this film. It has eighty minutes of sidecars, jitters, hangovers and grand fun. In other words, Universal has produced a novel and entertaining picture that some patrons will find objectionable although amusing. Our patrons enjoyed it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

STORM OVER THE ANDES: Jack Holt, Mona Barrie—Fair action picture and just about an average one of this kind. No particular drawing power. Played March 14.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SWEET SURRENDER: Frank Parker, Tamara—A fair program musical picture. Not good enough for a special and better than the average program pictures. Played March 12.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

Warners

BOULDER DAM: Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis—One of the nicest little programmers we've played in a long time. Used this one on Bank Night and everyone was pleased . . . even gave the Bank Account away. Plenty of everything a picture needs to go over. Actually filmed at the dam . . . several patrons had worked there and said every scene was authentic. Interesting and entertaining. Running time, 66½ minutes. Played March 18-19.—Frank Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

COLLEEN: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Paul Draper, Louise Fazenda, Hugh Herbert—Warners fell down on this one. The first musical they muffed in a long time. We packed them in but some didn't like it so well. Slow and draggy in spots. This boy Draper can certainly dance but he's no actor. Joan Blondell steals the show from Powell and Keeler. Jack Oakie comes in for a goodly portion of honors, too. Hugh Herbert is nuttier than ever. It will get them in but don't step on it too much. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 29-31.—Frank Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGEROUS: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone—And she got the Academy reward for her work in this picture. I rather enjoyed it but I didn't do more than ordinary business. Maybe it would do better, now.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln Kansas. Small town patronage.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—Real good gangster picture which did average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FRESHMAN LOVE: Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull—It was just what a house full of Bank Nighters wanted. They got a lot of laughs and were satisfied because no one got the money.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FRESHMAN LOVE: Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull, Frank McHugh—A mighty good funny picture. All liked it. Played on a double bill.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

FRISCO KID: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay—Splendid action picture. Warner pictures usually hold up well. Played March 15-16.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhod patronage.

FRISCO KID: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay—Cagney O. K. with us. Did above average weekend business. Warners are O. K. with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MISS PACIFIC FLEET: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Fair comedy; played with Cash Night and did average business. Played March 14.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

MOONLIGHT ON THE PRAIRIE: Dick Foran, Sheila Mannors—This cowboy can sing, but a good eighth-rate fighter could whip him in two rounds, so many people just enjoyed his songs.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST, THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—Here is one that we were afraid of . . . title has no selling value and stars have never meant much to the box office . . . until now. It's one of the most exciting pictures of the year. Sold it on a guaranteed basis and it stood up 100 per cent. Howard a little too highbrowed for small towns, but by getting them in on the first of this one they knew what he was talking about. Humphrey Bogart as the "killer" gave the best performance of this type since James Gagney in "Public Enemy." Running time, 81½ minutes. Played March 15-17.—Frank Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST, THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—Well, it was different and it was Bank Night and the pot was big, so we did phenomenal business and we didn't hear any squawks. It had a lot of dialogue and then it had some action, so the patrons went home disappointed because only one of them won.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FOUR MORE SHOWMEN JOIN CONTRIBUTORS

In the department this week appear reports to "What the Picture Did for Me" from four new exhibitors.

Reporting for the first time are these:

Oscar W. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

N. W. Huston, Liberty Theatre, Columbus, Kan.

Returning to the fold after long absences are the following:

Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal.

Read the reports of these showmen in this issue.

Willis Kent

OUTLAW RULE: Reb Russel—This is a very good western. Reb Russel not so good, but the picture is as good as ordinary western and better than some. John McGuire (think this is his name) was very good. Running time, six reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Miscellaneous

BAER-BRADDOCK BOUT: Fifteen rounds of dancing. Just a game of tag. Neither one of these so-called "gladiators' could have punched his way out of a paper bag on the night of this "championship bout." Braddock merely jabbed and dodged bis way to the title. Baer was awarded a hearty Bronx cheer several times during the picture. Running time, 30 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IDOL OF MILLIONS, THE: Jack Dempsey—The eminent cartoonist and sports commentator Tbornton Fisher runs the gamut of the Dempsey fights from Willard to Tunney in an interesting and entertaining manner. You can book this one on a double-feature program and rest assured that it will draw well at the box office. Running time, three reels.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

JOE SAVOLDI-VINCENT LOPEZ WRESTLING MATCH: Played this one along with the Lopez-Dean match as the first wrestling pictures displayed here since the advent of sound films. The men, especially those of tbem who have been "out of circulation" for a number of years, got quite a kick out of the modern version of the mat game. "So that's wrestling!" was the common comment. Running time, 15 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

ROARING WEST: Buck Jones—This one is becoming so monotonous, my patrons cannot take it, and if I was a well-to-do exhibitor, would pay for tbe remaining chapters and set it out. It would be somewhat better if the producers would have cued the music more impressive, instead they they use the same suspense phonographic music throughout the entire fifteen reels. Buck Jones is washed up in my theatre.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ROMANCE IN MANHATTAN: Ginger Rogers, Francis Lederer. I am glad to report on this one as it certainly is a good picture, 'way above average in both story and acting. These two stars turn in a wonderful performance. This picture will make any audience feel like an evening well spent. Running time, eight reels. Played March 7-8.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

VINCENT LOPEZ-MAN MOUNTAIN DEAN WRESTLING MATCH: The California Championship of the "World" was at stake in this match. Between Lopez's "boxing" and Dean's efforts to "squash" the champ, there is little of the orthodox wrestling of former days. This one should be good for a few laughs, however, under any audience. Running time, 15 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ALIMONY ACHES: Andy Clyde—The best comedy we've played in months. It was sure hard on the seats.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 4—A good short for any theatre to run, any time. Pictures of several stars that have passed on, including Marie Dressler and Will Rogers.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Tbeatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Educational

CHOOSE YOUR PARTNERS: Frolics of Youth—Good for entertainment at any place. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

IT NEVER RAINS: Frolics of Youth Series—Not a ripple. Very sad. Running time, 20 minutes.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AUDIOSCOPIKS: Special—Our patrons got a big kick out of this, and good for a change. They screamed when the ball and water hit them in the face.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

BARNYARD BABIES: Harman-Ising—Very fine color cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BASKETBALL TECHNIQUE: MGM Sports Parade—Boy, this one is plenty hot. I don't know whose basketball team this was, but they are plenty good. Pete Smith carries on in the usual entertaining style. He makes the show.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

CALICO DRAGON: Harman-Ising—A dandy all-color cartoon, good for all. Running time, 10 minutes. —Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

COLORFUL GUATEMALA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Best natural color scenic we have had for some time. Swell addition to the program.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

FOOTBALL TEAMWORK: MGM Sports Parade—Good short. However, it is not as good as the "Pro Football" short made by the Chi Bears. Running time, one reel.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

GYMNASTICS: MGM Sports Parade—An outstanding sport short that patrons will comment upon. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HISTORIC MEXICO CITY: PitzPatrick Travel Talks—This is a fine short subject with good color.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HONEYLAND: Harman-Ising—Above average color cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

BROADWAY HIGHLIGHTS SERIES: Paramount Varieties—All of this series have been good.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

FINER POINTS: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—Excellent pictures of bird dogs hunting quail; 11 dogs at one time on the point.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre. Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

FOLLOW THE LEADER: Headliners—Very good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HENRY, THE FUNNIEST LIVING AMERICAN: Betty Boop Cartoons—Good. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE NOBODY: Betty Boop Cartoons—Not so good. Just nothing to it.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE STRANGER: Color Classics—A color cartoon that kept them laughing. When we have a short that we know will please we give it mentioning in our newspaper and lobby advertising. This one created lots of comments. Running time, eight minutes. —Frank Aydelotte, Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MAKING STARS: Betty Boop Cartoons—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PARADE OF THE MAESTROS: Headliners—Very good band act. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SYMPHONY IN BLACK: Duke Ellington and His Orchestra—Not so hot. Just too much black and not enough good music. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BIRD SCOUTS: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Pretty good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BUGLES FROM BLUE GRASS: Sports with Bill Corum—Only fair. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HUNGER PAINS: Blonde and Red Head Series—Good comedy for plenty of laughs. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MOLLY MOO COW AND RIP VAN WINKLE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Not quite as good as some of the others of this series. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

GRASSHOPPER AND THE ANT, THE: Silly Symphony—A good weekend short that always makes friends.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MUSIC LAND: Silly Symphonies—Can't say much for this. We used to like these cartoons better before they went long-haired. Running time, eight minutes. —George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

ORPHAN'S PICNIC: Mickey Mouse—This one got laughs aplenty. Running time, eight minutes.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

MICKEY'S BAND CONCERT: Mickey Mouse—This is the best Mickey Mouse that I have seen. Very beautiful color and good musical score.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

MEET THE PROFESSOR: Mentone No. 10-A—This one gave it to the ladies with plenty of fun all around.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS: These shorts are a good buildup for any feature. Can be billed with any feature and have heard no complaints on any of these singles yet. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

Vitaphone

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Phil Harris, Leah Ray—When Phil Harris comes on the air with his senseless gibbering, we turn the dial. All we can give this is the bird. Running time, 20 minutes.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

DUBLIN IN BRASS: Morton Downey—Fine for St. Patrick's Day, or an Irish community.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HALF WIT-NESS: Radio Ramblers—The Radio Ramblers do some very good impersonations of Bing Crosby, Dick Powell and Harry Richman. They could have left off Nino Martini and Herman Bing and it would have been O. K. It's just fair. Nothing to write home about.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

JACK DENNY AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—A good stage setting for this smooth orchestra helped. But, somehow, this one lacks the sparkle we like to find in these band acts. An esthetic dance team that are dull to watch is included.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SOME CLASS: Pepper Pot—An oldtime slapstick throwing that will give them plenty of laughs. Good for any date. Running time, one reel.—Paul J. Pope. Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

TIMBER GIANTS: Peoper Pot—Here is a most interesting and unusual short subject. It takes you into the land of tall timbers and shows you how lumber is made. A good tieup with the lumber yards. We received mentioning in all newspaper advertising from the local yard when we played this one. Good publicity. Running time, 10 minutes.—Frank Aydelotte. Kiowa Theatre. Hobart, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

TIMBER GIANTS: Pepper Pot Series—Here's a single reel that pleased everyone. Running time. 10 minutes.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

VITAPHONE CASINO: Buster West, Radio Rubes —Very good. Right down the alley for the small town audience. A little bit of all right.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

VITAPHONE TROUPERS: Four Trojans, Aunt Jemima—Every one of these vaudeville reels so far has been very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

VODKA BOATMEN: Yacht Club Boys—Clever, but below average for Warners.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre. Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Serials

Burroughs-Tarzan

NEW ADVENTURES OF TARZAN, THE: Herman Brix—They ought to be ashamed.—George F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Mascot

FIGHTING MARINES, THE: Grant Withers, George Lewis—We are on chapter eight; it is now repeating too much of previous chapters. Not much over one reel of new stuff each week. Crowd on the night we run it is diminishing. Will be glad when it's over.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

LAW OF THE WILD: Rex, Rin Tin Tin, Jr.—This serial starts big and opening has plenty of action. Hope all chapters hold up as good as No. 1. This picture has good sound and photography. Running time, opening chapter, 30 minutes.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC Camp patronage.

Miscellaneous

CANAL TRIP: This also was on our program and it was all in Swedish. Beautiful landscape and lakes, etc. Enjoyed very much and fitted in with the feature which was all in Swedish.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Swedish speaking people and college graduate patronage.

FLYING TRIP, A: Third Swedish short on the program, as there were three shorts furnished on this program. It made a real program that any Swedish person would be proud of. Some people came five and six times to see this picture. Fine views from the air; one could see vast landscapes and grand settings.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Swedish speaking people and college graduate patronage.

Streibert Named WOR Vice-President

Theodore C. Streibert, a member of the board of directors, the executive and finance committees of Pathe Film Company, has been appointed vice-president of Station WOR (Bamberger Broadcasting Service, Inc.), it was announced by Alfred J. McCosker, president.

He was also recently elected first vice-president of the Mutual Broadcasting System, of which WOR is the New York key station, and was reelected to the Mutual board of directors. Since 1933 he has been assistant to Mr. McCosker.

Before entering radio Mr. Streigert was assistant secretary of FBO Pictures Corporation and assistant to the executive vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Department of Labor Sought for New York

A new department of the city government to deal with strikes and other labor disputes is sought by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York in an amendment to the city charter he has introduced in the Board of Estimate branch of the Municipal Assembly.

The measure would establish a city Department of Labor and Commerce with jurisdiction generally over commercial and labor problems. The department would be headed by a commissioner appointed by the mayor.

Labor problems have occupied much of Mayor LaGuardia's time since he took office. The new department would relieve him of that work. Approval of the Board of Aldermen branch of the Assembly is required before the measure can become effective.

Columbia Club Officers

The newly elected officers of the Columbia Club of the home office of Columbia Pictures are: Leonard Picker, president; Ruth Greenfield, first vice-president; Danny Heiss, second vice-president; Joseph Frieberg, treasurer; Eta LeVoff, financial secretary; Carmel Latell, secretary; Rose Sachs, assitant secretary; Tess Weinberg, chairman of board; Seymour Zwilling, press representative, and Francis Goldberg, exchange representative.

LOEW-UA THEATRE DEAL STUMPS B & K EXECUTIVE

Barney Balaban Says Circuit Has Not Been Officially Notified of Present Arrangement

by BILL CROUCH
in Chicago

The story that Loew's and MGM have concluded arrangements with United Artists Theatre Circuit under which they will take over the operation of the United Artists theatre here, is puzzling to say the least, according to Barney Balaban, head of Balaban & Katz theatres.

"We have not been notified officially of any such plans," said Mr. Balaban. "Our management agreement for the United Artists theatre does not expire until April, 1939. Until that time we will manage the theatre and select the pictures that are to play there. The picture franchise agreement we have with MGM has 18 months to run and this gives us the privilege of playing their pictures in whatever houses we wish during that time.

"When I was in New York last week," the B. & K. executive pointed out, "several United Artists executives asked me about the deal and I was at a loss to explain it. We have asked for specific information regarding this situation and until it is received we will not know exactly what has transpired."

The taking over of the management of the United Artists theatre here would be somewhat of a blow to B & K. It would deprive the Chicago theatre, B & K's ace house, of considerable MGM product which in the past has been a source of strong attractions for this 4,000 seat theatre.

As far as U. A. is concerned, this would not affect the B. & K. Loop houses, as this company's product has been sold away from B. & K. this season.

The Chicago Board of Education, which owns the McVicker's theatre, has not decided upon which bid to accept for the rental of this deluxe Loop house. Jones, Linick and Schaefer, the latest group to run the theatre, put in the highest bid, but B. & K. also is understood to have made an attractive offer and may take the house over if the school board officials consent. If B. & K. does get the house, it is presumed that it will be kept dark until such time as it is needed to use as competition to Loop houses operated by other circuits.

Headed by George J. Schaefer, general sales manager, all United Artists branch managers in the Middlewest held a sales conference at the Congress Hotel over the weekend. Sales policy for the remainder of this year's UA product was discussed.

Attending were J. D. Goldhar, western division manager; M. Dudelson, Detroit manager; Joseph Cantor, Indianapolis; Harry E. Lotz, Chicago sales manager; James Abrose, Milwaukee; Ralph Cramblet, Minneapolis; D. V. McLucas, Omaha; William E. Truog, Kansas City; William Feldstein, St. Louis, and Harry Gold of the home office.

Produced 18 months ago, the Majestic picture "The Unknown Blonde" has finally been passed by the Chicago censor board. The film, which is based on the sensational novel, "Collusion," was given a "pink" ticket. Ben Judel, who will release the film under the title "The Marriage Menace," said that the film will be given a Loop showing even if his company has to hire a theatre.

Members of the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association held their quarterly election last week. Officers elected for the coming term are: Calvin Hermer, president; William F. Crouch, vice-president; Col. Lou Abramson, secretary; C. E. Dennison, treasurer; Jim Luntzel, publicity director; and Jack McPherson, sergeant-at-arms.

Harry K. Smythe, chairman, announced that many celebrities would be at the CAPA April Foolies, which will be held April 15th in the Old Town Room of the Sherman hotel.

The election meeting was in the club's new permanent quarters at the Sherman.

Clyde Eckhardt, Henri Elman and J. J. Jovaney were among the film row personages who spent a part of last week in New York on business.

Three theatre openings have been set for Easter in this territory. The new Essaness house in Oak Park, the Lake, will be open to the public on that date, as will the Temple Auditorium theatre in Elgin.

A special preview showing of the Lake was held Wednesday when the Oak Park Chamber of Commerce held a buffet supper at the new house of which Tom Hungerford is manager.

The other house to open is the Garden theatre in Canton.

Al Jolson, en route to New York last week, dropped off the Santa Fe Chief and tarried at the Blackstone while reporters and cameramen besieged him. Jolson said he was going east for three reasons:

First: To attend the opening of his picture, "The Singing Kid."

Second: To see Jim Farley about a postoffice for Encino. Jolson is the mayor of Encino—a Hollywood suburb.

Third: To visit his father before he sends him on a trip to Palestine. (Via the Normandie, which, Al says, has a kosher kitchen.)

Carl Laemmle, Sr., happy as a 10-year-old, stopped off at the Stevens for a day to visit relatives. Mr. Laemmle told reporters he had a check for $5,500,000 from the sale of Universal and nothing to do but enjoy life.

Felix Mendelssohn, MGM branch manager, is back from a West Indies cruise. His tour took him to Panama and several South American countries.

Quick thinking on the part of Al Blasco, manager of the Symphony theatre, saved a $350 Bank Night award from thieves when he discovered someone had stuffed the "hopper" with stubs all of the same number. Three persons were arrested, the "winner," Charles Romano, alias Cali, an ex-convict, and Patsy Pellegrini and his wife, Pauline, two volunteer "judges."

Hundreds of film folks attended the funeral last Friday of Isaac Berkson, pioneer exhibitor, who died while vacationing in California.

Henry Herbel's prize-winning Scotty dog, Skippy, was bitten last week and may not recover, following an attack by two large police dogs. Herbel's children will lose a good pal if Skippy fails to pull through.

"Flash Gordon," the Universal serial, will be shown in the Loop starting April 25th. The chapter film will open at the State-Lake and will be part of the daily film fare, one new chapter being shown every week. This is an experiment as it is the first time a serial has been part of a Loop theatre film offering.

Fred Bartow, MGM publicity and advertising executive here, has launched a real campaign on "The Great Ziegfeld," which opens Sunday night at the Erlanger theatre with a gala premiere.

The entire advertising campaign for the opening here is estimated at $11,000, the newspaper ads alone amounting to $9,000. Following the opening the picture, which runs slightly over three hours, will be shown twice daily at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.50.

After an absence of several weeks vaudeville will go back into the Palace theatre. The theatre has been operating under an all-film policy the last six weeks, but this plan is not proving any too successful.

The first stage show to be booked in will probably be "Folies Comique," the new RKO French show.

Jim Luntzel, B. & K. press representative for the Oriental theatre, leaves this week for a three-weeks' vacation trip to Hollywood. He will be a guest of Jane Withers, child, and her parents.

Sam Clark, Warner publicity representative is back from Emporia, Kansas.

Given an extra week's clearance between the first and second week of release the Schoenstadt circuit has bought the Chaplin picture, "Modern Times," for first showing on the South Side in the subsequent run houses.

George Givot, the "Grik Ambassador," has been signed by Walter Wanger for a featured role "without dialect" in "The Spendthrift." Givot will return to Hollywood as soon as he finishes a personal appearance engagement here.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

On the Raising of False Hopes

Visiting Round Tabler, good friend and good member, among other things chatted and not unfavorably of the building up of managerial morale stressed on this page. Further discussion of the subject brought out another reaction that, while it was our place to point out the rainbow to discouraged theatremen, the "happy days are here again" note might be just a trifle off key when sounded too loudly. In other words, said the brother, indicating that utopia was within reaching distance of all might have a tendency to raise false hopes among those who could not look forward to being transported with any express speed to the green pastures of showbusiness.

Well, now, let's see.

In the first place, this is as good a time as any to define utopia—to determine just what it means to theatremen as a whole. To some it might mean theatres of their own, big executive jobs. To many others the showman's heaven can well be defined as security in their jobs and a salary sufficient to comfortably cover normal wants.

* * *

As concerns the first, this page has never been wholly bullish as has to do with the advantages in owning one's theatres. We have stated that not every exhibitorial bed supports a mattress of roses and the ambition to be the bossman is not exactly the overpowering ambition of more members than we can mention. True, a certain percentage of managers have been successful on their own and every year another group of theatremen will join up. But adequate financing and successful operation are not within the reach of every man endeavoring to be an exhibitor, which is to be expected. The men know it, accept it, and while wishing every success to those who make the grade, sensibly waste no tears on needless frustration. The same holds true for promotions from the managers' ranks to higher posts in the industry.

For the best part, theatremen are interested and absorbed in doing their durndest to put over the job. Their only concern is to be given a fair break and not to be tossed about by the fantastic whims and questionable operating methods of too many present day executives.

It is for this majority group which must be accepted as the very backbone of the entire picture structure that we are most concerned and for which we beat the drum, loudly and often. To these men we have stressed that their very indispensability to the business demands the utmost of consideration, the assurance of security.

We have repeated time and again that the position the manager occupies in the entire motion picture scheme makes him as much a key man as any highly held executive, that without the thousand and one tasks performed daily by the manager, there would be no forthcoming fat grosses to make possible the bows and kudos given the big executives.

Check it any way you please, and the answer is always the same. The laddie who makes the tieups, organizes the kid clubs, puts over all kinds of powerful exploitation with peanut budgets is doing the real day-in and day-out job of selling the Hollywood names at a profit to the producer as well as the exhibitor. And don't forget, your manager while putting these over is also occupied and ably with the physical operation of his house—and that in itself is a full day's work.

The talents and abilities of the theatreman are peculiar almost alone to the showbusiness. Without these talents and abilities the industry would not be one and therefore we say again, and again—the utopia of security, the furthest horizon to which the majority of theatremen aspire, cannot be too far away.

That many wise exhibitors have made this security possible for their managers is not enough. The problem is not solved while theatremen doing everything they are asked and more can be tossed out on their ears for no reason that will hold water.

It is impossible that so insecure, so uneconomic, so wasteful a condition be continued indefinitely. Obviously, the situation must be on its way to correction and it will be, by one means or another, and not in the too distant future.

To speed the day, therefore, your Chairman will continue to act as the managers' bucker-upper and in so doing, to chart the circuitous road to that utopia so few theatremen have yet been able to attain.

CHRIST'S HIGHLY UNUSUAL LOBBY FOR "KLONDIKE ANNIE"

Pat Patchen Puts Out Spring Booklet Ballot

Measuring about five inches wide by six and a half all over, of 12 pages, plus cover, each in different color, is the smart Spring Booklet created by Pat Patchen, Ad chief, Lincoln Theatres, Lincoln, Nebr. Advertising besides being nice buildup for coming attractions also carries a voting ballot page in which patrons are requested to list in the order they wish to see the 12 shows plugged in the succeeding pages.

Each page is an overlay and on the tabs are copy shorts referring to the pictures advertised. Cover is an attractive purple, carries title "Spring Topics" and illustrated with a singing birdie.

To be noted is that the job was no-cost to Patchen, as refrigerator tiein paid for all. Booklet was made up from exchange mats and varied effects secured by use of three colors of stock with a different color ink on each run.

Reaction is very favorable with few of the booklets being thrown away and many patrons bringing back their filled in ballots.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

AND IN STYLE. For "Bride Comes Home" at the Tampa, Tampa, Fla., Vince Wade promoted new Buick for street bally. Bride and groom distributed wedding rings with copy on tags attached.

Russ Offers Car Free To First Finder

For his street bally on "Collegiate," Russ Hardwick, Lyceum Theatre, Clovis, New Mexico, dressed boy in yellow slicker painted collegiate style and wearing lettered window card front and back. Lad led live duck saddled with small cloth imprinted banner. Bally worked schools at dismissal time and busy downtown sections.

Highlight of campaign was Ford giveaway. Russ used a stripped down model T painted in variegated colors on streets a week ahead, p.a. system in car announcing that it was to be hidden some time, somewhere during the showing of the picture, and that whoever found it could have it. Hardwick says the stunt created plenty of excitement.

For lobby display a five-foot duck pen was constructed, and on his high school night Russ staged a Penner impersonation contest. Entire staff wore football sweaters and skull caps week ahead.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Back Celebrates Theatre Anniversary

Thorough was anniversary campaign instituted at the Broadway Theatre, Baltimore, Md., by Leon Back, event tied up to his "Strike Me Pink" date. Mayor attended as guest of honor together with other local prominents.

Leading baker donated immense composite cake called "Dreamland Castle" in line with atmosphere of picture, icing done in pink, blue and silver. Cake was cut and distributed to patrons with due ceremony. Druggist featured Cantor sundaes, shoe shop devoted window to display done in pink cellophane.

Marquee was lettered with copy "Strike Me Pink, it's anniversary week," ushers and doormen wore anniversary sashes of silver with pink cellophane ties and cashiers also went pink for the occasion.

Yukon Street Scene Makes Smash Lobby

Complete even to the rooming house and general store was the realistic Alaskan street setting in the lobby (see photo) for "Klondike Annie" by Manager Louis B. Christ at the Arlington, Santa Barbara, with the aid of Assistant Jones and House Carpenter Robert Rothwell.

The lighting was cleverly arranged and such neat bits of atmosphere as the barrels in front of the saloon added to the general gaiety. Old time tunes filtered into the lobby from a piano played by an usherette in the dance hall and at peak hours a trio sang the hot songs of yore.

Ducats were also available via a roulette wheel attended by girl in costume. Onlookers were invited to spin the wheel, which, if stopping on photo of Mae West brought spinner a ducat to the show.

Reports have it that the display brought folks from near and far and from what the photo discloses sure deserved the unusual attention.

Dick Wright Suggests Comic-Page Party

For Easter school vacation and for similar periods, kid shows, etc., snappy slant is incorporated in the idea suggested by Dick Wright, Warner Theatres' Cleveland district manager to the boys in his sector. Gag is a comic-page character kid party with youngsters coming in costumes and make-ups of funny page characters.

Figures such as Tillie the Toiler, Little Orphan Annie, Tarzan, Mickey Mouse, etc., are some of Wright's suggestions, with rabbits given for prizes. Newspapers can be promoted on this, says Wright.

Warner Theatremen Elect Officers

John J. Payette, zone manager, was re-elected Honorary President last week at the annual convention of Warner Theatres Managers of Washington, D. C.

Charles Grimes, manager of the Earle, was elected president, Walter Cersley of the Avalon, vice-president, and Robert Etris, second vice-president. George Crouch, assistant zone manager, was re-elected to the office of secretary-treasurer.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

COMEDY SETPIECE. Russ Hardwick, Lyceum, Clovis, N. Mex., used gag copy on his "Milky Way" lobby setpiece. Card read: "Meet the milkman who can whip his weight in cream."

ADVANCEMENTS GIVEN 1935 PLAQUE WINNERS

Compilation of advancements to recipients of 1935 Quigley Award plaques at this writing discloses that the number made in the second year of the Competitions has kept pace with 1934. Among last year's winners so honored are included:

J. LLOYD DEARTH, January Silver, to managing director, Pantages Theatre, Hollywood; AL SINDLINGER, May Silver, to director of exploitation, March of Time; HERB MORGAN, May Bronze, to director of exploitation, MGM Short Subjects; CHUCK SHANNON, June and August Bronze, to manager, Belmar Theatre, Pittsburgh; RALPH LAWLER, July Bronze, to manager, Newman Theatre, Kansas City.

And most recent—JOHN ARMSTRONG, June Silver and 1935 Silver Grand Award, to the post of director of publicity, Radio Pictures, Ltd., of London.

MARCH PLAQUES VOTED TO HOLLAND, NEWMAN

Indiana Theatreman Is Awarded Silver; N. Y. Neighborhood Manager Selected for Bronze

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Two first-timers are listed atop the Quigley Awards listings for March, Sid Holland, of the Elco Amusement Corp., of Elkhart, Ind., landing his first Silver Plaque and Ben Newman, manager, Loew's Rio, New York, winning his first Quigley honors—the Bronze. While Ben is a newcomer to the Competitions, Sid is no stranger to our gates and is distinguished for being voted the Bronze in April of last year.

Holland's campaign on Columbia's "Music Goes Round" was put over at the Elco Theatre, the drive centered around a citywide tieup with the leading band instrument companies in that section. Newman's entry on MGM's "Rose Marie" was put on at a neighborhood theatre, in the Washington Heights section of the city and covered a lot of ground despite the handicaps of a subsequent situation. Both campaigns will be detailed in next week's issue. The battle for March was hot enough to bring a lot of entrants to the finish in a bunch which necessitated the awarding this month of four First Mentions. The theatremen awarded these distinctions all gain the honors, too, for the first time. They are Douglas George, Parker, Darby, Pa.; Harry Goldberg, Warner Philadelphia Theatres; Ed Hart, Oxford, Plainfield, N. J., and Jack Nelson, Capitol, North Bay, Ontario. Nelson, incidentally, is just a short distance from Callender, home of the famed Quins. His campaign was on "Country Doctor."

Lester Pollock, manager, Loew's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., has been selected by Motion Picture Herald to receive a Quigley Awards Merit Certificate in recognition of his outstanding record in the Quigley Competitions since their inception.

Pollock will be tendered his new honors in Hollywood during the 1935 Grand Award ceremonies, slated to take place the last week in April or the first week in May.

Fourteen Honorables Awarded

Fourteen Honorables were voted to the same number of theatremen, with many of those listed for the Certificates generously crediting others of their staffs for cooperation. Nine entrants receive this recognition either for the first time or the first time since the start of the second year of the Competitions and three of the boys, Richmond, Stallman and Hinks are newcomers, the latter incidentally being the only overseas manager landing in March.

First Mentions

Douglas George, Manager, Parker, Darby, Pa. "Dangerous"

Harry Goldberg, Publicist, Warner Bros. Theatres, Philadelphia, Pa. "Pasteur"

Ed Hart, City Manager, Oxford, Plainfield, N. J. "Next Time We Love"

Jack Nelson, Manager, Capitol, North Bay, Ont., Canada. "Country Doctor"

Honorable Mentions

W. W. Adams, Manager, M & P Colonial, Brockton, Mass. "Modern Times"

Ralph Bartlett, Manager, Fox Capitol, Benton, Ill. "Music Goes Round"

Ray Bell, Publicist, Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C. "Rose Marie"

Pete Egan, Manager, FP-C Palace, Calgary, Can. "Country Doctor"

Bill Exton, Manager, Kenosha, Kenosha, Wis. "Country Doctor"

W. Hinks, Manager, Alex Cinema, Paisley, England. "Gay Lady"

Dave Jones, Manager, Strand, Springfield, Ill. "Music Goes Round"

Guy Martin, Manager, Colfax, South Bend, Ind. "Follow the Fleet"

S. L. Richmond, Manager, Keith's, Portland, Maine. "Country Doctor"

Morris Rosenthal, Loew's Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn. "Music Goes Round"

Joe Rosenfield, Manager, Saxe-Modjeska, Milwaukee, Wis. "Ceiling Zero"

Max Silverwatch, Manager, Strand, Waverly, Mass. "Magnificent Obsession"

J. Lester Stallman, Manager, College, Bethlehem, Pa. "Rose Marie"

E. E. Whitaker, Manager, Fox, Atlanta, Ga. "Country Doctor"

Five-Day Campaign Puts Over Benefit

Under the joint sponsorship of Loew's, Warner Bros. and RKO Theatres, a mammoth midnight flood benefit show was held recently at the Hippodrome Theatre, Cleveland, with a bangup publicity job done on five days' notice by the theatremen concerned.

Serving on the executive committee in charge were Col. Harry Long, for Loew's; Nat Wolf, for Warner Bros., and Nat Holt, for RKO. Publicity was handled by Sid Dannenberg and Mort Goodman, Warner Bros.; Milt Harris, Loew's, and Al Gregg, RKO. Entertainment details were taken care of by Managers Eddie Miller, Hippodrome; Ken Means, RKO Palace, and Everett Steinbuch, Loew's State.

Newspapers Cooperated Generously

All newspapers donated generous space, breaking two days ahead. Downtown stores carried boxes in ads and the circuits also used extra space to plug the event. Publicity, as to be expected, was in keeping. Editorials in all papers topped straight news stories and frequent mentions by various picture, radio and gossip columnists.

Ticket offices were established in theatres and department stores, restaurants, prominent clothing shops, etc. Federation of Women's Clubs sold tickets in main lobby of the Union Terminal Tower and for street bally, effective was booth in form of giant bass fiddle with tickets sold from inside.

Posting on light poles, citywide blanket of window cards, and sound trucks carrying show girls selling tickets were other whipper-uppers. Street car and taxi companies also cooperated by carrying cards advertising the event.

All in all, the boys did an ace job for this worthy cause and are hereby voted each an extra bow for their endeavors.

Caldwell Sells "Times" With Impersonators

Through tieup with five-and-tens in Toledo, Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, for "Modern Times" dressed two of his ushers a la Chaplin and had them tour the stores with playdates copy on their backs. Boys cut capers and imitated the famous walk. Also attracting attention were cutouts of Chaplin hung from ceilings in stores about town.

Tabloids were distributed at theatre, to factories, in selected residential sections and stuffed in laundry bundles. Furniture store used window with display of large head cutout of the star in center, and imprinted mustache novelties were handed out.

Stores Aid Bowser On "Two Cities"

Local haberdasher tied in with Les Bowser on his "Two Cities" campaign at the Harris-Warren in Warren, Ohio, running ads in papers with cut of Colman and copy reading "your hat will look like the Dickens unless it is styled right," etc., etc. Local electric shop featured window display and ran ad in paper showing scene from picture and stressing difference between flickering candlelight during time of Dickens and present day lighting.

Public library had show case display of book and miniature guillotine together with scene stills, and special morning show was held for school children.

Taxidermist Specimens Used for Front Display

Promoting local taxidermist for loan of stuffed animules, Russ Brown credits his assistant, Willard Seale, for the front at the Orpheum, Spokane, Wash., for "Fang and Claw" (see photo). Two huge mounted bears, a wild cat ready to spring, coyote guarding her young at the mouth of a cave, were arranged across the front of the theatre. Added comedy touch was a live monkey caged and Brown reports his antics drew attention. Display was later moved inside the lobby.

Studious Pupils Lunch With Jackie

An identification contest using character stills of Cooper in his most important roles was planted in dailies by Ted Gamble, Broadway, Portland, Ore., for "Tough Guy." Tickets were awarded first ten submitting correct list.

Arrangements were made with school board to offer as a prize to all students in grade schools an invitation to luncheon with Jackie Cooper, there on a personal, for kids showing most progress during week preceding opening of picture. Parade headed by scouts welcomed Jackie, who was interviewed on radio and mentioned theatre and playdates. Studio stills were used in boys' clothing store as were stills of Rin Tin Tin, Jr., in tieup with manufacturer of dog food and dog and cat hospitals.

Drachman Hosts Locals on "Dream"

To sell his "Dream" opening at the Fox Theatre, Tucson, Ariz., Roy Drachman sent personal wires to principals of high schools and heads of music club inviting them to attend as his guests. Special display was constructed (see photo) with background of black velour hanging from wrought iron rods and mounted two large pillars containing 14 by 17 photos on each side. Cut-out title letters were used in center of display.

Desk was placed in lobby ten days ahead where extra cashier sold tickets via phone calls, and patrons leaving theatre were also solicited for reservations. Drachman tied local daily to special issue topped with title in red imprinted on first page.

And Now Doc Lee Goes Badminton

Having stood the folks in Brooklyn, N. Y., slightly on their respective ears with his series of basketball games on the stage after the last feature on Fridays, the ole Doctor, Joe Lee, at the Paramount, in that spot, has now turned to Badminton, net game similar to tennis.

Famed star, Vincent Richards, former tennis champ, has been booked for a series of four games, now taking place on Tuesday nights, after the last feature, and if these prove a draw, other stars will be engaged.

Joe is now angling for the Olympic games and the Golden Gloves.

Exploitation in Milwaukee Held Down by Ordinances

City Rulings Called Reason for Curtailment of Theatre Ballyhoo

by WILLIAM SCOLLARD
Milwaukee Correspondent

It appears that there are many activities in Milwaukee, municipally sponsored and otherwise, to compete with the theatres and these doings are described in this, the third of the Showman's Travelogue series now running in the Round Table on the status of the motion picture in key cities and local conditions as affect the showbusiness.

The San Francisco and Boston situations have been detailed in previous issues with New Orleans next and others to follow.

Famous for many things, including its diversity of industries, safety and health, Milwaukee, despite its 599,100 population, continues to be referred to as one of the two bad weeks in the show business.

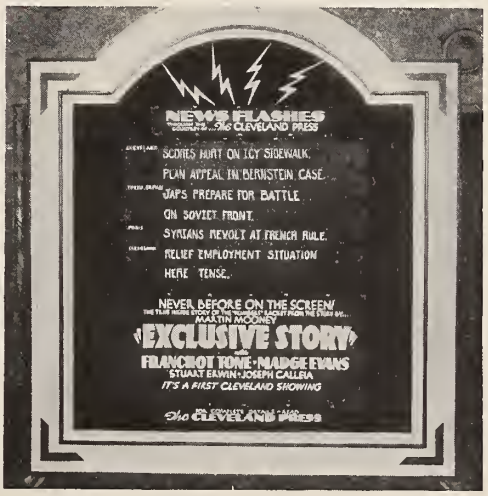
Cause for this situation may perhaps be found in two things, namely, the character of its population and the fact that the average weekly wage for skilled, unskilled and white collar workers approximates $20.

Germans, Austrians and Swiss, a thrifty and home loving race, comprise 41.5 per cent of the foreign born population of Milwaukee, whose foreign born white population is 24.1 per cent of its total population. Poles rank second among the city's foreign born, representing 20.9 per cent of Milwaukee's foreign born population.

Admission Prices Low

Primarily an industrial community, Milwaukee county, with its population of 725,263, has some 120,000 of its about 460,000 wage earners employed in manufacturing plants. Another reason for its reputation as a poor show town may be gleaned from the fact that its per capita retail sales in 1929 ranked below that of Wisconsin cities with populations many times less than Milwaukee. For example, Madison, with population of 57,000, ranked first in per capita retail sales in 1929 with $806.61. Watertown, whose population is 10,000, ranked second with sales of $789.14 per capita. In this same year, Milwaukee's per capita sales were above $600 as compared with the state's average of $419.30.

In keeping with the native Milwaukeean's eye for bargains, are theatre admission prices. The average admission charge for first run houses is 25 cents for matinees and 40 cents for evenings. That for subsequents is 15 cents for matinees and 25 cents for evening admissions.



Despite the fact that on Jan. 15, 1934, 109,945, or 59.9 per cent of all families in Greater Milwaukee owned passenger automobiles, theatre patronage has been tending toward the neighborhood houses as against the downtown theatre. This fact is substantiated by a recent survey conducted among 40,000 Milwaukeeans by the Motion Picture Projectionists' Union, Local No. 164, which disclosed that the typical movie patron attended his neighborhood theatre 3.67 times per month and a downtown theatre 2.10 times in the same period.

It is further substantiated by activated building of theatres and improvements to present outlying houses. The past year saw two new neighborhood houses erected in Milwaukee as well as thousands of dollars spent in renovating existing houses. At the same time it has seen the remodeling of one downtown house into a store building, the closing of another indefinitely and the spasmodic operation of a third, which in better times never closed. In addition, another downtown house, formerly a first run, has gone into a 15-cent admission second run theatre leaving the downtown area with but four first run houses when not so many years ago it had seven.

Granted that with seven first run houses the city was overseated, despite its 44 square miles of area, Milwaukee has adequate street car and bus facilities. The local transit company issues a weekly pass for one dollar on which a person may ride as many times as he desires on the firm's street car and bus lines, while the straight fare is 10 cents. In addition the downtown area has ample parking facilities for motorists. But downtown exhibitors continue to sing the blues.

Various exhibitors offer various reasons for the existing situation. There are those who declare that the city's downtown patronage is largely the younger generation. The courting lad prefers the larger deluxe first run theatres to the neighborhood houses as more fitting entertainment for his fair lady. But the rub comes when we learn that the young folks are having difficulty finding employment and consequently money is not so free as it was six or seven years ago.

Again the thrift angle enters into the picture. Whether one uses his automobile or takes a street car, the total cost in the end, including the difference between the neighborhood's and the downtown admission, is higher when attending a first run downtown house. And, for the most part, the deluxe neighborhood theatres are on a par with the downtown theatres in respect to projection, sound, ventilation, cleanliness and personnel. Net result, the neighborhood houses are not only gettting papa's and mama's business, but that of the teen ages as well.

NEWSPAPER TIEUP. On "Exclusive Story," Johnny Newkirk and Milt Harris tied in local sheet for news bulletins on lobby poster to build up the date at Loew's Granada, Cleveland.

Taverns Tough Opposition

There are those exhibitors who would have you believe that the steady diet of double features at low admission prices has caused the public to lose its sense of value toward motion pictures. And there are others who point out that the taverns with their nickel beers and snatches of entertainment, with which Milwaukee is blessed, is filling the public's desire for entertainment and relaxation more economically and satisfactorily than can the motion picture theatres.

Add to this the fact that it is the exception rather than the rule for local theatre managers to be actively associated with activities outside their own sphere, that local merchants for the most part are not exploitation minded and that local theatres do not go in heavily for ballyhoo, and you will realize that Milwaukee takes its film entertainment pretty much as a matter of course with the average theatre attendance 4.54 times per month, per person, according to the projectionists' union survey.

One of the reasons for a minimum of ballyhoo is found in city ordinances which prohibit banners, streamers and the like being displayed from theatre canopies. Also a reason for the let-down in special exploitation in the form of newspaper and merchant tie-ups may be found in the general decline of business conditions in the past several years. Less than 10 years ago theatres exploited freely and methodically. Perhaps with the general improvement in business, the pendulum will again swing the other way.

Newspapers—there are eight dailies, four English, one German, one Jewish and two Polish—are for the most part co-operative. The leading ones run syndicated Hollywood columns as well as columns by local critics.

Advertising by the film houses is confined largely to the English language papers. In addition some spot radio advertising is being done. How successful this has been is difficult to determine. Suffice it to say that the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin launched a 15-minute musical program of recordings every Sunday morning over WHMJ to attract patronage to its member houses, practically all of which are subsequent theatres, in December. The broadcast was discontinued after six weeks when it was determined that the results did not merit the expense of the venture.

From what has already been told, it might be gathered that the toughest competition for the 76 exhibitors in Milwaukee county is from the tavern. This is only partially true. In the winter and fall the city's 17 social centers must also be reckoned with. In 1934, 1,188,533 people participated in the activities of these centers. In addition several schools present plays on Saturday afternoons, often attracting as many as 5,000 children at 10 cents per head, while the municipal athletic program brought into competition 21,901 players in more than a dozen sports attracting 2,097,003 spectators in 1934. On a single day in December there were 33,600 skaters in the 14 city parks offering this sport.

The Milwaukee Auditorium, seating 8,008 in its main arena and 5,512 in six other halls, attracts thousands during the year to basketball games, six-day bike race, food show, home show, automobile show, Wisconsin exposition, and similar events. The Auditoriums gross income in 1934 was $88,510 with expenditures of $74,446.59.

The Milwaukee museum carries on an extension service consisting of daily school and Wednesday lectures, seminars, field excursions and loan services. Almost a million and a half people visited its exhibits in 1934 and 717,244 the various extension services.

Water Sports Hit Grosses

And in the summer months, despite efficient cooling systems in most of the theatres, people are attracted to many of the neighboring inland lakes, to any of the city's 67 parks, attendance at which during the 1934 summer months was 5,261,831, while the 68 playgrounds were patronized by 617,443 children. Add to this three major civic celebrations on the lake front in 1934 attracting 299,000 people, 286,454 swimmers at the three lake bathing beaches, 102,783 at the two river beaches, 75,500 at the large artificial swimming pool, and it is easy to see where the exhibitor's summer grosses go aglimmering.

Except for these features, most of them free or very reasonable to attend, Milwaukee exhibitors are not confronted with much additional opposition. Legitimate productions at the Davidson and Pabst theatres in Milwaukee during the past season have been few and far between, and it has become almost impossible to offer stage shows as regular fare. The Riverside with a 25-cent top admission, is Milwaukee's only first run which has been successful in playing vaudeville and stage shows week after week. Others have gone in for it as a regular policy, only to fold their tents and withdraw to straight films after a short term trial.

King-pin in this rather static situation is the Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises, Fox subsidiary, who control 14 of the 19 circuit theatres in Milwaukee county and 27 other houses in 14 other Wisconsin cities as well as three in three Michigan towns. The Warner circuit, once ruler of the roost, is now content to operate five houses in Milwaukee and five in the state. It also is godfather to the Standard Theatres Co. operating four houses in three state cities.

And if H. J. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises is to be believed, his circuit has not yet reached its peak, which has been set for 100 houses. Needless to say, the independents, both exhibitors and exchanges, view this prophecy with no small bit of apprehension.

Independents Organize

Saxe Amusement Management, Inc., long regarded as the leading independent circuit in the state, is no longer considered strictly as such since it entered into a booking agreement with Warners in a south side Milwaukee spot and in Oshkosh. It now operates six Milwaukee subsequent houses, five state theatres and is angling for three Madison spots now controlled by Fox.

In the past the Saxe circuit was a member of the Independent Theatres Protective Association. Since the Warner combine it is no longer represented on its board of directors. To better protect itself from being squeezed between these circuit oppositions, the Independent association is organizing a buying combine. What the ultimate result of this jockeying about will be, only time will tell. Suffice it to say that in this mad scramble to build up an all-encompassing and powerful circuit in Wisconsin, the mighty have fallen on several occasions. Perhaps Milwaukee's reputation as a so-so show town never will be vindicated.

Emerson-Schlaifer "Obsession" Setpiece

Various Campaigns On "Obsession"

Opening of "Magnificent Obsession" at the Omaha, in Omaha, Neb., was given a regular Hollywood premiere by Manager Ted Emerson and advertising manager Charlie Schlaifer. Seats were reserved, flood lights, mikes and all the paraphernalia used as doubles of movie stars impersonated drove up to the door. Prominents were introduced over radio stationed in lobby and papers were generous in stories given stunt.

Accompanying photo shows shadow box display at end of lobby with large hand-drawn head of Dunne, with other side of lobby duplicating box except that it contained head of Taylor. Individual letters were sent to physicians, bookmarks planted in libraries.

And In Ottumwa, Iowa

Ed Dunn at the Grand used oversized book with man inside as street bally. Large book containing stills from picture was also used for lobby display. Cooking class holds meetings on Dunn's stage once a week and Ed promoted teacher to give picture plugs three weeks ahead and during engagement.

Then Up at Hamilton, Canada

C. T. Spencer at the Capitol made arrangements with leading hotel orchestra to dedicate weekly broadcast to Miss Dunne for her great performance in the picture. Playdate was mentioned.

Various window displays were promoted, permission received from Y's to place announcements on bulletin boards and druggist tied in by planting displays throughout store. Clergymen, physicians and women's clubs were circularized.

While at Brookline, Mass.

Round Tabler Jack Markle at the Coolidge Corner Theatre, held special preview for doctors, nurses and local businessmen. Jack stressed the doctors' special seat location call card and mailed it out with letters of invitation. A reported first time was the planting of special still and sign display in the high school library. Twenty-four sheets were planted in book stores in surrounding towns and numerous window displays of enlarged photos were planted.

Winding Up in Elmira, N. Y.

Where Wally Allen, before he left Keeney Theatre for points west promoted merchants for gift orders which were dropped in small parachutes from plane circling city. Cooperating merchants plugged stunt in their ads. Special screening distributed heralds in outgoing messages.

ON BILL EXTON'S "SHARK" TYPE ADS

In center column is reproduced one of the three one-column type ads created by Bill Exton, at the Kenosha, Kenosha, Wis., to sell the date on "Prisoner of Shark Island". Ads, running ten inches, all carried sock heads as indicated, titles for the other two being: "Damning, Incredible, Outrageous!" and "Hell Before Death—and then Death Itself".

Type of appeal is in the reporter style with Exton going on record as to picture's authenticity. Strong copy highlighted by graphic descriptions of actual sequences did a lot of selling away from the conventional advertising.

Name It "Rose Marie" And Be Gifted, Says Moyer

In a few years from now there is going to be a raft of little Rose Maries walking around and Charlie Moyer, State Theatre, Hanover, Pa., has done his part in it. Tying up twenty merchants, Charlie promoted gifts for the first baby girl to be born during his playdates and named after the picture. Stores came through with full page co-op ad and four-page tabloids, the entire cost covered by ads on back page.

For street bally boys were scattered about town to sit on principal street corners with back banners carrying "waiting to see" copy. American Legion dance cooperated by playing tunes from picture and plugging the film during evening. For a gag, Moyer planted a fish bowl with water in window of leading department store, card reading "free tickets to the State to see Rose Marie to persons guessing amount of invisible gold fish in bowl."

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

ROUND AND ROUND. Spiral strips used as above by Manager Howard Ralston, Ritz, San Bernardino, Cal., were made of promoted adding machine paper with ushers stenciling the copy.

AMERICA'S HELL HOLE

How many of us know that right here in America once existed such a hell hole that compared to the famous "Devil's Island" that now exists?

Here prisoners — once they go — forget their past and live a slow "sure-death" life!

Torture — misery — disease and untold agonies prevail — an only escape is death itself—and a wonderful relief!

America's "Hell Hole" was mastered by brutes —and its very gates were guarded by huge man eating sharks — how many were ever devoured in their desperate effort to escape —or were thrown into these torturous waters —only history can reveal!

Such experience was the misfortune of the name of Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd of Maryland — whom the nation once condemned for what was later acknowledged as an injustice on one of the most unselfish and courageous men in American history!

Fox Films research departments have uncovered the true actual and authentic records and have dared to produce it for the screen under the title "Prisoner of Shark Island" with Warner Baxter and a cast of one thousand!

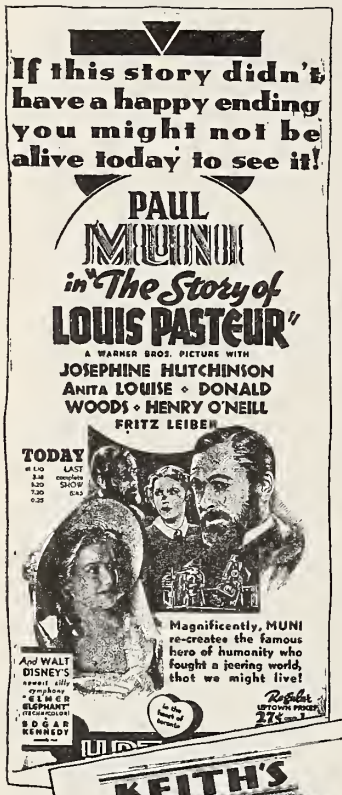
TICKETS GOING FAST FOR GET-TOGETHER

Committee for the New York area managers' get-together to be held at the French Casino, the night of Thursday, April 23, announces that tickets are going rapidly. There are only a certain number of tickets available and when these are gone no more will be sold.

Party is informal; starts at eleven o'clock. Guests may bring their wives and sweethearts. Single tickets are $2.75 each, good for special dinner, show and dancing, and can be secured from the following committeemen:

PAUL BINSTOCK, Republic, Brooklyn; JOE SALMON, Riverside, New York; MARTY ROSENBURGH, Loew's Boro Park, Brooklyn; LEW PRESTON, Endicott, Brooklyn; ERIC VAN DYCK, Loew's 83rd Street, New York, and MOE BARANCO, State, Jersey City.

Mayor Welcomes Cooper On Personal Appearance



Official reception was pitched at leading hotel in Seattle by Vic Gauntlett, of the Paramount, to welcome Jackie Cooper making personal with "Tough Guy." Mayor and family posed with Jackie and Scout drum corps escorted starlet from hotel in parade through downtown streets with motorcycle escort, sound truck and bannered cars.

Newspaper reporter interviewed Jackie's mother and this broke front page of Sunday paper. Special breaks were also secured when Jackie visited crippled kiddies' hospital. Through tieup with beverage company, softs drinks were dispensed in lobby.

JUNIORS TAUGHT TO SELL PICTURES

Theatre Chief Details Outline Of Course for Front of House Staffs and Junior Executives

by STANLEY A. BROWN
Des Moines Tri-States District Manager

On a recent editorial page, comment was made on the seven-weeks' course in picture-selling made available to ambitious members of the personnel in the houses supervised by Stanley A. Brown, of Tri-States Theatres. The executive was queried as to the conduct of these sessions, held weekly, and on this page he has been kind enough to set forth, for the information of others so inclined, the subjects under discussion and how they are treated in class.

This idea occurred to us some time ago when we realized the enthusiasm that some of these young people were displaying toward our business, and the occasional suggestions which our managers received from them pertaining to the selling of a picture. We conceived the idea that if we could get them together once a week for a period of seven weeks, and lay out a routine interestingly presented that we would inculcate in their fertile brains the basic elements of showmanlike advertising.

The idea was tried out in the Tri-Cities initially by Joe Kinsky, our District Manager in Davenport, and met with such success that we are repeating it here in Des Moines.

At this writing (Mar. 23) we have had five meetings. We have approximately thirty boys attending the School every Wednesday morning at 9:00 A. M. We open the meetings by analyzing tear sheets from our national clipping bureau service, explaining to them the good and bad points as we see it of other people's ads. We show them how our theatre advertising suffers by misplacing such items as sig cuts, and by the lack of emphasis on "last times today," the mis-use of type families, and many other deficiencies in advertising of which we are all guilty at times.

We give them an assignment to attempt to accomplish each week, and the results of their efforts which they bring in each week clearly indicate those who are going forward in this business and those who have no yen for it.

First Meeting General

Our first meeting was limited to a general discussion, with emphasis placed on Exploitation. The first assignment we gave them was to bring in a campaign on Klondike Annie and present it at the next meeting.

At our second meeting, we discussed Lobby Advertising. We tried to emphasize the following points in constructing lobby material:

Economical construction.

Thought given to special treatment. Whether picture should be sold in manner suggested by producer, or whether to use our own ideas (this pertaining to costume pictures, etc.)

Creating ideas which appeal to the eye.

Location of display—In direct line of vision; under strong light; beside a moving object.

Necessity of selling complete show—shorts, second feature, etc.

We introduced Mr. Loyal LaPlante, who is in charge of our Art Department, who discussed the following essentials needed for a good front or inside lobby:

Neatness.

Color.

Arrangement (any set of stills can be made beautiful and attractive if correctly arranged for study by interested patrons). Creating something from nothing is the real test of showmanship, not how much money you can spend.

Date strips kept timely. "Last times today," "new show today," etc.

We then introduced Mr. Bob Fulton, manager of our Paramount Theatre, who discussed the art of advertising in a town where there is no Art Department. Mr. Fulton spoke of the necessity of constructing inside lobby displays which hold exchange accessories which can be again used out in front when the picture is current. He further explained the necessity of constructing displays which can be repainted to fit the season. Dark red for winter, light greens and blue for summer, etc., and discussed the many economical methods of lighting displays which are practical.

We gave them an assignment that week of bringing in a rough sketch of a set-piece on Petrified Forest, which they would use if they were in a spot that had an Art Department.

The third meeting was devoted to the planning of a newspaper campaign in a town where a commercial artist is available for making up hand-drawn ads. Mr. A. Don Allen, manager of our Des Moines Theatre, dwelt upon the following highlights:

An analysis of the space to be used so as to conform to budget.

The many trick ways of incorporating a slug advertising the forthcoming pictures.

The care to be given in the construction of an ad as to which attack is best from a box-office angle—star value, story, director, or title.

The method of arranging the art in an ad so as to appeal to all potential customers.

Star stills with romantic clutches, etc., to be carefully analyzed for romance. Attention getting heads and faces to be selected from stills which might sell a definite thought, and line drawings to be substituted for halftones, if preferable.

A discussion followed relative to signature cuts which was touched upon by Mr. Kermit Carr, manager of our Uptown Theatre.

The assignment given those attending the school for this meeting was the drawing of an 11-inch ad on "Lonesome Pine," acting under the presumption that they had a commercial artist to work with.

The fourth meeting was devoted to the discussion of constructing ads in a situation where a manager was dependent upon a press book and the mats supplied by an exchange to construct his newspaper advertising. This subject was gone into thoroughly, devoting much time to explaining to the boys how various sized ads could be revamped to fit the purpose needed and instruction given on the manner of boxing in second features with line-rules, circles, etc. Example of this were shown them from the tear sheets from our various out-state towns and an assignment given to be brought in the following week with their idea of a typical double feature program set to two columns nine inches, using any two pictures they desired with the material being only that supplied by the exchanges.

Fifth Session on Exploitation

The fifth meeting was devoted to exploitation. It was explained that it would be impossible to cover this topic in the few short hours we could devote to it, but we attempted to give them past examples of good and bad exploitation ideas which have been found useful or harmful. They were warned against using the old type of ballyhoo, which not only offended your newspaper but the general public. They were taught to weigh carefully every stunt as to its reaction before going forward with it.

Parades, street ballyhoos, window tieups, organization benefits and crowd-stopping stunts were discussed at length with all managers present dwelling upon their past experiences for the benefit of the students, and as an assignment those attending were asked to bring in at the next meeting their idea of an exploitation campaign on "Modern Times."

This concludes the meetings held to date. We intend discussing at the subsequent meetings the following routine:

Screen trailers—presentation of coming attraction trailers—institutional trailers, i. e., type of stock; brevity of copy; cartoons or art; length of footage, sound.

Newspaper stories and publicity:

Approach to newspaper executive.

Preparation of copy before presentation to newspaper.

News value and stories.

Timeliness of subject.

Watchfulness for cooperative tie-ins on timely happenings.

General resume of entire course.

The manner in which these prospective showmen have attended, and the interest they have displayed clearly indicates that we are accomplishing the purpose for which we set out. The assignments they turn in each week, while naturally are crude and show inexperience, definitely show each man's respective abilities and possibilities, and we feel that we will be able to develop future managerial talent from among them.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.

POPULAR NUMBER RIGHT DOWN TO EARTH WITH SWELL ACTION-LOVE STORY AND REGAN A HIT.

This one rings the gong for the b.o. as well as for the hero fighter-singer in the ring, and for the pop houses of all classes it is gaited to please their audiences of all types. And we are free to state that it carries more real human appeal and downright entertainment than a big slice of the more pretentious productions. It has fine emotional punch—fast tempo—excitement and breezy action—dandy love story—and carries a suspense kick right up to the last frame. Add to this a real comer in Phil Regan and who has been built up in a part that fits him perfectly, and you have an attraction for the masses such as your screen gets too seldom. And the lad can really sing, with a heart-warming Irish tenor, and an ability to act intelligently that is scarce in our singing actors. Plenty of personality that the femmes will go for. The hero is brought over from Ireland by the girl's dad, a fight promoter, who thinks he has in tow a famous champ, not knowing that the lad has licked the champ in a street brawl and has been passed off by the Irish manager as the real champ. Regan agrees to the deception so he can follow the girl (Evalyn Knapp) back to the United States, his only interest being in her. She has plans to make him a great radio draw with his voice, and builds him up accordingly while her dad grooms him for the big fight, still believing him the Irish champ. Then all sorts of fast and suspenseful complications building to the fight climax with a most satisfactory ending for all hands. You can shout about this as grand entertainment for the entire family and you'll have no kick-backs. For Irish communities a clean-up.

THE GREAT ZIEGFELD

by the critics!

"It was the kind of evening Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., would have enjoyed — a bang-up M-G-M premiere of a musical show LAVISH enough to fulfill the dream of any producer. A film as excellent as this is a godsend. Wm. Anthony McGuire has done an astonishing job with the script...The performances of Luise Rainer and William Powell, would have put over any film. There is Fannie Brice herself, at her funniest; a clever impersonation of Eddie Cantor; and a startling glimpse of A. A. Trimble portraying Will Rogers. There's Harriet Hoctor toe-dancing; Myrna Loy charming as the young Billie Burke; grand comedy performances by Frank Morgan, the dancing Ray Bolger, Reginald Owen and Nat Pendleton . . . It's a show Ziegfeld would have been proud to own, filled with the most beautiful girls I've ever seen on a screen; after three crowded hours, the audience was eager for more." —EILEEN CREELMAN, N. Y. Sun

"The most SPECTACULAR film to come out of Hollywood... fun, melody and loveliness. Spectacle after spectacle. Such lavishness never has been lavished upon a screen...William Powell performs with charm and zeal. Luise Rainer and Myrna Loy are gorgeous and glamorous . . . The picture is magnificent." —BLAND JOHANESON, N. Y. Daily Mirror

"In 'The Great Ziegfeld' the cinema pays lavish and SENTIMENTAL tribute to the most famous American showman since Barnum . . . It is a typical Ziegfeld show—beautiful, expansive, costly, tuneful, romantic and overpowering. Achieves the most beautiful and imaginative effect in this field yet presented." —RICHARD WATTS, Jr., N. Y. Herald Tribune

"If you want a history of musical comedy during the past forty years, 'The Great Ziegfeld' will give it to you; if you want to know how pulchritude became an institution, why bald-headed men sit in front row seats, where Fannie Brice, Eddie Cantor, Will Rogers, W. C. Fields and others got their start, or why Anna Held left home, 'The Great Ziegfeld' will satisfy your curiosity. All the names associated with the Ziegfeld tradition have been incorporated in a story that has HUMOR, humanity, romance and pathos. You will never see another musical film that exceeds it in opulence, inventiveness, splendor."

—THORNTON DELEHANTY, N. Y. Post

"For sheer beauty, splendor, opulence, this glittering spectacle takes its place as the last word in eye-and-ear entertainment. Practically a dozen or more musical pictures rolled into one. An extravaganza of such rich proportions that it runs three hours. It is a GLAMOROUS account of the illustrious producer's romance, ambitions and achievements. Unquestionably a motion picture event." —ROSE PELSWICK, N.Y. Journal

"A splendid picture, dazzling in the magnitude of its conception, brilliant in magnificence of execution. A production the great 'Ziggy', himself, would have viewed with proud satisfaction . . . Tell's a warm, pulsating HUMAN story of individuals—those glittering, glamorous personalities of theatrical royalty. The spectacular climax is attained in the utterly thrilling presentation of the 'A Pretty Girl Is Like A Melody' number. We recall nothing so breath-taking on any screen. Laughter is sprinkled through the picture's scenes. There should be special mention for every player. Robert Z. Leonard's direction crowns his many triumphs."

—REGINA CREWE, N. Y. American

"For once in their lives the producers of a pet picture may drag out the word COLOSSAL . . . If ever a picture was produced on a grand, lavish, extravagant and glittering enough scale to be so described, it is M-G-M's 'The Great Ziegfeld'. The dialogue sparkles...Ziegfeld is superbly represented by William Powell. Fannie Brice is inimitable. Her meeting with Ziegfeld is one of the funniest things Miss Brice has done on or off the stage . . . Harriet Hoctor shines. Ray Bolger brings the house down. Myrna Loy is beautiful. The balance of the huge cast is excellent."

—KATE CAMERON, N. Y. Daily News

"A lavish and ornate M-G-M spectacle that is colossal, big, stupendous, overwhelming, BREATH-TAKING, awe-inspiring. One spectacle follows another in dizzying succession, one Ziegfeld show is piled on the next until the audience is left speechless and gaspless. A mighty achievement." —LEO MISHKIN, N. Y. Telegraph

"Thoroughly Ziegfeldian. Has the opulence, the lavishness, the expansiveness and the color of the old Follies ...It has the GLITTERING sets, the exuberantly extravagant song and dance numbers, the brilliant costumes, the whole sweeping panoply of a Ziegfeld show produced with a princely disregard for cost...One of its spectacular numbers, 'A Pretty Girl Is Like A Melody,' never has been equalled on the musical comedy stage or screen." —FRANK S. NUGENT, N. Y. Times

"A production as LUXURIOUS and lavish as any the late Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr. ever produced. The theatrical ups and downs of the Glorifier of the American Girl offered the very stuff of which zestful and glamorous films are born—music, romance, excitement, adventure, color. A blend of homage, humor and heartbeat. A film that should command your immediate attention."

—WILLIAM BOEHNEL, N. Y. World-Telegram

"Colossal is the easiest adjective. A tribute to the late showman, 'The Great Ziegfeld'."

—WINSTON BURDETT, Brooklyn Eagle

MORE EAGLE FEATHERS

"The evil that men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones. . . . "

AND so now we have from the "Office of National Recovery Administration, Division of Review," a document entitled "The Motion Picture Industry," prepared by Mr. Daniel Bertrand, from the "Industry Studies Section," dated "February 1936," submitted to the President by Mr. Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce.

Thus do we hear again from the Blue Eagle—the bird that was done to death in a chicken house case.

The essence of the report, which weighs one pound, appears on page 168 in a paragraph saying: "Only a Federal Commission would seem versatile enough to cope with these various situations. Such a commission might be a separate Federal body or might constitute an addition to the duties of the existing Federal Trade Commission."

IT is significant that this ponderous and exhaustive document of bureaucratic inquiry into every tiny detail of motion picture business does in no wise at any point appear to concern itself with the social and moral aspects of the motion picture, which might possibly be considered proper concerns of government.

All of the indications of the report denote a Federal interest in the business of the motion picture, as something to get into, something to rule and deal with, as a business.

AGAIN, and painfully, we see in the phrase, "Industry Studies Section," that Government set up in this land for purposes of the regulation of affairs is seeking in a revolutionary manner to step from regulation to operation. The implications are devastating.

IRRELEVANT

REFLECTING on the many gestures of the Administration toward the motion picture, including the essays at and projects for Federal control, one must note that two of the most intimate and frequent callers at the White House, both persons of large experience in this industry, appear to be consulted about and to exert influences upon most anything else. Between them these two men represent extensive experience in the whole range of screen activities including finance, production, distribution and exhibition. But the experting and reporting on the motion picture in Washington has been done by a flock of little Blue Eagles.

MR. FELIX FEIST

THE passing of Mr. Felix Feist, these many years one of the most prominent of distribution executives, is a loss to the motion picture industry, which he served so well, of one of its outstanding exemplars of an efficient enthusiasm.

Institutions must partake of the nature and characteristics of the men who operate them, and to that sector of the industry to which Mr. Feist applied his intelligent diligence he was a vital contributor, achieving high status for his performance and wide and deep friendships for his vigorous personality.

Those who had occasion for intimate professional contact found him extraordinarily concise in his thinking, prompt in decision, warm in his humanities and sympathies.

None of us shall leave this strenuous, militant, relentlessly demanding world of the motion picture, with more friends and acquaintances speaking, and truly thinking, well of us.

NEW STAR SYSTEM

THE star rating system of The Daily News of New York, inventors of this attention, grows more intricate. Along comes Miss Kate Cameron's review of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" announcing it a four star picture for children, and a three and a half star attraction for adults. One presumes that this is for the metropolitan district of New York. A system of such delicate appraisal would necessarily make regional adjustments. Later we may anticipate age group and other special ratings. For instance a picture might go four stars for mama and only two and seven-eighths for papa.

THIS is the season when the little boy with the willow pole brings home the record trout, with plaudits in the local paper and derisive paragraphs about the fancy tackle of his grown-up competitors. The little boy gets the big fish merely because he sinks his ball of worms deep in the pool where the water is slow and stays all day. His bait is down where the ancient four pounders loaf and ponder, while the sporting young fish play in the live white water reaches where the fly casters wade. We'll make an allegory of that some day—about dumb successes.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

Hearings Close

Exhibitor, distributor and producer representatives this week wrote "finis" to the copyright revision hearings in Washington which for eight weeks have held the industry's attention.

Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America launched a concerted attack, demanding elimination of the damage penalty, as well as the score charge, seat tax and all other charges in addition to the film rental.

Opposing all pending legislation, the producers urged that it be deferred to the next session, while Gabriel L. Hess, for the distributors, pleaded for retention of the minimum damage penalty as a safeguard against "dishonest" exhibitors. See story starting on page 15.

Propaganda

The issue of censors versus Soviet propaganda films is due to remain in the spotlight for some time, with the Cinema Guild of Detroit pressing its fight to compel the local authorities to permit showings of Russian-made pictures. If the Guild loses its present battle in the Michigan supreme court it will seek a showdown in the federal courts, and, if necessary, the United States supreme court. See page 22.

Aiding MGM Suit

Declaring that the plagiarism case involving the MGM picture, "Letty Linton," is "of major importance to all producers and distributors of motion pictures, and to the motion picture industry in general," 17 film companies have filed a brief in amici curiae with the United States Supreme Court asking that the petition for review be granted.

The case was appealed to Washington following a decision of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, holding that the picture plagiarized a play by Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes.

"If the decision below stands, it will impose a very heavy burden upon producers and distributors of motion pictures, upon the motion picture industry in general and upon the public which resorts to it for amusement," the companies declared in their brief.

The industry, it was pointed out, is "particularly concerned in the interpretation of the law as it applies to the public domain. If this source of material is restricted or its free use rendered hazardous or doubtful, the effect upon the industry will, indeed, be very serious. The law as it affects the rights of prior and subsequent adaptors of a public domain work is of immediate importance to them as producers of motion pictures."

Declaring that there is an increasing demand for pictures based upon public domain material, and explaining that the production of such films requires more than the average investment by the producer, the cost of pictures of this type seldom being less than $500,000 and frequently in excess of $1,000,000, the brief contended that "practically all public domain works on which such photoplays are based have been previously dramatized by wellknown writers, generally by several prior dramatists, and these prior protected stage versions are known to the modern dramatists of stage and screen."

Deliverance

To obtain Broadway's financial deliverance from Hollywood, a group of New York producing managers is seeking $1,000,000 from Uncle Sam, as a revolving lending fund for play production.

This is the latest in a series of plans evolved to rehabilitate "the living theatre," which, the producers complain, has been stifled by motion picture competition and backing. See page 51.

Labor for Quota

British organized workers, in the National Association of Theatrical Employees, will urge continuance of the Quota provisions when the Departmental Committee on the Films Act meets. The union through its representatives also will propose amendments to make production of "quickies" impossible.

The secretary of the employees' union, in asserting that abolition of the Films Act would hand the British industry over to American interests, makes the charge that "Hollywood had waxed fat on the backs of underpaid kinema staffs in this country." To which Bruce Allan of the HERALD'S London staff comments that the introduction of American pay scales accounts for the fact that the general rate of payment in the production and distribution ends of the business is higher than in other businesses in England.

These and other developments in the British field are treated in the article on page 58.

New Markets

The vast market untouched in this country by the motion picture box office is a problem occupying the attention today of both producer-distributors and theatre owners, through the MPPDA and the MPTOA, respectively.

The MPPDA announces a plan for telling the whole story of the motion picture and its vast intricate structure, inside and out, to gain additional attention and goodwill for the box office. The plan is described, together with the MPTOA's observations on the subject, on page 27.

Nathanson Pact

A new five-year contract for N. L. Nathanson as president and general manager of Famous Players-Canadian, Paramount theatre subsidiary operating in the Dominion, was approved by the board of directors at a meeting in Toronto late last week. Mr. Nathanson's current contract expires June 1st.

Supplementary negotiations of an agreement which would permit Mr. Nathanson to acquire a substantial stock interest in Famous Players-Canadian are being continued, it was stated in New York over the weekend following the return from the Toronto meeting of Austin Keough, Paramount secretary and counsel, and Y. Frank Freeman, head of the company's theatre department.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

A. T. & T. Film Profit

The motion picture ventures of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company have proved very profitable, Walter S. Gifford, president, revealed at the annual meeting of stockholders Wednesday.

The sale of talking picture equipment has brought in $20,000,000 to the company through Electrical Research Products, Inc., he said.

A. T. & T., however, plans to withdraw completely from the financing of motion pictures, which it entered only to assist customers who had fallen into debt, Mr. Gifford said.

Of an original investment of $3,400,000 the company now has only $800,000 tied up in the picture industry, he said. The total of pictures financed represented only nine-tenths of one per cent of production in the United States, he added.

Not Producing

While production ultimately may be engaged in by Pathe Film Corporation's new subsidiary, tentatively titled Premier Productions, Inc., the company will devote itself immediately to setting up distribution machinery, similar to that of United Artists, for affiliated independent producers.

Production is uncertain, it was learned this week, and probably will not be undertaken for two years. The company will finance affiliated producers, and the discussions already have been held with a number of the more prominent independents, including Emanuel Cohen, Sol Lesser and M. H. Hoffman.

Distribution offices of First Division, which will be liquidated, will form the nucleus for an ultimate nationwide distributing system, which will be built gradually. Edward L. Alperson, slated to be president, will be in charge of sales.

The company will float a stock issue of about $2,000,000, according to plans.

Frank F. Kolbe, Pathe president, and Robert W. Atkins, executive vice-president, are expected to hold major positions with the new company. Charles Stillman, representing the Time, Inc., interests, will be on the board.

Hart in Court

Details of William S. Hart's dealings with United Artists in the production and distribution of his final picture, "Tumbleweeds," in 1925, were given before Justice Phillip J. McCook in the New York supreme court this week. Mr. Hart is suing the company for breach of contract and conspiracy, seeking $500,000 damages.

Counsel told the jury that the actor and his wife, Mary Hart, entered into a contract with United Artists whereby they were to produce two pictures. Mr. Hart and Joseph M. Schenck selected the script, the jury was told, and the first picture was made at a cost of $302,000.

Seeking also punitive damages, Mr. Hart alleged that before the picture was released United Artists made contracts for showing it at a low rental rate compared with other United Artists starring pictures and that the company gave its first showing a week before Christmas of 1925 against his request. It was charged that "Tumbleweeds" was shown in few theatres and was given poor bookings.

Counsel for United Artists said the company endeavored to give as favorable bookings and exploitation as possible.

Wm. Fox Appeals

William Fox has taken an appeal to the United States supreme court in Washington from the $234,082 contempt of court fine imposed in New York on him by United States District Judge William Bondy on February 20. The fine was imposed because of Mr. Fox's failure to appear for examination in a suit by the Capitol Company of San Francisco to recover on a rent guarantee in connection with the Fox theatre there.

Mr. Fox contended the order to appear was served in a railroad station in Pennsylvania outside the court's jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, in New York, Judge Robert P. Patterson reserved decision on a motion to set aside third party subpoenas designed to disclose allegedly hidden assets of Mr. Fox in the current action mentioned above. The subpoenas in question called for the production of the books and the records of accounts of H. L. Horton and Company, J. W. Sparks; Loeb, Alsberg and Company, B. J. Kallen and Company, and Berliner and Company.

Alex Berliner, against whom a personal subpoena was issued, called the procedure "a fishing expedition."

Oberon Suit

Merle Oberon sued Selznick International Pictures, Inc., in Los Angeles on Tuesday for $125,333.33 charging her reputation was damaged when another actress was substituted for her in the lead of "The Garden of Allah," now being made. Marlene Dietrich was substituted, but not named in the action.

Miss Oberon said Selznick agreed to pay her $6,000 a week for 10 weeks and $1,000 a day thenceforth if the picture was not completed in 10 weeks.

She charged that when she reported, the studio informed her another had been given the role, and offered her a part in another picture.

Review Fought

Review by the United States supreme court of the Washington state supreme court decision holding that the distribution of motion pictures is in interstate commerce and therefore not subject to the Washington state income tax is opposed in a brief filed with the court this week by eight major distributors.

The case was appealed to the highest tribunal by the state, seeking to secure a reversal of the state court decision.

In their brief opposing the review, the companies contended that the states are without power directly to burden interstate commerce and that while the exhibition of films is a local business, distribution is interstate commerce. The sole function of the distributor is to supply the films, it was declared, and this function is completed when the pictures are delivered to the exhibitor by transportation from without the state.

"The petitioner's maintain that the films, having come to rest within the state, lost their interstate character," the brief declared. "Our answer is that the distributors pay a personal property tax on the films. Petitioners reply that this payment of a property tax is inconsistent with the claim of immunity from the tax measured by the rentals received from the use of the films. We see no inconsistency."

"Significant"

Presence of Kenneth Thompson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild, in New York, was described Wednesday as "significant" by Actors' Equity Association, its affiliate, in view of the negotiations for renewal of the studio labor basic minimum agreement which started Thursday.

There have been reports, and Equity has anticipated, that the Hollywood guild would make an attempt to line up support of the various international union executives when the new contract discussions started. The guild long has demanded recognition from the studios.

Zoning Fight

On grounds that no cause of action is stated and that the plaintiffs are misjoined, Fox Midwest has moved to dismiss the suit against it and major distributors in the federal district court in Kansas City. The independents seek a permanent injunction against the zoning plan in force on grounds of conspiracy.

Distributor defendants will deny concerted action in an answer to be filed in the next few days and have indicated they will not raise an interstate commerce issue.

VISITORS AND STARS. Mr. and Mrs. Phil Chakeres (center) are guests of Margaret Lindsay and Pat O'Brien on a visit to the Warner lot while on a vacation out where the screen begins. Mr. Chakeres is general manager of the Chakeres Theatres circuit, with headquarters at Springfield, Ohio.

SINGING AUTOGRAPH. (Below) Nino Martini, opera star, gives his signature to a delighted miss as he leaves on a concert tour before starring in Pickford-Lasky's "The Gay Desperado", which will be released by United Artists.

BACK FROM FRONT. Howard Winner, Universal newsreel cameraman, returns to New York after four months filming war scenes on the front with the Ethiopian forces engaged in the Italian conflict.

SIGNED. Toby Wing has been given a long term contract by Hal Roach, maker of comedies for MGM release, and has gone to the Coast. She has been making personal appearances.

BACK TO HIS OLD TRICKS. (Below) W. C. Fields, on the set of Paramount's "Poppy", is prevailed upon by the cameraman to do some of old juggling tricks. Here it's the cane on the toe, one of the many stunts that are found in his repertoire.

BUENOS DIOS. Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of United Artists in charge of foreign sales, sailed Tuesday from Cristobal for the States after a visit to Mexico, Cuba, and Panama. At Havana he was greeted by George Casuso, United Artists attorney; Hilda Llodio, treasurer, and Henry Weiner, local company manager.

RETURNS. Bebe Daniels' followers among filmgoers are awaiting her appearance to the screen in "Southern Maid", Alliance production which First Division will release. It was made in England.

FOR NO REASON AT ALL, Harold Lloyd gets the morning milk on a visit to New York. This may of course have something to do with Paramount's "The Milky Way". He is in Manhattan seeking story material for his next film.

OLYMPIC WINNERS. (Below) Here is Universal Pictures' basketball team from the studio, which won the Olympic finals at Madison Square Garden and the right to represent America in the games at Berlin.

PAYING HONOR TO SALES EXECUTIVE ON COAST. J. J. Milstein, recently appointed western district sales manager of Republic Pictures, was guest at a dinner in the Jonathan Club, Los Angeles, with Pete Smith master of ceremonies. Among those attending: Charles Skouras and Jack Sullivan of Fox West Coast; Felix Feist, Jr., of MGM; Robert Hickey, Warner Bros.; Gus Metzger, exhibitor; Milton Arthur; Harry Vinnicoff, president of Independent Theatre Owners Association; Ben Berinstein, president, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California; Harry Rackin; Mike Rosenberg, Principal Theatres. Republic guests included Jack Fier, Floyd St. John, R. J. Cadman, Francis Bateman, Herman Schlom, Gordon Molson, Gordon Levoy, Jack, Weiner, Armand Schaefer, Joseph H. Lewis and Lindsley Parsons.

DANCING ON THE WALL. Or is it careening? Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, the team of "Hands Across the Table", will be seen soon in Paramount's "The Princess Comes Across", which is set for release May 15th. William K. Howard is the director.

INDUSTRY LEADERS MEET IN MOVE TO IMPROVE SELF-REGULATION

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Negotiations between motion picture distributors and exhibitors for mutually satisfactory self-regulation of trade practices are finally and definitely under way, starting at one o'clock on Thursday afternoon in the Rose Room of the Cinema Club at the Hotel Algonquin in the shadow of the old Hippodrome in New York.

That part of the motion picture that is represented by Broadway's "home office" and circuit headquarters observed the gathering of corporate, sales and legal minds with a feeling of optimism that out of it there will emanate tangible results.

The "Big Eight" distributors, so called, and Republic Pictures had accepted the written invitation of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, acting on behalf of its entire membership, to establish machinery for creating self-government for harmonious relationship between buyer and seller.

Thursday's beginning was a private round-table discussion for the single purpose of defining the problems of the exhibitor in his dealings with the distributor. Concluding the joint conference before the weekend, the conferees as sub-committees will attempt to arrive at solutions for specific subjects assigned them.

On the eve of the conference, observers in New York were privately concluding that it will be a showdown on the question of industry self-regulation—that self-government must be established soon, or federal intervention eventually will result. It was with this thought that Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, approached the distributors behind the locked doors of the Algonquin's Rose Room.

"We can no longer meet unfriendly legislators, reformers and club women who want to meddle into our motion picture affairs with the defense that we are capable of and willing to regulate our own practice and procedure and then do nothing about it," Mr. Kuykendall declared as he was entering the conference room.

The move comes as the industry is emerging from its most serious legislative encounter in years with outsiders who would effect federal control through Congress, as experienced at the recent Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking bill hearings in Washington. Some significance also may be attached to the proximity of the opening of the new self-regulation negotiations to last week's recommendation of Daniel Bertrand, Government economic surveyor to the Department of Commerce, that federal regulation is the only solution "versatile enough" to cope with the industry's complex problems.

A possible indication of the trend in "big business" is the move at this time of bankers and security dealers also to turn their attention to self-regulation "to promote a higher code of ethics."

Nor is the Administration on Capitol Hill convinced that all is well in general industry practice, President Roosevelt again expressing, Monday evening, at a political rally at Baltimore, his continued sympathy toward the defunct Blue Eagle of the NRA.

The MPTOA, on behalf of its exhibitor members and theatre owners everywhere, is now approaching the distributors with the idea that if the large corporations take an arbitrary negative stand they will be admitting not only to exhibitors but also to the outside interests that they either refuse or are unable to work toward establishing self-government.

Too, the MPTOA feels that the eyes of Congress are focused on the negotiations, since the Interstate Commerce Pettengill subcommittee of the House, at last month's hearings, specifically ordered Mr. Kuykendall to file with it a copy of the program of practices that are being taken up at this week's round table with distributors.

Industry leaders along Broadway today are freely discussing the relationship of the conferences to the growing insistence of the Government upon delving into the affairs of those businesses "that seem unable to adjust trade differences." Although the Administration itself has made no recent attempt to step in on the motion picture, observers point to the government's meddling in coal, communications and other lines.

More than one delegate in attendance this week at the industry trade practice discussions believe that the proper move at this time is to establish amicable industry government to preclude any statutory intervention or control.

Speculating Over Complaints

The industry's duly appointed legislative observers have brought word that many Congressmen consider the Neely-Pettengill bill more a piece of badly written legislation than an unnecessary medium for correcting conditions.

The conclusion this week on Broadway seems to be that while Washington—both Congress and the Attorney General's office—are not desirous of interfering legally with motion picture practice, they are beginning to speculate over the steady stream of complaints arriving during this session both from small owners in the business and from socalled reform element and club women without.

Thursday's conference started officially with luncheon in the Algonquin's Cinema Club at one P. M., business sessions calling the delegates to the round table at 2:30. Seen about the meeting chambers, as duly appointed representatives for the exhibitors, were, besides Mr. Kuykendall, the following MPTOA executive committee members: Oscar Lam, Georgia; Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; Jack Miller, Chicago; Charles E. Williams, Omaha; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis. L. C. Griffith of Oklahoma City was recovering from an illness and was preparing to participate in early sessions. Morgan Walsh of San Francisco likewise is expected to be enlisted shortly after the opening.

MONOPOLY CHARGED IN NEW MISSOURI SUIT

As an outgrowth of the St. Louis anti-trust action Paramount Distributing Company, RKO Distributing Corporation, General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., and Vitagraph, Inc., were charged with monopolizing preferred pictures in a suit filed in the Missouri supreme court Wednesday by Attorney General Roy McKittrick to stop them from operating in the state.

On one count the distributors were accused of forming a price-fixing pool as a move to help Warner Bros. gain control of three St. Louis theatres.

On the second count Mr. McKittrick named the same companies as forming a pool with Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and Universal, 20th Century-Fox, MGM, Columbia and United Artists, to control the sale of films in Kansas City, Springfield and Joplin, Mo.

Developments in the efforts of the Department of Justice to compel distributors to provide product to Fanchon and Marco first-runs at St. Louis are detailed on page 42.

GROUPS TACKLE SPECIFIC PROBLEMS

Abe Montague, general sales manager; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, William Rodgers, sales executive; Paramount Pictures, Neil Agnew, general sales manager; Republic Pictures, W. Ray Johnston, president; RKO Radio Pictures, Ned Depinet, executive; Twentieth Century-Fox, John D. Clark, general sales manager, and with the possible participation of Sidney R. Kent, president; United Artists, Paul Lazarus, sales executive, acting as the personal representative of George J. Schaefer, vice-president; Universal, James P. Grainger, with the possible additional participation of R. H. Cochrane, president. Warner Brothers had not notified the gathering on the eve of its meeting who would be sent as its representative, as its complete executive personnel was just returning from Hollywood.

The subcommittees will report on adjustments as rapidly as they are made. The conferees feel there is no point to holding up reports of settlements for inclusion in one final complete document. The whole situation, however, will not be fully threshed out for another month, at which time the acceptance of the arrangements arrived at will be made at least for MPTOA members for adoption immediately for the 1936-37 season.

The MPTOA delegates on Thursday began laying before the distributors their story of what's wrong with distributor-exhibitor relations and practices. "We are not entering the conference room with a chip on our shoulders," said an MPTOA spokesman, "nor with any idea of intimidating. Yet, we are not approaching the distributors on bended knee for a dispensation to stay in business."

Concede Need of Settlement

Distributor spokesmen on Wednesday said privately that "two or three" of the best corporate minds predicted as far back as four months ago that some action would have to be taken "before long" to effect machinery for the settlement of "just complaints" of exhibitors, and while the MPTOA is directly sponsoring the negotiations as they are now underway, at least two important distributor leaders in recent weeks have quietly expressed sympathy toward such a move in tangible form.

While the general opinion existed on Thursday that the definite program as presented by the MPTOA "contains nothing that will radically revolutionize industry machinery, procedure and practice," it was felt that the platform contained several planks that stand little chance, if any, of adoption.

The program embraces ten general problems: cancellation, trade dispute adjustment by conciliation boards, clearance and zoning, overbuying, "cutrate" competition between theatres, unfair nontheatrical exhibitions, a new standard form of exhibition contract, score charges, arbitrary designation of playdates, and the forcing of unwanted short subjects with feature sales.

Opinion at the beginning of the meeting appeared divided over the exhibitors' likelihood of obtaining the demanded outright increase in cancellation privileges from the present ten per cent to 20 per cent. However, chances are good, it was held, for effecting removal of the conditions and restrictions in the present 10 per cent cancellation clause which takes away the exhibitor's right to reject pictures: (a) If he does not buy and license at the same time every single picture released by the distributor and/or offered to the exhibitor; (b) If he fails to request in writing the cancellation of the picture within 14 days of the actual release in the exchange territory, which is frequently impossible for the exhibitor to determine; (c) If the film rentals average over $250 per picture; (d) If he is unable to book the pictures exactly as they become available; or, (e) If he is in default in any respect at the time on any of the terms, conditions and obligations of his contract.

Because these restrictions and conditions in the present 10 per cent cancellation arrangement make it extremely difficult, if not altogether impossible, for an exhibitor to obtain the rejection "privilege," so-called, some distributor delegates even agreed that the MPTOA's request for elimination of such restrictions and conditions probably stood the best chance of all demands of being granted.

Next in likelihood of enactment, they said, was the proposal for conciliation boards, from which observers now expect to develop voluntary arbitration machinery.

"We believe these readily available facilities for impartially ascertaining the facts in commercial disputes, bringing the parties to the dispute together and mediating their differences will relieve our business of much costly and unsatisfactory litigation, but will deny no one their 'day in court' if they insist on a law suit," Mr. Kuykendall's committee told the distributors.

At this point the observers at the conference questioned the possibility of arriving at some concrete formula for adjusting, on a general basis, the problems of overbuying, clearance-and-zoning, unfair cut-rate competition, control of non-theatrical exhibitions and arbitrary designation of playdates. Each of these problems, it was felt in distributor quarters, might better be adjusted individually, on their merits, by the proposed conciliation boards in the respective territories, rather than by any ironclad rule or regulation. They doubted if any uniform rule could be made to apply.

The distributors, on the eve of the conference, pointed out that a federal court judge in Detroit last week ruled there is no restrain of trade when clearance is used as the basis of a contract. They doubted that a uniform clearance and zoning chedule could be established in any territory. It was believed, however, that unreasonable or unfair clearance might also be adjusted by the proposed local conciliation boards.

On the subject of a new standard form of exhibition contract, some delegates to the meeting believed that this would have to be negotiated eventually, but that it was a matter for long negotiation between distributors and exhibitors because of the many complex problems and clauses contained therein.

The MPTOA declared it sought "a standard form of exhibition contract, reduced to essential clauses, understandable in language to intelligent exhibitors who are not lawyers, with no trick clauses giving unfair advantages to the distributor added thereto without the actual knowledge and voluntary consent of the exhibitor, and with a uniform provision for the enforceable arbitration of all contract disputes."

Score Charge Problem

Distributor spokesmen doubted that the MPTOA would "get anywhere" with the demand for abolition of the score charge, still made by some distributors, which, the exhibitors complained, "has never been justified by the distributors" and "is particularly unfair on percentage contracts."

The exhibitors' only hope for relief on this matter, it was said, unofficially, rested in the exhibitors' "hollering long enough and loud enough."

Concerning the "forcing of excess and unwanted short subjects with feature picture sales," distributor representatives declared they were unable to see any workable solution to the practice. "It is too much a bargaining matter" they held.

If unsurmountable obstacles appear in the way of a solution to any of the scheduled problems, the discussion on the point involved will be abandoned and attention turned to another subject.

No other exhibitor organization is participating at this time in the conferences, it being "MPTOA'S party." The MPTOA feels that as sponsor of the sessions it should be concerned only with its own participation, and that other organizations will have to come in later of their initiative

However, "after the negotiations get under way," the MPTOA declared, "the joint conference itself can invite any other interests they desire to participate, including any of the local and state exhibitor organizations who are not as yet active members of MPTOA. Our sole purpose is to get started. Support and encouragement of reputable exhibitors everywhere is welcome, as well as sensible advice and serious suggestions."

NOVEL DUAL FEATURE IDEA IN NEW ORLEANS

Whipping the devil around the stump has many variations, but the latest has developed in New Orleans, and it all has to do with that old problem, double features. Dual bills are most uncommon in the heart of the city, particularly along Canal Street, but in the neighborhood houses it is another question. And, here's how it is done. An exhibitor buys a feature from one exchange and bills it heavy. On the same day he quietly visits another exchange and takes home another feature, fully as strong as the first. The second feature is billed on the screen as a preview—no outside mention of it at all—and thus the audience gets its two pictures for the price of one.

EXHIBITORS AT COPYRIGHT HEARING DEMAND END OF MUSIC PENALTY TAX

Kuykendall and Myers Plead for Relief from Score Charge; Allied Amendment Would Eliminate Seat Tax

Two months of copyright hearings were concluded in Washington this week with the appearance before the House patents committee of representatives of the motion picture industry. While exhibitors asked for elimination of the $250 minimum damage clause and urged relief from the score charge and seat tax, the distributors appealed for retention of the minimum damage provision but took no position on theatre royalties.

The windup of the protracted hearing was enlivened by one of the intra-committee rows such as marked the first few weeks of the session when Representatives Braswell Deen of Georgia and Thomas O'Malley of Wisconsin, both of whom outrank Representative J. Burrwood Daly of Pennsylvania, assailed Mr. Daly for usurping the chairmanship during the absence of Chairman William I. Sirovich and Acting Chairman Fritz G. Lanham.

Demands presented for the exhibitors by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel and board chairman of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, were substantially identical in opposing continuation of the score charge and seat tax.

Kuykendall Attacks Tax

The distributors' views were presented by Edwin P. Kilroe, attorney for Twentieth Century-Fox and chairman of the producers' copyright committee; Fulton Brylawski, Washington attorney for the committee, and Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and the Copyright Protection Bureau. Mr. Kilroe and Mr. Brylawski discussed mainly affiliation with the International Copyright Union through adherence to the Berne convention. Mr. Hess devoted his presentation to film copyright infringements.

Declaring that under present conditions it is within the power of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to take every theatre in the country away from its present owner, Mr. Kuykendall sharply attacked the music tax and statutory penalty.

The seat tax, he said, is an extra charge imposed on exhibitors without their receiving anything in return, "from which there appears to be no escape and through which the music organization annually collects $1,500,000 unless many theatres are not paying the taxes levied or the estimate is way off."

Charges Unfair Exaction

"What we want," Mr. Kuykendall told the committee, "is to be able to buy a license under copyright for exhibiting recorded motion pictures in our theatres that is complete, intact and all inclusive for everything that is recorded on the film and cannot be separated from it, with no extra charges, music tax, score charge, or others jammed down our throats after we have bought and paid for the show. We feel that ASCAP uses the present harsh and unreasonable penalties and minimum damage provisions unfairly to impose a wholly unjustified exaction on every motion picture theatre, even down to the smallest country town theatre, that has cost us millions of dollars and for which we get exactly nothing not already bought and paid for in return."

While the exhibitor is subject to various charges under the guise of license fees, the committee was told, he is left without any real protection, because the music is inseparable from the other material on the film. He is deprived of any selection in the music to be played in his theatre, the MPTOA head pointed out.

Declaring that while exhibitors have complained of the music tax for many years, Mr. Kuykendall indicated that with the coming of sound the situation entirely altered.

"When we used silent films, the music, if any, was provided by the theatre's own orchestra, organist or other musicians," he said. "We at least had a theoretical chance to use music not controlled by the ASCAP combine. In the years 1927 to 1929 this completely changed. The music now is entirely recorded with the dialogue and picture, we have no choice in the matter whatever. An unexpected technical development . . . placed us inescapably in the grip of the ASCAP combine."

Mr. Kuykendall also complained that exhibitors "have saddled on them what is known as the 'score charge,' an extra charge on each picture over and above the copyright license fee or film rental, collected by most of the distributors of motion pictures.

"What this actually represents," he continued, "Heaven only knows. We have been given all sorts of stories about it by various distributors, but exhibitors uniformly feel that it is just an unwarranted extra charge for which there is no real justification.

"It's just a racket to get extra money out of us, for which we get exactly nothing in return.

"But now comes the ASCAP music taxes on top of all of this. Before the producer, who makes a picture with an ASCAP tune in it, can exhibit his own picture in his own theatre, regardless of how much he paid the composer for the tune or how much of a copyright license fee he pays to show the picture, ASCAP levies a music tax on the theatre which he must pay or get soaked a minimum of $250 for each and every time the recorded music is reproduced in the theatre. And every other exhibitor, every theatre, is subject to the same levy by ASCAP.

"The composer or publisher has already been well paid for the tune, and again paid for the right to record it. Both of these payments are put in the production cost in the film rental or copyright license fee which they had to pay to exhibit the picture. The tune is an inseparable part of the picture, yet it still cannot be exhibited until ASCAP's music tax is paid by the theatre. The exhibitor naturally feels they force him to pay a third time for something he has already bought and paid for, to wit, a license to publicly perform or reproduce in his theatre the motion picture as recorded by the studio, intact and complete."

Cites Attempted Increases

Asserting there is no limit to the amount that can be charged as a music tax, the head of the exhibitors' association told the committee that attempts have been made to increase it by as much as 1,000 per cent. Last year, he said, it was raised from 50 to 100 per cent. "They can run it up under the present law as far as they like," he added. "We are completely helpless in the matter and we cannot possibly escape it. It is an entirely arbitrary charge, not based in any way on what it is worth; there is no competitive market. It is not based on how much music is used in the theatre."

The witness attacked "estimates" given by ASCAP officers earlier in the hearings that they collect about $800,000 a year from the motion picture theatres, explaining there are 10,098,920 seats in the 15,378 houses regularly showing sound pictures, from which, at their present rates of 10, 15 and 20 cents a seat, the organization should obtain at least $1,500,000.

Says Stage Acts Should Pay

Mr. Kuykendall pointed out that copyrighted music is not an essential or an important part of most talking pictures and that it is only in the occasional "musical picture" that it is at all essential. In dramatic pictures, he said, music is used only to accompany the main title and occasionally for atmosphere, non-copyrighted classical and semi-classical music being more often used for this purpose.

"The really important creative work done on all motion pictures is done by the dramatist or

COMPOSERS SOCIETY COLLECTIONS RISE

To reopened theatres and better times generally for the film industry, radio broadcasters and other licensees, leading to an increased use of music, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers this week attributed a large increase in its collections this year.

The first quarterly distribution of royalties for 1936, declared last Friday, exceeded the last quarter's, which was $850,000, by "about 10 per cent," said ASCAP, which would be approximately $935,000, the largest in the Society's history. Warner Brothers publishing subsidiaries normally would share about 22 per cent, but with their withdrawal last January 1 the others benefit correspondingly.

Authors and composers affiliated with Warners will receive ASCAP royalties, in addition to what they will receive from Warner. They are planning, however, to turn over to the Society's relief fund what they will get from the film company, which would bring its first quarterly dividend distribution as a music publisher at the end of this month.

Kilroe for Distributors Asks Delay; Hess Says Dropping Damage Clause in Duffy Bill Would Aid "Pirating"

THE OLD AND THE NEW of American entertainment are contrasted with the emphasis that sound has brought to the screen in Universal's new version of "Showboat," the subject of this Herald Pictorial Preview. Above is the "entire company" on the old river boat; below, an ensuing and elaborate scene on the New York stage with Kim (Sunnie O'Dea) in debut. On the opposite page: Allan Jones, starred as Gaylord Ravenal, with Irene Dunne as Magnolia, and Charles Winninger as Cap'n Hawks, skipper, the role he created in the original stage play. The novel was by Edna Ferber and the late Florenz Ziegfeld produced the stage version and a revival. Universal made it on the screen first as a silent production and later with a part sound treatment. Thus, the forthcoming picture represents the fifth presentation of the story on stage and screen.

'SHOWBOAT' and AMERICANA

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

WOVEN of material 100 per cent American in character, re-creating the glamour of one of America's grandest and best loved institutions, the river showboat, and capturing the glitter of the American stage during the brilliant era bridging two centuries, "Showboat" returns to the screen in Universal's third picturized version of the Edna Ferber novel which the late Florenz Ziegfeld had brought to the stage and then presented a second time in revival.

The locales and settings which constitute the backgrounds promise to be as interesting as the story. An old river showboat has been faithfully duplicated for the earlier sequence. The ensuing locales, the residence districts, night clubs and theatres of Chicago, New York and Paris, will be presented as they were at that time.

Musical drama is the substance of the picture. The motivating story is a sympathetic, emotion inspiring dramatic romance. It blends love interest and drama that has pathos for its keynote. Comedy contrast is homey, human humor. Music, as featured in solo and chorus, incidental to action and incorporated in the score, combines the appeal of old favorite airs, the charm of Negro spirituals and folk songs and the allure of specially prepared modern numbers. Dancing revives the rhythmic grace of old fashioned cake-walks, soft shoe and sand dances and contrasts them with the flashing tempo of modernism.

The story is the romance of two persons and the drama of many. It tells of a love that thrilled to the ecstasy of youth and the joy of parenthood; a love that knew the happiness of triumph, the despair of disappointment, fear of poverty and the tragedy of desertion. It tells of a man who was afraid and a woman who was the soul of courage.

But "Showboat" is not a somber story. For every moment of drama, and that entertainment quality is sometimes stark in its tear provoking quality, there are just as many minutes of gayety, life and joy. Paul Robeson singing "Old Man River" may touch the more tender emotions, but there is a bubbling brilliance continually accruing to Charles Winninger as Cap'n Andy Hawks, skipper of the "Cotton Blossom." The love drama of Irene Dunne as Magnolia and Allan Jones as Gaylord Ravenal calls to sympathy but the fun Sammy White and Queenie Smith provide is surely capable of spreading smiles.

The story is now being brought to the screen in the full scope that modern technique has made possible. It has been given costly production.

Stage and screen play, together with lyrics, having been prepared by Oscar Hammerstein II with music by Jerome Kern, "Old Man River," "Make Believe," "Old Fashioned Wife" and "After The Ball" are among the old numbers that will be heard in addition to three new Hammerstein-Kern numbers. Dance numbers, arranged by LeRoy Prinz, span the range from the stately effects of yesteryear to the intricate arrangements of today. More than fifty sets were constructed to accommodate the production. With James Whale as director, the cast also includes Helen Westley, Donald Cook, Hattie McDaniel, Francis X. Mahoney, Charles Middleton, Arthur Hohl, Helen Morgan (also in her stage role), J. Farrell MacDonald, Marillyn Knowlden, Sunnie O'Dea, Mae Beatty, Clarence Muse, a score or more well known names in minor parts, a Negro chorus of 200 voices, fifty dancing girls and 3,500 extras.

EXHIBITORS AT COPYRIGHT HEARING

writer, the actors and the director," he asserted. "Their work is copyrighted too, yet they levy no additional tax on the theatres exhibiting the picture. What possible justification can ASCAP have for levying such a tax on behalf of the composer that the dramatist and writer does not also have for their far more important copyrighted contribution?"

In the case of the few houses using stage shows, Mr. Kuykendall contended the acts themselves should pay whatever royalties are necessary for whatever copyrighted material they use.

Buck Answers Kuykendall

Gene Buck, ASCAP president, denied some of Mr. Kuykendall's charges in a statement issued in Washington, saying: "These motion picture theatre owners are merely trying to escape charges. They paid for the use of music before sound was introduced on the screen, and as for the score charge which they have seemed to pin on us, we have nothing to do with that angle of the question."

Having saved "millions of dollars" by eliminating orchestras, exhibitors now are trying to save more by not paying for the use of copyrighted music, Mr. Buck charged. He said he would develop this phase before the hearings closed.

Mr. Myers, on behalf of Allied members, submitted a proposed amendment to the Duffy bill which would eliminate the seat tax. If passage of the measure is endangered by this proviso, however, Allied said its membership favors "prompt enactment of the Duffy bill as passed by the Senate." Mr. Myers also urged the committee not to reinstate the penalty clause in the bill, and attacked the score charge. The Allied memorandum was put in the record by Representative O'Malley.

"Under the proviso," suggested Allied, "the producer-distributors of motion pictures would have to bargain for and obtain all the rights necessary to produce, record, exhibit and reproduce copyrighted motion pictures with copyrighted music and to convey to the motion picture exhibitors all the right necessary to exhibit the films in their theatres for a single charge, thus relieving the exhibitors of the necessity of paying the score charge and seat tax as separate items.

"The recording fees exacted by the electrical companies and the Music Publishers' Protective Association will be included in the cost of production instead of in a score charge the amount of which is now a matter of haggling between the exhibitors and distributors and bears no relation to the cost."

Pointing out that the present complicated film license agreement "sometimes leads to controversies as to whether a picture was exhibited prior to or after the licensed period, that is, whether there was an unauthorized showing," Allied in its memorandum also asked for elimination of the damage penalty in this connection.

By application of the penalty to film copyrights, the federal government "has taken sides in a controversy growing out of an exhibition contract," said Allied.

Allied warned that exhibitors "will resist to the utmost any proposal to enact a copyright law perpetuating these penalties," and charged that exhibitors "are being discriminated against by a law of the United States and they are exercising their constitutional right to petition the Congress for a redress of grievances."

The committee was informed that should it "follow the compromise suggestions that have been circulated, to relieve certain consumers of music from the penalty clause and not others, the independent exhibitors insist that they be included in the exempted class."

Taking up the cause of the film producers and declaring that the chief concern of the film industry in copyright legislation is that the law be clear, Mr. Kilroe informed the committee that the industry is the greatest user of copyrighted material in the world, spending from 15 to 25 million dollars a year. Seven or eight of the major producing companies pay approximately $2,000,000 a year each for copyrighted material, he said.

Kilroe Urges Delay

Not one of the three pending bills is acceptable to the industry, Mr. Kilroe said, suggesting that consideration of the legislation be postponed until next session so that the best parts of each of the three can be consolidated into one measure.

The major objections to the pending legislation are the merging of the production and exhibition rights, the provision restricting assignments to the first 28 years of the proposed 56-year copyright; the copyrighting of interpretations by music performers, and proposed amendments to the Berne convention to be considered at the conference in Brussels this year which, he said, strike at the heart of our copyright laws.

Nobody knows the purpose of the proposal to merge production and exhibition rights, he declared, but if enacted "its interpretation will not be settled until expensive and disastrous litigation affecting these rights is carried to the United States supreme court." The provision will not solve the problem of music royalties for the exhibitors, but may add to their burden, since they would still be open to the seat tax for incidental music not associated with any picture on exhibition, he declared.

Adherence to the Berne convention until after it is determined what action is to be taken with respect to pending amendments was urged by Mr. Kilroe. Discussing the same problem, Mr. Brylawski pointed out that the pending bills contain reservations designed to safeguard American interests, and explained that such reservations would make adherence impossible. Conversely, he said, adherence would make it impossible to amend the law later to safeguard our interests.

Mr. Brylawski also attacked provisions of the Duffy bill exempting from royalties performances in places where no admission is charged. He said it has becomes apparent the bill will not prohibit the rendition of a sound track material under such conditions.

Exemption from infringement damages given newsreels for copyrighted material used incidentally, Mr. Brylawski urged, should be extended to features, many scenes, he said, being made in the open and there might innocently be picked up copyrighted material, which would leave the producer and exhibitor open to damage claims.

Hess Talks on "Pirating"

"Pirating" of pictures not only destroys a portion of the distributors' market but seriously injures honest exhibitors, Mr. Hess declared in opening his presentation. Criticizing exhibitors for their failure to recognize the advantages to them of penalties on unfair competitors, he asserted that elimination of the minimum damage provision would prevent distributors from giving the protection exhibitors seek when entering into license agreements.

Exhibitors and distributors have been as one in their effort to eliminate bicycling and other evils, he said, quoting a letter from Stanley D. Kane, secretary of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, advising of the rejection of the application of a bicycler for membership. Except for minimum statutory damages, Mr. Hess went on, there are no practical remedies by which the distributors can protect themselves and honest exhibitors from "pirated" exhibitions.

The education of the industry concerning minimum damages has been so effective the last eight years that from a loss of "millions" annually from pirated exhibitions, violations have become negligible, Mr. Hess declared.

No legal actions were originated last year although 1,469 cases were investigated. Eight cases were filed last year on the basis of 1934 investigations, but in the preceding year only three suits were brought, and a similar number was initiated in 1933, he said.

"Speaking for the distributors of motion pictures, the producers, the honest exhibitors, and the arts and crafts which participate in the manufacture of motion pictures," he concluded, "I earnestly ask that before any legislation amending our copyright law be favorably reported, the following be preserved:

"1. The right to protect our licensed customers from unfair competition by permitting us to control the time, place, method and manner of every exhibition of our pictures under our copyrights. This necessarily requires elimination of the word 'publicly' qualifying the exhibition right in the Duffy and Daly bills. It also means the elimination of any requirement of admission charges as applied to motion pictures under the Duffy bill.

"2. The preservation of minimum statutory damages of $250 to deter piracies, to insure the mass licensing necessary under mass distributing system, and to provide some partial return of compensatory damages to the copyright owner for his very actual indirect expense in disclosing and proceeding against infringing non-licensing users.

"3. The preservation of the Townsend amendment of 1912 in the statutory damage section, whereby statutory damages are reasonably restricted to the infringing manufacturer or distributor of a motion picture which plagiarizes on some musical or literary material in its production, and which is thereafter distributed to 10,000 secondary infringers, innocent theatre owners, who infringe the same literary or musical copyright by exhibition of the picture in their theatres."

BUS LINE STARTING PICTURE SHOWINGS

Motion picture showings on buses will be inaugurated for the first time on the transcontinental buses of the All-American Bus Lines, Inc., of Chicago, it was announced by B. T. Peyton, president.

The bus line has ordered 52 projector installations for showing 35 mm. non-inflammable films. The projectors will be operated automatically, without the need of an operator, the bus porter changing the films, said Mr. Peyton.

DEATH OF FELIX F. FEIST CLOSES 27 YEARS OF ACTIVITY IN INDUSTRY

General Sales Manager of MGM Started as Advertising Executive of American Kinemacolor Company in 1909

Death came on Wednesday morning to Felix F. Feist, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, after a painful spinal illness of a year. Thus ended his 27 years of service to the motion picture.

Mr. Feist, 52 years of age, was born in New York on July 15, 1883. His son, Felix, Junior, is engaged in short subject production at Metro's studio at Culver City. His daughter is Mrs. Myron Nast, of New York. Mrs. David J. Klein, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and Mrs. A. B. Seder, of New York, are sisters. Solomon Feist, of Philadelphia, is a brother, and so was the late Leo Feist, song publisher, whose music business was purchased three months ago by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Funeral services will be held Friday morning at ten o'clock at Temple Emanu-El, 65th Street and Fifth Avenue, New York.

Until then the body will lie in the Universal Funeral Chapel, 597 Lexington avenue, New York.

Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, Rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, will officiate at the funeral services. Dr. Jonah Wise, a friend of the late MGM sales manager, also will speak. Burial will be at Woodlawn Cemetery, and will be attended by brother lodge members from the Masons, Knights of Pythias and Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

First in Advertising

Felix F. Feist—his correct name was Feist Felix Feist—was one who found his place in the motion picture through creative ability, unfaltering initiative and two sturdy fists.

His first business engagement was a long training period in advertising, so when American Kinemacolor Company was formed in 1909 he became advertising manager. Thus Mr. Feist's early motion picture training was under the authorship of one of the very first important exploiters of the screen, whose name in those days became of international prominence in film affairs, and at times the symbol of considerable power. Mr. Feist's association with Kinemacolor came at a time when the dreams of the inventors striving for color in motion pictures came to flower. It was Mr. Feist who aided in advertising "the first color picture" on the screen, in a two-color process that the Urban-Smith interests had developed. As a member of the Urban staff he was on hand at the very beginning of the commercial career of color, Feb. 26, 1900, at a matinee showing at the Palace theatre in London.

Some time between Mr. Feist's short stay with Charles Urban and his association, at the founding, with Celebrated Players, a motion picture exchange in Chicago, Felix Feist turned temporarily to song writing.

FELIX F. FEIST

The engagement with Celebrated Players in the Middlewest terminated in 1913, Mr. Feist having worked the original job into Celebrated's presidency. Next came his appointment as general manager and secretary of the old Equitable Pictures Corporation, which later merged with World Film Corporation.

Acknowledging his work at Equitable and World, Samuel Goldwyn appointed him, in 1920, the vice-president and general sales manager of Goldwyn Pictures.

Two years with Sam Goldwyn and Mr. Feist resigned, in 1922, to join Joseph M. Schenck Productions as supervisor of special features, handling the unit-produced features of Norma and Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton, until 1925, when, on April 15th—11 years to the day before his death—Joseph Schenck's brother Nicholas took Mr. Feist to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to succeed James R. Grainger as general manager of sales and distribution. Mr. Grainger had resigned to become sales manager for William Fox at Fox Film Corporation.

At the time Mr. Feist also was handling sales for Inspiration Pictures.

Student of Selling

Mr. Feist long was recognized as one of the industry's most astute students of selling. He was the author of the "exclusive run" selling plan, adopted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in 1932. The idea was to sell Metro's outstanding and costliest product exclusively to a single run in a given area at higher rentals than normally were charged.

The exclusive run idea was experimented with by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and its Loew circuit theatre affiliate, for some two years, in a few places where the company complained of difficult subsequent-run situations. The plan did not prove feasible, however, and was abandoned.

Al Lichtman, then general sales manager of United Artists, and now of the Felix Feist top-rank MGM distribution executive staff, had a similar idea at the same time.

Author of "Exclusive Run" Selling Plan Tried Out in 1932; Helped Sponsor "Selective Picture" Sales; Arbitrator

Too, Mr. Feist proposed, and caused to be effected, a number of reforms in distribution and exhibition practice. He was one of the chief sponsors of the "selective picture" idea of selling, and was always among the foremost foes of all "cutrate" practices among exhibitors, campaigning vigorously at times against double bills, premiums and similar stimulants both as detracting from the value of the screen and diverting money from rentals.

Mr. Feist was a leader in the industry's attempts to effect machinery for adjusting exhibitor complaints and for effecting amicable relations between distributor and exhibitor.

In this era he probably was the staunchest advocate of the roadshow, sending units into the field several times yearly with the outstanding MGM product, and playing it two-a-day, advance scale on the reserve seat basis. He strongly favored percentage selling, too, and frequently achieved higher returns for his product than many other general sales managers.

Anniversary Tribute Last Year

Las summer MGM's two national sales conventions, one in Kansas City, were dedicated by the Metro management to Mr. Feist on the occasion of his tenth anniversary with the company.

First indications of failing health appeared about 11 months ago, when a serious distribution problem in the Chicago area required close attention. Exhibitors there called a boycott against Metro when the company threatened to build theatres in competition with the independents in order to further the position of the company's product in that city. Disregarding counsel of friends and physicians, the sales executive responsible in large measure for the development of his company's formidable selling policy, traveled from Broadway to the scent of the dispute and personally conducted long drawn out negotiations culminating in a satisfactory settlement of the contested issues. A considerable portion of the corporation's potential rental gross was at stake.

The Chicago activities, carried on with the determined vigor which characterized Mr. Feist's operations over the years, aggravated the physical condition he stoutly declined to recognize as serious. He finally was persuaded last summer to go to Palm Springs for a rest, after which he believed he had made substantial recovery. He returned to New York in the fall and plunged into the job of selling to exhibitors new sales policies worked out by his company, making a number of quick trips into the field and working at his accustomed high speed. This was reflected in the growing seriousness of his ailment, and in the winter months left his post for Hot Springs for treatment for arthritis of the spine. Failing to gain, he traveled next to Miami Beach, where, while a house guest of M. B. Shanberg, former middlewest exhibitor, expressed the wish that death might relieve him of his suffering.

Mr. Feist returned to New York on April 3rd and entered Mount Sinai hospital, where the ailment finally took its toll Wednesday morning.

FIGHT OVER PROPAGANDA IN SOVIET FILMS HEADED FOR SUPREME COURT

Cinema Guild of Detroit Will Go to Highest Tribunal If Necessary in "Maxim" Case, Says Verlinsky

Threatening international complications, the question of whether importation and exhibition of Russian films violate the pledge of the Soviet Union not to disseminate propaganda in the United States, given when this country recognized the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, is due for an airing in the United States courts, and if necessary it is understood the fight will be taken to the supreme court.

Vladimir I. Verlinsky, president of Amkino Corporation of New York, official American agency of the Soviet Motion Picture Trust, said this week that the Cinema Guild of Detroit is planning to go all the way to the highest tribunal to compel the local authorities to permit the showing of Russian pictures.

All Soviet-manufactured films apparently are barred in the motor city on the ground of Communistic propaganda. Two films distributed here by Amkino, "The Youth of Maxim" and "Peasants," were shut out by the police censor last fall, and both Amkino and the Cinema Guild decided it would be useless to apply for a permit for other Russion films under the circumstances.

Appealed from Circuit Court

A permit for "The Youth of Maxim" was revoked and the print confiscated after widespread protest by local civic and patriotic organizations and religious leaders, and considerable argument was stirred up between those who objected to the film as Communistic propaganda and those "who could see no harm in it."

The Cinema Guild unsuccessfully fought the ban in the circuit court, which upheld the authority of the police censors, and the case last month was argued on appeal to the Michigan supreme court. A decision is awaited, and if it is against the Cinema Guild the federal courts then will be resorted to.

While the ban technically was for the reason that the picture is "indecent and immoral," and this interpretation was affirmed in the circuit court under the broad discretionary powers of the censors, Nathaniel H. Goldstick, assistant corporation counsel, and other opponents of the exhibition of Russian films raised the issue of propaganda. Mr. Goldstick ruled its circulation violated "the specific agreement between the commissar of foreign affairs of the Soviets and the President of the United States," made at the time the United States recognized Russia.

Challenges Censors' Authority

There have been instances in other localities where the exhibition of Soviet films has been prevented by the authorities, but this is the first court test challenging the right of censors to prohibit films on the ground of Communistic propaganda. The American Civil Liberties Union, the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, and Reds, Socialists, liberals and other sympathizers consider the Detroit case a paramount issue and have rallied to the support of the Cinema Guild.

"The Youth of Maxim" depicts industrial conditions and the struggles of the revolutionary workers in the days of the Czar. Sergeant Joseph M. Kollar, police censor, maintained it was un-American and endeavored to instill Red ideas in the minds of the audience.

Meanwhile Charles Chaplin's films are finding great favor in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Mr. Verlinsky announced this week that negatives of "City Lights," produced in 1931, and "Modern Times," Chaplin's latest, have been shipped for exhibition in that far-flung country.

Mr. Verlinsky, who closed the deal with United Artists on instructions from the central Soviet film industry, said that while Russia exercises censorship over films, both Chaplin pictures were considered suitable and there would be no changes. The Russian masses as well as the industry executives consider Chaplin a great artist, he said.

Soviet Commission Stays

The five-member Soviet commission which arrived recently to study film technique and methods will remain here at least another month surveying equipment and manufacturing processes at factories in New York, Camden, N. J., and elsewhere in the East, and in Chicago. Two of the group later will go to Hollywood for a study of recording, laboratory and other studio technology.

RADICALS WAVERING IN PICTURE STAND

While radicals, socalled, are going to court to obtain "freedom of the screen" for Soviet films, they still are seeking to deny the screen to films to which they object as allegedly "anti-labor," "pro-war" or other pet phrases.

Revival of picketing and demonstrations at theatres in the metropolitan New York area last week resulted in the arrest of 10 demonstrators at Loew's Coney Island. They were showing their displeasure with "Riffraff," Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer picture of waterfront strife which has been picketed by maritime unions on the west coast, and elsewhere.

After a hearing, Judge William O'Dwyer in magistrate's court sentenced seven picketers to two days in jail or a fine of $10 each, and three, including a woman, to serve one day or pay $1 fine. Most of them elected to serve.

Lawyers Protest Court Allowances

Arthur Ballantine of Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, counsel to the Paramount trustees, along with Alfred Cook of Cook, Nathan and Lehman, counsel to the Paramount stockholders' committee, appeared before the United States circuit court of appeals in New York this week appealing from Judge Alfred C. Coxe's order designating the allowances to be made them for their Paramount services. Mr. Ballantine's firm was allowed a total of $450,000 and Mr. Cook's, $115,000.

The court reserved decision after listening for two days to the arguments.

Kuhn, Loeb and Company, former Paramount bankers, and Cravath, De Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood, as Kuhn, Loeb's counsel and former counsel for Paramount, were heard Tuesday. Kuhn, Loeb put in an application for $100,000 for its services at the time of the reorganization, and the Cravath firm asked $150,000. Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe, who presided over the Paramount court proceedings, disallowed both petitions in their entirety. The two firms are appealing from that decision.

An appeal by the stockholders' protective committee from Judge Coxe's allowance at $10,000 for an application for $33,116 for Coverdale & Colpitts, accountants employed by the committee, was also heard.

Seven additional appellants whose petitions for fees were either reduced or disallowed by Judge Coxe will be heard by the Circuit Court next month.

Mr. Ballantine told the court that lawyers of his firm worked a total of 72,113 hours on the Paramount situation and that the allowance made them by the court amounts to the "ridiculous pittance" of $6.25 per hour. He reminded the court that not so long ago it had pared the fees of servitors in the Allied Owners reorganization to a figure that maintained a market value of $11 per hour for the legal workers.

Mr. Cook, discoursing in the same vein, also protested against Judge Coxe's reduction of the fee originally asked.

Thomas D. Thacher, attorney for Paramount, told the court that the company wanted to see every factor in its reorganization paid "whatever is fair and reasonable" and that it believed that Judge Coxe's allowances took care of this ably enough.

MPPDA AND MPTOA DEVISE PLANS TO RAISE BOX OFFICE PATRONAGE

Outlines for Study Groups Announced by Mrs. Winter on Coast; Exhibitor Organization Seeking New Markets

Producers and distributors are ready to tell the story of the motion picture, inside and out, to the public at large, in the latest move to build additional goodwill in the hope that it will be reflected in increased box office receipts.

Aiming directly at organized public attention, the plan is being effected by the large companies through their membership in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Will H. Hays, president, and will be conducted from the Hollywood branch by Alice Ames (Mrs. Thomas G.) Winter, in charge of community service for the MPPDA.

"Because there is a growing demand for information on motion pictures," Mrs. Winter is notifying civic, educational, institutional, religious and other outside groups that the MPPDA now has available a series of four brief outlines for study groups, and, in addition, seven articles for subsequent discussion—all intended to make the public motion picture conscious. The subjects in printed form will be sent free to any group requesting copies, and follow:

1—HISTORY OF PICTURE MAKING

How it began.
Successive steps in development.
Organization of the business.
Industry statistics.
The industry's self-control.

2—PICTURES IN THE MAKING

What a studio looks like.
Scenario preparation.
Processes of picture making
(a) Sound.
(b) Devices by which effects are produced.

3—THE ART OF MOTION PICTURES

Entertainment.
Differences between the cinema and other arts.
Story form.
Scenario writer.
Director.
Art director.
Cameraman.
Acting.
Sound in pictures.
Color.
Rhythm.
Cartoons.
Audience satisfaction.
Suggestions as to evaluating pictures.

4—MOTION PICTURES AND THE PUBLIC

Censorship.
How are better pictures coming?
Survey.
Organization for better pictures.
The educational situation.
Library relations.
Junior matinees.
What is being done inside the studios.
Motion pictures and the family.

In addition to these printed programs, which also are intended to inform the existing filmgoing public, the MPPDA has mimeographed articles to distribute on certain special subjects, as follows:

1—SIXTY LEADING DIRECTORS

2—REVIEWING A PICTURE

Analysis of motion picture technique, by Mrs. Mullen, of Lincoln High School.

3—INFLUENCE OF TALKING PICTURES ON OUR PRESENT-DAY SPEECH

By Mrs. Oliver Hinsdell, Dramatic Coach, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

4—SOME LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN SOUND RECORDING AND REPRODUCTION

Excerpts from papers presented at meetings of the Technicians Branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts.

5—STEREOSCOPY, COLOR AND TELEVISION

6—BIBLIOGRAPHY: A GUIDE TO THE LITERATURE OF THE MOTION PICTURE

Prepared by F. Christeson, Reference Librarian of the University of Southern California.

7—MOTION PICTURES BASED ON PUBLISHED BOOKS, PLAYS AND SHORT STORIES

As released during the period from July 1, 1934, to date.

Nor is the producer-distributor MPPDA group alone in the effort now being expended for widening the market.

Proceeding on the premise that there seems to be a considerable number of non-customers in the neighborhood of most theatres—"a huge undeveloped market for motion picture entertainment right under our nose that we have been unable to reach as yet"—the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week announced that it "is vitally interested in plans and ways of developing this retail market for motion picture entertainment for the benefit of exhibitors." The MPTOA pointed out that "frequency of moviegoing is nearly independent of the economic circumstances of the customers."

The MTOA, in a bulletin to the trade, by Ed L. Kuykendall, president, disclosed that at the organization's March meeting of the board of directors, at Miami, "much interest was displayed" in a study of the theatregoing market as it stands today.

SPOOR 'NATURAL VISION' SHOW CLOSES IN A DAY

To sparse attendance with admission price reduced from $1 to 25 cents, George K. Spoor's "Niagara Falls" opened Monday, April 6th, at the Mosque theatre in Newark, N. J., for an eight-day trial run represented as a demonstration of his "natural vision" motion picture process. On Tuesday morning stagehands and operators, alleging nonpayment of salaries, attached the large screen which is a vital factor of the equipment, electrical apparatus and other appurtenances, closing the show.

"Niagara Falls" was last exhibited publicly, briefly, and closed under similar circumstances, at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1933. It was first exhibited publicly in New York and Chicago in 1930, this event evoking a pell-mell interest in the so-known "wide screen," momentarily hailed as a prime development and abruptly abandoned after brief trial.

John Berggren, long affiliated with Mr. Spoor in development of the process, was joint-sponsor of the Newark exhibition. The program included vocal music and a lecture by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," which D. E. Griffith brought to the screen as "The Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Spoor's investment in the development of his "natural vision" process subsequent to his withdrawal from motion picture production with the dissolution of General Film company and prior to its premiere in 1930 was variously estimated by conservative and informed commentators from $5,000,000 to $7,500,000.

Frequency of Filmgoing Called Nearly Independent of Economic Circumstances of Customers; New Appeal Sought

Court Refuses to Punish Krellberg in "Ecstasy" Case

The appellate division of the New York supreme court late last week refused to punish Joan of Arc Pictures, Inc., and S. S. Krellberg, operators of the Bijou theatre, New York, on a charge of contempt of court brought by Eureka Productions, Inc. No opinion was given.

The contempt allegation grew out of the fight of Eureka to compel removal of signs combining "Ecstasy," the title of its film, with "Young Love," a picture distributed by Metropolis Pictures, Inc. Eureka said the signs were not removed from the Bijou until more than 24 hours after a temporary injunction was issued restraining use of the word "Ecstasy."

Eureka was considering an appeal of the denial of the motion to punish, but Henry Pearlman, its attorney, said it was uncertain that an appeal could be taken since the ruling was from the appellate Division.

Meanwhile attorneys were preparing for a hearing of the issues when the injunction case comes up soon in the appellate division.

N. Y. OWNERS DEFEAT TEN STATE MEASURES

New York Kills 10 Bills, St. Louis Four; Rhode Island Legalizes Sunday Shows

Ten bills which would have imposed drastic burdens and restrictions on exhibitors in New York state have been killed in the legislature at Albany, nine of these receiving the death blow in the Assembly and one in the Senate.

While companion measures of some of the Assembly bills disposed of are pending in the Senate, their passage is considered doubtful, and they are under the eagle eye of an exhibitors' legislative committee representing circuit and independent theatres in New York City, of which J. Henry Walters of RKO is chairman.

Elsewhere, as legislative sessions generally enter their last lap, the week produced these developments:

Proposals for a 10 per cent admission tax and a gross sales tax incorporating a 10 per cent levy on theatre grosses died with adjournment of the Alabama legislature. There may be a special session next fall.

Four bills aimed at the industry in St. Louis expired with adjournment of the board of aldermen.

A bill legalizing stage dancing on Sunday in Massachusetts has been deferred to the next session.

A four per cent tax on all theatre tickets over 10 cents was included in the "luxury tax" bill passed by the New Jersey assembly Monday night, effective to June 30, 1937. The bill was expected to pass the senate.

The Rhode Island senate legalized Sunday film shows for Westerly. Citizens of Monticello and Clarksville, Ark., voted for Sunday shows by large majorities.

Major attention of New York state exhibitors was focused this year on proposals regulating the admission of minors to film theatres. The Andrews and Breitbart bills providing for double censorship for shows attended by children and otherwise striking at the industry were killed in Assembly committees. The industry and other interested factors are, however, seeking the passage of the Joseph-Swartz bill which would amend the present antiquated laws.

The Assembly killed a measure by Assemblyman B. J. Moran imposing a tax of one mill per foot on every print submitted for censorship, with a fee of $1 for a certificate showing that the tax has been paid.

Also killed were bills by Assemblyman Dixon and Senator Nunan providing that prior to each performance theatres flash on the screen a diagram of statement indicating fire exits and their accessibility.

The Assembly committee on general laws killed Assemblyman Flynn's bill barring standing room in picture houses and providing that anyone sold a ticket for standing room may sue and collect $50 for each ticket so sold. Violation would be penalized by revocation of license. Senator Feld's companion bill is pending.

Standing room would be permitted in all places of public assembly charging admission, under a bill by Senator Egbert, providing such space is marked off and not less than three feet from the nearest seat and the aisles and approaches to fire exits are kept unobstructed. Not more than 10 per cent of seating capacity would be permitted to stand under any conditions and not more than five per cent in the balconies and loges. Violations would be subject to a fine of from $25 to $100, and the complainant would be entitled to half the fine. The bill is in the committee on labor and industry. Its passage is doubtful.

Presentation of vaudeville in film theatres on Sunday and employment of orchestras virtually would be prevented, according to observers, by a bill by Assemblyman Crews, which was killed, providing that every employee be given "at least 24 consecutive hours of rest in any calendar week." This would have affected theatres maintaining a vaudeville policy on a seven-days-a-week basis. The statutes already provide for rest days for other classes of employees.

One day of rest a week also would be granted to engineers, under a bill by Senator O'Brien and Assemblyman Crews.

The committee on affairs of cities killed Assemblyman Bernard Austin's measure providing that no unlicensed operator may thread a projection machine and otherwise regulating the employment of projectionists in cities of the first class. Provisions that operators stay at their machines at all times and not be required to do any other work are construed as meaning the mandatory employment of an operator for each machine.

Theatres, film studios and film laboratories were excluded by amendment from a bill by Assemblyman Crews drastically changing the law governing the examining, licensing and regulation of master and special electricians.

Governor Signs Measure

A measure of importance to those in the industry negotiating or holding contracts, leases, mortgages or other obligations was signed by Governor Lehman this week. It amends the personal property and real estate laws in relation to the validity of agreements made without a consideration. Under the old law a compromise agreement on theatre rent, for example, would have to be accompanied by a consideration to be valid. The amendment makes such consideration unnecessary. Such modifications must, however, be in writing and agreed to by the party against whom they are enforced. The bill was sponsored by Assemblyman Reoux.

Four St. Louis Bills Die

Among measures dying with adjournment of the St. Louis board of aldermen was one for two men in a booth, and the local operators' union has indicated it will be reintroduced at the next session. Others expiring provided for a one-cent tax on all admissions of 20 cents or more, which would have cost exhibitors an estimated $200,000 a year; a levy of one-tenth of a mill on each foot of rented film, estimated to cost exhibitors $35,000 annually, and a bill eliminating standing room.

Present laws in Massachusetts prohibiting stage dancing on Sunday except as they may be interpreted as acrobatic will remain until the next session of the legislature when an attempt to legalize Sunday stage dancing will again be made. Theatres, as a matter of policy, did not support the amending measure.

Jersey Censorship Bill

Senator Clifford R. Powell, chairman of the New Jersey legislature's miscellaneous business committee, was sanguine that the bill providing for a three-member censor board would be reported favorably this week. In that event it would be ready for a final vote in a week or two.

In New Orleans, discussion has started on a general sales tax which may be sought at the coming legislative session in Louisiana.

Governor Guy B. Park of Missouri has decided not to call a special session to provide further revenue for relief purposes. The one per cent sales tax meanwhile continues, and in January picture houses in Missouri contributed $15,902, representing the levy on admissions.

A decision on a special session of the Kansas legislature to bring social security laws in line with the federal enactments is expected shortly. Taxation for the purpose may hit film theatres.

The Mississippi tax commission reported March amusement tax collections of $24,811, an increase over the same month last year.

PENSACOLA THEATRES CURTAILING SCHEDULES

Drastic curtailment of theatre operation in Pensacola, Fla., is in prospect as a result of adoption of an ordinance levying a ticket tax on films, legitimate attractions and other entertainment. The tax is two cents on admisions 11 to 25 cents, three cents from 26 to 50 cents, and five cents on tickets more than 50 cents.

The levy was adopted by a vote of six to four, despite vigorous opposition. Objection was registered by John M. Coe, attorney representing employees of the Saenger circuit, and E. V. Richards, Paramount operating partner and Saenger Theatres head, said the Saenger theatre would operate only two days a week and the Isis one day instead of the present three.

The ordinance levies the tax also on shows given for charity, and becomes effective in 30 days.

SEC Acts Are Upheld In Trans Lux Case

Judge Robert P. Patterson of the United States district court in New York, asserting the Securities and Exchange Acts of 1933 and 1934 represented constitutionally valid control of stock sales in interstate commerce, has issued a preliminary injunction prohibiting Torr and Company, Ellery W. Mann and thirteen other defendants from trading in the stock of the Trans Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation. Because the court declared evidence of concealed financial interest and manipulation of the market was present, it ruled that in view of this "sharp practice," on the part of the defendants purchasers had a right to rescind.

Deny Griffith Motion

Judge Murray Hulbert in the federal court of New York has denied a motion made on behalf of D. W. Griffith, Inc., to dismiss the complaint filed by John A. Manning in a stockholder's action in which the directors and officers of D. W. Griffith, Inc., were charged with gross mismanagement and waste of corporation's assets.

W. B. Wesley Transferred

W. B. Wesley has been transferred from the G-B Oklahoma City exchange back to the Dallas branch and J. Gammer has been placed in charge at Oklahoma City.

REPEAT RUN SMASH!

"A Connecticut Yankee" continues to amaze exhibitors with its vitality on return engagements.

Right on the heels of its highly successful runs at the Apollo, Indianapolis, and the Strand, Louisville, come such gratifying reports as:

CAPITOL, CINCINNATI: Second day built to double opening day; third day more than tripled opening day.

GARRICK, CHICAGO: Boom business nearly doubling that of "King of Burlesque."

PALACE, HARTFORD: Re-opened this theatre, closed for a month by flood. Slightly under "Steamboat Round the Bend's" sensational move-over gross!

NEW FHA RULES NOW IN EFFECT FOR BORROWING

Five Changes in Regulations of Housing Credit Plan Follow Extension of Act

Congressional passage of the amendment extending section two of title one of the National Housing Act to April 1, 1937, brought this week a further defining of the nature of equipment to which federal housing loans may be applied under the law making available credit up to $50,000 for modernization.

Items of machinery and equipment which become definite additions to the real property will continue to be considered eligible, whereas those which do not become additions to the real property (that is, a part of the structure) will be considered as ineligible. Under this more clarified interpretation, heating, plumbing and wiring systems, furnaces, oil burners, stokers, water heaters, marquees, theatre signs attached to buildings, projection booths and the like are eligible. However, movable equipment will not be eligible. Portable equipment is likewise ineligible.

Five important changes in the regulations of the Government's modernization credit plan have been made necessary by passage of the extension amendment.

These changes are not of a nature which will materially restrict the full operation of the modernization credit plan as it formerly functioned for the benefit of exhibitors and others who desire to modernize or rebuild with a loan obtained from local institutions under the plan.

The first change is the elimination of all new construction on unimproved real property from consideration under the plan, and the exclusion of loans to tenants except those who are lessees. That part of the act now reads as follows:

"Insured modernization loans may be made only to owners of improved real property or to lessees of such real property who have a lease extending for a period of not less than six months beyond the maturity of the modernization credit loan."

This means, then, that the loans may be applied only to construction on real estate that has been improved with street lighting, sidewalks, sewerage, etc., also, where the exhibitor, or other applicant is only the lessee, and not the owner, he must have a lease to such property for at least six months beyond the maturity date of the loan.

A new limitation is the specific exclusion from loans of credit in the amount of $2,000 or less for the purchase and installation only of equipment or machinery. Actual additions to the property must be made in order to secure, as part of the whole loan, a sum for equipment, and then the equipment, as previously stated, must become a definite addition to the property.

The Government's insurance against loss to the local lending agencies is reduced from 20 per cent to 10 per cent of the total amount of the loans made or credit advanced. However, eligible loans which were made before April 1st, and properly reported, will continue to be covered by the 20 per cent insurance.

Although the Government does not have available specific information on the extent to which exhibitors have taken advantage of the modernization credit plan to improve their theatres, it is agreed that they are considerably represented among the thousands of borrowers who up to this week have taken some $332,822,000 for improvements under the plan.

FROM READERS

URGES FREEDOM OF CRITICS' EXPRESSION

To the Editor of the Herald:

I have scanned a sufficient number of issues of the Motion Picture Herald to realize that your magazine serves a worthwhile purpose and probably has kept many a gray hair from the domes of the gentlemen who exhibit the studio's product. However, I take most emphatic exception to your editorial "Left-Wingers" (issue of February 29) and am pained that another journal, which demands freedom for itself, should howl for suppression of others.

It is my firm conviction that the writer of that charming plea for the suppression of ideas in cinema criticism has placed your publication in the ranks of those who are determined to keep motion picture comment on the dreary level of the prepared socalled reviews in the press books. Let me point out, however, that I do not advocate sacking the culprit or even "calling him on the carpet." All I do ask is that he do battle openly as a gentleman and not call upon the newspaper proprietors to fire anyone whose point of view differs from his own.

It has always seemed to me that intelligent motion picture criticism does not exist generally throughout the United States and if some fellows are lucky enough to be able to write like an adult and not imitate a press agent in some of his more lush moments I say that it is a good thing for all parties concerned. The free play of ideas is just as important on the drama page as in the columns of the Motion Picture Herald. If you get jittery because some reviewers rap "The March of Time" for being pro-fascist and Hearst's hired men howl that it is communistic, just knock off for a couple of days until you regain your mental equilibrium—but don't take publishers to task for practicing, in some measure, the freedom of the press about which they so often wax panegyric.

I do not think my work would come under the classification of "Left-Winging" even if by some miracle it came to your attention, but I do wish to say that I think that the movies have definitely embarked on a campaign of propaganda in favor of certain principles and ideas just as dangerous to an American citizenship as a Communistic dictatorship.

This tendency is plain in a number of recent productions and if the "Left-Wingers" point it out I say Amen. I hold that a film such as "Shipmates Forever" is militaristic drivel in the guise of entertainment. I am also of the opinion that "Red Salute" is intellectually insulting and deliberate propaganda for a jingoism that will kick you or me in the pants just as hard as it will the fellow on the soap box. I further believe that "Riff-Raff" is a trashy plea for palpable untruths and a conscious attempt to befog the issue of organized labor and the circumstances leading up to a strike. Therefore, I feel that one has a right to state one's position, for certainly it is a damn poor newspaper office that has room for only one idea.

I am not asking that you change your editorial attitude towards the critics whose writings distress you or to agree with the point of view expressed in reference to the above named photoplays, but I can recommend that you practice the urbanity professed in the editorial where it read "they really do not matter." You are playing the game when you dismiss your opponents with such a gesture, but you most certainly aren't when you ask that they be stabbed in the back—via the well known dismissal notice.

Heil Hitler!—Terry Pettus, Drama Editor, Daily and Sunday Ledger, Tacoma, Wash.

In his letter of reply to Mr. Pettus, Terry Ramsaye said in part:

" . . . The principal point that I made seemed to miss you— . . . my contention that newspapers are in some degree obligated to be consistent, and to maintain a policy through all departments.

"I also do not believe that it is good journalism to let writers talk politics and economics under the guise of criticism. They should write about plays, books and pictures, not about what the books, plays and pictures are about. Their function is to discuss these articles of merchandise for the information of the reader, not to pose as experts on every possible subject that the whole range of authors and playwrights may choose to discuss."

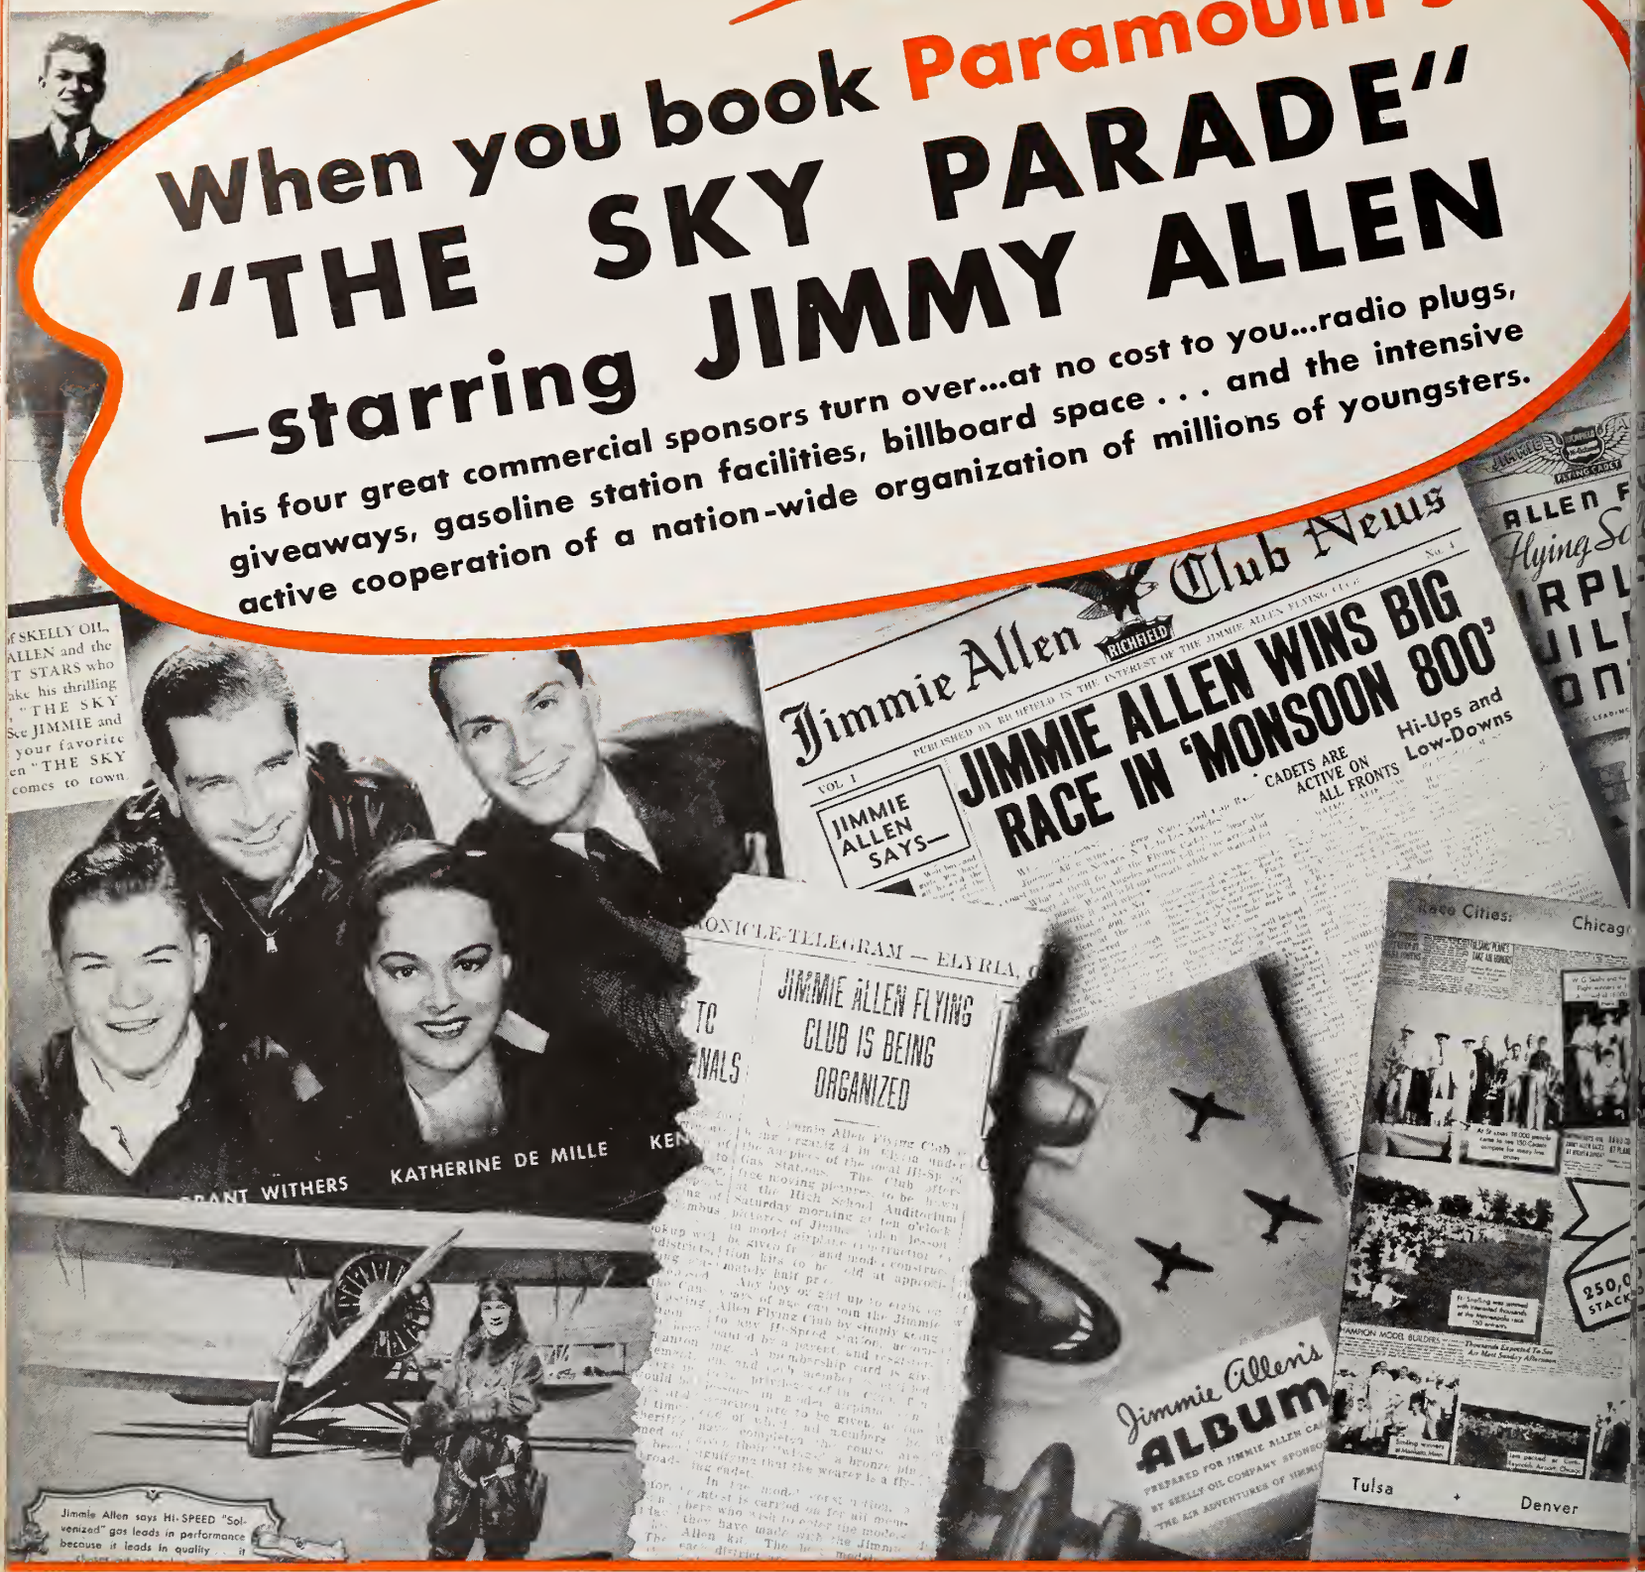
New Photophone Reproducer Retains Rotary Stabilizer



A new High Fidelity soundhead reproducer incorporating many refinements and improvements and retaining the rotary stabilizer system of the first RCA High Fidelity theatre sound systems, has been announced by Edwin M. Hartley, sales manager.

Most of the improvements in the new sound equipment sum up in terms of greater simplicity and accessibility through re-arrangement and refinement of mechanical parts. Other features include an hermetically sealed, oil proof optical system; micrometer adjustment of the optical unit by a single nut and accessible pad rollers on sprockets along with the framing knob on the motor.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Broadway is still chuckling over Whitney Bolton's Samuel Goldwyn story of a few days ago:

Seems that Zeppo Marx, now agenting, called on Mr. Goldwyn and tried to get the producer to sign Norman Krasna to a long-term writing contract.

"But I never sign any writers to long-term contracts," Mr. Goldwyn protested. "You know that. I get them picture to picture, as I need them. Why carry idle men on the payroll?"

"You've got Hellman on a long-term contract," Zeppo argued.

"That's different, and it isn't long-term," defended Goldwyn. "She works four weeks for me, four weeks for herself. It's an arrangement.

"Even so," pleaded Zeppo. "This boy is the best in Hollywood. He would be invaluable. If you sign him for a term of years you can get him for an equable price."

"Listen, I got a system for writers and I like it," stormed Goldwyn. "Why should I stick my head in a moose!"

The Los Angeles Ministerial Association had heard some queer stories in their parts about a "mail-order church" consecrating preachers and bishops—at so much per consecration—$15 for a D.D., $30 for a bishopric. They found some pretty funny subjects "of the cloth" among the 918 persons who had paid for a diploma, and, determined to ascertain just how far the "mail-order church" would carry its "consecrations," enlisted the aid of Joe Penner. They attached $15 to an application, submitted it on behalf of one Drake Goo Goo, and, sure enough, two days later back came an impressive looking document elevating Drake Goo Goo to preachership. Drake Goo Goo is Joe Penner's duck!

The big bogeyboo in the life of Warners' Kay Francis is the letter "s." Take Odd McIntyre's word for it. Thungamabobbing around Broadway, Mr. McIntyre learned that Kay Francis—known to her parents as Katherine Gibbs—cannot, for her life, make a word with the letter "s" sound right. So dialogue writers skilfully turn out roles for her that contain the minimum of that fatal letter.

Mr. McIntyre next turned to Paul Whiteman and found the band master having another finish fight with avoirdupois. Whiteman had shucked down to the proper thinness and then began to break training by indulging a few of the dishes he craved. Now and then, too, he took on several breakers of his favorite stew—and before he knew it he was some 40 pounds heavier. So he is back on the one meal a day diet and expects to stay until he puts his baton away and retires to his ranch in Colorado. Then all bets are off. He just expects to sit, gorge and listen to the radio.

Paul Whiteman was the target for a bit of ribbing during the most rigid stretch of his dieting several years ago. Charlie Butterworth, comedian of Broadway, and elsewhere, arranged to have the ribber join them at midnight when Paul was always hungriest and permitted to nibble only at a half apple. The ribber, bearing down on a Texas-sized raw hamburger with onions and a seidel of beer, told of arriving home the night before, ravenous. He built up a great picture of going to the ice box and finding a cold boiled potato, a hock of boiled ham and a bottle of chilled milk. Whiteman, mincing at his apple, could stand it no longer, pushed back his "dessert" plate containing the small piece of fruit, and with tears trickling down his cheeks stalked out into the night.

Overheard in the Music Hall theatre at Radio City: "I missed most of the picture, but I had the most wonderful dream."

Blow the Bugle, Boys, NBC's Ready for War

LET JAPAN attack on the Pacific, as Mr. Hearst anticipates, Mexico on the south and Hitler by way of Delancey Street—the National Broadcasting Company today stands ready to cope with the invader. Come what may, NBC's radio will not be silenced. Not even the bulging cannons of the enemy storming the canyons on Manhattan Isle can still Mr. Sarnoff's broadcaster, for NBC now is ready for war! There is a sense of security in that knowledge, situated as we are in the Quigley publishing offices right in the center of NBC's defensive fortress in Rockefeller Center.

The broadcasting company has completed a film which demonstrates the correct use of its admittedly "remarkable" emergency equipment in any contingency. This film is being distributed to all NBC transmitters and engineering departments throughout the United States.

NBC feels that today radio is the universal medium of communication (city editors, please copy), and in any national emergency —such as that next war which H. G. Wells is so comprehensive about in United Artists' "Things to Come" (free advt.)—radio would be a major arm of service.

Realizing this, National Broadcasting Company now maintains a complete system of giant storage batteries, which, it hopes, will never be used. That emergency equipment is there, however, in readiness in case regular broadcasting facilities should be disrupted. Enemy spies may locate these giant storage batteries in the battery room on the fifth floor of NBC's headquarters in the RCA tower at Rockefeller Center. (We'll probably hear from the State Department about this.)

Anyway, the giant storage batteries are designed to supply power continuously for 72 hours without recharging. If the war lasted longer than 72 hours, Mr. Sarnoff would be in a pickle.

And if anyone has the impression that the RCA people are not taking this thing seriously, let them read what Arthur Lindley wrote in Rockefeller Center Weekly—Rockefeller Center community publication—for RCA and its NBC baby:

> "In the event of a bombing raid this battery room would carry to the transmitters any proclamation the president might want to make, any instructions relating to the safety of listeners in the danger zone. (Editor's Note: RCA evidently does not care what happens to non-listeners.)
> "It might even carry, in code, emergency commands to military officers.
> "If a gas attack should sometime actually bring to reality the fevered nightmares of the alarmists, the NBC studio block would be the one safe place in the country. Government officials stationed at NBC microphones could issue warnings of the danger while remaining in security, for the studio block in the RCA building is windowless; air-conditioning functions throughout. The walls, reinforced with three-ply felt, for acoustical and sound-proofing purposes, would also exclude any gas fumes that an enemy might discharge."

But no apparatus has been developed to exclude the fumes emanating from some of NBC'c radio programs.

"Civilization, thy evil roots are everywhere!"

RKO Radio in Hollywood needed a large group of Indians for "Dancing Pirate," centering around old Spanish California, 1820 era. At first, regular Hollywood extra players were tried out, but were unsatisfactory because of too much civilization and not enough primitiveness.

So a group of genuine Indians were recruited and everything proceeded smoothly until Director Lloyd Corrigan noticed that one of the Indians, stripped to the waist, had been cavorting before the camera with a large vivid picture of the Battleship Maine tatooed upon his broad chest, symbolic of the Spanish-American War that followed by 78 years, in 1898, the "Dancing Pirate" story of 1820.

The other evening, while dining in one of Los Angeles' most Chinese of Chinese cafes, Richmond Wharton was mildly thrilled to see a more or less aging John Barrymore saunter in to the accompaniment of a rather gay group. One of the younger Chinese waiters wanted Mr. Barrymore's autograph, and at the approach asked the star if he wasn't John Barrymore of the movies. Not quite John Barrymore of the movies, said John. . . . "I might have been up to a few months ago."

"But, Mr. Barrymore," insisted the Chinese boy, "you must be mistaken."

"No," Barrymore answered, "YOU must be mistaken. "I am John Barrymore of the vale of desuetude"—meaning he's out of a job!

"And what is the name of the girl who is with you?" asked a reporter standing nearby. "Her?" replied Barrymore, pointing to the pretty miss, "why her name is legion."

Republic Pictures is engaged in selling a motion picture entitled "Frankie and Johnny" —Remember? "Frankie and Johnny were lovers; Oh boy, how they did love! . . . He was her man, but he done her wrong!" . . . and so Frankie shot Johnny. Real sawdust-on-the-floor saloon stuff—a "hot pertater." But Republic, evidently recognizing the demand for motion picture versions of the classics, is touting its Frankie and Johnny as "THE ROMEO AND JULIET of a roaring age!"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a "million dollar" "Romeo and Juliet" coming up, too, written by a guy named Shakespeare. Somebody will probably charge MGM with plagiarizing the Romeo and Juliet idea from Republic's Frankie and Johnny.

Three on the Trail

(Paramount)

Comedy Drama

Soundly produced, its drama, romance, comedy, villainy, suspense, action and excitement being particularly well blended, this latest of the Hop-Along Cassidy series looms up as of more than acceptable entertainment values. Possessing more than enough quality in the way of story content idea, action and situations, it has all that is required to please the outdoor thrill adventure devotees. Likewise as the story follows a natural it-might-have-happened vein, there is an absence of forced or artificial theatrical heroism about the show, for appeal to the general run of theatregoers. Though beautiful natural scenic backgrounds are now generally common to outdoor action pictures, the settings in "Three on the Trail" with their expert artistic photography are particularly attractive.

While the plot is more or less formula, the manner in which it is narrated is decidedly novel. From the beginning everything builds to the anticipated thrill climax. But as the drama of that is interspersed with romance, comedy and suspense there is unique interest accruing to all the picture's phases. It's the Bar 20 trio, Hop-Along, Johnny Nelson and Windy, pitted against a lawless gang of gambling cattle rustlers headed by the smart and resourceful Pecos, with a tenderfoot school teacher, Mary Stevens, caught in the turmoil. The romantic contrast takes an odd twist, as for quite a bit of the show it is made to appear that Hop-Along and Johnny are rivals for Mary's affections. Following the familiar path in which Pecos is forcing his minion sheriff Corwin to arrest Hop-Along and Johnny for a stage holdup committed by his own gang, the heroes are kidnaped by the rustlers. Contriving to escape, they convince rancher Ridley as to who is really responsible for the holdup and numerous other cattle stealing depredations. Rushing through a series of hard riding chases, the climax is packed with excitement as the ranchers lay siege to Pecos' gambling joint stronghold. As Mary is trapped in the building, suspense runs high until Hop-Along rescues her.

Previewed in studio projection room to crowd of newspaper reporters which several times expressed its appreciation by applause.

Comedy Romance

The entertainment worth of domestic comedy romance is approached from a different angle in this picture. Refreshing and unique, there's plenty of interest as well as exploitation value in the love interest phases, which, for the most part, are subject to a combative treatment. But the real fun of the show is to be found in its comedy. That quality is accounted for by a couple of youngsters, a boy and a girl, who don't want their respective father and mother to get married. To the tune of peppy dialogue the action of the show is fast; the many oddly contrived situations give it an atmosphere of rollicking gayety even in its more serious sequences. But when the comedy vein is tapped, with the kids turning the faucet, the quality of hilarity runs high.

To give her daughter Brenda the benefit of a white Christmas, man hating widower Edith Farnum takes the child to a mountain resort. With the same purpose in mind, woman hating widower Stephen Blake starts out for the same place with son Tommy. Enroute there is an auto collision that gives the youngsters a vivid idea of just how rigidly their parents detest the opposite sex.

The quartet, alone in the resort, adopt a chilliness toward one another. The kids, imbued with the spirit of their parents, play all sorts of tricks and pranks on each other. But the parents, to escape the well meant intentions of hotel manager Snirley and hostess Miss Peabody, seek armed peace in each other's company. Their association amazes Brenda and Tommy, who can't help but think that ma and pa are going to get married. To prevent such a dire calamity, they effect an armistice. As nothing they contrive to do seems to produce the desired effect, they plan to stage a disappearance that will be accepted as a kidnaping. Their gag is more effective than they imagined. As the frantic parents and hotel attaches go in search of them, Blake and Edith are in a car going for the police when the kids pop up from the rumble seat. Officers who have been informed of the kidnaping come up and, unwilling to accept the identities of Blake and Edith, toss them into a jail filled with New Year revelers.

Previewed in California Theatre, Huntington Park, suburban neighborhood house. The audience, distinctly family type in character, reacted favorably to attraction and was particularly appreciative of the work contributed by Edith Fellows and Jackie Moran.

Comedy

Here is a comedy-packed yarn, with occasional bits of drama sprinkled in, of what happens to a young couple when they go to live with the bride's mother. Typically American in character, recounting experiences and incidents that in the funny and dramatic character are generally familiar, the show moves fast and the up-to-date dialogue is adequately balanced by much suspense and exciting action and developments. While there is a hint of a preachment in it relating to the folly of mother-in-law interference, the gist of the feature is essentially amusing entertainment.

Johnny Ellis, one of a slather of kids, is in love with Trudy Wells, only daughter of domineering Mrs. Wells and henpecked Mr. Wells. Mrs. Ellis thinks the match is a pretty nice affair, but Mrs. Wells fearful that she will lose her dear daughter, sternly opposes it. Eventually, after illustration of all the folderol that is so laugh provoking when someone else is involved, Johnny and Trudy are married. They make the mistake of acceding to Mrs. Wells' demand that they live with her.

Then the real fun begins when Mrs. Wells, much to the relief of senior Wells, but not without sympathy, goes to work on Johnny. Adoring his wife, but resentful of mother-in-law interference, Johnny is in a wellknown quandary. When the baby arrives Mrs. Wells takes full charge. Then the explosion. Johnny, who has prepared an apartment for himself, Trudy and the baby, walks out. Heartbroken, but afraid of her mother, Trudy continues to live at home. Guided only by his own mother, with only a few bits of advice from his henpecked father-in-law pal, the boy doesn't know what to do. Then the baby gets sick. That's all Johnny needs. Becoming a man among men, he puts his mother-in-law in her place, convinces Trudy where her place is, and goes with her and the child to seek the happiness that everybody hopes will be theirs.

The familiar character of the story is its outstanding entertainment and commercial value. A mere hint of what it's all about undoubtedly will be sufficient to arouse quite a bit of interest among patrons of the houses in which it will play.

Previewed in Ritz Theatre, Los Angeles, on Good Friday night. Despite the date, the lure of a preview attracted a near capacity house that gave frequent indications that it enjoyed the film. McCarthy, Hollywood.

LION SHOWMANSHIP

Murder On the Bridle Path

(RKO-Radio)

Mystery Comedy Drama

Shifting suspicions, practical methods of police detection, three tangled skeins of love interest, humorous as well as dramatic dialogue and situation, steady narrative tempo and an arresting circumstantial setting are exploitation factors present in this murder mystery. James Gleason's performance as chief of the homicide squad and Helen Broderick's portrayal of his competent if critical associate are the outstanding player accomplishments. Plot construction successfully sustains suspense until the crime solution, which is not indicated in advance.

New York is the scene. The time is the present. The neighborhood happens to be adjacent to the area currently headlined in newspapers as the setting of two sensational murders taking place in about the same social stratum as that represented in the picture. The cast is large and the play is from a book by Stuart Palmer, whose murder mysteries have become well known to followers of that kind of fiction.

Inspector Piper is summoned at early morning to Central Park where Violet Foley's body has been found. Indications are that she has been thrown from her horse and trampled, but Hildegarde Withers, volunteer aide of the Inspector, discovers that the horse was wounded by an air rifle, presumably to make him throw his rider. A man's pipe is found at the scene. The dead woman's divorced husband is suspected when it is found that he obtained his release from jail the night before by means of a forged writ. Her sister's youthful suitor is suspected, too, when witnesses to a quarrel between the deceased and himself tell their stories. As circumstances are investigated, clues run down, theories tried out, practically everybody in the cast is shown to have had reasons for wishing Mrs. Foley's part in their lives eliminated. The ultimate solution comes unexpectedly but logically.

Reviewed at the Rialto theatre, Times Square, attended principally by a transient clientele, where it appeared to hold interest steadily.

(Scandinavian Talking Pictures)

Swedish Comedy Drama

The title translates as "The Resort Flirt" and the locale is an island of the Stockholm archipelago. The love story is carried steadily through sequences dominated for the most part by humorous dialogue. The picture is not supplied with English titles to translate this for the non-Scandinavian public.

The photography possesses a peculiarly brilliant quality. In pattern the story is comparable to contemporary American material. Gideon Wahlberg, who plays a principal role remindful of Emil Jannings, wrote it. The chief comedy part is played by Nils Lundell, a young man who looks and acts very much like Ted Healy.

Osterman and Sjoholm are neighboring residents of an island frequented by summer visitors. They plan the marriage of Inga and Erik, respectively their daughter and son, but Lilly, daughter of a wealthy merchant visiting the island, lures Erik away from Inga. When fire destroys the Osterman home he rescues Inga and discovers it is she he really loves. Lilly finds other entertainment.

Meanwhile Osterman's hired man has persuaded him to buy a lottery ticket, while his wife has invested the family's savings in a bank which fails, leaving him without dowry for his daughter. The lottery ticket proves a winning one and all ends happily.

Reviewed at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, New York, which features foreign-language pictures. Reaction to the comedy dialogue in Swedish was manifested by frequent laughter ranging from chuckle to guffaw.

The Law in Her Hands

(Warner)

Drama

For an average picture this production possesses much entertainment and showmanship quality. The basic plot is refreshing and just different enough to establish it as quite a bit out of formula. Supplementing the motivation is a line of drama, romantic love interest, comedy and surprise that quickly engages and continually holds regular audience interest.

Mary Wentworth and Dorothy Davis, waitresses, pass the bar examination and become eligible to practice as attorneys in New York State. An incident in which their employer celebrates their success and in which Matty Fain as Simelli, a strong-arm racketeer organizer, gives a notable performance, leads to his conviction, and Mary is brought to the attention of district attorney Mitchell and gangster Gordon. Suffering the hardships common to neophyte lawyers, Mary is the object of the affections of Mitchell, from whom she learns that in knowledge of the tricks and loopholes in the law is the quickest way to success, and of Gordon, who wants her as his mouthpiece. Beating Mitchell in a sensational case, she becomes Gordon's lawyer and Mitchell's foe. She is victorious over him in several cases, but Gordon gets into a killing jam that disgusts Mary and she refuses to defend him.

As Mitchell is hounding her and Gordon tells her she must defend him or else, she goes into court and to the amazement of Mitchell and to the fury of the mobsters she apparently allows Gordon to be convicted. Saving her master stroke until the climax, and as Mitchell gloats, she reveals that the prisoner is not Gordon at all but a man looking exactly like him, and she calls Gordon to prove it. The case is dismissed, whereupon Mary accuses Gordon of being the murderer and makes it possible for Mitchell to convict his foe. Naturally there is the romantic fadeout.

Though drama is the principal characteristic of the motivation, it is not without comedy moments in production and substantiating incidental effects, in which Glenda Farrell and Eddie Acuff account for a goodly number of laughs. Likewise, romantic contrast that takes a combative twist is well woven into the story to create unusual situations and sequences leading to the surprise climax.

The theme suggests ample angles for unique and timely exploitation. The graphic illustrations of how tricks and technicalities can be used to circumvent orderly processes of law and justice are something with which the public is undoubtedly familiar and interested.

Previewed in Warner's Theatre, de luxe first-run. The audience, which at first seemed to think it was going to see just an ordinary programmer, quickly caught the spirit of the show and payed closer attention to it than sometimes is noted in the case of more pretentious features.

The March of Time—No. 13

(RKO-Radio)

News Summary

Slightly longer by the clock, this edition is composed of four subjects instead of the lately customary three. They represent widely varied types of interest and no one of them is presented in a manner to overshadow the others.

Events leading up to starting of work on the trans-Florida canal, forces arrayed for and against the enterprise, Senator Vandenburg's opposition and abandonment of the project are shown in the first subject, scenes in the Senate being especially notable. The next item consists of a series of hunting-dog trials, interesting to sportsmen and dog enthusiasts. Organization of the Veterans of Future Wars by students of Princeton University is depicted in the third sequence, reaction in Washington and in the councils of various veteran groups being shown. The closing footage deals with efforts being made by fire departments over the country to put an end to incendiary operations by arsonists through an elaborate and little known system of scientific detection, record keeping, identification and watchfulness. Running time, 23½ minutes.

The Little Stranger

(Paramount)

Comic Fantasy

Borrowing the generic plot of the ugly duckling fable, with four ducks, a chicken and a hawk comprising the cast, imaginative enterprise has worked out a quite different and amusing sequence of events. The subject is in color and the animation especially smooth, although the squawking of the hawk in pursuit of the chick is a bit of an ear trial. The subject is as well suited to juvenile interest requirements as to adult and requires no special program setting.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Midnight Melodies

Ordinary Musical

CHANCE GAMES TIE IN SIX FRONT FIGHT

Ban Lifted in Two Connecticut Cities, but State Bill Is Now Threatened; Other Views

The attention normally given by theatre owners to the conduct of the business of selling motion pictures continues to be diverted in many places to the legal status of chance-game stimulants for the box office, as the fight between state and city authorities becomes more bitter in the campaign of local governments to stamp out the practice.

"Bank Night's" copyright owners are conducting prosecutions of alleged infringements on the wholesale.

The ban against the practice was lifted in two Connecticut cities after a court had declared it legal, but opponents threatened control through legislation.

Kansas took legal action against all chance game users in the state.

Louisiana theatres extended the use of the games, and protests against the practice of selling standing room followed.

Maine courts declared cash giveaways legal.

Massachusetts legislators were acting against "Beano" and another chance game test was due in the courts.

Missouri owners abandoned a plan to voluntarily discontinue chance games.

Ohio declared Bank Night legal under state lottery laws.

Rhode Island continued to ignore the chance game practice.

Washington placed "Dart Games" on the illegal amusement practice list.

Bank Night won its first legal test in the state of Connecticut when Judge L. Paul Burke, sitting in Greenwich town court, dismissed the lottery charges brought against Henry C. Dreyer, manager of the Pickwick theatre, operated by the Skouras brothers. Judge Burke ruled that the manager in no way had violated Section 6333 of the state law, which forbade operation of lotteries.

Further up the coast line, in Fairfield county, the ban against the game also was lifted following a conference of William H. Comley, states attorney; Lorin W. Willis, assistant, and D. Harold Cotter, city prosecutor of Bridgeport.

Connecticut Bill Threatened

While the town of Stamford still refuses to allow the practice in its precincts, opponents of cash giveaways in theatres are reported in New Haven to be drafting legislation to do away with such stimulants. At least one such bill will be filed for action by the next state legislature, it was announced by Judge Stanley Mead.

Out in Topeka, Kan., Clarence Beck, state attorney general, filed petitions against all Fox theatres in the state charging violations of state lottery laws in the operation of Bank Night.

Another blow was struck at Bank Nights in New Orleans when the practice of selling standing room was protested by the Central Trades and Labor Council in resolutions taken to the Commission Council by John H. David, secretary of the labor organization. The resolution denounced this practice as a menace in case of fire. Loss of lives, mostly of mothers and children, might be caused by overcrowding, it was contended. The Council was asked to instruct the proper authorities to investigate the conditions causing the complaint. United Theatres, which had remained out of the Bank Night situation by refusing to employ the game, at last contracted for the privilege of using the system in all its houses.

In Rockland, Maine, Bank Night won another New England victory when the city court there declared this week that the cash giveaway was not a lottery. The county attorney's office ordered Bank Night out of the Strand, M. and P. Theatre Corporation house, but the court refused to uphold the order.

Massachusetts Legislation

Meanwhile, notarized statements would be required of Beano game promoters in Massachusetts, itemizing receipts after each contest and certain amounts donated to charity, according to legislation now before the committee on bills of the state legislature in Boston. Now in its third reading for incorporations and amendments, the bill would also allow educational and civic organizations to conduct Beano with regulations like those governing charitable institutions.

Legality of bank night in Massachusetts will be tested May 11 in the state supreme court when the case of James Wall of the Fellsway theatre, Medford, will be heard. Mr. Wall was fined $200 in Malden Circuit Court.

Cash and premium giveaways will continue in Kansas City since independent theatre owners have virtually abandoned their attempt to eliminate the games by 100 per cent agreement. Believing there is no possibility of obtaining a complete agreement, many have signed new premium contracts. Fox Midwest, favorable to elimination, reintroduced Bank Night in all local theatres except the first run Uptown and Plaza, which will resume the practice later.

Legal, Says Cleveland Prosecutor

After three months of investigating Bank Night, Chief Police Prosecutor Perry A. Frey of Cleveland, with the city law department, ruled that the game, as operated in Cleveland, is not a violation of the state lottery laws.

In Providence showmen were pointing with pride to the fact that, so far, they had avoided the general hysteria over giveaways and free games used in many cities as box-office lures. None of the downtown theatres offers anything but regular film programs and only a few houses in the hinterland go in for "grocery store nights" and similar tactics. There is no definite agreement among exhibitors not to resort to giveaways.

Dart games are now on the illegal amusement list in the state of Washington, according to a decision just rendered in Yakima by Judge A. W. Hawkins, which granted an injunction against Leo Goldwater, proprietor of a dart game.

Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., owners of the "Bank Night" copyright, obtained a decree in equity against G. G. Mitchell, operating a competitive system known as "Jack Pot. Judge E. Y. Webb of the United States District Court signed the decree in Charlotte, N. C. Affiliated was represented by John Newitt, Charlotte attorney, who contended that Mr. Mitchell infringed upon the rights of bank night.

Two issues were raised, one as to the legality of the system, and the other as to the infringement. Both were decided in favor of Affiliated.

Membership Plan In $500,000 Goal For Rogers Fund

With the aim of ultimately placing the motion picture industry's contribution to the Will Rogers Memorial Fund on a sustaining basis, the committee sponsoring the campaign for $500,000, headed by Major L. E. Thompson, has adopted a membership plan for theatres.

The annual fees are to be governed by seating capacities as follows:

$10 for theatres seating 500 and less.
$15 for theatres seating 500 to 1,000.
$20 for theatres seating 1,000 to 2,000.
$25 for theatres seating more than 2,000.

The committee has issued an appeal for every theatre in the United States to participate either in this plan or in collections from the audience during the week of May 22 to 28, inclusive. All national circuits and many of the larger independent theatres have consented to supplement gifts already made with collections in the theatre for the maintenance and perpetuity of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, the committee announced. Theatres which do not care to take up collections may participate by inviting patrons to leave contributions at the box-office.

The committee urged all theatres to take up collections, since the amount needed is large. "We feel that through collections, the public can not only be reached, but will be most happy to honor and perpetuate the name of Will Rogers," the committee said.

The drive is being developed on an industry-wide basis, and approximately 3,000 local chairmen will serve. The date of the campaign was selected to coincide with the dedication of the hospital at Saranac Lake, N. Y., as a retreat for the ill and needy of the stage and screen. All employees of the industry will be eligible.

Fate of A. T. & T. Inquiry Is Up to Roosevelt

Whether the American Telephone and Telegraph Company investigation being conducted by the Federal Communications Commission is to be continued after July 1 when the present $750,000 appropriation expires is for President Roosevelt to decide. A total of $335,000 already has been spent.

FCC officials believe the investigation should be continued.

Hearings are to be resumed Monday, when the A. T. and T.'s "license contracts" with operating companies will be taken up.

Laemmle, Jr., Quits Universal Saturday

Carl Laemmle, Jr., definitely was to sever his connection with the Universal studio on Saturday, according to a statement issued at the office of Charles R. Rogers in Hollywood this week. He plans to enter into independent production, said word from the Coast.

In New York, Samuel Klee has resigned as a member of the Universal board and representative of the preferred stockholders.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Quick reference information on product started and completed and a panorama of the news of the week

Slowdown

In common with the rest of the show business, Hollywood slowed down during Holy Week. Four pictures started, six finished.

At MGM "Suzy" went into work, with George Fitzmaurice directing. The cast features Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone and Cary Grant, supported by Inez Courtney, Benita Hume, Luana Waters and Reginald Mason.

Republic started "The Singing Cowboy." Gene Autry is starred, with Lois Wilde and Smiley Burnette, Ann Gillis, Lon Chaney, Jr., Earl Hodges, Ken Cooper and Audrey Davis in the support. Mack Wright is directing.

"Once Every Year" was started by Twentieth Century-Fox. The cast includes Dixie Dunbar, Jed Prouty, Spring Byinton, Shirley Dean, Kenneth Howell, June Carlson, George Ernest, William Mahen, Florence Roberts and Charles Tannen. James Tinling is directing.

The fourth starting feature was Columbia's "Trapped by Television." Del Lord directs. The cast features Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor, Nat Pendleton and Joyce Compton.

Two studios account for all the completed pictures. Paramount finished four and Warner two. At Paramount, "Border Flight" will present Frances Farmer, John Howard, Roscoe Karns, Robert Cummings, Grant Withers, Samuel S. Hinds, Donald Kirk, Matty Fain, Frank Faylen, Ted Oliver and Paul Barrett. Otho Lovering directed. In "Forgotten Faces" will be seen Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael, James Burke, Robert Cummings, Jane Rhodes, Mary Gordon, Alan Edwards, Ann Evers, Arthur Hohl and others. E. A. Dupont directed. "The Princess Comes Across," which William K. Howard directed, will feature Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard, supported by Alison Skipworth, Lumsden Hare, Sig Rumann, Porter Hall, Tetsu Komai, William Frawley, Mischa Auer, George Barbier, Bradley Page, Douglas Dumbrille, David Clyde, Edward Keane and Tom Herbert. In the fourth picture, "The Case Against Mrs. Ames," Walter Wanger Production, are Madeleine Carroll, George Brent, Alan Mowbray, Alan Baxter, Guy Bates Post, Esther Dale, Arthur Treacher, Edward Brophy, Richard Carle, Brenda Fowler. Mayo Methot, June Brewster and Jonathan Hall. William Seiter directed.

Warner completed two pictures, "Case of the Velvet Claws" and "Love Begins at 20." The first will present Warren William, Claire Dodd, Winifred Shaw, Joseph King, Dick Foran, Addison Richards, Eddie Acuff, Ruth Robinson, Paula Stone, Stuart Holmes, William Davidson, Dick Purcell, Carol Hughes, Olin Howland, Robert Middlemass, Carlyle Moore, Jr., Eddie Schubert, Clara Blandick and Alma Lloyd. William Clemens directed. In the second, which Frank McDonald directed, are Warren Hull, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert, Hobart Cavanaugh, Dorothy Vaughan, Robert Gleckler, Edward Keane, Clarence Wilson and Harry K. Morton.

Stumped

Executives and employees of MGM going to work Good Friday morning were greeted with a sight that made them popeyed. Painted on muchly traveled Washington Boulevard in letters about eight feet tall was a sign, stretching from about a quarter mile east of Pathe Studio to a similar distance westward of Leo the Lion's den, about a mile and a half in all, ran a legend heralding the opening of United Artists' "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Consternation ruled. Here were the MGM studio advertising and publicity departments up to their necks in details for the western premier of "The Great Ziegfeld" with everything going fine, and then this thing happened. Of course, there was admiration for David O. Selznick's publicity man, Russell Birdwell, but there was a storm of masterminding to find out how it could be topped or at least have the sting taken out.

Many were the suggestions advanced; but for each idea promulgamated there was a flareback. Somebody suggested stenciling "Ziegfeld" blurbs on the gigantic and shining white letters. Referred to the legal department, the reply was that there might be great danger of suits. After all, Birdwell has received permission from the Culver City government to decorate the highway. There were suggestions that a campaign might be instituted demanding its eradication on the ground that it constituted a traffic menace. But then the resultant publicity would only serve to do what Selznick and Birdwell had in mind—attract the maximum amount of attention.

Finally a newspaper reporter barged into one of the conferences. After suggesting that there were family ties that might make a father-in-law extremely proud of the showmanship genius of a son-in-law, it was decided to let the matter alone in the belief that the sign was so long that nobody could read it intelligently anyway and it naturally would be accepted as MGM ballyhoo.

SALES ON CLEARANCE NOT RESTRAINT; U. S. SEEKS TO HURRY ST. LOUIS CASE

Deadline for Appeal by Distributors Would Be Moved Forward from May 6 to April 26 If Motion Is Granted

United States District Judge Charles B. Davis, sitting at Cape Girardeau, Mo., on Friday, April 17, will pass on a motion filed with the United States District Court at St. Louis by United States District Attorney Harry C. Blanton in which the government seeks to shorten the time allowed to Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO to perfect their appeal to the United States Supreme Court in connection with the St. Louis efforts of the Department of Justice to compel the distributors to furnish pictures to Fanchon and Marco for first-run exhibition in the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres, St Louis.

If Mr. Blanton's motion, filed with the court last Saturday, should prevail the appeal period for the distributors would be cut from May 6 to April 26. The object of this legal move on the part of the Government is to enable the Supreme Court to consider the appeal during its present session. It is contended by District Attorney Blanton that if the motion is not granted by Judge Davis it would mean that the government's other injunction action against the same corporate interests and various individual defendants, etc., in the Federal Court in New York could not be heard until some time next winter. And in the meantime the defendant corporations would be able to continue their refusal to furnish the desired pictures to the Fanchon and Marco interests in St. Louis.

Jurisdiction Questioned

Judge Davis on March 27, over the protest of District Attorney Blanton, who was acting on orders from Washington, permitted the defendants the right of appeal from several rulings made by United States District Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux. One of the rulings of Judge Molyneaux attacked by the defense was his action in sustaining a motion by Russell Hardy, special assistant attorney general, permitting the Government to dismiss the equity case without prejudice. It was this action by Judge Molyneaux that allowed the Department of Justice to bring the new equity case and injunction proceedings in New York under which the government's position was strengthened by the inclusion of a number of individual defendants so as to overcome some of the defects indicated by various rulings by Judge Molyneaux during the hearing of the old equity case in St. Louis. Another ruling by Judge Molyneaux that the defense is questioning is his decision that the verdict of not guilty in the criminal proceedings against the same corporations and five individual defendants on November 11 did not constitute res adjudicata. In refusing that request of the defense Judge Molyneaux takes the position that the "not guilty" verdict of the jury was not an affirmative finding of innocence but merely that the government had failed to prove the defendants guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

The government has also questioned the jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court in the St. Louis proceedings. It is the contention of the Department of Justice that there was no final determination of the case tried before Judge Molyneaux and hence his various rulings were not and are not subject of appeal.

The motion filed with the local court on April 11 was prepared by Stanley Reed, solicitor of the Department of Justice. It contends that the contemplated appeal was frivolous and intended wholly to delay the government's other case in New York, although the charges in both cases are identical. It contends further the sole question raised by the appeal is whether Judge Molyneaux erred in dismissing the St. Louis equity injunction suit without prejudice and in his refusal to sustain the defense motion of res adjudicata.

A statement to the Supreme Court, opposing that tribunal considering the appeal, accompanied the government's motion last weekend. In it Mr. Reed took the position that the question of the right of the government to dismiss the equity case at any time prior to a final determination by the trial court has been clearly settled by the Supreme Court, and that Judge Molyneaux's ruling was well within the rules laid down by the highest court.

A minor victory was claimed by the government Tuesday in its New York conspiracy case, when Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson denied a defense motion to strike out certain allegations in the government's complaint and granted a motion to strike out other allegations although without prejudice to the government's right to amend those or supplement them with additional information.

Walter Rice of the U. S. Attorney General's office, representing the government, described the defense motions as "trivial" and charged that they appeared to have been advanced for the purpose of delaying trial of the action.

The filing of the answers will put the government in position to move for the setting of a trial date for the New York action. When this is done, the court is expected to decide whether the defendants' pending appeal in St. Louis to the United States Supreme Court has any effect on the proceedings in district court in New York. The court will either set a trial date, regardless of the appeal, or defer the setting of a date until the appeal is decided, it is expected.

CANTOR PRIZE ESSAY HAS FAMILIAR RING

Lloyd Lewis, 18-year-old farm boy from Plattsburg, Kansas, found himself the recipient of $5,000 and a trip to New York last week, all because he had written the best essay in the contest conducted by comedian Eddie Cantor in furtherance of world peace.

The long-faced, gangling, grinning youngster arrived in New York where he thrilled at the city's sights and marveled at its entertaining features. He also had that check for $5,000.

Suddenly, someone with a keen memory remembered the opening sentence of the youngster's prize opus and further recalled reading those same words when they were credited to Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of Newark College, in an article he had written on peace for the December issue of Peace Digest. Seems the farm boy had copied the learned doctor's work. The youngster can't seem to understand, however, why folks are so put out over this fact.

District Judge at Detroit Dismisses an Anti-trust Action Against Large Distributors and Cooperative Theatres

Theatre owners in at least one dozen large areas who for years have been complaining that existing clearance-and-zoning schedules operate against them in possible violation of federal anti-trust laws will receive with more than ordinary interest a federal court decision that restraint of trade is not involved in the rental of films on a clearance basis.

Judge Edward M. Moinet, in so ruling, in an equity case in United States District Court for the eastern district of Michigan, at Detroit, this week dismissed the anti-trust suit of Jacob Schreiber's Colonial Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., against large distributors and Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, Inc.

The case was filed one year ago, when the court appointed a master to hear testimony, taken last summer, plaintiffs relying principally on the case of Binderup vs. Pathe Exchange, Inc. Full text of the opinion follows:

Court Defines Controversy

This court has under consideration, exceptions filed by counsel for the plaintiffs herein, to the master's report, wherein the master held and determined primarily, that the court was without jurisdiction herein, for the reason that the plaintiffs failed to establish that the matters in question, were transactions involved in interstate commerce and therefore recommended the bill be dismissed.

This appears to be a controversy between competing movie picture theatres, where it is claimed by the plaintiffs, that the picture reels are produced in New York, and shipped to Michigan to the producer's agent, and that thereafter an organization in Michigan sets about to lease and distribute such pictures, after they are first produced in the down town theatres, to the so called neighborhood theatres, and thereupon agreements and leases are made by a third party to the neighborhood movie theatres; thereafter a controversy has arisen between the neighborhood theatres, as to which theatre would have first choice of the pictures to the exclusion of the other neighborhood theatres; the plaintiffs herein claiming that the lessor in Michigan, was showing partiality to their competitors, and that there was a combination or conspiracy between the defendants to give the competitor an advantage over the plaintiffs herein in the public display of such pictures; and the plaintiffs claim that such conduct amounts to a combination and conspiracy in restraint of interstate trade and commerce.

Counsel for the plaintiffs rely upon the case of Binderup vs. Pathe Exchange, 263 U. S. 291, as decisive to the questions involved herein.

The facts involved in the case at bar are entirely dissimilar to the facts involved in the Binderup case; in that case the contract for leasing was a New York contract, made in New York and enforceable there; and as the Court says at page 309:

"The contracts were between residents of different states and contemplated the leasing by one to the other of a commodity manu-

"GOLDWYN'S FILM ALONE CAN CLAIM DISTINCTION

OF THE THIRTY OR MORE ODD PICTURES SEEN DURING THE MONTH THE ONLY ONE THAT HAD ANY REAL CLAIM TO DISTINCTION—AND IT IS WELL WORTH REMEMBERING THAT IT IS ONE OF THE REALLY DISTINGUISHED FILMS OF RECENT YEARS — IS "THESE THREE," SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S PRODUCTION. A SECOND VISIT RECENTLY TO THE RIVOLI CONFIRMED ANEW THE FIRST IMPRESSION AT THE TIME OF THE PREMIERE — THAT HERE IS A GENUINELY DISTINGUISHED PHOTOPLAY, ONE THAT IS A VAST CREDIT TO EVERYONE CONCERNED WITH ITS PRODUCTION.

NO NEED, OF COURSE, TO RELATE AGAIN THE STORY OF THE HAVOC THAT A MALICIOUS LIE, PERPETRATED BY A FIENDISH LITTLE BRAT, CAUSES IN THE LIVES OF THREE INNOCENT PEOPLE, BUT EVERY REASON TO REMIND YOU AGAIN THAT IF YOU MISS THIS EXCELLENTLY WRITTEN, SKILLFULLY DIRECTED AND SUPERBLY ACTED FILM YOU WILL BE CHEATING YOURSELF OF A RARE EXPERIENCE IN THE CINEMA."

A rare and original medallion of praise by William Boehnel

N. Y. World-Telegram

" THE GOLDWYN PRODUCTION, WILL, I AM SURE, BE FOUND IN EVERY LIST OF BEST PICTURES OF THE YEAR AT THE CLOSE OF 1936. "THESE THREE" IS A BRILLIANT AND INTELLIGENT PICTURE THAT DESERVES ALL THE PAEANS OF PRAISE THAT HAVE BEEN SHOWERED UPON IT FOR ITS COMPLETE EXCELLENCE.

THE ACTING OF THE THREE PRINCIPAL PLAYERS, MIRIAM HOPKINS, MERLE OBERON AND JOEL McCREA, AND THE PERFORMANCES OF THE TWO LITTLE GIRLS WHO ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SPREADING OF THE LIE THAT LED TO THE TRAGEDY ARE DISTINGUISHED BY DEPTH AND REALISM THAT ARE AS RARE AS THEY ARE STIRRING."

Here is a tribute by Kate Cameron of N. Y. Daily News to Samuel Goldwyn's "These Three" so glowing, so outstanding that it merits casting in permanent bronze.

Romance Drama

Character of story is an important entertainment and commercial adjunct to this feature. It's the story of a simple girl, caught in an amazing welter of conspiracy and intrigue. It tells the story of a servant girl upon whom the heavy seeks to impose his base affections; a girl who secretly marries the son of her aristocratic employers, the discovery of which brings down upon her shoulders their wrath; a girl who is arrested on a fake morals charge in order that personal vengeance may be satisfied, but a girl who has the strength of character to bring her husband into her arms and her in-laws to her feet pleading for forgiveness.

As alluring as is the story content, the production credits are equally so. The picture is based on a play by Cleaves Kinkead. As a stage attraction it enjoyed much popularity, particularly with the women. The screen play is by William Conselman and Gene Markey. Direction is by Roy Del Ruth, recently credited with "Thanks a Million," "Broadway Melody of 1936" and "Kid Millions."

Probably the angle that will attract much public and exhibitor attention is the selection of Loretta Young and Robert Taylor to play the leads and the worth of the players constituting the supporting cast. In the "House of Rothschild" and later "Call of the Wild," Miss Young won many admirers. Taylor's appearances in "Broadway Melody," "Magnificent Obsession" and the forthcoming "Small Town Girl" have elevated him to high popularity.

In the supporting cast is a number of outstanding names: Basil Rathbone, as the heavy; Patsy Kelly as Miss Young's friend and confidant; Marjorie Gateson and Paul Harvey as Young's parents; Joe Lewis, Jane Darwell, John Miljan, Billy Bevan, Monroe Owsley, George Irving and ten or twelve other known players who will be seen in lesser parts.

The Case of the Velvet Claws

(Warner)

Mystery Drama

This picture marks the fourth time that Warren William has appeared as Perry Mason, the resourceful and romantic attorney-detective of the popular Erle Stanley Gardner murder mystery stories. The others were "Lucky Legs," "Curious Bride" and "Howling Dog."

The screen play is by Tom Reed and direction by William Clemens, and the motivating yarn has been given many unique twists. It starts with a situation which is usually the formula finish—the wedding of the detective hero and his secretary, Della Street. Then ensues the dramatic action of mystery and murder inspired by a woman who wants to fetter a potential blackmailing newspaper publisher. The case leads to a situation in which Williams finds himself the principal murder suspect, but on the other hand he has reason to suspect a number of persons. Between dodging the trailing police and promising his bride that he'll be home momentarily for the promised honeymoon, Mason succeeds in exonerating himself and tabbing the guilty culprit. The show balances its suspense tightened drama with rare comedy. In the climax, as he rides honeymoonward with his bride, promising that he'll never take another exciting case, a machine load of submachine gun toting gangsters pursue him demanding that he handle their cases—or else.

The cast is large. Claire Dodd will be seen in the role of Della and Eddie Acuff as Mason's stooge, Spudsy. Others who will appear include Winifred Shaw, Joseph King, Dick Foran, Addison Richards, Ruth Robinson, Paula Stone, Stuart Holmes, William Davidson, Dick Purcell, Carol Hughes, Oline Howard, Robert Middlemass, Eddie Schubert, Clara Blandick and Alma Lloyd.

Popularity of the Perry Mason series, now approaching the number of Charles Chans, is being looked upon by the producers as a ready-made exploitation asset.

Sins of Man

(Tentative Tittle—"Turmoil")

(20th Century-Fox)

Drama

In concept and treatment, this production steps far out of any routine path. It is a drama of faith that has an impressive spiritual quality. Essentially a character drama, it is the story of a man and a father, of joys and sorrows, tragedies, disillusionments, heartache and happiness. It is a simple story, the story of every man who has lived, loved and suffered. Impressive in its power to play upon the heart strings and more sympathetic emotions, it is without heroics, totally eschews the supposedly necessary quality of love interest, but as it sincerely strums the strings of life, it not only appears highly possible that it will prove popular and impressive entertainment, but, like "The Miracle Man" of a generation ago and the more recent "Story Of Louis Pasteur," will open the door to a new trend in motion picture production.

It is the story of a German villager and his two sons. The elder grows up to leave him and come to America. The second—his mother died during his birth—grows up deaf. The older boy, a pioneer aviator, dies in a crash after bringing his father to America in the hope that there soon will be money to cure the younger brother. The father believes his younger son killed in an air raid. Working at menial tasks, possessing only the faith of Job, befriended only by a hobo bum, he hears a phonograph record playing a symphony that includes an olio he once played on the village church chimes. A noted conductor is leading the orchestra. He can't reach the man. But the man comes to him. It is the son believed to have been killed in the raid.

Jean Hersholt, always an outstanding character actor, but now more popular than ever because of "The Country Doctor," plays the principal role. Don Ameche, star of the "First Nighter" radio programs, plays the dual roles of the two sons in their maturity. Allen Jenkins is Hersholt's flop-house hobo friend. With these as the principal characters, the cast further includes Ann Shoemaker, J. Edward Bromberg, Francis Ford, Fred Kohler, a trio of screen and stage veterans in Dewitt Jennings, Christian Rub and Fritz Leiber, also Ruth Robinson, Egon Brecher, Gene Reynolds and Mickey Rentschler.

The Last of the Bad Men

(Radio)

Western Drama

Previously demonstrating the box office lure that accrues to the presentation of a group of western stars in "Powder Smoke Range," Radio is essaying another sortie into a similar showmanship idea in "The Last of the Bad Men." Not only does the production present a group of players who have achieved success in virile outdoor action entertainment, but in addition to the names of Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson, Tom Tyler, Russell Hopton, Alan Curtis, Fred Scott and others whom audiences have seen many times in western pictures, but it adds to them those of Henry B. Walthall, Margaret Callahan, Ray Mayer, Frank M. Thomas and Maxine Jennings.

Carey is heroized. He is the last of the old-time two-gun fighting western bad men. Released from prison after a long sentence, he enters a new world. Walthall, the old sheriff who first arrested him, and Thomas, a veteran doctor, are the only ones who know that he is the father of Miss Callahan.

The story is an original by John Twist and Jack Townley, with the screen play prepared by Twist. Direction is by Christy Cabanne, a specialist in making thrill action pictures.

As the entire picture is being shot out of doors, some of the advance opinions indicated that the backgrounds for the siege action climax will strike a vivid note in pictorial art. While this is being considered a showmanship asset, the producers are placing great reliance on the strength of the veteran western actors' names as a medium that will excite much public interest.

The Mine with the Iron Door

(Columbia-Sol Lesser)

Adventure Drama

In the original Harold Bell Wright story upon which this production is based, romance, adventure, action, drama, and mystery were combined. The screen play, prepared by Don Swift and Dan Jarret and as directed by David Howard, adds a new entertainment angle, that of comedy. The original, which has been popular reading for two generations, also was made into a silent picture.

It is the saga of the search for a fabulously wealthy lost mine. A prologue establishing basis for the legend of the iron doored mine, the story concerns the adventures and misadventures, dramatic and romantic, which befall a smart young salesman and dumb city detective when they set out to find the mine. The quality of comedy has been so inserted in this version that it probably will be the outstanding entertainment and commercial angle.

As the two treasure hunters seek the mine, they find that the neighborhood residents have made the search a commercial proposition. However, to the tune of mystery, drama, romance and comedy, the hero gets a clue. Following it up he finds that a semi-madman, possessor of the mine's secret, is determined that no one else shall ever know it.

The picture will present Richard Arlen and Stanley Fields as the two gold seekers. Cecelia Parker is the girl and Henry B. Walthall the half demented holder of the mine's location secret. Others in the cast are Spencer Charters, Charles Wilson and Barbara Bedford.

RULING ON CLEARANCE

factured in one state and transported and to be transported and used in another."

In the case at bar the defendants have not refused to lease picture films to the plaintiffs, but on the contrary have been willing at all times to so lease such films, however, the plaintiffs claim that the defendants refuse to permit them to secure such pictures as they desire, and when they desire them; cleaved to the bone, this controversy is a case where one movie theatre desires the picture films it wants and when it wants them, to the exclusion of others. The bill also charges, that first preference is given to "Certain down town theatres," and after such exhibitions the films are delivered to and exhibited to the other moving picture theatres, known as "neighborhood theatres." throughout the city, including all of the theatres involved in this case. Plaintiffs might well complain that the first preference given to certain down town theatres, is an unlawful discrimination against their theatres, as well as the claims made in respect to their neighborhood theatres. Further showing the dissimilarity of the fact, to the case at bar, the court in the Binderup case says:

"The allegation of the complaint is that the exhibitor has been procuring films from some of the distributors but had refused to buy from others, who thereupon induced the former to cease dealing with him, and that all then combined and conspired, in restraint of interstate trade and commerce, to prevent him from carrying on his said business; that they ever since refused to furnish him with film service and have caused unexpired contracts which he held with some of them to be illegally cancelled. It is difficult to imagine how interstate trade could be more effectively restrained then by suppressing it and that, in effect, so far as the Exhibitor is concerned, is what the distributors in combination are charged with doing and intending to do. It is doubtless true that each of the distributors, acting separately, could have refused to furnish films to the exhibitor without becoming amenable to the provisions of the act. (Italics by the Court.) But here it is alleged that they combined and conspired together to prevent him from leasing from any of them. The illegality consists, not in the separate action of each, but in the conspiracy and combination of all to prevent any of them from dealing with the exhibitors." (Citing cases.)

Finds Conspiracy Unproved

On the main question, on combination and conspiracy, the facts involved in the Binderup case, as indicated in the foregoing quotation, are certainly not present in the case at bar. There is no evidence that any producer involved herein had ever refused to lease and deliver picture films to plaintiffs herein, and the facts are that the only complaint on the part of said plaintiffs is, that they were unable to get just the very films they desired, at just the time they desired them for exhibition, and that therefore on account of such facts, there is a combination and conspiracy against them which is in restraint of trade and commerce. The allegations, and facts involved herein, fail to establish such claims.

In other words there is no evidence here that the defendants have refused to supply the plaintiffs herein with picture films to be displayed in their theatres, but the complaint is that its competitors receive certain pictures before they can obtain them and that therefore, they, in effect are being excluded; it is the order in which the films are supplied that the plaintiffs complain of.

The court is satisfied that the evidence fails to show that the transactions in question involve interstate commerce according to the facts and the law presented.

However, even though it appears that interstate commerce is involved, the evidence absolutely fails to establish that the defendants are engaged in any combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce. In the Binderup case, supra, the combination and conspiracy was to the effect that the exhibitor was absolutely deprived of the use of any films for pictures to be displayed in his theatre, and therefore, without doubt, such conduct did restrain trade and commerce; those facts are not present in this case.

The court is of the opinion that the master is thoroughly fortified in his conclusions of fact and law, as reported, and that the exceptions of said plaintiffs are not well taken, and therefore, are hereby overruled.

Finding of fact and conclusion of law, may be prepared and presented by counsel for the defendants herein and,

It is hereby ordered that the bill of complaint filed herein is hereby dismissed.

I do not think there is another publication from which a small exhibitor can derive as much real value for his money as Motion Picture Herald and Better Theatres furnish.

Film Exchange Wins Arbitration Case

Arbitration of the case of an employee not taken back by the Republic exchange in New York following settlement of a strike by the Film Exchange Employees Union, Local 20,043, has been decided in favor of the exchange.

The man was one of two whom the exchange refused to reemploy, while nine were taken back. The union comprises film inspectors, handlers and shippers.

While the union plans a drive to gain recognition and better working conditions from all New York exchanges, William Collins, New York representative of the American Federation of Labor, which has direct supervision over the union, said this week his advice is that the union should not press its demands for the time being, in view of the fact that the Republic strike has just been settled.

Allied Convention Committees Picked

National officers of Allied States Association this week selected committees for the annual convention, June 3, at Cleveland, while at the same time activities were reported from Allied's affiliate in New England, and Arkansas owners set their convention for April 26.

Final arrangements were made this week by a group of Allied leaders in Cleveland for their gathering in June at the Hotel Hollenden. Among those present were H. M. Richey of Allied of Michigan; Martin G. Smith, president of the Ohio I. T. O.; P. J. Wood, business manager of I. T. O.; G. W. Erdmann, secretary of the Cleveland M. P. Exhibitors' Association and other board members.

Mr. Richey was named general chairman and Mr. Wood and Mr. Erdmann were chosen as general secretaries to assist all committees. The committees named were: General Arrangements, Mr. Horwitz, chairman; Ernest Schwarts, Henry Greenberger, John D. Kalafat, L. G. Balwin, John Urbansky and Jack Shulman; Convention Arrangements, Mr. Smith, chairman; Robert Menchee, Sam Lind, Charles Weigel, Max Stearn, Earl Myers, Nat Charnas, L. F. Eick, Martin Perry, Joseph Trunk, Ed Biggio, L. E. Miller and Ray Wallace; Reception Committee, Mr. Schwartz, chairman; H. E. Horwitz, Abe Kramer, Leo Greenberger, Paul Gusdanovic, Max Lefkowich, Frank Ferozynski and Jerry Stehl; Entertainment, Mr. Greenberger, chairman; M. S. Fine, Maurice Kaplan, Albert E. Ptak and Jules Schwartz; Banquet, Mr. Shulman, chairman; Sam Stecker, P. E. Essick; Exhibits, Mr. Kalafat, chairman; Frank Gross, Theodore Vermes; Transportation, Mr. Urbansky, chairman; Howard Reiff and Oscat Stotter.

Among the subjects to be taken up at the gathering are formal discussion of producer aggression, taxation, copyright and music tax, contract provisions, zoning and protection and others.

In New Haven, the constitution and by-laws of the newly organized Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut were approved this week at a regular meeting. It was also announced that Nathan Yamins, president of Allied, will be the guest speaker at the groups' luncheon April 21 to which all exhibitors in the state have been invited.

Meanwhile, the semi-annual meeting of the Arkansas Independent Theatre Owners Association, which was to have been held at the Hotel Marion in Little Rock April 19-20, has been postponed to April 26-27.

EQUITY, LABOR FIGHT CURTAILMENT BY WPA

$25,000 Collected in Theatre Project Admissions in New York Area Is Banked

While there have been assurances that the impending layoffs in the Works Progress Administration projects will not affect the federal theatre, Actors' Equity Association has joined forces with the American Federation of Labor and the American Federation of Actors to fight any reduction in the employment of actors.

WPA officials in New York insist, however, that the theatre projects will not be affected and that they will be continued beyond the official expiration date, June 30th. About $1,000,000 of the New York project's appropriation remains for use before May 15th. The weekly payroll in New York is $118,500, paid to more than 5,200 theatre workers, including some 2,800 actors.

The theatre project is called the only one of the Government's many relief agencies showing an income, and more than $25,000 collected in admissions in New York and environs alone has been deposited in the Federal Reserve Bank. While two or three of the New York productions have been successes, generally the project is said to be running in the red. The WPA explained it has no intention of showing a profit, as such, and that all money taken in is devoted to materials and operating expenses other than salaries.

12,000 in Theatre Project

There are approximately 12,000 actors, dramatists, stage technicians and others active in the federal theatre project in 31 states, with 200 producing units in operation.

Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director, said this week that no instance of presentation of free motion pictures in competition to theatres has come to her attention, despite reports to the contrary from several localities.

Advertising in Newspapers

The federal theatre in New York has begun to advertise its attractions in the amusement pages of the newspapers. WPA shows have been advertising in Chicago and elsewhere, but, it was stated, the usual governmental red tape had to be surmounted to permit an advertising appropriation for New York, the federal theatre's largest center. Originally, the federal theatre's policy, at least in New York, was not to advertise as thus the shows could be construed as competition with the commercial theatre.

Since the shows actually opened, however, there have been no cries of competition from the commercial theatre managers. Dramatic critics, too, have become more sympathetic in recent weeks since the WPA's "Murder in the Cathedral" and "Triple A Plowed Under" have proved hits.

John Hay Whitney, president of Pioneer Pictures and otherwise interested in the film industry, was host to a party of 20 at the opening Wednesday night of a somewhat revised "Macbeth," third production of the WPA Negro Theatre unit at the Lafayette theatre in Harlem, the federal theatre announced. This production was an experiment, what with an all-Negro cast, the setting in a south Pacific island instead of Scotland, and other changes in the original Shakespeare.

Hiram Motherwell, who as regional director for New England was embroiled in a squabble over a production titled "Valley Forge," has been removed from that capacity and is now assistant to the national director. Leonard Gallagher has been named state director for Massachusetts.

J. Howard Miller has been appointed regional director at Los Angeles for 11 western states, succeeding Gilmor Brown, who now is in charge of California alone.

A total of 16,000 unemployed musicians formerly on relief now are employed in more than 500 WPA music projects and have entertained more than 3,000,000 persons since December 1, according to an official report. Concert orchestras are performing in more than 40 cities.

Films to Show WPA's Work

Plans to produce a series of short subjects depicting the numerous activities of the Works Progress Administration and other relief agencies directed by Harry L. Hopkins have been announced in Washington.

The films, scheduled to run approximately six minutes each, will give the highlights of CWA, FERA, and WPA in practically each state, and others would show what was being done on a nationwide scale in connection with the leading relief agencies.

Four cameramen have been at work since the WPA was established, filming workers in sewing rooms, at airports, making public health surveys and on some of the other 70,000 projects. One hundred and fifty thousand feet of motion picture film has been shot to date along with some several hundred thousand still photographs, and officials said they intended to deposit these in the Federal Archives Building as a permanent record of the billions spend under Mr. Hopkin's regime.

Some of the pictures, however, have already been furnished without cost to newsreels and officials said they intended to make the state "highlight" films interesting as well as educational. No charge will be made to theatres using the pictures.

Mann London Bound

Ned Mann, special effects director under contract to Alexander Korda, sailed from New York for London Tuesday night on board the Europa following a three weeks visit to the studios in Hollywood. He was accompanied by William Hornbeck, head film editor for Mr. Korda at London Films.

INDUSTRY NOW BLAMED FOR APPLE'S FALL

The motion picture industry has been cited as the cause for almost everything that citers care to cite, but the ultimate comes from across the seas, from the Fruit and Vegetable Tribunal of Dublin, in emerald Ireland. Thus, from The Irish Times of March 28th:

"He had been informed that one of the reasons for the fall in the demand for apples during recent years was a distaste for cooking on the part of the modern girl, caused by the lure of the cinema and the dance hall. Canned fruit was supplanting cooked apples. Apple-peeling soiled the hands.

"This statement was made at yesterday's sitting of the Fruit and Vegetable Tribunal in Dublin, at which Mr. H. O'Frien presided, by Mr. W. I. Hans, Grove View, Moylough, Ballinasloe, County Galway, who represented the Mount Bellew Fruit Growers' Association."

WPA Vaudeville Tour Plans Set

Plans for nationwide vaudeville touring companies of WPA federal theatre actors await the approval of Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, and Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of the federal theatre, said Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors, this week.

The plan is to inaugurate the shows with 10 weeks' playing time in the East, then branching out. A total of 1,800 or 2,000 actors will be absorbed when the project is fully under way, Mr. Whitehead estimated.

Mr. Whitehead, who is assistant national director of vaudeville, musical comedy and circuses under Eddie Dowling, declared the policy will be not to go into competitive situations but to revive vaudeville where it is lacking. He hopes to make the venture self-sustaining through admissions at the box-office, looking to the permanent establishment of vaudeville theatres.

This plan is a modification of Mr. Whitehead's original idea, broached about a year ago, for a nationwide network of vaudeville theatres, for which he unsuccessfully sought a Government subsidy totaling a million dollars.

Meanwhile at Bridgeport, Conn., plans for a statewide vaudeville circuit with WPA actors, embracing more than 13 weeks of playing time in motion picture houses and auditoriums, are being completed for that area by Homer C. Mason, federal theatre official. Loew's Globe at Bridgeport plans vaudeville three days a week.

A "save vaudeville" rally of the American Federation of Actors is to be held in the Brunswick Hotel, Boston, Monday afternoon. Mr. Whitehead will speak.

GIRL SLAYER CONFESSES!

[more pictures and details on next page]

"I KILLED STANLEY WHITTAKER!"—These fateful words, wrung by a tortured conscience from the quivering lips of Paula Young, pretty blonde secretary to the slain man, today threw Judge McKenzie's courtroom into an uproar and brought to a dramatic close the trial of James Trent for the murder of his partner. Paula said Whittaker had been shot during a struggle, after she had obtained his confession to theft and prevented his elopement with Trent's daughter . . . Paula's confession revealed her long-standing love for Trent.

STAGE PRODUCERS SEEK $1,000,000 U. S. AID TO FIGHT HOLLYWOOD GRIP

Want Fund Allocated from WPA Theatre Money for Loans to Managers; W. C. Jordan Heads Committee

Smarting under Hollywood's invasion of Broadway, which has all but taken over that once proud thoroughfare, through financial subsidization and otherwise, a group of well-known New York theatrical managers set out this week to "strike off the shackles of the motion picture industry." They plan to achieve this independence with the aid of the United States Government, from which they hope to obtain $1,000,000.

The group is asking federal authorities to allocate $1,000,000 out of the $6,784,000 devoted to the Works Progress Administration theatre projects, the sum to go into a revolving fund for loans to managers of reputation and experience. Calling itself the Legitimate Theatre Recovery Committee, the organization includes Walter C. Jordan as chairman, Guido Orlando, secretary, and Crosby Gaige, George C. Tyler, William Harris, Jr., Harry G. Sommers, Richard Herndon, Daniel Carson Goodman, George F. Kerr, and Jacob Goodstein. Attorney John Golden, M. W. Weisgel, producer of Max Reinhardt's "Road to Promise," and 30 other Broadway producers have approved the plan, according to the committee.

The appeal first was made to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Its executive, Jesse Jones, referred the committee to Harry L. Hopkins, director of the WPA. As a result, William P. Farnsworth, administrative officer of the federal theatre project and formerly deputy administrator of the NRA motion picture code, met with the group in New York this week.

Carroll Berates Industry

At a meeting of the group late last week the motion picture industry, including Hollywood production methods, was roundly berated, and Earl Carroll charged that the film industry "was able to get what it wanted from the Government because of its powerful lobby in Washington." The consensus was that "it is about time the Government did something to rehabilitate the legitimate stage on a permanent basis," and it was charged that the banks now are lending money to picture companies rather than the legitimate producers.

It was conceded by the committee that the Government through the WPA has done a great deal for the relief of thousands in the theatre, but it contended that the WPA stopped there and would not bring about anything of lasting value to revive "the living theatre."

"After mature deliberation a committee representative of the theatrical profession has prepared plans to propose to the proper federal Government officials looking to the restoration of the socalled legitimate theatre to the former high place in public esteem which it occupied as an art and as an important industry, and the reemployment of thousands of actors and actresses, authors, composers, lyricists, managers, business representatives and stage employees," said a statement by the committee.

"Thousands of stage people are now unemployed and many theatres are idle today with consequent enormous loss, by reason of lack of funds for the presentation of many plays of merit. In years previous, ample funds were available through banking affiliations and private sources. Much of the available capital has been absorbed by the motion picture industry to the great injury of the legitimate theatre.

"We propose a plan which we believe will accomplish the purpose which the Administration is striving for so far as the unemployed are concerned and at the same time tend constructively to rehabilitate the legitimate theatre industry. Briefly it is this: we suggest that $1,000,000 be set aside for the New York area; that efficient, capable, experienced, reputable, well-known producers be encouraged to produce new plays. At the present time it is impossible for them to obtain any financial assistance from their banks.

"We suggest a central committee to be selected by the producers and the Government representative who would have the right to pass upon a play that is to be produced and also upon every item of expenditure to be made in connection with the production of the play. If the central committee passes favorably upon a play to be produced and its estimated cost, then a recommendation will be made for a loan out of the $1,000,000 to that producer for the production of the play. The producer, of course, would be obligated to refund the money together with interest.

"In addition to the obligation to refund the money we suggest a special reserve fund equivalent to 33 1-3 of the profits that may be realized by the producer in producing his play. This percentage of profits is intended to create a reserve fund to make good such loss as may result from unsuccessful productions. In this manner, we are practically assured of providing a means to replenish the entire fund that the Government will set aside for loans to producers.

"It will be a revolving fund. By providing a revolving fund of this kind, permanency of employment is assured, instead of temporary relief which is now afforded."

Stock Security Considered

The committee also is considering a proposal to have the producer deposit the stock in his producing company with the committee as security for the loan.

"Even if the plays put on are failures, they could still show a profit by the sale of the picture rights, the stock and musical rights, and the production rights in the United Kingdom, South Africa and Australia," declared Mr. Jordan, a veteran of almost a half century in the theatre field.

"The motion picture industry would benefit because of the increased source of story material and talent. Under present conditions the legitimate theatre is merely an adjunct to the motion picture industry, and it is extremely difficult for even an established producer with a meritorious play to obtain financing except from a picture company, and then he becomes merely an employee of the backer. The legitimate theatre industry today is in the hands of eight or ten producing managers who have or can obtain finances. The rank and file of producers are idle, and hoping."

Mr. Jordan pointed out that while the legitimate stage this season has been remarkably prosperous, only 30 theatres are operating in New York City, while 30 or 35 are closed or have gone into the discard. Ten former first-class production houses on Forty-second street, in the block between Seventh and Eighth avenues, are now devoted to cheap burlesque and "the cheapest form of films," said Mr. Jordan in recalling that street's quondam effulgence.

Mr. Jordan, who is a trustee of the Actors' Fund of America, of which Walter Vincent, a leading film figure, is vice-president, said that the Fund has greatly reduced its charity roll since the WPA theatre project came into existence, and in that respect the federal theatre is a worthy activity. But he and the others in his group believed that something more was needed "to benefit the legitimate theatre at its source," and to prevent 10,000 or 15,000 more actors, technicians and others from having to fall on relief.

As a play broker, Mr. Jordan had much to do with supplying stories to the screen in the pre-sound era. He recalled selling the screen rights to Adolph Zukor for "Tess of the Storm Country," one of Mary Pickford's greatest successes.

MOVES TO REVIVE STAGE FADEOUT

The low estate of the legitimate theatre industry since the depression has given rise to several plans for revitalizing it, but the results to date have been nil.

Two years ago producers such as Crosby Gaige, Max Gordon and Arthur Hopkins, with some financial support assured, organized the National Theatregoers' Association, Inc., to raise $10,000,000 through sale of participating stock to the public.

Congress last year chartered the National Theatre and Academy, with an imposing list of sponsors, intended to revive "the living theatre" as an art and industry.

A bill pending in Congress would establish a Government - subsidized national theatre, and Congressman William I. Sirovich, its sponsor, plans to include motion picture production.

Early this season several Broadway producers planned court action to compel contribution of WPA theatre project funds for commercial production. This move has been abandoned.

And there is a movement also to obtain federal funds for small film producers to whom normal sources of credit are closed. This has been suggested by John G. Paine, chairman of the Music Publishers Protective Association, as a member of Major George L. Berry's Council for Industrial Cooperation.

MEXICO DIGGING OUT; THEATRES UNDER WAY

Reduction of Import Duties, Income Tax and Strike Settlements Clear Way for Progress

by JAMES LOCKHART
In Mexico City

After a long and costly tangle, Mexico's motion picture situation is noticeably advancing into the clear with the settlement of the four-months' strike of workers against the eight major distributors in this country, reduction of import duties, which averages 45 per cent, and straightening out of the income tax matter. These problems cost the industry plenty in cash and headaches. They greatly retarded development of motion pictures in this land. The strike was an expensive experience for the distributors—it set them back some $65,000 in the form of wage increases, cost of the movement (which losers in these controversies must shoulder down here) and lost revenues. But the distributors say that the dispute was not without benefits for them, as it emphatically demonstrated to the Mexican government and public that Mexico cannot get along without American pictures.

Bigger demand than ever before for Hollywood products is already apparent on this market. The strike proved that the public will not go for either European or made-in-Mexico pictures in a big way. Exhibitors who took a drop in patronage of from 40 to 75 per cent during the strike report a nice recovery now that American pictures again are available. Farsighted Mexican producers are pleased about the return of top grade U. S. A. pictures; they say that these productions help along their outputs as folk will go to the cinemas to see homemade pictures only when quality Hollywood productions are on the same program, but that they will not turn out in worthwhile numbers to look at Mexican pictures alone. These producers say that American films of the first rank are a big help toward getting the national industry on its feet.

In fixing the distributors' income tax at 5 per cent of gross, on a non-progressive basis, the ministry of finance tossed native producers a lifebelt in the form of exemption from levies on their revenue. Distributors say this action is fair, as it affords Mexican producers an opportunity to strike out for something bigger and better. Distributors are generally pleased about the straightening out of the income tax matter. Exhibitors are hopeful that the government will give early and substantial attention to their oft repeated pleas for a slash in their taxes. In the Federal District, which includes Mexico City, exhibitors have to pay 13 per cent of their gross into official coffers. In some states, such as Veracruz, exhibitors are weighed down by levies on gross as high as 37 per cent.

Distribution has been boosted in Mexico City with organization of a circuit by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. This comprises nine cinemas, among them two first-run houses and four large neighborhoods. This circuit has a significant angle in that its leading house, the Cine Iris, a 3,300-seater which, after being a front line stage theatre, went pictures in 1934, has discarded its policy of exhibiting European pictures exclusively.

Two New Deluxe Theatres

Exhibition in Mexico City has taken a marked de luxe Broadway turn with the inauguration of two swank cinemas, the Teatro Alameda, a class downtown combined screen and stage house, easily the best and most beautiful playhouse ever open in this country, and the Cine Hipodromo, playing to such a high grade residential district patronage that it is of the first rank. The Alamedo seats 3,600, the Hipodromo 2,500. Both houses have the latest equipment, Western Electric sound apparatus, comfort and safety appliances. Fittings of the Alameda are real works of art.

Both houses are showing top grade American first-runs. The Alameda also gives stage shows. Its price scale is very low for the caliber of its shows: 40 cents, orchestra, afternoons, and 55 cents, evenings and holidays. Business is satisfactory for both houses.

The end of the industry's much mazed period has prompted something of a cinema building spurt in the Mexican capital. Houses upon which construction was slowed down during the troubled times are being rushed to completion. Four houses, one of them a swank screen-stage theatre, the Alameda, which, it is claimed, compares favorably with the best indoor entertainment centers in the Americas, the other a de luxe neighborhood, are to open late in March. Three other important cinemas are to be built soon. The Alameda is to play top grade first-run American pictures only.

It is certain that distribution is in for good times here in the very near future. The prediction is that distributors will make profits from this new era that will make them forget losses and headaches of the troubled times.

Establishment of cinemas for the exclusive exhibition of pictures of labor and proletarian themes, operated by cooperative societies, was decided upon at the first national convention in Mexico City of representatives of 36 cinematographic industry workers' unions. Funds to start and maintain this proposition, which its sponsors say will stimulate home production of pictures, are to be obtained from small periodical quotas to be levied upon unionized film workers. They say that it also will enable cinemas to continue operating in several regions of Mexico where, because of maladministration by exhibitors, business has fallen off almost to the vanishing point.

The federal government again has entered the film production business, this time with the making of a series of folklore pictures to boost tourist trade. The series is being directed by Señorita Elenea Sanchez Valenzuela, a Mexican City writer and newspaper woman. She is this country's first woman film director. The first of the series is being made in Michoacan, President Lazaro Cárdenas' home state. Women's activities are being emphasized in these pictures. Exhibition at home and abroad is proposed. The ministry of public education and the National Revolutionary Party, the political group that dominates the Mexican government, are in charge of production and are arranging distribution.

The Mexico City government has ordered its censors to go much easier. The government has received numerous complaints from federal government officials and private persons regarding the high-handed manner in which these powers reject pictures and slash scenes from those they do approve. Two of the most glaring examples of this deletion are a fine Spanish picture that was mutilated because it contained scenes of an historic church, and banning a German film, after other exhibitors had booked it at great expense, on propaganda grounds.

Importing Stars

Mexican producers are beginning to import stars to help along their outputs. First of these importations is Barry Norton, who is on the ground to play important roles in two native pictures, assignments that will engage him for a month to six weeks.

Cinematografica Latino America, S. A. (Clasa), newest and most enterprising of Mexican producers, has started work on its second picture, "Su Gran Aventura" ("His Grand Adventure") with a cast of 1,200, in its Mexico City studios. The company's first picture, "Vamonos Con Pancho Villa" ("Let's Go with Pancho Villa") is now being cut and will be released immediately after Easter.

Westland Circuit Adds Two

T. B. Noble, general manager of Westland Theatres, announced two theatre deals in Colorado in the last two weeks by his company. The Kiva, second house for them in Grand Junction, is in the second week of operation, managed by Glenn Genoway, formerly at the Mission, in the same town. The other deal involved a 50-50 partnership with the Footman Brothers in the Liberty, Colorado Springs.

Leasing St. Louis Fox

Under the reorganization plan for Theatre Realty Company, owner of the Fox Theatre property in St. Louis, the house will be leased to a subsidiary of Fanchon and Marco, and holders of each $1,000 bond of the $4,447,000 of bonds in default will receive 10 shares of both common and preferred of the new company formed under the plan, it is reported. Rent for the theatre will be $104,000 a year plus 15 per cent of the gross receipts.

Brandt and Bolognini Pool

Harry Brandt and Lawrence Bolognini have pooled their interests in the Circle, Columbus and Park theatres in New York. Mr. Brandt, however, has indicated that the Columbus will be closed in the near future.

Italy Centralizes Marketing in U.S.

Centralization of Italy's world film exports under the aegis of the government has resulted in formation in New York of Nuovo Mondo Motion Pictures, Inc., of which Joe Brandt is president, as the sole representative here of the major producers in Italy.

The producers' export federation, called the Unione Esportazione Pellicole, was brought about at the suggestion of the government-supervised Direction General of Cinematography, to give the industry adequate representation abroad.

American Market Emphasized

Since the American hemisphere is a large market for Italian films, special efforts were directed to distribution in the United States, Canada and South America.

Heretofore, export of Italian films to the United States has been from individual producer to individual buyer. Being concerned over the importation of minor pictures brought in by small independent companies, and being eager to introduce a more representative and expensive type of picture which would enhance Italy's prestige but which the small importers have been unable to obtain because of the large advance deposits required by the Italian companies, the Italian government invited the organization of an American group in which to centralize its film exports here, said Mr. Brandt.

Nuovo Mondo has obtained a five-year franchise from the export federation for distribution of its product in the United States, Canada and South America. For 1936-37 the company will release 25 or 26 films selected from the 40 to be made by the leading Italian companies during the season.

Warner Theatre Taken Over

As a condition of the arrangement, the Italian federation required a Broadway theatre for showing the more spectacular productions, said Mr. Brandt. As a result, the Cine Roma Corporation, headed by John Mazzavini, vice-president and treasurer of Nuovo Mondo, was formed to take over the Warner theatre. Most of the major Italian productions will be shown at this house, which has been renamed the Cine Roma, and others will be exhibited at the Ideal or the World, both foreign picture houses. Louis Cohen, formerly with RKO and Universal, has charge of the house, which is now in the third week of operation as Broadway's first all-Italian picture theatre. It has been leased from Warner Brothers for six months, with an option for extension of the lease.

Mr. Brandt left Tuesday for the Coast to establish a distribution outlet in San Francisco. He also is negotiating for distribution through exchanges at Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and New Orleans. New England distribution will be handled through Phil Smith's Academy Pictures Corporation, Boston, and the Chicago distributor is Henri Ellman's Capital Film Exchange.

Selected shorts and topical subjects will be imported, in addition to features. The films will be selected by Nuovo Mondo's representative in Rome. Product of the 11 leading Italian companies will be handled.

Rifkin Charters Two

Herman Rifkin, Republic Pictures head in New England, has formed two theatre operating concerns to hold houses he has added to his new circuit. The Majestic Entertainment Company of Holyoke, Mass., will control the Majestic in that city. Holyoke Enterprises, Inc., will handle the nearby Suffolk.

Joffee Sets Out for 10,000 More 'Regular' Patrons for His Tower

I want you to come to the TOWER THEATRE even if I have to give you a FREE TICKET!

IF you don't attend the Tower regularly, we think you should. If you haven't been to the Tower within the last six months (or if you are so unfortunate as to have NEVER been to the Tower) you've been missing out on a lot of good times.

THAT makes us both unhappy. Both of us will profit if you will accept a free ticket from me. If you'll enjoy one show as my guest I think you'll become a Tower "regular."

OUT of the thousands of movie fans there is a group of about 30,000 that now are Tower "regulars." They like our big stage shows plus outstanding motion pictures. They like our economical prices that make our entertainment by far the biggest amusement bargain in Kansas City.

The motion picture, through its merchandising and goodwill-building agencies, has variously tried plans of all kinds and descriptions to promote new interest in the box office as an institution, all with varying degrees of success. Now, out of the midwest, comes one of the most unusual promotions to date to develop motion picture attendance, offering free admissions to anyone writing in who had not been to the sponsoring theatre in the last six months.

"I don't want one person in Kansas City to say, 'I haven't been to the Tower theatre in the past six months'," Manager Barney Joffee said in a three-column by ten-inch bold display advertisement in Kansas City's newspapers.

The objective is to get 10,000 more regular Tower patrons. The only check on whether or not the acceptors of the offer hadn't been to his theatre in six months was contained in a coupon in the newspaper ad: "I haven't been to the Tower during the past six months—I wouldn't fib to you, Mr. Joffee."

Psychology of the idea is contained in Mr. Joffee's observations "If you'll enjoy one show as my guest I think you'll become a Tower 'regular'."

More than 500 persons returned coupons on the first day of the offer, Mr. Joffee's newspaper advertisement is reproduced herewith.

BRITISH LABOR WANTS QUOTA KEPT BUT URGES DEATH FOR "QUICKIES"

Protests Rise After Unofficial Report That Departmental Committee on Films Act Will Have Closed Sessions

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Organized workers of the British film industry, or of those represented by the National Association of Theatrical Employees, will make representations to the Departmental Committee on the Films Acts urging continuance of the Quota provisions of the measure.

General Secretary T. O'Brien went on record in a recent speech with the opinion that "scrapping of the Act would result in depressing the wage standards of workers employed in the industry in this country." He was, however, in favor of drastic amendment of the Act to make production of "quickies" impossible.

No definite announcement of the first sitting of the committee has been made. Beyond a statement that any organizations or individuals who wish to be heard should address the Board of Trade there is no indication of the procedure planned.

Closed Sessions Indicated

One more or less definite fact which emerges, though unofficially, is that the committee will sit in private. This decision is already being criticized on the ground that destructive criticism of some of the nostrums which will be put before the committee would be a definitely constructive move by directing the investigation to fact as opposed to assertion. If it is true that one zealous section of British film enthusiasts hopes for an opportunity of advocating a 50 per cent quota, there seems some basis for this view. It may be assumed, however, that the committee secretariat will have, and will use, discretion to eliminate the fanatic.

So far, the appointment of the committee does not seem to have aroused any great enthusiasm in Wardour Street. A tactful reticence prevails on the American pavement; on the British side they seem somewhat displeased with the committee's personnel. It is a fact that direct knowledge of films as articles of commerce seems to have been regarded as a disqualification, and that the viewpoint of the earnest social worker and of the educational film advocate appears to be somewhat over-represented. There is, on the other hand, no doubt either of the mental caliber of the committee or of its absolute disinterestedness.

"Wicked" Uncle Sam

It seems a pity that Secretary O'Brien should have coupled with the legitimate statement of the employees' association's quota policy just quoted an attack on American interests as desirous of introducing "sweated" conditions in the British industry.

He asserted, according to the Kinematograph Weekly report of his speech (appropriately sub-headed, "Making Flesh Creep") that the abolition of the Films Act would entail "handling over the British motion picture industry to American interests, lock, stock and barrel," and that "Hollywood has waxed fat on the backs of underpaid kinema staffs in this country."

The inference presumably is that low wages are paid by American companies in England and high wages by British companies. This is, as it happens, inaccurate; it would be possible to produce many witnesses to the fact that they are receiving, from American companies, salaries much higher than those paid by British concerns. That the general rate of payment in production and distribution ends of the industry is higher than in other businesses is undoubtedly due to the introduction of American scales.

If Mr. O'Brien is talking exclusively of theatre employees—and in another part of his speech he threatened exhibitors with government regulation of wages and conditions—he conveniently forgets the fact that that section of the industry is British owned.

This type of tub-thumbing would not be taken seriously at ordinary times. It is only important now so far as it is symptomatic of an intention to surround the activities of the Departmental Committee with an atmosphere of prejudice, and it is not irrelevant to recall that copious discharges of poison gas also preceded the original introduction of the Films Act.

MGM-British

Expanding upon announcements of British production plans made before he left America, Ben Goetz definitely indicated "Silas Marner," with Lionel Barrymore, as the first of MGM's four big British pictures. It will go on to the floor in June, but where is still undecided, after a pretty thorough investigation of British studio facilities by Mr. Goetz, who said he can get the space he wants in many quarters. The progress in British studio equipment is one of the things that impressed him in England. "Rage in Heaven," "The Wind and the Rain" and "A Yank at Oxford" are the three other pictures for production here. Concurrently, MGM will build a new laboratory.

Office Workers Biggest Fans

Issuing a final analysis of the replies in its National Film Investigation, London Film Productions has provided the following "audience occupational percentages":

Business and clerical	21.61
Home duties	18.65
Professions	15.0
Industrial workers	8.5
Schools and universities	7.94
Employers and executives	5.71
Arts and crafts	4.12
Retired and pensioned	4.10
Shop assistants	3.84
Public employees	3.62
Shopkeepers	3.07
Army, Navy, Air Force	1.39
Unemployed	1.23
Agricultural and transport workers	1.0

This seems to indicate that more than one-fifth of cinema patrons are office workers and rather less than one-twelfth manual workers, but somehow an idea obtrudes that these figures, necessarily based on limited numbers and special areas, most clearly demonstrate the occupation percentages of those who filled in London's coupons.

Soundproof Against Airplanes

London Film Productions recently conducted a test of the sound insulation of its new studios at Denham. Two planes were flown at full throttle at varying heights above the roofs of the sound stages. Careful tests proved the engine noise to be absolutely inaudible, and to have no effect on recording apparatus, at any height over 30 feet.

Production Notes

B. P. Fineman is starting a Tom Walls picture as his first production for Max Schach of Capitol.

Contradiction was made by C. B. Cochran of Sam Goldwyn's statement that Elisabeth Bergner would make five for United Artists distribution; whereupon C. B. was contradicted in his turn by Murray Silverstone in an official statement confirming the contract.

Dolores Del Rio came in on the Aquitania to begin work on "Accused" for Criterion Film Productions at Worton Hall this week.

Cary Grant's first British feature, for Garrett-Klement, retitled "A Rich Young Man," is from "The Amazing Quest of Mr. Ernest Bliss."

POST OFFICE REVEALS UPSWING IN PUBLISHING

A substantial increase in the publishing and advertising business was reported this week in Washington in a statement on second-class mailing matter made by Clinton B. Eilenberger, third Assistant Postmaster General. Based on the latest data of the Postoffice Division of Classification, the report revealed total second class mailings (newspapers, periodicals, etc.,) of 307,723,192 pounds for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1935, as compared with 279,968,711 pounds for the corresponding quarter in 1934, or an increase of 8.13 per cent.

The advertising portion of this second-class matter included 91,863,800 pounds for the December, 1935, quarter, as against 82,822,035 pounds, for the corresponding period the previous year, an increase of 10.2 per cent.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended April 11, 1936, from 111 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $1,004,724, an increase of $38,199 over the total for the preceding week ended April 4, 1936, when 109 theatres in 18 large cities aggregated $966,525.

Answer to Question No. 12

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 17.—(A) What is a straight high-intensity light source? (B) In a storage battery, where does the lead sulphide form? (C) What is the first step in finding sound equipment trouble of any sort?

Question No. 12 was: (A) What should be the position of a screen upon a stage, and why? (B) How are the stranded wires inside the lamphouse tested for satisfactory condition? (C) Are insurance rates higher if the projection room is faultily planned and constructed? (D) Can steel or iron be permanently magnetized?

The following made replies sufficiently correct to merit credit: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. Danielson; H. Edwards; G. E. Doe; W. C. Brown; B. DeVietti; J. J. Cuddy; A. L. Cooper; R. A. Hooker; W. H. Edmonds; E. H. Toedte; J. R. Prater; D. P. Miller; W. Limmroth; C. Hawkens; D. Pollock; M. and J. Devoy; O. L. Daris and F. Simms; A. L. Long and J. T. McGuire; D. N. Richards and R. T. Tomlinson; G. Johnson and L. S. Spooner; O. L. Harris; J. Gillespie and B. T. Henkle; Nic Granby; G. Thompson; D. Emmerson; H. G. Lomis and F. T. Price; R. Mills and J. N. Perkins; G. Sargent; S. G. Sanders and B. N. Lott; H. T. Granger; H. D. Lilly; F. Bannerbol; N. E. Olliver and D. McGee; L. N. Morgan; L. N. Henry; J. G. Sanderson; B. L. Jennings; R. Tompkins and H. K. Abernathy; W. E. Billings, R. S. Knowles, G. Lally and N. J. Timms; H. B. Maulding; R. A. Hooker; K. L. Knight and L. Henderson; W. Burns and T. R. Fanning; S. E. and C. Gay; J. Jensen, V. Sanders and U. M. Fellner; T. L. and G. Jones; G. N. Guidotti and F. L. and N. Savlor; N. R. Tomlinson; L. B. Hardy; T. H. Morton, F. H and L. Klar; L. B. Knowles; R. R. Robins and H Winkle; F. Madden and F. I. Daniels; T. L. Goss; J. R. Middleton; T. J. Granby and F. C. Hicks.

W. C. Brown says, "The screen should be centered upon the stage and located as far back as possible, the latter for the reason that it decreases projection angle and viewing angles."

B. DeVietti says, "For best results the screen should be located at rear of stage, at stage center and as near the floor as possible and not cut off the view of its lower part from front seats. Such location will tend to reduce the projection angle, reduce viewing angles, and set up a generally improved viewing condition from front portion of the seating space. Realism is improved when the screen is as close to the stage floor as is permissible."

(B) J. J. Cuddy says, "Stranded (asbestos-covered) wires inside the lamphouse may be tested for condition by bending. If the wire is still stiff it is safe to assume its condition to be at least fairly good. If, however, it bends easily, split the insulation and examine. If the strands are dark brown in color clear through the assemblage, new wire should be installed immediately, as the increased resistance set up by the damaged wire will cause great waste of electric power and a new wire will be much cheaper than continual waste registered by the meter, plus possibility of show stoppage by fusing of the wire."

A. L. Cooper replies, "Wires inside the lamphouses should be inspected frequently. If they still are stiff and springy, they are all right. If not, then split the insulation, separate the strands and examine. If they are brown instead of copper colored, the wire should be immediately replaced, as it is offering excessive resistance to current flow, which waste must be paid for in the current bills. In case the insulation is split and the outside strands show brown, but are copper colored inside, the assemblage may be used, but must be inspected frequently. [That last is correct, but if the power rates are high it will be best to replace such a wire, as its resistance is higher than it should be, and at high power rates would probably eat up the price of a replacement rather quickly.—F. H. R.]

(C) Rupert A. Hooker says, "This question may be competently answered with one word—yes, which to me is exactly as it should be. The risk is too great with a hot light source impacting a highly inflammable substance in a poorly constructed projection room." [Yes, or a projection room in which means are not provided to remove all smoke from a film fire as fast as it forms. Panic, not actual fire, is the danger.—F. H. R.]

W. H. Edmonds says, "Some companies will not insure at all if the projection room is not properly constructed."

J. R. Prater says, "Every item of projection room construction that does not comply with both national and local fire regulations adds its share to insurance rates. With several small items of fault added together, a surprising rise in rates is assured. May I add my own personal opinion that protection against a film fire assuming serious proportions, justifies proper construction even more than does the saving in insurance rates. No insurance policy can possibly restore life to theatre patrons killed in a panic due to a poorly constructed projection room."

(D) Rau and Evans say: "Steel may be permanently magnetized, but iron loses its magnetism with passage of time. This is because steel is a combination of iron, carbon and silicon, or other alloys that possess coercive force or retentivity to a high degree, thus holding the molecules in position in which magnetic action places them. On the contrary, iron may have its molecules magnetically placed, but being weak as to retentivity, they gradually return to normal position when the magnetic force is removed."

R. A. Hooker says, "Steel may be permanently magnetized as its retentivity is much greater than that of iron. The harder the steel, the higher its degree of retentivity."

Text books say, "Permanent Magnet: A magnet consisting of hard steel which possesses coercive force or retentivity in high degree, and is therefore said to retain its magnetism permanently."

Da-Lite Wins Patent Suit

The United States district court of Chicago has entered a decree finding that National Theatre Supply has infringed the Heck patent for sound screens owned by Da-Lite Screen Company, which was declared valid. The case has been in court for about three years.

To Build New Exchange

Work is to be started soon on a new Warner exchange in Oklahoma City. The new building, costing approximately $25,000, will be a fireproof structure.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

No doubt you heard about the floods and about the Townsend Old Age pension and so on, but now, Axel, if you will let the cat out and draw your chair up a little closer we'll talk about something else.

Last night we went to the Moon theatre and saw a double feature program. Personally we are not overly strong for double features. Our preference runs rather to one feature and a couple of shorts. However, we are not operating the Moon.

The first feature was Boris Karloff in "The Walking Dead." Boris had been electrocuted and a doctor applied some electrical appliances and some chemical fluids and brought him back to life and from then on Boris did considerable walking. This one was built partly on gangsters, partly on a cemetery, partly on a morgue and partly on something else, and if your audience liked "Frankenstein" they will likely like this one.

The second feature was Gene Raymond, Helen Broderick and Wendy Barrie in "Love on a Bet," a comedy-drama based on a lot of comedy and considerable drama. Gene's father was a meat packer and he wanted Gene to take charge of the Berkshires in the cold storage room but Gene wouldn't do it and so decided to leave. Dad told him if he would hitch-hike from New York to Los Angeles in his B.V.D.'s, and get there within ten days engaged to a girl he'd give him ten thousand dollars. Gene took the job and started out, and from then on business began to pick up. Wendy Barrie started for Los Angeles in a car and took Helen Broderick along as chaperone and Helen was otherwise referred to as "Aunt Charlotte," and say, Axel, Aunt Charlotte was some chaperone too. If you want to see a good comedy-drama we would advise you to get this one. Aunt Charlotte pulled some mighty keen stuff and Gene wasn't so very slow either. The three of them got into quite a mixup before they got to Los Angeles, but Gene got the girl (Wendy Barrie) and also the ten thousand bucks.

If we were a casting director out there in Hollywood we'd cast Helen Broderick, Charlie Ruggles and Edward Everett Horton in a good comedy-drama and it would run every red light on the boulevard, nothing could stop it but a blizzard, but then we are not a casting director and what we don't know about collecting a cast would make several large sized volumes. To see a man walking along the streets in his B.V.D.'s may shock some people but to us it was mighty doggone funny.

Lots of people when they think of Missouri think of the Missouri mules, but mules are not all Missouri has. She has a lot of very good towns and Mound City is one of them, but maybe you don't know where Mound City is. It is located in the northwestern part of the state and is surrounded by the rest of the state. The town is well named, for it is located mostly on a mound. Mound City is quite an important place, and is made largely so by J. L. Yous of the Delpheus theatre, for the Mound City folks have come to realize that they can always see a good show at the Delpheus.

As we remember it now, we were at Mound City some three years ago and sold Mr. Yous the HERALD, and today we received a check from him with a request that we have his subscription renewed, for he said that he couldn't get along without it. He also invited us to come and see him again. Thanks, Mr. Yous, we will be glad to do it.

The other night we went to see Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore and Aline McMahon in "Ah Wilderness," and we are glad we did. If you want to see a good picture, well played, you should get this one.

Wallace was inclined to take on a little more hard licker than Aline thought he should and he and Lionel went to a Fourth of July picnic to do a little celebrating and Wallace drank too often to the health of the American eagle and when he came back home he was traveling on the wide track. At the dinner table he was given a lobster and he started eating the shell and all until someone told him he ought not to eat the shell but he said, "Why, I always eat the shells, I like 'em," and this scene was so doggone funny that even Aline laughed until she had to cover her face with a handkerchief. We will predict that your audience will like "Ah Wilderness."

Then they had Chic Sale in a one reel short. Chic was in the pie business and he started out with a little wagon full of pies and he met another pie vender and he stopped him and suggested that they consolidate into one company and call it The Great American Pie Company. They were going to buy up all the flour mills and railroads and would control the business, and all the time they were framing up the company Chic was sampling the other fellow's pies until he ate three of them, and when he found out that the fellow had thirty cents, Chic put three of his pies back in the fellow's basket and took his thirty cents and went back home while the other vendor was figuring it over in his mind. Chic got a dinner of pies and got thirty cents for it. Chic bit into one pie and said, "Why, it's huckleberry." Then he belched and said, "No, t'ain't nuther, it's apple."

Every time we see Chic we remember the time when he took old Shep out into the woods to shoot him, but he didn't do it. We've got our opinion of any man who will shoot a dog, although we have wanted to shoot our neighbor's airedale several times. To us, a picture program isn't complete without a couple of shorts.

We have driven a car for something like 225,000 miles and have bought hundreds of gallons of gas, and yet some people who haven't been farther from home than over to Uncle Abner's place try to tell us what kind of gas we should use. We have tried them all and can see no difference, since it all comes out of the same tank anyway. We are not a stockman and don't know very much about cattle, but we have seen the cowboys throw a steer at the rodeo, but our guess is that the easiest and safest way to throw the bull is on the radio.

It has always been our understanding that the League of Nations was formed to prevent war, but we have observed that it has been "preventing it" ever since Japan grabbed off a chunk of China and the Italians have been shooting the Ethiopians. Well, anyhow, we hope our boys won't be sent over there again to "make the world safe for democracy." The League reminds us of the boy who was invited to dinner and the lady made an excuse for the dinner not being as good as she would have liked, and the boy, wanting to be polite, said "Well, it was good enough, what there was of it," but he thought that was not just the thing to say, so he amended it by saying, "There was plenty of it, such as it was."

We thought that Winter had gone away,
That the glorious spring had come to stay
And this was making us all feel gay.
But we find that a blizzard is raging today
And farther than this we've nothing to say.
Except that the HERALD COVERS THE FIELD like an April Shower.

Records Claimed For "Ziegfeld"

The home office of MGM reported this week that the roadshowings of "The Great Ziegfeld" were exceeding in attendance those of "Grand Hotel." In New York complete sell-outs were recorded for every performance in the first week, including the first Saturday midnight show of the three hour picture that closed at 3:30 a.m.

In Chicago at the Erlanger business was reported greater than on "Grand Hotel." MGM said the Cass theatre in Detroit and the Chestnut Hill in Philadelphia had capacity patronage and the manager of the American in St. Louis called it the best in ten years. Governor Curley was at the opening at the Colonial in Boston.

The Coast premiere was Wednesday night at the Carthay Circle. The picture opened Tuesday night at the Paramount in Miami Beach and the Grand in Orlando, Fla. Other Wednesday night premieres were at the Capitol in St. Petersburg, Victory in Tampa and Florida theatre at Daytona Beach.

Exploitation included half a hundred accessories, 25 different boards in the Manhattan campaign, a poster equivalent of a 448-sheet, and a running streamer in electrical letters.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

AIR HAWKS: Ralph Bellamy—Saturday business just so-so. It's a good action picture.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MUSIC GOES 'ROUND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Harry Richman—Well liked but hard to get them in it.—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

MUSIC GOES 'ROUND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Harry Richman—Everyone disappointed in this picture. A good draw at the box office, but after they see it, they tell others what a flop it is. Personally, I did not like it at all; too much the same over and over. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

PARTY WIRE: Jean Arthur, Victor Jory—This won a lot of applause and comments on Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Micb. Small town patronage.

SUPERSPEED: Norman Foster—Plenty of action here for Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Commodore

WESTERN JUSTICE: Bob Steele—Only a fair western that did not draw at the box office. Running time, 55 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

First Division

WHITE HEAT: Virginia Cherrill—Don't play this. It was the worst picture we have played. Sound not good, print in bad shape. Only could play it one day, rushed another print to fill in, "Sons of Steel," from same company. Just as bad, sound good but print all chopped up. We did not take in more than three dollars the last two days as people heard that we had a bad print. Stay away from these two pictures. First Division had good prints on their pictures but we just happened to get two poor ones which would not be fit to show in front of any audience. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 2-4.—Albert Hefferan, The Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

First National

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—A dozen or more writeups proclaimed this the best picture Joe has made. After viewing it was can go them even one better and say it is one of the best comedy dramas ever made by anyone! It establishes Brown, beyond a question of a doubt, as one of the greatest comics of all time. And, furthermore, he proves he can act. Full of "belly-laughs," this one pleased 100 per cent. Give us more like it! Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 4.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland—A wonderful picture. Play it and give your folks a treat. Perfectly cast. One of the best pictures in many months. Errol Flynn very, very good. Thanks, Warner, for the early date. Running time, 12 reels. Played April 5-6.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland—A very fine production with no drawing power. Men and children comprised 90 per cent of the audience. Women were afraid it was another "Mutiny on the Bounty." The fact that a theatre nine miles away played it two months ahead of me might have had something to do with the extremely poor business. Those who saw it were entirely satisfied and I received many compliments on the picture, but you can't pay rent with compliments. Running time, 119 minutes. Played March 8-10.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, June Travis—A swell picture. Ending not entirely satisfying, but a grand show, and isn't that little Travis girl a honey? Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—A splendidly directed picture with great audience appeal. Business excellent. Cagney and O'Brien gain in popularity here with each production in which they appear. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 1-3.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

IRISH IN US, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—Good midweek business with this. It has action enough for a good Saturday bill.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MAN OF IRON: Barton MacLane, Mary Astor—Very good picture that failed at the box office, due partly to practically unknown stars and partly to the title. Pleased most of those who took a chance and came; but not many came. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MARY JANE'S PA: Guy Kibbee, Aline MacMahon—This was well taken by the Saturday crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

FIRST A GIRL: Jessie Matthews, Sonnie Hale—Another GB attraction that failed to attract and for no good reason at all. A fine production in every way but business far below average. This makes four below average nights, and it was not the weather. Don't fool yourself. The public senses foreign made pictures, the masses as well as the classes. The picture had everything, catchy music, good story and Jessie Matthews equal to any of them, but it flopped miserably. Played March 24-26.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MISTER HOBO: George Arliss—All GB productions have been miserable failures in my theatre and "Mister Hobo" is no exception to the rule. Business far below average and patrons displeased. That GB trademark stops them on the outside of the theatre. Played March 21-23.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MISTER HOBO: George Arliss—Not a big or pretentious picture, but a box office "honey." Did more business than any previous Arliss with the exception of "The House of Rothschild." Patrons remarked that they did not think either the recording or the direction equal to first-class American-made pictures, but no one complained about the entertainment value of the picture. Recording was plain and easy to understand, but Arliss' voice was recorded softly and the others were loud in comparison. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 22-24.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AH, WILDERNESS!: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore—Excellent cast that made the most of a good story. A small town natural. Only average business due to weather and epidemic. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 29-31.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

AH, WILDERNESS!: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore—Pleased, but failed to draw extra business..—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March—Some additional Sunday business with this, largely from the cognoscenti.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

EXCLUSIVE STORY: Franchot Tone, Stuart Erwin, Madge Evans—Good cast, and Erwin a great favorite with yours truly. Too bad this cast had to be wasted on cheap gangster junk. Crime does not pay, but the exhibitor does. Played March 26.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

EXCLUSIVE STORY: Franchot Tone, Madge Evans—Excellent program picture.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

EXCLUSIVE STORY: Franchot Tone, Madge Evans—This is a fairly good show. Though it hasn't as big a cast as some specials, they do a darn good job. Tone isn't as good as he is in "Dangerous," but his work is pleasing. "Stu" Erwin makes a good job of his work. The best plug is in the numbers. Running time, 76 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

GARDEN MURDER CASE, THE: Edmund Lowe, Virginia Bruce—Above average and pleased all. Running time, 63 minutes.—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—Picture pretty good. Business awful. Lewis disappointing. Running time, nine reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S IN THE AIR: Jack Benny, Una Merkel—Fine program comedy. Una Merkel seemed miscast or maybe I'm wrong.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone—Very good show of the kind, but not a business builder for small town. Very brutal for ladies to get any entertainment out of it and the big expenses are in vain for the majority of theatres who like to exist yet for some time in the little towns. Watch your step, boys. Running time, 13 reels. Played March 29-31.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Brothers—The best the Marx Brothers have made so far. What I can't understand is why don't they have them play the harp and piano more. If they did I am sure their pictures would go over much better. Business fair. Running time, 95 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Brothers—Can't see that this was as good as Metro would have one to believe. Good enough, but to me no better than former pictures with the same stars.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Brothers—It get the laughs in spots. Had a few walkouts. I really think that this should be cut down to about two reels. Leave off the opera, add a little more of Chico's piano, a little less Harpo, and you'd have a darn nice two-reel short. It'll please only the Marx Bros. fans. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 2-3.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

RIFFRAFF: Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy—Good action picture. Where they like the ordinary, down-to-earth entertainment, this should go over good. Did poor business here. Played March 7.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

RIFFRAFF: Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy—Not a very good draw at the box office and not so well liked. I trust Jean goes back to platinum; she is 100 per cent better looking; I think she has spoiled her good looks by changing her hair. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 10-11.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Excellent entertainment! Business above average, although not what it should have been for this type of highclass production. Patrons well pleased and they went out of their way to tell me so. Settings were wonderful and singing that you will never forget. Played March 28-30.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Here is a show (not a picture, but a real production). The music, the scenes and the charming voices of two great entertainers is worth all the effort a manager puts to it. The stars and title have plenty of draw; therefore the manager really hasn't much to do except give his patrons the best sound effects possible. I might suggest to pay close attention to the Totem Tom Tom scene. It is a darn shame it isn't in color. Eddy's singing should be raised a point or two to that of MacDonald's.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—A very fine musical. The best vocal recording ever played in this theatre. Beautiful outdoor photography and a good story. Just a trifle too much music for my Saturday night crowd. Business very good and it was played during a period of unseasonable snowstorms and blizzards that blocked the roads for two of the three playing days. A picture any exhibitor can be proud to show. Running time, 108 minutes. Playing March 19-21.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—A high-class drama, but not what it takes to pull them in in a small town. Satisfies if they come to see it, but the trouble is getting the cash customers to part with the necessary cash. Just fair business on this one. Played March 21.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—A mighty production and liked by the greater majority who saw it. Acting great by entire cast. We had a few walkouts on it, but few complaints. Running time, 126 minutes. Played March 8-9.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

THREE LIVE GHOSTS: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker—Very good acting by Beryl Mercer and the balance of the cast could not put this one over. Think the English accent had something to do with it. Anyway, it did not click. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 25-26.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WOMAN WANTED: Joel McCrea, Maureen O'Sullivan—Interesting action picture with two swell people playing leads. Pleased a fair midweek crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Monogram

MAKE A MILLION: Charles Starrett, Pauline Brooks—Only fair. Played on double bill.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

NUT FARM, THE: Wallace Ford, Florence Roberts—Fair program picture. Not as good as expected. Played on double bill.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

ANYTHING GOES: Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman—An entertaining picture and much better than Bing's "Two for Tonight." Charlie Ruggles kept them laughing. I have heard Bing sing much prettier songs than in this, but they are pretty. We did not do such outstanding business as they do not seem to go for Crosby like they once did due to the fact that he has not made any good ones lately. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 18-19.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie—A good drawing picture which will please them. We did a nice business two days. Joe Penner a pretty good draw. All of the cast good. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

GLASS KEY, THE: George Raft—Slim midweek business. Paramount has killed Raft for my town by putting him in too many sheik roles.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HER MASTER'S VOICE: Edward Everett Horton—Nice program picture. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 25-26.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IT'S A GREAT LIFE: Joe Morrison, Rosalind Keith—I thought this was a very nice little programmer for Bargain Night, but the cash customers did not think so. The public is always right, so I guess I was sorry. Anyway, it's nothing to tear your hair about. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 31.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE, THE: W. C. Fields—Played this for a Red Cross flood relief benefit. Pretty thin story; rather disappointing to the Fields' fans.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MILLIONS IN THE AIR: John Howard, Wendy Barrie—You need not be afraid of this programmer. Played it on a dual, but it's good enougb for weekend in any small situation. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 25.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

ROSE OF THE RANCHO: John Boles, Gladys Swarthout—I did not think so much of the picture, but I am crazy about John Boles. I think he is one of the best. My town is not so far away from his home town (Greenville, Texas), and I hope some day to meet him personally. He would make any picture good; he is handsome, his voice sounds like music and he is perfect in every way. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 3-4.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

SO RED THE ROSE: Margaret Sullavan—Very good picture that drew only fair at the box office. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Gail Patrick, Dean Jagger—The western fans didn't come out in as big numbers as they should have for this production. Played March 14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Gail Patrick, Dean Jagger—Above the average. "Shoot 'em up" Western. Zane Grey's stories are always good. Running time, 61 minutes. Played April 4.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Here is a picture very different; was liked by most everyone, and a nice business. I was not expecting to do so well with this type picture on Thursday-Friday, but it turned out to be satisfactory. Running time, 90½ minutes. Played March 12-13.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

BECKY SHARP: Miriam Hopkins—The color was beautiful. As for the picture itself, it is terrible. It's all a sad mistake from beginning to end.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Excellent. Clean and entertaining all the way through. One of the best pictures of the year. A picture for the whole family. The best this team has made with the exception of "Flying Down to Rio." It is a pleasure to run a picture like this. The acting and direction is No. 1. More power to Fred and Ginger. Running time, 110 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FRECKLES: Carol Stone, Tom Brown—In spite of the atrocious weather, this feature played to normal business and was satisfactory to all. Played March 21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

I DREAM TOO MUCH: Lily Pons, Henry Fonda—My patrons didn't care for it.—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

IN PERSON: Ginger Rogers, George Brent—Play this and do not be afraid to boost it. Our patrons liked it very much. Ginger is a good draw here, and she did a nice job without her partner, Fred Astaire; they make a swell pair. But George Brent is a very good actor and well liked. Ginger sings and dances in this and is very cute; she is one of my favorites. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LADY CONSENTS, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall—A darned sight better than we expected from so many adverse reports. In fact, it was quite generally liked, especially by the ladies, and the men didn't kick. Running time, nine reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

LADY CONSENTS, THE: Herbert Marshall, Ann Harding—Although this picture is in the lower allocation and critics gave it unfavorable publicity, my patrons were pleased and we received many favorable comments; also played to average business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 22-24.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LADY CONSENTS, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall—Play this picture, as it is very entertaining and also has a good moral. It pleased our patrons 100 per cent. Ann very good, also Herb Marshall. He is a very good actor. Margaret Lindsay good. Running time, 76½ minutes. Played March 1-2.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

OLD MAN RHYTHM: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable—A silly and preposterous story. Occasionally funny comedy. Some good hoofing. Some of the sourest music ever inflicted on a suffering public. Slim Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

OLD MAN RHYTHM: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable—Fair entertainment which should satisfy. Lots of comedy and rhythm. O. K. Business poor. Running time, eight reels. Played March 27-28.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHE: Randolph Scott—This Tarzanesque extravaganza amused and amazed a small crowd on the midweek bill.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN: Preston Foster—Very good G-Man picture. Preston Foster acting excellent. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Supreme

RIDER OF THE LAW, THE: Bob Steele, Gertrude Messinger—Fine western. Bob Steele always pleases. Can't see why he can't hook up with some of the majors for a series of westerns.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY: Edward Everett Horton—Horton's comedy pleases them all. Normal business. Played March 28.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BABOONA: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Here is a fine picture, wonderful sound and the best print we have ever had. Play this picture; it will go over big with the students of schools and if you can get into the schools it will do you a large business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 30-31.—Albert Hefferan, The Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. High school patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Warner Oland, Irene Hervey—Very good detective story. Did average business. Played March 17.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET: Warner Orland—Chan has a following here. This is just another Chan story, but they like them. Drew some extra business. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 1.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

CURLY TOP: Shirley Temple—Good Saturday business. Rather thin story, but Shirley and her support put it over.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Dorothy Wilson—It's the tops. Play it by all means. Played March 14.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

IT HAD TO HAPPEN: George Raft, Rosalind Russell—Satisfactory all around.—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

IT HAD TO HAPPEN: George Raft, Rosalind Russell—This is the surprise show of the year. It's plenty good. Just the kind of part George Raft is suited for. Rosalind Russell gives a very nice performance. She is rapidly gaining popularity here. Give this feature a good date, it deserves it.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye—Very good musical that pleased 100 per cent. Did better than average business. Personally liked this better than "Broadway Melody of 1936." Played March 28.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LITTLEST REBEL, THE: Shirley Temple, John Boles—I rate this as the very best Shirley Temple picture to date and it pleased 100 per cent. Personally, I would have enjoyed the show much more if I had never read the book or seen the stage play. The picture was changed until its own author wouldn't have known it, and I found it hard to pardon the lack of Southern accent. An excellent cast, Bill Robinson's snappy dancing, good photography and sound, combined with America's favorite star, Shirley, makes this one of the best shows of the year. It pleased my patrons, and who am I to complain; but I do not understand why they changed it so much. Suppose we ought to be thankful it was left in the time of tbe Civil War instead of being transplanted to France. Anyway, it is a great picture. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 20-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLEST REBEL, THE: Shirley Temple, John Boles—I believe this is about Shirley's best yet. That is saying a lot, but everyone seemed to think so. A sad story that will bring tears to most any audience. Little Shirley had some fine acting in this part; she is the most adorable child on the screen. I do not think she has a competitor in pictures. This picture is swell at the box office; play it and give your patrons a treat. Running time, 73 minutes. Played February 20-21.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

NAVY WIFE: Claire Trevor, Ralph Bellamy—Just an ordinary feature of navy life with good action and love scenes. It will please tbe most of the customers. Good. Running time, eight reels. Played April 1.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

NAVY WIFE: Claire Trevor, Ralph Bellamy—A surprise picture that pleased everyone. Good story and good cast, beautiful scenery with the interesting background of the Navy makes this a much more satisfactory picture than lots of the specials. Jane Darwell is very good. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 28-29.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—Big picture, but failed to do extra business.—L. D. Jones, Star Tbeatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

THANKS A MILLION: Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak—

Drew extra business and pleased 100 per cent.—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

WHISPERING SMITH SPEAKS: George O'Brien, Irene Ware—Pleased unusually well. Not a western, but our patrons generally were exceptionally well pleased with the story, which had action, yet was not all hokum. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 27-28.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—A very interesting and engrossing piece of entertainment. Perhaps more so because it is based on true facts. Business above average considering just before Holy Week. Tense, gripping scenes that work on the emotions of the public. It is the most finely directed picture I ever saw, and this is the first time I have ever mentioned a director in talk or writing. The showing of President Lincoln passing from this life into the pale realms of death is done in a way entirely new in this art and I prophesy that from now on the imitators will be busy and have all their death scenes done in like manner. That scene is true art. Played April 4.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

MODERN TIMES: Charlie Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—Just like the oldtime silent pictures of this star, with a good musical accompaniment. The audience laugh almost continuously and then a fair share go out and say they "didn't like it." After seeing this picture, one is convinced that in pantomime and mimicry Chaplin is indeed in a class by himself. The picture travels rapidly and the laughs are close together. Being silent, the picture was viewed very critically. One patron complained that Chaplin spent two years in making the picture, but still he was careless in showing a clock in one scene with a dead second hand that was not moving. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 29-31.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

STRIKE ME PINK: Eddie Cantor, Ethel Merman, Sally Eilers—I'll say—and that goes for the audience reaction to this one—that it is the poorest that Cantor ever has inflicted on a long-suffering public. A far cry from his other pictures and one more such as this and he will be on his way out. The public expects singing and dancing in his pictures. There was not one hummable tune in the whole shebang. And when a comedian goes dramatic, it is pitiful. He just does not put the role over and Cantor may as well know it. All sums up to this: it is not the type that the public expects him in. And they did not go for it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Universal

AFFAIR OF SUSAN, THE: Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell—We thought this an extra good program comedy. Was not expecting as much. Patrons liked it fine. Good carnival scenes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CRIMSON TRAIL, THE: Buck Jones—Nothing extra. Buck Jones not the draw he used to be. What's wrong, I wonder? Pictures not as good as used to be, is my guess. Come on, Standard Capital Company (new owners of Universal), help Jones regain his former popularity. Running time, six reels. Played April 4.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

DON'T GET PERSONAL: James Dunn, Sally Eilers, Pinky Tomlin—A fine program picture. Tomlin better than before.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

EAST OF JAVA: Charles Bickford—Plenty of action in this one. Bickford and Leslie Fenton excellent. Story a little weak, but this is overlooked as the picture progresses. One thing Universal should learn and that is to stop making their productions so dark in photography. The only fault I had to find. Business good with this. Running time, 76 minutes. Played April 3-4.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC patronage.

INVISIBLE RAY, THE: Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Good picture of its kind, but no business. Picture better than expected.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

IVORY HANDLED GUN: Buck Jones, Charlotte Wynters—A decidedly amateurish story. However, they still like Jones, so the box office says it's O. K. Played March 10.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—Here is one wonderful picture. Would like to see it again and most all of our patrons who saw it. Irene Dunne wonderful and Robert Taylor is one of my favorite actors; he is handsome. I just hope to see him in many more pictures. Would never see him better than in this picture. I want to thank Universal for the early date and congratulate them on such a wonderful production. It cannot be beaten. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE: Margaret Sullavan—Only a dried out piece of film fare. Not an interesting moment in the whole show. First time I ever played Margaret Sullavan and it was a keen disappointment. Her voice is odd, a blend between a harsh whisper and a laryngitis. Extremely tiresome. Did not gross enough to pay for the shorts. Played March 31-April 1.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

OUTLAWED GUNS: Buck Jones—Average Jones western. Good Saturday bill.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER LAST NIGHT: Edward Arnold, Constance Cummings, Sally Eilers—A normal crowd seemed satisfied with this production. Played March 7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SHE GETS HER MAN: Zasu Pitts—Fair Sunday business. The more critical patrons complained that the story wasn't good enough for Zasu.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

STORMY: Noah Beery, Jr.—A fine outdoor picture with human interest and beautiful settings. There is one serious objection to pictures where this Rex horse is featured—the words stallion and mare could easily be eliminated from the dialogue; it lends a crude coarseness to the entertainment. The word horse would be sufficient in every case, whether stallion, mare or gelding. Played April 3.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

THROWBACK, THE: Buck Jones, Muriel Evans—Good show for Friday and Saturday, but should be played with another feature. Too many night scenes make the picture too dark to follow. Running time, six reels. Played March 25.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

THROWBACK, THE: Buck Jones—Too much riding and too little story. Riding hither and thither, back and forth with images on the screen scarcely discernible is not entertainment. It is padding the picture to gain footage and means no entertainment. It may come under the heading of Western, but it is the cheap, crude kind. Played March 27.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Bros.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—A good program picture with plenty of action. Paul Muni fine. We played on Saturday to good business. Pleased all. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 7.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

GOING HIGHBROW: Guy Kibbee, Zasu Pitts—Good light comedy. Fair Sunday business. Edward Everett Horton steals the show, as usual.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MAN HUNT: Ricardo Cortez, Marguerite Churchill, Charles "Chic" Sale—It is an action story of fair quality; it will get by on a weekend run. Locale, small town, the law and the bandits. Sale, a sheriff living in his past, and he, before the end, got very tiresome. "Chic" is good in shorts, but not so good as support in features.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MOONLIGHT ON THE PRAIRIE: Dick Foran—Not the most finished production in the world, but it seemed to get by with the Saturday crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Marion Davies—Hardly as good a picture as some crack it up to be, but it pleases the average audience. Best liked by the younger set. Our box office receipts were low on account of blockade of the highways by a spring snowstorm. Played March 27-28.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST, THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—What a swell picture. Held our audience almost spellbound throughout the entire length of it. And while the scenes were nearly all in one small room, it contained a great amount of suspense and everyone liked it immensely. Played March 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST, THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—A very fine production with a terrible title. With a title like "The Arizona Bad Man" the picture would have done 40 per cent more business in this town. With the exception of a few who did not like the unhappy ending, the picture gave universal satisfaction. If I were to select the three pictures I regard as the best productions of the past six months, I would name "Mutiny on the Bounty," "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The Petrified Forest." However, these were not my best box office attractions by any means. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 15-17.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SPECIAL AGENT: George Brent, Bette Davis—Good action drama. Fair Saturday business. Bette Davis seems to draw here.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

HOI POLLOI: 3 Stooges—These two-reel slapstick comedies are in a class by themselves. Knock down, drag-'em-out and they love it in the small towns on Saturday night.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S PONY: Scrappy Cartoon—An average black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

"TECHED IN TH' HAID": Barney Google—A fine colored cartoon. Different. Pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE, THE: The story of a boy and his dog. Seemed to please better than the first of this series. Running time, two reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre. Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE: Interesting; well worth playing. No extra draw.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Educational

BEWARE OF BLONDES: Young Romance—Hurrah—Educational has come through with a decent two-reel subject. This snappy two-reeler has everything. Music, dancing and romance as well as light comedy. Why don't they make more like this one? Best spot is anywhere. Running time, 18 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. General patronage.

CHOOSE YOUR PARTNERS: Frolics of Youth Series—This series of comedies always good, and this was exceptionally good. Play it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

COLLEGE CAPERS: Cabin Kids—Just a fair single reel act. The surrounding cast helps a lot. Best spot is after news or travel. Running time, nine minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. General patronage.

JUST ANOTHER MURDER: Coronet Comedy—Just another cluck. Running time, 17 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. General patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND MELODY: Musical Comedies—A real two-reel musical with excellent singing, dancing and comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NINETEENTH HOLE CLUB, THE: Terry-Toon—Just another cartoon. Nothing outstanding, but it fills the bill.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE BIG HAPPY FAMILY: Tuxedo Comedies—This is a knockout of a comedy, plenty good oldtime music and plenty of guns. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PERFECT THIRTY-SIXES: Musical Comedies—Very good. These musicals are the best two-reel subjects Fox-Educational is putting out this year. Running time, 18 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY SPORTS IN MEXICO: Treasure Chest—Just another filler. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

THREE ON A LIMB: Star Personality Comedies—The exhibitor who plays this one will find himself out on a limb. Terrible is the word. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

TIMID YOUNG MAN, THE: Buster Keaton—A good comedy with plenty of laughs. Buster always pleases the crowd. Running time, 20 minutes.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAUTIFUL BANFF AND LAKE LOUISE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—One of the most beautiful travel talks ever screened. The coloring is beautiful, talk interesting and some very good singing. Both entertaining and instructive.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CREW RACING: MGM Sports Parade—This subject has little appeal outside of spots where the sport is enjoyed. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

DESERT DEATH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—A very interesting two-reeler. Another of the "Crime Doesn't Pay." Play it and please them. Running time, 20 minutes.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

FOLLIES OF 1936: Our Gang—Our Gang is very popular here. I think this is the best of their efforts. Running time, two reels.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

GOOD LITTLE MONKEYS: Harman-Ising—Very spooky color cartoon, some entertainment, and good filler, speedy action at all times. Good, we will say. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GYMNASTICS: Pete Smith—Pete Smith puts life in this single that shows the various horizontal bars; rings and other champions of the gym. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC patronage.

HOT MONEY: Todd-Kelly—Fairly amusing; not quite up to the standard of this team. Running time, 18 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE PAPA: Our Gang—I can't give this much. Too many kids and not very funny. This only got a few laughs.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold. Iowa. General patronage.

NURSE TO YOU: Charley Chase—Good enough comedy. Running time, two reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Chic Sale Special—A good short, but not worth the money the company asks for it. It did not bring us any extra money.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLE: Musical Revues—Beautifully done in color, this should be played only in your best spot and with additional billing. Running time, 17 minutes.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLE: Musical Revues—A two-reel color short that has everything that can be crowded into a short: beautiful color, the picturesque setting of Catalina Island, music, dancing, comedy, featuring such screen celebrities as Buddy Rogers and his California Cavaliers, Sterling Young and his Orchestra, the Fanchonettes and a whole shipload of screen stars. More entertainment in this than in a lot of features. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLAND: Musical Revues—The class of the two-reel colored musical. Plenty of everything, music, dancing, stars and pulchritude.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLAND: Buddy Rogers, Johnny Downs, Betty Burgess—Very beautiful musical in color. Buddy Rogers gives a very good account of himself in his usual "ego" manner. He tries very hard to steal the show. He just gets on my nerves. This one is not as good as "Starlight Days at Lido," but it's good. Johnny Downs and Betty Burgess are good. Running time, 19 minutes.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PUBLIC GHOST NO. 1: Charley Chase—One of the best Charley Chase comedies we have played. His comedies have not been good lately, but this one got the laughs. Running time, 20 minutes.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

RUN, SHEEP, RUN: Harman-Ising (Happy Harmonies)—One of the best Happy Harmonies we have played. Plenty of laughs and catchy music score. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Paramount

ACCENT ON GIRLS: Headliner—A good snappy musical featuring Ina Ray Hutton and her girls. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF POPEYE, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Good one-reel cartoon comedy, but not worth the rental. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BROTHERLY LOVE: Popeye—Popeye goes over good here. Everyone seems to enjoy them. I think that Popeye pulls some extra business. I wish we could play one a week.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

CAVALCADE OF MUSIC, THE: Headliners—One of the best band acts we have played for a long while. You can't go wrong on this. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COUNTRYSIDE MELODIES: Varieties—Very beautiful pictorial in color, I believe the most beautiful I have ever seen, but it will not complete a program without another short to go with it.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S EASY TO REMEMBER: Richard Himber and Orchestra—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

JUMPING CHAMPION: Grantland Rice Sportlights—An exceptionally good Sportlight. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LITTLE NOBODY: Betty Boop—A darn nice little cartoon. Great moral for kid audience as well as adults. Best spot after musical feature or before a musical short. Running time, seven minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. General patronage.

PARADE OF THE MAESTROS: Headliners—This is a very good single reel act. Three of radios famous orchestras, introduced by three of radios famous announcers, rendering favorite hit songs of today. Best spot before any feature. Running time, nine minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. General patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN DREAMLAND: Color Classics—A very pretty short subject with nice music and color. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—This is an excellent Sportlight. All of them are good except that we are a little tired of Husing's facial expressions. In fact, we haven't cared much for Husing since he reported the Nebraska-Minnesota football game in which he showed so much partiality toward Minnesota. Running time, 10 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALIBI BYE BYE: Clark and McCullough—Funnier than some of their comedies. Running time, two reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ALIBI BYE BYE: Clark and McCullough Series—A grand comedy. Plenty of laughs and jokes. These boys sure are funny. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MOLLY MOO COW AND RIP VAN WINKLE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—An average colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

QUIET FOURTH, A: Smart Set—A good slapstick comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

FOX NEWS: No. 42—Pictures of the King's funeral and they were very grand shots. It would pay to play it in front of your patrons. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, The Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

FOX NEWS: No. 47—Fine pictures of ice skating and bob sledding in the Olympic games in Germany. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, The Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

WEST INDIES CRUISE: Magic Carpet—Beautiful scenery is all I can say for this one. It does not complete a program.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

CHINA SHOP, THE: Silly Symphony Series—A very good short in color. The Silly Symphonies always good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

COOKIE CARNIVAL, THE: Silly Symphony—I do not like this one. It might be O. K. for nursery, but not for grownups. Just a bunch of candy men, etc., the usual hokum. Running time, eight minutes.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS: These are not as good as "Strange As It Seems," but are good little shorts for a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ken Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and CCC patronage.

HIS LAST FLING: Van Ronkel NO. 6—Just fair filler; nothing new in it.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

QUAIL HUNT, THE: Oswald Cartoon—Very funny. Running time, one reel.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SLUMBERLAND EXPRESS: Oswald Cartoons—A very clever black-and-white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BROADWAY BALLYHOO: Owen, Hunt and Parco—A very fine musical. Dancing of Grandpa Jitters a riot.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BY REQUEST: Claude Hopkins and Orchestra—One of the best colored orchestra bits so far produced. Tuneful, fast moving, and well arranged. Hopkins has a chance to demonstrate his piano skill. his "ork" gets hot, three tap-dancers strut their stuff, and a vocal soloist puts over a good number. Very good entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

KATZ PAJAMAS: Fifi D'Orsay—Two reels of mighty good entertainment, combining comedy, music, dancing; in fact, everytbing it takes for a good short. Pleased. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE ISLANDS: Winifred Shaw, Warren Hymer—A colored two-reel musical and O. K.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PLANE DIPPY: Looney Tune—This is a very comical cartoon. Above the average.—Paul J. Pope, Avon Theatre, Geneva, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PLAYGROUNDS: Our Own United States Series—Like this group of travels in the United States much better than the "See America First" group of last year. Running time, 11 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

P'S AND CUES: Pepper Pot—A good filler and not out of ordinary.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

REGULAR KIDS: Meglin Kids—One of the best shorts we have played. Wish we could get more like this.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

SHOESTRING FOLLIES: Eddie Peabody, Peggy Flynn—This one drags a bit right at first, but gradually rounds off into an extraordinarily fine musical. Peggy's "kid-singing" starts things rolling, and then Eddie takes charge of the situation with his rapid-fire banio ticking. Sure to please any type of audience. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN HOLLAND: Broadway Brevities—Very pretty and entertaining subject. Running time, two reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE CASINO: Buster West, Radio Rubes—These vaudeville subjects released by Vitagraph are all excellent. Running time, 10 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Serials—Mascot

FIGHTING MARINES: Grant Withers, George Lewis—Have run two chapters of this serial and it seems to be off to a pretty good start. Rather better than the average serial.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

ADVENTURES OF FRANK MERRIWELL: Don Briggs, Jean Rogers—We have played so far eigbt chapters of this serial and must say that it is only fair. Universal don't put out the serials they used to. They just don't click at the box office. They don't mean anything. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Metropolitan Houses Will Roadshow "Dream"

Thirteen "A" houses of the RKO metropolitan New York circuit will play "A Midsummer Night's Dream" on a roadshow basis with the official price scale tilted to $1.65 top, starting late this month or early in May.

This is a departure in that circuit's operations and is predicated on test engagements in other of its houses scattered throughout the Middle West, where it was declared the plan worked successfully. The New York runs, all of them on a two-a-day basis, will range between two and four days, varying with the individual theatres. The theatres to come under this plan are: the 81st St., the 58th St., the Coliseum, Fordham, Franklin, Park Plaza, Kenmore, Tilyou, Dyker, the New Rochelle, Alden. Jamaica and Strand, Far Rockaway.

New Beam for WNYC

The City of New York will possess, before the end of the year, the first micro-ray beam radio link for regular service in this country, it was announced Monday by Frederick J. H. Kracke, Commissioner of Plant and Structures. The beam will function without direct wiring between the Municipal Building in City Hall Park and the transmitting plant for station WNYC now under construction in Brooklyn. Mr. Kracke explained that while the beam link will be used only in an emergency, it will be a permanent feature of the station's equipment and available for regular scheduled programs.

Stevenson Resumes Talks

Edward F. Stevenson, for many years president of Visugraphic Pictures, has resumed his extension course of lectures on advertising and publicity on Wednesday and Thursday evenings at both New York University and Stevens Institute.

Hode Writing Songs

Hal Hode, assistant to Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, is now writing lyrics to popular songs in collaboration with Peter Tinturin. The team's most recent effort, "How Like a Rose Is Love," is high up on the current list of popular numbers.

Warner Dance Date Set

The second annual Warner Club dance is set for April 26 in the Biltmore Bowl in Hollywood. The studio will provide the entertainment.

BUSINESS POINTS UP AT CHICAGO HOUSES

Eddie Grossman and Carl Fulton Launch New Circuit in Downstate Illinois Section

Good weather Easter Sunday brought out the crowds in Chicago but it wasn't until evening that the theatres did any business. When the customers did start to come, though, they came in droves and the late shows Sunday night found every Loop house packed.

"The Great Ziegfeld" opened at the Erlanger theatre with the "sold out" sign on the door at 6 p.m. From the advance sale the picture looks good for six to eight weeks at the legitimate house where it is being roadshown.

Other houses in the Loop to do big business were the State-Lake with a French girl-revue and "The Leathernecks Have Landed," on the screen. The Palace, with stageshows back and "Sutter's Gold" on the screen, drew a heavy trade, as did "The Connecticut Yankee," a reissue of the Will Rogers-Myrna Loy film, at the Garrick. "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the U. A. did a very big business. The Oriental with "Tough Guy" on the screen and a big stage revue also proved attractive.

The remaining Loop houses had pictures carried over. The Chicago with "Wife Versus Secretary" was a main attraction and the second week looks almost as big as the initial seven days.

Downstate exhibitors reported Easter business the best in years.

Coming into the Loop this week is "Country Doctor" at the Roosevelt. Following this, "Under Two Flags" will be the attraction. At the Apollo, which has been making big strides as one of the best grossers, "A Message to Garcia" has been booked in to open Saturday.

A new circuit has been started in downstate cities by Eddie Grossman, former manager of United Artists and Warner exchanges here, and Carl Fulton, equipment manufacturer. The first house to be built is the Mode in Joliet. The house is now under construction and will be opened about July 1. It will be of modern design and seat 800. Cost of the new theatre is estimated at $60,000.

The second house to be built will be in Aurora and this will be followed by another in Galesburg. They will be opened about September 1st.

Chicago neighborhood houses for the first time will play a roadshow film on a reserved-seat, roadshow price basis, with bookings of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" made by Leo Blank, Warner exchange manager. The film will play at the outlying Beverly, Jeffrey and Windsor theatres at prices from 50 cents to $1.00.

Suburban houses to play the film this month and next are the Paramount, Hammond; the LaMar, Oak Park; Tivoli, Downers Grove; Catlow, Barrington; Paramount, Wheaton; Morris, Morris; the Naper in Naperville and the Miller theatre in Woodstock.

In all these theatres special student matinees have been arranged.

Essaness houses now being remodeled are the Davis, Biograph and Vic. The Devon has been renovated and many improvements installed.

The first exhibition and display of National Screen Accessories was held Wednesday at their new display rooms in the Warner theatre building, 1307 South Wabash avenue.

Jack McPherson is manager of the local office and in charge of this new department of National Screen Service.

Out from New York to attend the exhibition were Morton Van Praag, sales manager; Hal Young, Harry Sandman, Harry Hollander, Ben Lass and Ruben Rosenblatt. Tom Burke of Minneapolis was also present.

If these words get out in Hollywood, Ely probably will be excluded from the party lists of many of Hollywood's fairest who feel they are expert bridge players.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING?

It has long been a practice of advertisers to endeavor to stimulate sales with widespread sampling of their merchandise. Distribution on the streets and house-to-house are used frequently. Another popular means of circulation is the coupon angle—a "please send me" box planted in the advertising and to be filled in by interested readers.

This last method of the merchandisers has now been adapted to showbusiness with the newspaper announcement by Barney Joffee, operator of Kansas City's Tower Theatre, wherein 10,000 local picture-goers are invited to be guests of the manager.

"I don't want one person in Kansas City to say 'I haven't been to the Tower theatre in the past six months,' " said Joffee in a three-column ten-inch advertisement reproduced on page 55 in the news section. And in the ad is a coupon to be filled which, mailed or brought to the theatre, is good for a free admission. The only check is a line in the coupon: "I haven't been to the Tower in the past six months—I wouldn't fib to you, Mr. Joffee."

By this drive the Kansas City theatreman hopes to build up his regular business and voices his hopes in the line: "If you'll enjoy one show as my guest I think you'll become a Tower 'regular.' "

Barney's adventurous embarking upon the sampling seas immediately brings into the picture one of the industry's most controversial topics and one that members have discussed frequently in these pages—the uses and the abuses of the theatre pass.

As concerns the ducat, irrespective of its manner of distribution, theatremen are divided in two classes—those who argue that the return from passes is not to be sneezed at, and those who give up an "Oakley" with the same willingness as they would part from a left leg.

The first group holds that the theatre cannot afford to pay for in cash what it receives by the use of passes; that an empty seat does the theatre no good; that papering the house is not only good psychology but also, as Joffee anticipates, that folks who come in once on the cuff may return as regular patrons, and even bring extra business with them.

The other side argues and as vigorously that theatre seats are only to be sold as is any other merchandise; that folks initiated into the joys of free admissions are extremely difficult to educate into the ranks of the payers; that theatres today are giving more than fair value for what they charge at the boxoffice.

This department has gone on record more than once on the side of those who refer to the topic as the "pass evil." We see no valid reason now to change this opinion.

Whatever the reasons for using passes as a species of currency in the early days of showbusiness, the present status of the motion picture theatre should make unnecessary any large-scale philanthropy disguised under the uncertain terminology of "good-will." In actual dollars and cents, the average picture show today is a distinct bargain. It remains the cheapest form of good entertainment and it's about time your general public was so taught instead of coaxed to "have one on the house."

There is too much of a profitless prodigality evidenced in the gestures of the theatremen who by their very lavishness of pass distribution misinterpret grievously the effects of "something for nothing" upon the average mind.

REVERSE, REVERSE, REVERSE

Back in the early days, the waltz was quite the dance to do. Considered as very hotsy in shaking a hasty hoof was the laddie who could reverse his partner with ease and dexterity. Sometimes to prepare the girl friend for so complicated a gyration, a command of "reverse" was given before the maneuver.

Which all comes to mind in glancing over the amusement pages of various key cities for a perusal of theatre display advertisings. White-on-black seems to be the current hit and the "reverse" cut is executed with plenty of ease if not so much dexterity.

One of these days, a smart ad man is going to throw those reverse barrages in the basket and steal the page with some black-on-white.

Leathernecks Land At New York Globe

Marines were in force at the Globe, New York, for the opening of Republic's "Leathernecks Have Landed," with honor guard of 20 marines in full dress regalia going through various formations (see photo) in theatre foyer. Officers were invited to be present at special "night" and enlisted men showing company cards were admitted free every night during run of picture.

Display of marine equipment—wearing apparel, guns, gas masks, field radio, etc.—was on exhibition in lobby and naval signal pennants covering the front were among the other ideas supervised by Ed Finney, Republic ad head, and executed by Bill Peirce, exploitation director.

Piano Manufacturer Aids Brown on "This Night"

Harry Brown, Jr., director of publicity at the Paramount and Fenway Theatres, and Paul Levi, his assistant, took advantage of a tieup in the press-book and promoted 154 lines of free space in the Boston Traveler. This tieup was with Ampico Hall in connection with the Mason & Hamlin pianos.

Best feature of the ad was the large percentage of space devoted to a cut of Gladys Swarthout and a billing for "Give Us This Night," together with a caption emphasizing the fact that the picture was playing the Paramount and Fenway. In addition Ampico Hall devoted an entire window display to the attraction.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

"Man Bites Dog," Says John Goodno

Managers using signed endorsements of locals in newspaper ads to plug dates usually select most favorable comments for reproduction. However, John A. Goodno, of the Palace, Huntington, West Va., switched the angle a bit in a recent endorsement flash on "Peter Ibbetson" in which some unfavorable opinions were scattered among the others.

From a journalistic standpoint, Goodno writes it might be classified as a "man bites dog" item. He feels the unusual twist caused a lot of buzzing and perhaps increased public confidence. Business was not affected as a result, he says.

Moving Letter Sign Tops 'Ziegfeld' Front

Plenty of activity preceded the opening of MGM's "The Great Ziegfeld" for the two-a-day date at the New York Astor, among the attractors being a striking electrical display featuring a running sign (see photo) across face of the flash. Information on the picture, cast, etc., was publicized through the moving lettered streamer.

Publicity slants in advance included formation of a New York City Glorified Girls' Club organized by Bernard Sobel, former Ziegfeld publicist. Idea is pegged to extension to other spots with membership open to girls formerly connected with any of the Ziegfeld shows with fund-raising in mind through benefits. Sobel also broadcast a series of programs featuring names previously engaged in any of the "Follies."

General exploitation drive under Billy Ferguson was spirited. Tieups of all kinds stressing fashions displays were arranged with top stores and other merchants reported making unsolicited appeals for cooperation on the date. Ferguson has arranged some 50 odd ideas available to his exploiteers.

Music angles were well covered all over the New York area and posting was extensive. Entire sides of buildings were posted, billing in one spot covering the equivalent of a 448 sheet.

Factory Short Booms Grosses

There are lots of commercial shorts shown mainly at conventions, sales meetings, etc., and it seems that the Caterpillar Tractor Company of Peoria, Ill., had a number on hand for the above purpose. Reels included shots of employees who had never seen themselves on the screen as pictures were not shown to workers which developed a smart box office slant for Great States City Manager, Leonard C. Worley, and publicist E. G. Fitzgibbons.

Theatremen contacted factory executives who were more than pleased to furnish print of the short for showing at the Madison Theatre in addition to regular feature for one night only. Show was plugged on factory announcement boards, on pay slips and through foremen. Theatre ran box in ads and planted special posters in lobby.

As 8,000 Peorians work in the Caterpillar plant, theatre was packed for the two performances reel was shown.

Ace Advance Built On 'Things to Come'

United Artists' advance publicity buildup on "Things to Come," in progress for many weeks, culminated recently in Washington, where, before an audience of ambassadors, cabinet members, senators, prominent newspaper folk and other top names in official Washington circles, picture was screened at a private showing at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Others in attendance included newspaper critics from nearby key cities, guests of U. A. at the screening featured by an address via trans-atlantic phone by H. G. Wells, author of the story from which picture was made. Broadcast was also arranged and wire services carried stories for national coverage.

The nationwide newspaper campaign on the picture was started some months back with a series of full page rotogravure breaks in top papers. Other prominent dailies also used full pages in regular issues. "Time" magazine for the first time went for a three-page picture spread with a full page review plus two others of stills and captions. Syndicate stuff includes layout and story sent out by N.E.A. on what top fashionists think will be the styles of the future. For this, shoe, hat and costume designers drew sketches of their conceptions and these were shown together with style stills from the picture as a basis of comparison.

Miami Roadshows Premiere

First reported theatre date on "Things to Come" with campaign details comes from John Cunningham, skipper of the State, Miami, Fla. Top bally was special plane making race tracks and nearby communities, pilot dropping heralds on the date.

Co-op ads were obtained stressing the future fashion angles as compared to those current, cards distributed to newsstands and stores plugging story of the picture in invention magazine. Background of front was in silver spotted with scores of action stills. Paper running the Winchell column reproduced blowups of the columnist's comments on the picture for street distribution. Postal Telegraph and libraries also cooperated to put over Cunningham's date.

Previous winner of a Bronze plaque, Sid Holland (right) now is honored with the Quigley March Silver for his campaign on "Music Goes Round" put on at the Elco Theatre, Elkhart, Ind. Ben Newman (left) is a newcomer to the Competitions and distinguished his entrance by taking down the March Bronze on "Rose Marie" at Loew's Rio, New York City. Details of both campaigns are set down on the next page.

Distributes Stenog. Heralds For "Wife Versus Secretary"

For "Wife Versus Secretary," Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, Ohio, distributed 10,000 stenographic notebook heralds through all downtown offices and to large factories. Heralds were also inserted in magazines at news agency prior to their delivery to homes and bookmarks were distributed by leading circulating libraries.

Imprinted silk sashes were worn by entire staff week ahead, atmospheric compo board display covered entire front and illuminated cutout letters announced the three-star names atop marquee.

On "Little Lord Fauntleroy," Wally addressed letters to all PTA associations and women's clubs, distributed study guides to principals of schools and postal telegraph delivered heralds with all outgoing wires. Leading department store featured a Fauntleroy blue window and boys' wear display with picture copy and playdates.

Paper Gives Hamilton Full Page Plug

Al Hamilton, Empress Theatre, South Norwalk, Conn., crashed his local daily with a full-page gratis break when paper reproduced letter he had written to them complimenting them on the response theatre had received from a "County Doctor" contest run in paper recently.

On "Modern Times" Al secured full-page co-op ads, each merchant tying his copy in to picture title. Center of page contained large cut of the star with theatre and playdates spotted prominently.

Paper Features Contest For "Sutter's Gold"

George French, manager, and Jack Granara, RKO district publicity manager for their send-off of "Sutter's Gold" at the Memorial in Boston, planted a contest in local daily for which $25 in cash and free tickets were offered. Paper ran a different still from picture each day and readers were asked to give full list of pictures in which each of the stars had previously appeared. Contest ran a week ahead and in addition to the nine cash prizes, the next 25 best were given the guest tickets.

Ballyhoo took two forms—airplane over city trailing banner, while miniature prairie wagon drawn by two ponies made its way through streets (see photo). Department stores featured fashion displays of the new Sutter's gold and letters were sent to all schools informing them of historical atmosphere of picture.

Elkhart Companies Sponsor Band Week For Holland's Date

Casting about for some different angle around which to center his campaign on "Music Goes 'Round," at the Elco Theatre, Sid Holland, managing director, Elkhart Amusement Co., Elkhart, Ind., found the answer right in his backyard, so to speak, as the city is the capital of the band instrument industry.

With this in mind, Holland speedily sold the manufacturers on possibilities in a "week" named after the picture. Much was done to put this over as the high spot of Holland's entry which won for him the Quigley March Silver plaque.

Special page with eight-column streamer carrying details of the week's program was promoted from only local daily, usually shy on theatre publicity. Program embraced street parade, stage contests, lobby displays of wind instruments, etc., paper giving further buildup with editorial.

Officials Join in Parade

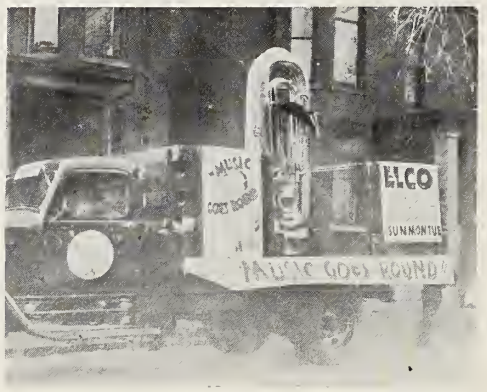
Parade, of course, was outside top stunt with good-looking girls carrying instruments of different cooperating companies riding in individual bannered cars. Officials of these companies were present, the procession through the main streets led by local brass band. Among the featured floats was one (see photo) with a half-ton bass horn standing nine feet high. In the parade also were two bannered taxis offering free rides to theatre, copy reading: "This taxi goes 'round and 'round the town taking people to see ——."

The five sponsors also offered the $100 in cash prizes offered on Holland's talent contest for amateurs performing to the music of the song. Fifty dollars were given in cash and the rest for tickets to the theatre. Many contestants performed on band instruments which was the reason for the tiein.

Two other music ballys included 14-piece band making the residential districts playing the song as they walked "'round and 'round." Other stunt was lone bannered clarinetist who made the downtown streets. Air stunt was bannered plane, bannered on fuselage and under wings, dropping heralds and guest tickets.

Residents Sign Proclamation

Sid also used girls in house-to-house canvass each carrying blank sheets for locals to sign to effect that they were "happy to know" the picture would be at the Elco. Girls worked a week ahead. Another girl stunt was tieup with phone company to have operator in prominent window phoning locals about date 10 days ahead. Signs tied in stunt as a means of showing how effective telephone was for modern communication. No charge was made for extra service.



Windows, radio, billing including cards on phone poles (usually not allowed) were utilized and causing some extra buzzing, too, was Sid's barbershop hookin where one-sheet (see photo) was pasted to ceiling above chairs to catch attention of transients in town.

As a result of his instrument tieup, Sid was interviewed by the editor of Music Trades, monthly publication, and received page story in that magazine on effectiveness of his contest. Columbia's house organ also came through with story, recommending duplication of tieup. Similar promotion by music trades is expected in other spots.

These were highlights of Holland's campaign in which he generously credits the staff and especially his assistant, E. Wm. Sparr, for cooperation.

One sheet on ceiling in Elkhart barber shop for Holland's "Round and Round" date at the Elco, for purpose of attracting hotel transients.

Base horn weighing half ton and nine feet high was feature on special float as part of Holland's "Music Goes Round Week" top stunt of campaign.

Brass band, Boy Scout detachment, fleet of bannered autos were highlights of Ben Newman's street parade on "Rose Marie." Two-mile area covered.

Winner of Bronze Covers Wide Area On March Entry

Keeping in mind that the situation is a neighborhood house, second-run in the district where no large stores are located and newspaper facilities limited to a weekly, Manager Ben Newman, of Loew's Rio, in New York, managed to obtain a handsome total of coverage on his "Rose Marie" campaign that landed for him the Quigley March Bronze plaque. He says no circuit tieups were used, and all displays by the staff.

Newman did a lot of things to attract attention, among them being a street parade headed by a 40-piece boys' band (see photo) with boys carrying theatre banners, and a fleet of sedans promoted from local Ford dealer. Boy Scouts were in the march and included was a 24-sheet float. Parade covered two miles up and down Broadway, with progress aided by police escort.

Prominent cafeteria was promoted to bake a Rose Marie cake for window display with guest tickets given to those coming nearest to guessing the recipe from which the cake was made. Slips in the thousands were distributed by the restaurant and in addition to space for the answers carried all theatre credits.

Ties Into Baby Contest

Local neighborhood weekly also cooperated by allowing Newman to tie into baby beauty contest with winners in the preliminary contests invited to see the picture as guests. Paper duly credited theatre and tied in again the following week on another drive with Newman donating tickets for those making most words out of week's title.

Further district publicity was obtained in many ways. Among these, Ben lists planting cards in public telephone booths with copy reading: "Phone (theatre number) for starting time of ——." Milk bottle tops were also planted around in the dawn's early light by the theatre porters.

Windows were secured in some 25 stores on special tieups, various stills from the picture used to hook in the co-ops with others tied in for MacDonald fashions. Three-sheet cutouts were planted in vacant windows and imprinted blotters passed out to children in six neighborhood schools. Tire covers on private cars, cabs, delivery wagons, etc. also helped circulation.

Bannered auto covered the district with sound system playing songs from the picture, imprinted bags distributed widely, small envelopes with "do not open" copy given out at subway stations. Laundries stuffed packages with heralds and sidewalks stenciled. Coloring contest was effected with neighborhood five-and-ten which with other stores gave away photos of Nelson Eddy and installed window of coloring materials for contest use together with picture stills and accessories.

Front decorations and inside theatre art was in keeping and all work done by Newman's staff. This included hanging electric sign across stage made from old channel letters, and flashed week ahead during overtures, entrances and breaks.

New Orleans Star System Called Enemy of Pictures

Theatremen Claim Newspaper's Ratings Damaging to Grosses

by J. W. LEIGH
New Orleans Correspondent

That "ole debbil" newspaper star rating system is something for New Orleans theatremen to buck up against, it seems, and is termed one of the major box office hazards that hurts business in an otherwise good show town.

This and other whats-what on the entertainment situation and local conditions as affect theatres in the Louisiana metropolis are covered herewith in the continuation of the Showman's Travelogue series now running in Managers' Round Table.

A-MIKE.

Termed as a seaport, New Orleans includes in its borders all the essentials that go to make a city, whether in the busy eastern and northern climes, despite the fact it nestles in the deep south, nursed by the Mississippi river and the Gulf of Mexico, for here is the largest wash goods (men's summer suits) manufacturing center in the United States, shipments being made to all points, including Canada, and even in some instances to South America and Mexico; the winter capital of the south, sharing honors with Florida with its attractive beaches, fittingly called the Winter Capital of America, the home of sports, the largest theatrical drawing capacity as regards population to amusements, and with the lowest admission prices to the motion picture houses of any city in America.

Skilled Labor in Minority

Conservative estimates place the population at approximately a little over a half a million, and growing steadily, year after year, the growth being mainly northern, as well as those from the Latin countries both east and south. The birth rate averages the same as any American city in times of peace and prosperity, and has not varied as regards percentage in the last decade. The population includes Spanish, French, Italians, Jewish, negroes, a small sprinkling of Germans and other nationalities, giving the native born citizen a percentage of about 60 per cent. Manual labor sits heavily on the simon-pure Orleanian, who up to the present time has managed to escape the pick and shovel, leaving these occupations to those of other nations, mostly the negro and the Italians. Owing to the lack of large manufacturing plants in the city, as in the north, skilled labor is in a minority. Before the advent of the Code, clerks in department stores received on an average of from 15, 18 and 20 dollars a week. The Code cut salaries in many instances to 12 and a half dollars a week, and at the same time advanced the wages of negro porters, elevator hands and the like from seven and eight dollars a week to 12 and a half dollars with the same hours as the white-collars.

Affiliated houses claim they, too, will eliminate all favors if the independents do likewise. As the exchanges do not care to change the zoning arrangements, it seems as if New Orleans will have low prices and free premiums till the Day of Doom.

New Orleans boasts of the best transportation in the south, with a network of street cars, buses and a fleet of taxicabs in addition to an automobile to practically every fourth family in the city. Street car and bus fare is seven cents with a universal transfer: taxis 35 cents for a load inside the city limits. Over the river, at Algiers and Gretna, with a combined population of nearly 70,000, ferryboats accommodate the theatregoer at a fare of 12 tickets for 25 cents, with a five-cent bus fare on the west bank. As the theatres are all in walking distance from the Canal street ferry patrons walk or use their own cars from the river to the theatres. The parking situation as yet is not acute, but if the number of cars increases it will soon be necessary to wreck several downtown structures to provide for the number of automobiles in the city both day and night.

Very little latitude is given the resident managers, they for the most part being under instructions from their respective home offices. The United Chain has 18 neighborhood houses, the finest in the city. The operations are conducted from the general office in the heart of the city, where bookings and other arrangements are made daily. The Saengers operate three theatres, the Saenger, Globe and Tudor, all on Canal Street; front office direction is the rule. The St. Charles, only major independent house in the city, is operated by the St. Charles Amusement Company, with Harry S. McLeod resident manager, who runs things in his own way, and has made a wonderful success of the venture. All other neighborhood houses are under individual control—the man who takes your tickets buys the features and the shorts as well, and is competent to go in the booth and operate the machines.

Believing in the ancient saying that all men are enemies, the various theatrical managers have not fraternized to any great extent, except on labor matters—on this they stand as a unit. Records do not show a general theatrical organization, except among the independents, namely, members of the Allied organization, which is represented in this section by Henry Lazarus, manager and owner of the Wonderland, Newcomb and Coliseum theatres, the latter a neighborhood house in the uptown section which has a greater drawing magnet than even one of the key houses. Banknite is doing it.

And be it said to the credit of the local managers, the local houses will average as high in service, cleanliness and sound as any city in the country, bar none. It just seems to come natural to them.

Theatres Use Large Space

Following the lead of the commercial houses and department stores, New Orleans theatres are advertising-minded and instead of the traditional 14-line display, splurge in half, three-quarter pages not only on a Sunday but on other days as well. Newspapers are used, no streamers but solid display that stands out like a sore thumb at a formal gathering. An occasional billboard and a few lithos are used now and then, as well as the radio, but not sufficient to mention. Twelve-sheet stands are seen occasionally—but they prefer the old-reliable newspaper which goes in the homes of practically every family in the city. Mercantile tie-ups are not common in New Orleans.

DICK WRIGHT SUGGESTIONS

Under the heading "Timely Topics" in a recent issue of the "Ohio Mouthpiece," Warner Theatres' house organ, are set down the following reminders suggested to the men in his sector by Cleveland zone district manager Dick Wright. They are timely indeed and can be studied with profit by theatremen everywhere.

How long has it been since you checked your pass-list? Are you positive that everyone who is enjoying courtesies to your theatre is entitled to them? Check that list today!

Institutional ads build good-will for your theatre and organization. Continue promoting them whenever possible.

Rainy weather for these coming spring weeks brings the usual request for a borrowed umbrella. Do you have a few cheap ones which you can lend patrons. . . . Those same umbrellas will bring them back to your theatre—at least once!

Is your calendar marked to remind you of your theatre's anniversary week. A real celebration demands advance planning.

Are you exercising proper supervision over employees who handle tickets and cash. Managers will create good morale effect by taking keen interest constantly, in this branch of operation.

Are your coming attraction trailers convincing? Interesting? Spotted advantageously?

Watch Those Dripping Faucets

When did you last check up on the consumption of water and electricity in your house? Dripping faucets run up your water bills higher than you think. . . . Are those lights in unfrequented parts of your theatre burning?

What good-will stunt have you planned this month? Is the time ripe for another orphans' party or a treat for the school boy traffic police?

Do you keep principals and school teachers informed of features and short subjects which may have an educational value, so that they can be plugged in class rooms?

Are you taking advantage of cooperative ads by shaving your own direct advertising expenditures currently?

Do your cleaners permit a sufficient amount of outdoor air to circulate through your house during the morning cleaning hours so that your patrons experience a fresh, clean odor and not one of stale-foul air?

Are you regularly inspecting your theatre with a view to preventing conditions which might result in accidents and lawsuits?

Have you become stereotyped in preparing your newspaper advertising? . . . Check through some key city tear sheets with a view to picking up new ideas in layouts and unusual treatments.

How often do you check the lamps—letters—and glass in your marquee? . . . Your marquee flash is by all means one of the most valuable advertising mediums your theatre possesses. Take good care of it.

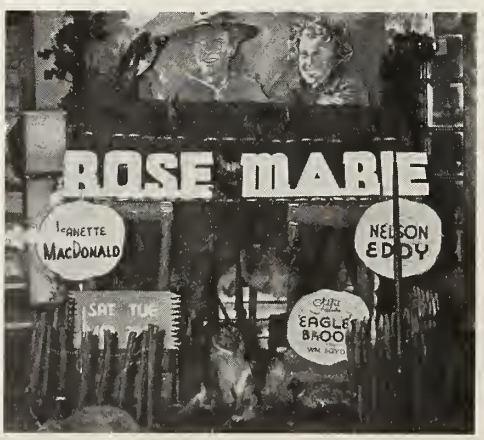
Do members of your service staff know the exact feature starting times of today's attraction or is it necessary for them to refer to a schedule? . . . A prompt reply to a patron's inquiry is convincing that your staff is on its toes.

Does your spring selling activity include tieups of genuine box-office merit or are they just so much eye-wash for the boss?

Are your swinging marquee banners and outdoor set-pieces anchored securely? . . . March and April winds give them a severe test. . . . It's better to be sure now!

When did you last check your maintenance man on his periodical inspection trips? You have plenty of money tied up in equipment . . . don't let it become an expense to you.

Are you proud of the snap and flash which the front of your theatre presents? . . . After all it reflects upon you. . . it's manager—if it's not up to your expectations correct it!



Wouldn't a check of these aforementioned items give you a satisfied feeling that you were looking after your property and job entrusted to your supervision?

SAYS HERALD USED IN WEEKLY MEETINGS

At the Capitol, Regina, Saskatchewan, Walt Davis holds weekly meetings for male members of the personnel to discuss coming attractions. Reporting on the sessions, Davis writes:

"Further, every week when the Motion Picture Herald comes in, each one takes turns to peruse it from cover to cover, making notations of display lines, editorials, readin gmatter—in fact, anything we may capitalize on locally. These notes are handed in to me and after I have gone over the book, we practically have all the meat of it. . . . "

ATMOSPHERIC DISPLAY. From local furrier, Louie Fishkin, Commodore Theatre, Brooklyn, promoted stuffed animals for "Rose Marie" display. Artist painted background while patrons looked on.

Star System Called Enemy of Pictures

The worst enemy of the motion picture in New Orleans is the star system inaugurated by the Item. Protests are of no avail. The publisher insists that as the public is interested in the theatres, it is the Item's duty to enlighten it. Managers claim that the absence of stars have done them inestimable damage. Some time back a delegation from the theatres called on the Item to protest, using the argument that if the theatre criticized the offerings in one of the department stores, a suit for damages would be the result. The argument had no effect, however, and the star system still prevails. And the theatres still advertise in the paper.

Readers with the exception of the Sunday dope and the criticism after the performance is all the theatres get in return for their display advertising. Night clubs, however, in one afternoon newspaper, though they seldom advertise, receive more attention than the editorial page. Hollywood syndicated stuff is used and is eagerly read by all readers while columnists are featured more heavily than Walter Winchell ever dared to be in his home town.

Considered Best Shown Town

New Orleans is conceded to be the best show town in the south, and despite opposition of night clubs, baseball, almost open gambling, all theatres have never to any great extent been obliged to resort to red ink on their ledgers. People crowd the houses.

And in more cases than one lines extending half a block have been formed, not only on a first night but succeeding evenings as well. This is not only in the downtown section but in the neighborhoods as well. Of course, the cash give-aways have much bearing on the latter.

But all-in-all New Orleans theatre owners can depend on a record attendance, taking the 365 days in the year, over those of other cities.

Stage shows will never come back to New Orleans, professionally, for many years, due principally to the high scale of musicians and stage hands. Canned music is serving its purpose well in the various houses.

When the Municipal Auditorium was erected some years ago it was the purpose of the promoters to use the structure for heavy road attractions. The commission council thereupon placed an almost prohibitive license on combinations. As a result, Eddie Cantor and company was the last in that place. Red ink was necessary to balance the books.

Now comes the announcement that the WPA will be asked for funds to reproduce the Old French Opera House to its original status.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

All Colored Program

In playing "Becky Sharp" at the Delano Theatre, Delano, Cal., publicist August Panero booked only technicolor shorts, including travelogue, cartoon, comedy and feature. Gus reports he received some fine editorials in the papers and the stunt went over very well.

Thames' "Breakfast" Lobby Setpiece

It's the Early Bird That Gets His Breakfast

Girls and boys of Corpus Christi, Texas, awoke one day from a deep dream of peace to read their daily papers and find that Jimmie Thames, Ritz Theatre, had invited them to a prevue of "Love Before Breakfast" and a meal on the house before going to their respective jobs. Six a. m. was the hour set for the showing and the papers were generous with breaks on the gag.

Jimmie promoted the steaming coffee and doughnuts and a pleasant time was had by all. Accompanying photo shows display used in front of theatre to plug the event plus credit for cooperating merchants.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

"Million" Week Planted by Petch

Planting a "Thanks a Million" week with cooperating merchants and newspaper, Ernie Petch, Strand, Brandon, Manitoba, secured a full page spread, each ad containing title tied in to copy. In connection with this, a missing word contest was planted.

Stores imprinted bags, leading laundry and bakery included inserts in packages, menu stuffers were used in leading cafes and cooperating merchants came through with neat window displays.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Jumbled Letter Contest Used by Shaffer for "Zero"

An effective "Ceiling Zero" co-op ad was secured by Frank Shaffer, Warner's Virginia, Harrisonburg, Pa., in which contest was included, prizes including $10 paid by merchants with tickets to runnersup.

Twenty-three merchants cooperated, each ad containing large letter in upper left hand corner, letters when arranged correctly spelled title and names of stars. Merchants distributed heralds at stores.

ROTSKY'S KNITTING CONTEST

Montreal, Canada, Round Tabler Describes Campaign Put On With Cooperating Woolen Advertisers

The results of his theatre knitting contests, running six weeks and recently ended, are reported to the Round Table by George Rotsky, who sponsored the stunt and with great success at the Palace, Montreal. George says that the interest women are now taking in woolcraft gave him the idea, especially since he noticed knitting being done in the theatre, public conveyances, etc.

Campaign was entirely costless as wool company cooperated by taking care of all extra expense, including the cash prizes and newspaper advertising, salary of instructress and contest folders. Department stores also came in with extra copy, window displays (see photo), etc., as contest helped to sell much wool. Stores also distributed folders.

And best of all, says Rotsky, business increased definitely, as theatre was headquarters for information and instructress was stationed there during run of contest to aid entrants. Judging and distribution of prizes was put on at the Palace and this, too, sold a lot of tickets. Nearly 12,000 lines of free space were obtained. Details as follows:

Contest was sponsored with Belding-Corticelli, the woolen company which, in addition to above, furnished for theatre distribution of thousands of folders giving instructions. Five sweaters were illustrated, contestants asked to copy any one or more to be entered. Two newspapers, English and French, were lined up for further cooperation, and these ran the rules, information and other daily mentions, including photos, etc., on woman's page. Local shopping weekly also cooperated.

Entrants Instructed in Knitting

Use of the company's wool was compulsory and each entry had to be accompanied by necessary number of bands off the balls of wool required to make up entry. Instructress was on hand in the mezzanine afternoons, from two to five, and evenings, from seven to ten, to aid knitters and those desiring to learn.

This information was included in the newspapers and also that inquiries and folders would be mailed to those sending self-addressed, stamped envelopes. The offer brought in requests from out of town as well as Montreal, with the provinces of Ontario and Quebec well represented.

Radio was used in the campaign, two periods every morning, from seven forty-five to eight and from ten to ten-thirty being promoted.

Prizes were $25, $15 and $10, with 15 consolation awards to the next 15 selected. These were awarded from the stage of the Palace by Miss Lloyd, Montreal radio personality and newspaper columnist, which event assured an evening of extra business.

Rotsky has nothing but praise for the entire project despite the amount of work involved. In recommending it he asserts that the contest has sufficient meat for tieins with most any large wool company interested enough to spend some money to stimulate sales.

Blood Donors Club Formed by George

The Voice of Experience in a coast-to-coast hookup devoted most of recent program to what he considered an outstanding piece of humanitarianism by Douglas George, Warner's Parker Theatre, Darby, Penna. Recently a patron of the theatre appealed to George for aid in securing necessary blood for a transfusion for a relative and not only did this enterprising manager secure the blood but steps are now under way for the formation of a free blood donors' organization in Delaware County, with plenty of publicity breaks for the theatre and manager.

Another break seized upon by Douglas was Academy Award going to Bette Davis a few days ahead of his showing of "Dangerous," which enabled him to tackle merchants for a co-op page congratulating Miss Davis on his accomplishment.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

ANNOUNCE LAST CALL FOR "PARTY" TICKETS

Just a few days left for theatremen in the New York City area to get their tickets for the managers' get-together to be held at the French Casino, the night of Thursday (April 23). Committee suggests immediate action on part of those who intend being on hand, as space is limited.

Party is informal, starts at eleven o'clock, guests may bring wives and/or sweethearts. Single tickets, $2.75 each, good for special dinner, stage show and dancing may still be secured from the following:

Paul Binstock, Republic, Brooklyn; Joe Salmon, Riverside, New York; Marty Rosenburgh, Loew's Boro Park, Brooklyn; Lew Preston, Endicott, Brooklyn; Eric Van Dyck, Loew's 83d Street, New York, and Moe Baranco, State, Jersey City.

Tickets are available at this office for those who cannot conveniently reach any of the Committee.

Fishkin Borrows Ships For "Blood" Display

Through tieup with local ship collector, Louis Fishkin, Commodore Theatre, Brooklyn, for "Captain Blood" borrowed two four-foot pirate ship models which were lighted inside and set in sailing position with shadow-boxed waves. Hand-painted head of Errol Flynn was used for centerpiece and title was of transparent letters lighted from rear. Over entire display was placed two crossed swords. Girl dressed as pirate was stationed next to display distributing programs.

Local candy store cooperated by distributing candy gold pieces-of-eight in imprinted paper bags, store window featuring guessing contest of gold candy pieces, tickets going to winners.

On "Follow the Fleet" a ten-foot hand-painted battleship was constructed in sign shop and placed in front of marine background in order to permit lights shining through portholes (see photo). Oversized action cutouts of Rogers and Astaire were planted at sides, as were star heads of the two mounted inside life buoys. Assistant Harry Kriegsman is credited by Fishkin for aid on the campaigns.

Papers Aid McManus On "Shark Island"

In connection with his showing of "Prisoner of Shark Island" at Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo., Johnny McManus ran a series of sceen stills in newspaper with captions giving brief idea of what to expect from the film. John lets no grass grow under his feet and when attending a Kiwanis lunch, managed to get in some plugs for the date.

On "Wife Versus Secretary," McManus distributed heralds simulating a stenographic notebook in which were written picture and playdate copy. Extra publicity breaks were garnered when papers used stories and cut of Harlow and Gable with pooches they adopted from Missouri kennels.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Brown's Anniversary Week

Celebrating anniversary week at the Paramount in Boston, Harry Brown, Jr., promoted leading hairdresser to demonstrate latest of coiffures in the ladies lounge, promoted elaborate birthday cake, served cigarettes and coffee. Another interesting stunt Harry planted was artist in lobby who sketched any patrons who cared to pose.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Skywriting Gag Used By Wade for "Zero"

Plane equipped with siren was borrowed by Vince Wade, Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla., for "Ceiling Zero" and used to skywrite picture title and drop lucky-number heralds opening day. Four days ahead ads were run advising all to watch the sky for the thrill of a lifetime.

At Kiddie matinee cutout airplanes and helmets were distributed and boys of student safety patrol march through main streets to theatre carrying placards. To inject a little realism in his trailer, Vince created a smoke screen to represent ceiling zero fog by dropping dry ice in hot water and blowing it across stage under blue lights. Back stage siren heightened the effect.

Girl in silver aviatrix costume was used for street bally, distributing imprinted cards offering tickets to those writing title greatest number of times on reverse side. Accompanying photo shows girl standing next to 25-foot silver plane in front of house, later transferred inside and hung from ceiling of lobby.

Paramount Ties "Sky Parade" To Jimmy Allen Sponsors

With radio-famed Jimmy Allen starring in "Sky Parade," Bob Gillham, Paramount ad head, has tied in with the various oil companies sponsoring the Allen programs for exploitation on the picture.

Press book stresses box-office potentialities in the two million or more youngsters who are members of the Flying Cadets—organization built up by sponsors to hold interest in the program. Book relates all the various tieins now used with the air show and sets forth a lot more suggested by the Paramount exploitation forces.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Radio Contest for Kids Inaugurated by Strand

As part of campaign for "The Singing Kid," which premiered at the New York Strand, Irv Windisch sponsored a singing competition among boys and girls of the city.

Tryouts were held at Station WINS and youngsters with most promising voices selected to broadcast in the finals over the station from the lobby of the theatre. The radio audience was asked to act as judges and to send their choice to the station.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Sobler Uses Robots To Plug "Walking Dead"

A week ahead and during run of "Walking Dead" at the Spreckles in San Diego, Abe Sobler planted a huge mechanical robot, eerily lighted, in his lobby. Man clad in robot suit stalked streets, suit of shining aluminum bore title and playdates (see photo). Attendant in hospital uniform was kept on hand during run with display of first aid supplies.

On "Colleen" cards with real shamrocks attached were printed and distributed at schools, dance halls, etc. Cards were also handed out in office buildings, with announcement that three people from each building would be selected to be guests of Colleen at theatre each three days during run. Names were posted in lobby cigar stand in each building. Sobler offered lifetime pass to first baby girl born on St. Patrick's Day whose mother named her "Colleen."

P. S.—Abe is now out one lifetime pass.

Miller's Snowplane Delivery

G. R. Miller, Legion Theatre, Wynyard, Sask., Canada, forwards photo here illustrated, which shows method of film transportation used by his circuit. Miller says "it" is called a snowplane and covers the sixty-mile jumps between situations with ease even when the roads are too bad for horses. Vehicle makes a speed of from 20 to 30 miles an hour when other means of transportation are impractical.

Zimbalist's Amateur Nights

Over in Lyndhurst, N. J., Al Zimbalist at the Ritz, has inaugurated amateur nights with local newspaper cooperating. Cash prizes are awarded winners, decided by audience applause, and coupons are run in paper inviting those who can play an instrument or dance to enter the contest.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

FORTY YEARS ago this week — the night of April 23, 1896 — at Koster & Bial's Music Hall in Herald Square, New York, the career of the motion picture on the theatre screen began. Edison pictures, made for the peep shows, were spread life size upon a screen by the Armat Vitascope, a novelty number on a variety bill. Variety became the politer vaudeville and held the screen in thrall for a decade. Then the screen achieved the photoplay and began the swift development by which it is the world's dominant entertainment form. Twenty of those thirty years Martin Quigley and his publications have been in the service of this art and industry. His Motion Picture Herald, the inheritor of all the tradition and sharing in the experience of the years since, dedicates this issue to this fortieth anniversary, to the men who made that brave beginning, and with a salute to those who have brought the screen to world dominion. —TERRY RAMSAYE

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 123, No. 4 April 25, 1936

FAMOUS "FIRSTS"

IT is entirely coincidental that this period of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the industry of the motion picture screen should be marked by a particularly vigorous recrudescence of the bickerings and twitterings, especially in the overseas press, concerning film inventions and priorities.

There has been no reasonable ground for dispute, or even divergences of opinion, for these many years. The records are clear, accessible and ample.

Also, if the whole genealogy of the modern screen is to be traced, there is no civilized land which can not claim somewhere to have made some contribution to its evolution, because the motion picture is more nearly a product of evolution than what the lay mind calls "invention."

Just now at hand is the Film-Kurier of Berlin which rather questioningly sets down contentions recently remade in London in behalf of the late Mr. Birt Acres, one of the more remote figures in the priorities tangle. Also only a few weeks earlier a British amusement paper was seeking to take the editor of Motion Picture Herald to task because of his indifference to claims made in behalf of the late Mr. William Friese-Green.

The French will have no other father of the industry than the very properly distinguished and famous M. Louis Lumiere, and no other device than his Cinematographe.

For a while at least there was a German school of contention in behalf of the late Herr Max Skladanowski, for whom claims were so generous as to date his film pictures years prior to the availability of film.

Here in the United States there are enough original "inventors" of the motion picture to suggest the job was done by a convention, including such figures as the late C. Francis Jenkins, the late Mr. Jean A. LeRoy, and Mr. Edwin Hill Amet, and various others in the hinterlands. The United States, being large, is able to afford not only national but sectional claimants.

Now and then the strange mixture of myth and fact concerning the eccentric and late Mr. Eadweard Muybridge, an English photographer in early California, and the not quite so attenuated claims concerning the anticipations of M. Aime Augustine LePrince, a French experimenter who worked in both England and briefly in the United States, vanishing at last in France, are revived with great zeal by writers and other persons admirably equipped to ignore facts and gild their prejudices.

Most of these futile revivals come from the desire of newspapers and magazine writers seeking to make their story stand up and applying that grand old formula of "aged-and-forgotten-and-neglected inventor-now-revealed-for-first-time." The rest of the eruptions are relics of the creative fancies and fabrications concocted years ago by the defenders of the infringers of the basic patents.

There is ever a curious assumption in what may be called the folk-thought that the poor are virtuous, that farmers are honest, that Heaven will protect the working girl, etc. Of kin to this is the frequent assumption in motion picture lore, along with other Sunday supplement science, that various obscure tinkerers of yesteryear were necessarily all downtrodden geniuses of very first rank. That is obviously better story material, more emotionally satisfying, than any recording of the less romantic and orderly processes of well equipped technology in setting at a job and doing it.

Concerning M. Lumiere, it is pleasant to observe that while French patriots unveil plaques in his honor as father of the screen he has in characteristic modesty, in correspondence with this writer, related precisely how he built his Cinematographe upon the inspiration of the Edison peep-show Kinetoscope imported to Paris by Werner Freres. And again in London, Mr. Robert W. Paul, internationally famous instrument maker, relates an identical history for his Theatrograph, the first British projector, based upon Kinetoscopes taken to London from West Orange by one Mr. Georgiades and his partner, Mr. Tragedis. And in Washington we have Mr. Thomas Armat, far too genteel and successful to make a Sunday supplement hero, who devised his Vitascope also on Kinetoscope beginnings, setting the world standard in projection and with his Herald Square opening, just forty years ago, instrumenting a world industry.

Since the Acres claim is just now receiving more marked attention, it may be noted that it includes the allegation that Mr. Acres sent a cameraman to the United States to cover the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight. In view of the fact that this event was pictured exclusively by Mr. Enoch J. Rector, using the Veriscope, built especially for the event, and that his

Closed Shop

Control by the Authors' League of America of all available manpower and material for writing for the screen is due to be ratified in Hollywood next Saturday with a vote of the Screen Writers' Guild.

Thus, the Guild hopes, will be taken a long step forward in its fight for a closed shop at the studios. Members already have been prohibited from contracting for their services beyond May 2, 1938, when, if not earlier, the eventual showdown is expected.

The strike is the major weapon provided in the new setup. Details of the reorganization plan are given in the story starting on page 21.

Austrian Problems

American-made motion pictures are clinging to the lead in Austria which they wrested from German product last year, and this season's imports from eight large companies are expected to total 144 as against last season's 126.

The kontingent fee problem, however, promises to become even more complicated and burdensome. The Ministry of Commerce is now on the warpath demanding that the printing of superimposed captions be done in Austria or that the pictures be subjected to the fee of $680 a feature. The $680 charge at present is levied against dubbed version whereas films with superimposed titles are paying $226 a print.

Vienna's first-run audiences prefer the original foreign production to the dubbed version, but the reverse is true elsewhere. However, dubbing cost as against average rentals does not justify such outlay, except in cases where American pictures are dubbed in German for showing in Germany itself. The first-run patrons in Vienna in turn object to the North-German dialogue in these dubbings.

Path of 'Ecstasy'

"Ecstasy"—the "Extase" of Czechoslovakia—whose course in this country has met with attempted suppression by the Government, now is encountering censor trouble in New York state, although it is being shown elsewhere this week.

While the state censor board would say only that "Ecstasy" had "never been licensed," it was learned that about two years ago the board had issued a conditional certificate subject to certain cuts when the film was submitted on behalf of an independent distributor. The changes were not made at the time because Samuel Cummins, general manager of Eureka Productions, Inc., meanwhile had made a deal in Europe for the film's distribution in the United States.

Mr. Cummins this week said the censor board has asked him to submit evidence that this is the same picture, and he is obtaining the necessary documents.

The National Board of Review also is holding up its decision on the film, pending the carrying out of certain suggestions. Mr. Cummins said he would eliminate one scene, following which the Board would see the picture again.

Meanwhile, "Ecstasy" received its American premiere at the Fine Arts theatre in Boston Wednesday night, having passed the Massachusetts Sunday censor, Mr. Cummins announced. The opening performance was at $1.65 top, with 99 cents top thereafter. The picture was to have opened Friday night at the Belasco in Washington. Both are indefinite runs.

Eureka has posted bond of $3,000 against possible loss by Metropolis Pictures, Inc., in the suit in which Eureka charges misappropriation of the title in a film Metropolis was showing under the title "Ecstasy of Young Love." The trial of the case has been postponed for two weeks.

Oriental Taste

Thomas D. Cochrane, Paramount general manager in the Orient, said this week in New York:

Comedy, action and mystery pictures suit the Oriental taste.

Sophistication in pictures finds a certain amount of appreciation in Tokio, little elsewhere.

Japanese censorship has ceased to be a major problem of the industry in the island kingdom.

In the East for a ten-day visit prior to going to Hollywood and returning abroad May 20th, Mr. Cochrane reported that the pictures being produced by the Japanese at the rate of 300 to 400 a year do not interfere with bookings of American made product. A quota arrangement is being talked of, he said, but the subject is being approached fairly and with American film representatives in consultation.

Mr. Cochrane, a brother of R. H. and P. D. Cochrane of Universal, went to the Orient in 1914 to organize that company's exchange system in the Far East. In 1922 he became general manager for Paramount and has continued in that post since.

No Successor

When queried this week as to the successor of the late Felix F. Feist as head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales organization, Nicholas M. Schenck said: "No one at present."

The sales cabinet at MGM is composed of William F. Rodgers, eastern sales manager; Tom J. Connors, in charge of southern states and Canada, and E. M. Saunders, western sales manager. However, since Al Lichtman joined the company several months ago without a designated title he had been cooperating with Mr. Feist on sales, concentrating his own attention on situations calling for special handling.

The assumption is that Mr. Lichtman's duties along sales lines will be increased.

Maneuvering

The "inside" of the high financing maneuvered by the Sentinels of the Republic for their anti-New Deal motion picture program was given to the Senate lobby committee late last week.

It was revealed that a change was made in "The Amateur Fire Brigade" cartoon to eliminate a caricature of President Roosevelt, so that funds could be obtained from the American Liberty League. See page 27.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Rejoins Paramount

A three-year contract under which Emanuel Cohen returns to Paramount as an independent producer was completed Tuesday in Hollywood. It was expected to be signed by John E. Otterson, Paramount president, before his scheduled departure for the East Friday night.

The contract calls annually for four "A" pictures and four "B" pictures, by Mr. Cohen's Major Productions, for Paramount. The deal keeps Mae West, Gary Cooper and Bing Crosby in the Paramount fold, as their contracts are held by Mr. Cohen. It is expected that Mr. Cohen will produce one Crosby picture for Columbia before starting with Paramount.

Ben Piazza will be executive assistant to Mr. Cohen.

Three Ways

A tripartite agreement on film exports and imports has been reached by Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia, the arrangement including an "inside" understanding between Austria and Germany.

First is the Austro-German agreement—for three years, 1936-39—which fixes at 14 the number of pictures from Austria to be admitted into Germany without taxation or contingent provisions. The unlimited number of films to be sent from Germany into Austria is normally subject to the Austrian Cinematograph Act. Currency exports will be taken care of by special agreement.

Between Austria and Czechslovakia, in turn, film interchange is placed on a broader basis, and no governmental influence is to be exercised over rentals. There again money exchange is to be settled by friendly negotiations.

This report, by J. K. Rutenberg, HERALD correspondent in Berlin, appears in detail on page 64.

Mexico Ruling

A victory for two American distributing companies in Mexico City was won this week over the Union de Exhibidores del Norte, which, a few weeks ago, resolved to cease all relations with the American companies, when Warner Bros.-First National and Twentieth Century-Fox signed a contract with Rodriguez Brothers, by which the latter set aside, from their 30 theatres in the Union de Exhibidores del Norte, 10 houses for the exclusive showing of their product on a percentage basis.

FAMOUS 'FIRSTS'

copyright notice was painted a foot high all around the ring, the overseas claim seems a bit irrelevant.

If we are to take the origins of the motion picture back to the inventors' dreamland, France can make the most complete priority claim in the world, because it was M. Louis Ducos du Hauron who set down on paper a complete and amazingly competent anticipation way back in the 60's. He dreamed best and first. No one came much nearer to materialization until Thomas A. Edison built a camera in 1889 and George Eastman produced film to run in it. From the resulting peep show to the screen was a race with honors for several and first prize to Thomas Armat.

Backing Stage

Hollywood is to remain the chief backer of Broadway legitimate production, it appears, as a result of a conference between Edward F. Farnsworth, federal theatre administrative officer, and a group of producing managers who seek $1,000,000 from Uncle Sam to help "strike off the shackles of Hollywood."

The Congressional grant of WPA funds does not permit private subsidies, Mr. Farnsworth said. The committee is prepared to ask modification of the policy or new enactments.

Motion picture theatre circuits are planning to employ WPA vaudeville acts, Mr. Farnsworth revealed. See page 28.

Stock Options

Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc., formed last October, has given Jesse L. Lasky and Mary Pickford options for the purchase of common stock, a registration statement for new securities filed at the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington revealed this week.

The company proposes to sell, under the securities act of 1933, 20,000 shares of preferred stock at $100 a share and 12,750 shares of common stock offered to purchasers of the preferred on the basis of one common share for four shares of preferred. The statement stipulates that if subscriptions do not reach $1,500,000 by July 1 of this year, stock buyers will get their money back.

Complaints

Complaints against and regulative pressures addressed at distribution methods of the organized motion picture industry this week piled up on a whole series of fronts, some of them more portentous, deeper and broader in their implications, than any earlier manifestations in these sectors. They took form in state courts, federal courts, in the Department of Justice and within the industry itself. See page 13.

More Taxes

Motion picture and other corporations will be subject to taxes ranging as high as 42½ per cent of their net income under the revenue bill submitted to the House on Tuesday by the ways and means committee.

The proposed tax will bear most lightly on corporations distributing practically all their income in dividends and will be most burdensome on companies seeking to build up large surpluses.

The bill was to be taken up for debate late this week in an effort to pass it by the end of the month, and the Senate finance committee was to begin hearings.

The bill also provides for temporary continuance of the capital stock and excess profits levies, and applies the four per cent individual normal income tax to corporation dividends, now subject only to surtaxes. The rate of the capital stock tax will, however, be reduced from $1.40 to 70 cents.

A T & T Charges

Charges amounting to more than $13,000,000 annually for services by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to operating companies, including Western Electric and its subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, were attacked by Samuel Becker, special counsel for the Federal Communications Commission, when the Commission's inquiry into the affairs of the corporation was resumed this week.

Mr. Becker fired a series of questions at Walter S. Gifford, A T & T president, designed, he said, to show that this money actually came from the customers.

Mr. Gifford promptly made a defense, explaining that the cost of providing the services exceeds the charges.

"You give the public only part of the facts when you say that," countered Mr. Becker.

A T & T's license contracts with 21 operating companies provide that they pay the parent company 1½ per cent of their gross revenue in return for engineering, accounting and other technical services.

This Week in Pictures

HONOR ZONE CHIEF. Moe Silver, division manager for Warner Theatres, surrounded by branch managers who gathered to mark beginning of his second year in Albany: Jim Rose, First Division; C. R. Halligan, RKO; Leon Harman, UA; Ralph Pielow, MGM; Peter T. Dana, Universal; Phil Fox, Columbia; Ray Smith, Warner; Clayton Eastman, Paramount; Moe Grassgreen, 20th Century-Fox; Bernard Mills, Republic.

SIGNED. Claire Dodd (in a study by Scotty Welbourne), who has been engaged by Republic for the feminine lead, opposite William Gargan, in "Navy Born."

BACK FROM EUROPE. John Hay Whitney, chairman of Selznick International, arriving in New York from conferences in London with Alexander Korda of London Films, both of whom release through United Artists.

BEGIN NEW BRITISH PRODUCTION. Principals of the Hammer-British Lion Company making "The Song of Freedom," at a reception in their honor as production began. Standing: J. Elder Willis, director, and Esme Percy. Seated: Elizabeth Welch, Paul Robeson and George Mozart.

GLORIFIED IN ANOTHER DAY. Four (at right) whose beauty Florenz Ziegfeld celebrated in shows of "long ago," pictured at the Astor theatre, New York, as they attended a performance of "The Great Ziegfeld." They are Billie Seward, Georgia Ellis, Jean Ackerman and Joan Burgess.

STAR AT PREMIERE. Raymond Massey, star of United Artists' "Things to Come," at the Rivoli theatre in New York for the opening of that London Films' production exploiting Wellsian prophecies.

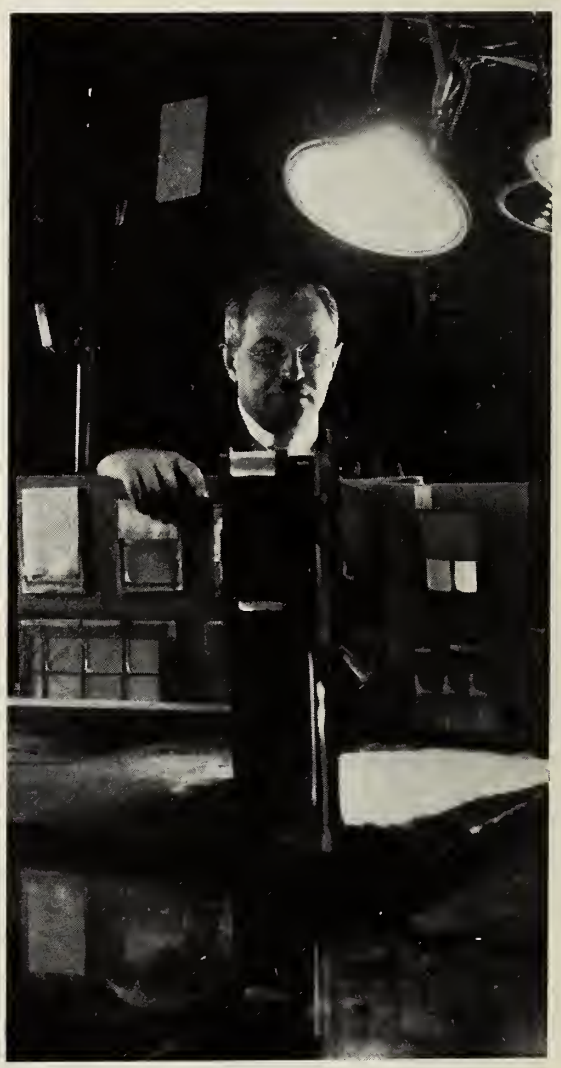
GIVEN CONTRACT. Jean Sennett, whom Warner has signed to a long-term contract following screen tests. She will make her debut in "Love Begins at 20."

BEGIN TOUR. Hal Roach's "Our Gang," MGM comedy youngsters, leaving Los Angeles for personal appearances, with Farina, Joe Cobb and Johnny Downs, former "Gangsters," among their well wishers. They are Baby Patsy, Buckwheat, Daria Hood, Alfalfa Switzer, Spanky, Slim Switzer, Tommy McFarland.

THEIR ANCESTOR THE HERO. (Left) Descendants of John Sutter, protagonist of Universal's "Sutter's Gold," at Radio City Music Hall for the opening of that picture—John and Alphonse Sutter, the latter's wife, Mrs. John Sutter, and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Alphonse Sutter.

IN INITIAL FILM. Of the Pickford-Lasky producing organization, releasing through United Artists. Smiling from left to right, Francis Lederer and Ida Lupino, who head the cast of the picture, "One Rainy Afternoon." The production was directed by Rowland V. Lee and is scheduled for release May 8.



RISING STARLET. Although this (at right) is one of Lucille Ball's less serious efforts in a vertical direction (nor can we say much for its efficiency horizontally, either). More effectively did she seek altitude in "Follow the Fleet," and RKO Radio is accordingly grooming her for higher things cinematically, not as pictured here.

OPERETTA AND OPERA. Meeting with apparent unwillingness to recognize any distinctions, through Irene Dunne of the cinema production, "Show Boat," and Lotte Lehmann, Metropolitan star. They are shown at the Universal studio during a visit by Miss Lehmann to the "Show Boat" stage while on a concert tour through California and other western states.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY IN NEW YORK. A star-lit corner of the Ritz-Carlton during festivities in honor of Bette Davis, Warner luminant, soon after her arrival for a short vacation. Fellow celebrities surrounding her, all more or less of Hollywood and now in New York for stage and radio engagements, are Arthur Byron, William Lynn, Richard Barthelmess and James Melton.

SET FOR CARTOONS. Max Fleischer, producer of the "Betty Boop" and "Popeye the Sailor" cartoon series for Paramount, exhibiting a miniature structure of the type now used by him in creating a third-dimensional effect.

COMPLAINTS OVER TRADE PRACTICES PILE UP ON SEVERAL FRONTS

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Complaints against, and regulative pressures addressed at distribution methods of the organized motion picture industry this week piled up a whole series of fronts, some of them more portentous, deeper and broader in their implications, than any earlier manifestations in these sectors:

1. United States Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson asked the Senate at Washington for an appropriation to assign secret service "G Men" of the Department of Justice to track down the "great number of complaints" from exhibitors against unfair trade practices of distributors, with the aim of prosecuting under the federal anti-trust laws.

2. The State of Missouri moved in its supreme court literally to oust Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO from doing business in the state for unfairly monopolizing product and for forming a film price fixing pool as a move to help Warner gain control of the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres at St. Louis. The surprise move was made under the rarely used proceedings of "quo warranto," and immediately resulted in a virtual impounding of the books, receipts and records of the plaintiff's exchanges in the state.

3. The State of Missouri followed with another suit to break up the existing clearance schedule in Kansas City, on grounds of conspiracy against independents, asking for exclusion of all the eight companies from doing business in the state, charging the large distributors with "operating a pool to control the sale of films" in Kansas City for the benefit of Fox Midwest.

Entire text of the complaint on both counts starts on page 69.

4. Fox Midwest Theatres moved in Kansas City to have an existing suit against the company dismissed, on the grounds that plaintiff independent owners have no cause for action in their complaint against unfair clearance given Fox by distributors over the independents.

5. The United States Government, plaintiff, and Warner Brothers, RKO and Paramount, distributor defendants in the pending federal action on the St. Louis-Fanchon and Marco anti-trust matter, continued skirmishes in the courts.

6. The eight large distributors took under advisement a program submitted on behalf of theatre owners everywhere, by the MPTOA, for the establishment of (a) self-regulation; (b) discontinuance of distributors' unfair trade practices, and (c) the development of machinery for effecting harmonious relations.

7. Independent exhibitors in Philadelphia arose in protest and demanded that distributors meet with them to lay the foundation for the adoption of a uniform and fair clearance and zoning schedule for eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware.

8. New York independents were preparing a federal court anti-trust suit against distributors, charging them with unfair practices.

9. State exhibitor associations were in session discussing and drafting plans for correcting certain distribution practices considered unfair.

ELEVATED STANDARDS OF FILMS PLEASE POPE

Pope Pius, in an address to 30 delegates from various countries to the recently terminated congress in Rome of the International Federal Cinematographic Press, expressed his pleasure over what public-spirited citizens and the Catholic bishops in the United States have done in elevating the motion picture.

The Pope, revealing his extensive knowledge of screen developments, deplored dilettantism in motion pictures and newspapers, declaring that this tends to lower the character of the cinema.

Commending the Italian and French delegations for a resolution calling for pictures of high moral and artistic standards, Pope Pius said:

"We cannot but desire and hope that their sentiments will be heard and applied everywhere, for we cannot think of the cinema without thinking also of millions of grown-up men and young boys and girls who go to cinemas and often see exhibited there in most attractive guise things that are real insults to everything that is most beautiful, most delicate and most honorable in the souls of the young."

Films, Oil To Be Targets of "G Men"

Use of "G-Men" of the Department of Justice in investigating possible violations of the anti-trust laws by motion picture distributors was disclosed this week by the United States Senate appropriations committee.

At the same time, it became known that J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and his colleagues, did not take kindly to some of the socalled "G-Men" pictures recently distributed.

As a result of the material gathered by the Senate appropriations committee, it is probable that funds will be given which will permit the Department of Justice to follow up evidences of possible law violations by the motion picture and other industries by the Federal Trade Commission, by Congressional committees, or by the Justice Department itself.

Desirability of such a broadening of the department's activities was suggested to the committee by Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson, who declared that the motion picture and oil industries were the subject of a great number of complaints.

Although Mr. Dickinson did not specifically say so, he is believed to have had in mind the recent hearings on the Neely-Pettengill block booking legislation before Senate and House committees, during which many allegations of combination and other unfair practices on the part of the distributors were made by witnesses.

That these and other charges which have been made against the industry, especially against distributors, from time to time, have not been followed up is due, not to lack of necessary authority but to the poverty of the department, declared Mr. Dickinson. No additional legislation would be needed to enable the department to go into this line of investigation, he advised.

In the enforcement of the anti-trust laws, Mr. Dickinson told the committee at hearings on the department's supply bill for the coming financial year:

"We have to go out and build our own cases and we have to build them very largely on the basis of complaints that come in to the office.

"Now, that is not wholly satisfactory for two reasons: In the first place it prevents our shaping our own policy. We are largely at the mercy of whoever happens to come in and bring complaints that have gathered some evidence and make out a prima-facie case and ask us to go forward with the case.

"Of course, we check up on that evidence and have the assistance of Mr. Hoover's 'G Men'; but I have a feeling that in the administration of these laws the department itself ought to exercise more initiative and more of the policy-forming functions.

"I think the department ought to be in a position itself to follow the leads of a broad character that are developed by the Federal Trade Commission or by the Senate or House committees and look into some of these things without the necessity of having to wait for some individual who has been pinched to try to get the department to help him out of his difficulties."

Even after thorough investigation, Mr. Dickinson revealed, it is frequently impossible to go further because the department cannot obtain evidence that would stand up in court.

"We have two or three major industries as to which there is a very considerable volume of complaints which have been coming into the department ever since I have been there," he said, referring to the film and oil industries. "Apparently they had been coming in for some months before that time."

If adequate funds were provided, Mr. Dickinson explained, a staff would be developed to guide and direct investigations which may lead to litigation.

Resentment agains some of the pictures purporting to portray how Federal agents operate was voiced by Mr. Hoover in answering questions propounded at the hearing by Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, as to the department's attitude and whether any government money had been spent, directly or indirectly, in their production.

Distributors' Ouster From Missouri Demanded

Roy McKittrick, Attorney General of Missouri, made a surprise move when he filed before the State Supreme Court at the capital, Jefferson City, quo Warranto proceedings asking that General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., and Vitagraph, Inc., both Warner subsidiaries, and Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc., and RKO Distributing Corporation be ousted from the state on charges of a conspiracy to violate the state anti-trust laws; and, in a second count in the same suit, asked that Fox Midwest and the eight major distributors at Kansas City be dealt with similarly on the same charges.

Attorneys in Missouri could recall no previous instance, in the fairly full history of anti-trust court actions in the country involving motion pictures, in which a state attorney general had proceeded in this manner.

The corporate managements in New York were reported startled at the move.

The basis of the ouster complaint is the same as that in the federal Fanchon and Marco St. Louis suit tried there recently by the Department of Justice. Observers there recalled this week that Mr. McKittrick took a considerable interest in those federal court proceedings.

That the clearance-and-zoning proceeding brought into a state action the Kansas City situation, now in process of legal airing in a federal court injunction suit by independents, resulted from the fact that in the latter suit the plaintiff independents called the matter to Mr. McKittrick's attention.

The wording of Mr. McKittrick's quo warranto ouster proceedings was very similar to the petition for an injunction filed at Kansas City by independents in federal district court several weeks ago.

Mr. McKittrick, in his ouster complaint to the supreme court, asserted that Warner Brothers organized and is operating General Theatrical Enterprises at St. Louis in order to effect an "unlawful conspiracy in restraint of trade and in unlawful boycotting" of the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres of Fanchon and Marco at St. Louis. He contended that Warner Brothers, unable to gain control of those theaters when they were reorganized following bankruptcy, entered a combination with RKO and Paramount to prevent the theaters from getting product.

He pointed out that it was only after Warner Brothers failed to gain such control over three houses that Warner, RKO and Paramount refused to provide pictures to the three houses. The distributors then entered an agreement to provide their product exclusively to theatres controlled by Warner Brothers, it is charged.

The attorney general, in the second count, on clearance and zoning, made the same charges against Fox Midwest and the major distributors —Paramount, RKO, Warner Brothers, Universal, Columbia, Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, and United Artists— as did Kansas City independents now seeking an injunction. The Attorney-General charged that Fox Midwest and the distributors entered into an agreement to "fix prices and quality of pictures," that they refused to sell films to exhibitors not in the "trust," or "pool," and "threatened" others against selling films to those not in the pool.

To effectuate the plan, Mr. McKittrick alleged, those in the pool arbitrarily zoned and grouped subsequent run theatres, and allowed Fox Midwest to have its choice of runs.

On both counts, the state asked the court "that the respondent corporations and each of them severally be excluded of all corporate rights and privileges under the laws of the State of Missouri, and that their franchises, rights, authority, licenses and certificates to do business under the laws of the State of Missouri be declared forfeited and that each and all of them be ousted from their corporate franchises, privileges, licenses and authority to do business under the laws of this State."

It appeared from the foregoing that not only would the eight major distributors be compelled to cease the sale and servicing of motion pictures to Missouri exhibitors, out of their exchanges at St. Louis and Kansas City, but also that existing contracts with exhibitors would be nullified, insofar as the state is concerned.

Fox Midwest Moves for Dismissal of Earlier Suit

Kansas City independents were denied a temporary injunction by Judge Merrill E. Otis in federal district court there on March 29th in their own suit against Fox Midwest on the same clearance-and-zoning matters, and this week Fox Midwest filed a motion to dismiss that suit on the grounds of a misjoinder of plaintiffs and insufficient cause of action. Distributor plaintiffs still had to answer.

The independents in their suit sought a permanent injunction against clearance and zoning in the Kansas City territory, charging that zoning constitutes a conspiracy.

Missouri Virtually Impounds Distributors' Books, Money

Moving with dramatic swiftness in the State of Missouri's move to oust the distributors, Attorney General McKittrick asked the circuit court at St. Louis for an injunction to restrain Warner Brothers and the seven other distributors from supplying pictures to General Theatrical Enterprises—operating Warners' two St. Louis theatres. Mr. McKittrick in this instrument reiterated the state's charge that the distributors and General Theatrical Enterprises are operating in restraint of trade against the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres in St. Louis.

Judge John W. Joynt granted the injunction, and General Theatres was for a time without a product source, but later in the week the court modified its ruling until a hearing on April 30th.

Judge Joynt, however, granted the state's request for an injunciton restraining each of the eight defendant distributors from removing from Missouri "all books of account or books of record, in which either financial statements or the names of persons or firms or corporations from whom motion pictures are bought or leased or rented, or to whom motion pictures are sold or leased or rented; also all moneys, whether to the credit of any of the said defendant corporations in any bank or trust company or deposited by any of the said defendant corporations through their officers, agents or employees, in a strong box, safe deposit or other place for safe keeping; also all records and moneys, contracts, leases, agreements to indemnify, particularly agreements running from Warner Brothers to RKO or Paramount, against loss by reason of the failure of RKO or Paramount from refusing to sell or lease or rent any of said motion pictures to the Ambassador, New Grand Central and Missouri theatres."

Delay of St. Louis Suit To Fall Seen Likely

The distributors were not only concerned this week with the new Missouri developments over trade practices labeled as unfair, but were faced with effecting strategies in their defense of the Government's suit pending in New York in the original Department of Justice complaint, against Warner, RKO and Paramount, on charges of conspiracy growing out of the St. Louis-Fanchon and Marco matter and the failure of F. and M.'s Ambassador, New Grand Central and Missouri theatres in St. Louis to secure product.

Motion Picture Daily reported that efforts were underway to adjust the St. Louis situation out of court, this on the eve of the prosecution by the Government of its suit in New York's courts. The case has already been tried twice in St. Louis, unsuccessfully. The Government would have to endorse any settlement.

At the Department of Justice headquarters in Washington, denial was made of the knowledge of any reported settlement, but it was said that it might be possible to adjust matters by stipulation.

Delay Seen Possible

The possibility of a delay at least until the fall in the trial of the Government's suit is seen in the action of Federal Judge Charles B. Davis, at Cape Girardeau, Mo., on Saturday, in declining to grant the Government's motion to move up from May 6 to April 26 the date for the filing of the defense appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The appeal is to be taken from the ruling of Federal Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux in St. Louis, January 29, allowing the Department of Justice to dismiss without prejudice its equity case against the defendant companies. The ruling followed the earlier aquittal of the defendants by a jury in the criminal action.

The action last Saturday of Judge Davis indicated that the supreme court will not hear the defense appeal until the high tribunal's fall

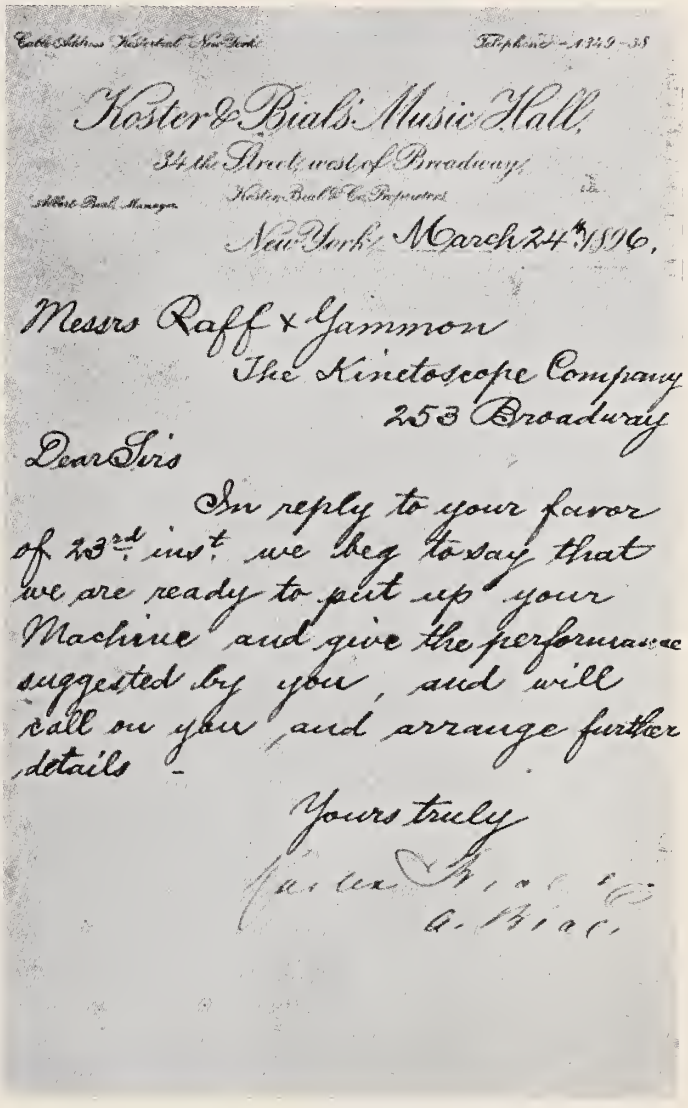
CENSORSHIP IS FUTILE EDUCATOR DECLARES

Expressing the opinion that censorship of motion pictures is futile, Dr. Edgar Dale of Ohio State University told members of the Tower Hill School Home and School Association at Wilmington, Del., that youth must be taught to discriminate for itself in its choice of motion pictures, rather than having its pictures censored by adults. "Making the Most of the Movies" was the topic of his address.



Dr. Dale pointed out that young people must be made aware of the influence pictures have over them so that they will select the films they see with more care, view the pictures more critically and then discuss them intelligently with their companions.

THE VITASCOPE.

EDISON'S VITASCOPE.

The latest invention of Wizard Edison, which he calls the Vitascope, was placed on exhibition for the first time, at Koster and Bial's on Thursday evening last.

The exhibition was a success in every way, and the large audience testified its approval of the novelty by the heartiest kind of applause.

The Vitascope is nothing more or less than an enlarged Kinetoscope. Those who are familiar with the workings of the Kinetoscope will understand what the Vitascope is, when it is explained that the pictures are thrown upon a screen, and that the figures move as they do in the kinetoscope. They appear with all the colors of the original, too, which adds greatly to the effect.

The first picture shown was of the Leigh Sisters in their umbrella dance. The effect was the same as if the girls were there on the stage; all of their smiles and kicks and bows were seen. The second picture represented the breaking of waves on the seashore. The effect was simply marvelous. Wave after wave came tumbling on the sand, and as they struck, broke in to tiny floods just like the real thing. Some of the people in the front rows seemed to be afraid they were going to get wet, and looked about to see where they could run to, in case the waves came too close. The third picture showed a burlesque boxing match between Walton and Mayon, the long and short comedians. Then followed in quick succession a scene from Hoyt's A Milk White Flag, in which a couple of dozen people appeared; a serpentine dance with all the colored calcium effects, and an amusing picture showing an argument between John Bull and Uncle Sam.

The Vitascope is a big success, and Mr. Edison is to be congratulated for his splendid contribution to the peoples pleasure.

The "Dramatic Mirror" raised Koster & Bial's 42 lines when it reviewed the performance.

THE VITASCOPE IN BOSTON.

Edison's Vitascope, which has been at Koster and Bial's for some weeks' past, will be seen in Boston at Keith's Theatre on Monday, May 18. The apparatus will be a duplicate of that in use in New York, and the same subjects will be used. The rights to the Vitascope are being bought by wideawake managers in different parts of the country, and within three months there will not be a city of any size that will not have seen the wizard's latest triumph. J. S McConnell is the agent through whom negotiations are made for the use of the Vitascope.

Then the press agent started the kind of thing that's been going on regularly these forty years.

Koster and Bial's.

Chevalier is still the star attraction. Biondi, who gives a one man-in-many-parts entertainment like Fregoli's, makes his American debut. Others in the bill are Ida Fuller, dancer, the Brothers Horn, assisted by Charlotte Hallett in a comic boxing act; Paulinetti and Pico, acrobats; Herr Grais, with his trick baboon and donkey; William Olschansky and his cats and rats; Ducreux-Geraldue, French duettists, and Edison's Vitascope.

But the news writers of the "Mirror" continued to mention Vitascope as an afterthought, declining, in common with Koster & Bial's, to subordinate on-the-stage entertainment to mechanical.

WONDERFUL IS THE VITASCOPE.

Such Was the Verdict of the Audience Which Saw Edison's Invention.

IT BEATS THE KINETOSCOPE.

Pictures, Life Size, Lifelike and Full of Color, Thrown on a Screen.

MAKES A THRILLING SHOW.

The feature of the programme last evening at Koster & Bial's Music Hall was the first public exhibition ever given of Edison's vitascope.

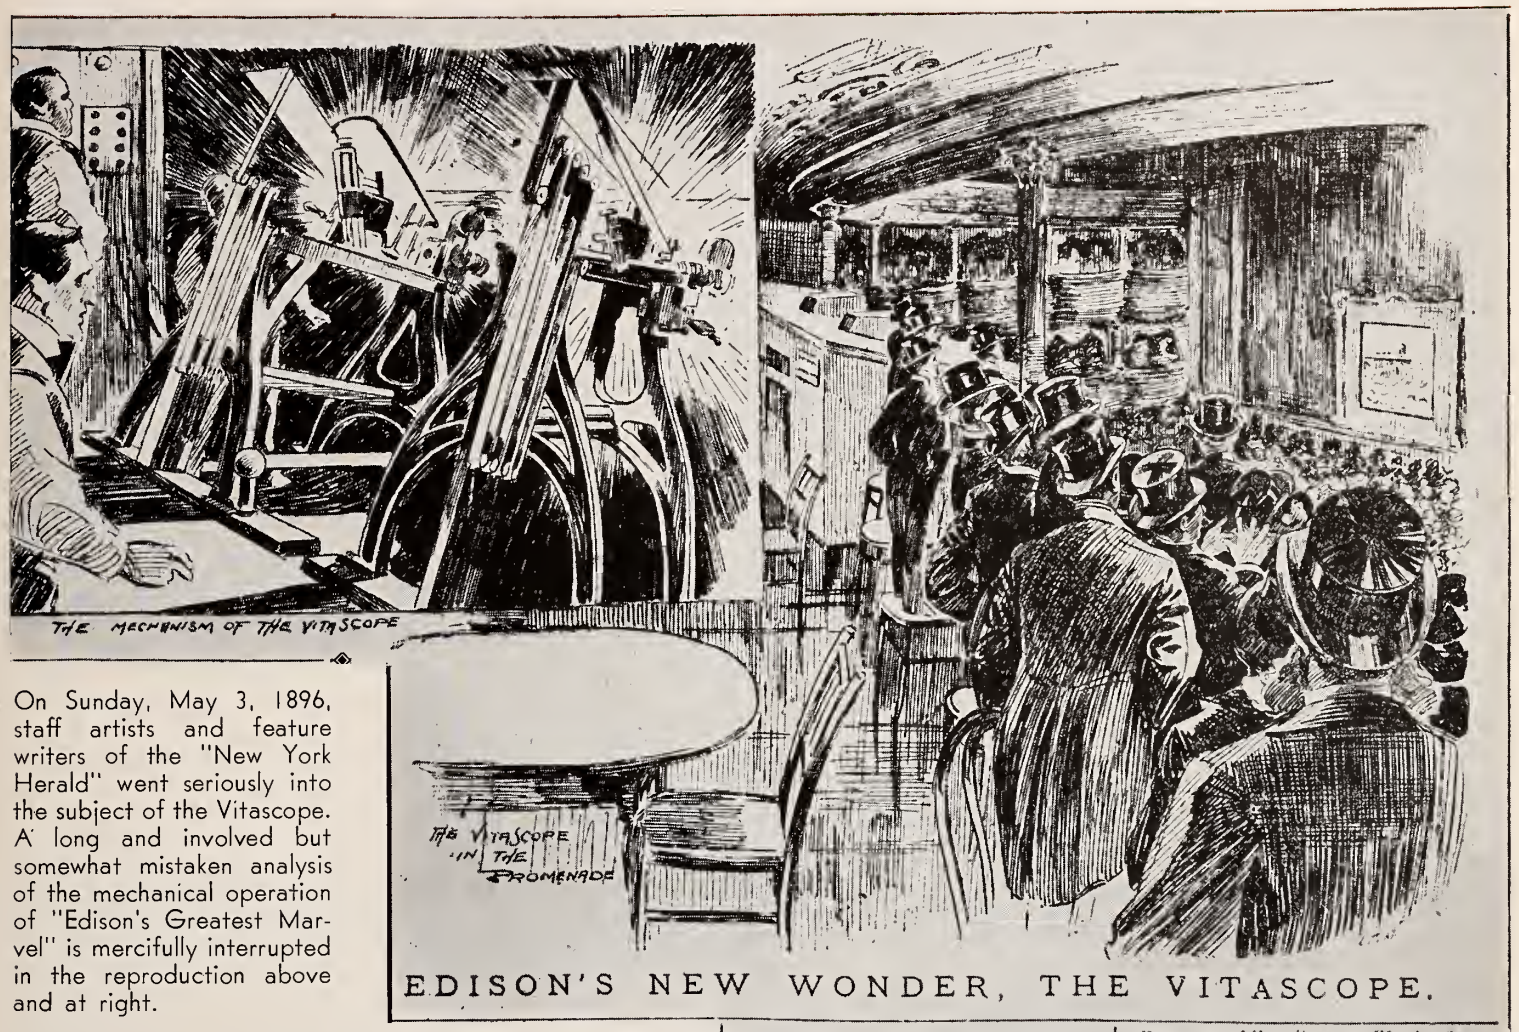
This invention has already been described in the HERALD. It has been called an enlarged kinetoscope, because it works somewhat on the principle of that machine, but in the case of the latter one must look into it to see reproductions of pictures about three inches in size, whereas, in the case of the vitascope these same pictures are thrown through a lens and appear on a screen magnified 600 diameters. Moreover, the vitascope reproduces all the colors of a picture.

The vitascope was the seventh number on the programme last night, and it was nearly ten o'clock when it was reached. The house was packed, and as picture after picture was thrown on the screen the applause was tremendous.

REALISTIC PICTURES.

The first picture shown was that of two dancers. It seemd as though they were actually on the stage, so natural was the dance, with its many and graceful motions. Next came a picture of a tumbling surf on the Jersey shore. The waves were high and boisterous as they dashed after one another in their rush for the sandy beach, over which they ebbed and flowed. The white crests of the waves and the huge volume of water were true to life. Only the roar of the surf was needed to make the illusion perfect.

A boxing bout between a long, thin man and a short, stout one was the next picture. The boxers were photographed in their bout some time ago by the kinetoscope. Every move and step and blow of the boxers was faithfully reproduced on the screen last night. A scene from "The Milk White Flag" was next shown. It was an animated picture, which elicited loud cries of "Bravo!"



JOHN BULL AND UNCLE SAM.

"The Monroe Doctrine" was the title of the next picture. At first John Bull was shown bombarding a South American shore, supposed to represent Venezuela. John was getting the better of the argument when the tall, lank figure of Uncle Sam emerged from the back of the picture. He grasped John Bull by the neck, forced him to his knees and made him take off his hat to Venezuela. This delighted the audience, and applause and cheers rang through the house, while somebody cried, "Hurrah for Edison!"

The "skirt dance" was the last picture shown, and its success equalled that of the others. When the dancer disappeared from view there was a long burst of applause, and everybody agreed that the vitascope was "wonderful."

Although the Vitascope did not take the screen until 10 o'clock, when first-nighters may well be assumed to have had rather more than enough of the thing that later came to be known as presentation and finally as stageshow, the "New York Herald" for the morning after gave vent to the first rave film review, setting a precedent of import.

NEWSPAPERS HAIL THE VITASCOPE

EDISON'S NEW WONDER, THE VITASCOPE.

On Sunday, May 3, 1896, staff artists and feature writers of the "New York Herald" went seriously into the subject of the Vitascope. A long and involved but somewhat mistaken analysis of the mechanical operation of "Edison's Greatest Marvel" is mercifully interrupted in the reproduction above and at right.

TRIUMPH OF THE VITASCOPE.

Edison's Achievement to Reproduce a Play Made Pictorially a Perfect Success.

NEW PHONOGRAPH COMING.

DETAIL OF THE MECHANISM.

EDISON'S vitascope, the latest thing on the vaudeville stage, and a triumph of the Wizard's inventive genius, is a simple contrivance, and yet wondrous in its detail and mechanism. When Edison named the machine a vitascope he did so, he explained, because it showed life, and he added that it was the very thing he had in mind when he worked so long and so patiently on the kinetoscope, with which he has never been satisfied.

By means of the vitascope life size figures of men, women and animals and scenes from nature are thrown upon a screen, and present to the spectator an animated, moving panorama. The result is intensely interesting and pleasing, but Mr. Edison is not quite satisfied yet. He wants now to improve the phonograph so that it will record double the amount of sound that it does at present; and he hopes then to so combine this improved phonograph with the vitascope as to make it possible for an audience to witness a photographic reproduction of an opera or a play—to see the movements of the actors and hear their voices as plainly as though they were witnessing the original production itself. And when it is remembered what marvels Edison has produced, it would not seem at all improbable that he may yet add this one to his many others.

THE VITASCOPE DESCRIBED.

The vitascope has been called an enlarged kinetoscope. It is more than that; it is an improved kinetoscope. Edison worked on it for several months and after spending fully $20,000 on his experiments threw away the machine he had perfected and started anew. In this machine he used a shutter on the principle of the one used in the kinetoscope, but it gave kinetoscopic effects, and those he didn't want. So he dispensed entirely with the shutter in the vitascope and secured the vitascopic effects by the use of lenses and an arc light.

The vitascope proper consists of a small lens such as is used in an ordinary camera. This lens is nearest the screen. Right behind it is a metal frame about an inch and a half square, over which the picture to be reproduced passes. Behind this is a large lens, and right behind this lens is an arc light of 2,000 candle power. The pictures to be reproduced have been photographed on kinetoscope films and are no bigger than the nail of one's little finger. Each of these films is fifty feet in length, and contains several hundred pictures that go to make up the panorama. The film passes over a series of wheels at a very rapid rate, propelled by electricity, and as the picture passes the frame behind the small lens mentioned the light from the arc lamp, passing through the Overseas thrones stood staunch and only death removed a monarch, when, as in the case of Nicholas II of Russia, the coronation of a sovereign was elaborately reported throughout the world.

FRENCH FOREIGN MINISTER PRESENTS QUIGLEY AWARD TO WINNER IN PARIS

Flandin Sees Cementing of Franco-American Film Business Relations in Honor Paid to Rene Lebreton

Pierre-Etienne Flandin, France's minister of foreign affairs, this month joined with other internationally known figures who have participated in Quigley Awards activities by presenting to Rene Lebreton, manager of Paramount Theatre, Paris, the Quigley Silver Plaque for January, at the French foreign offices in the Quai D'Orsay.

Others at the ceremony, held on April 4th, were Andre Ullman, director of Paramount theatres in France and Belgium; Ike Blumenthal, head of Paramount's Paris studios; Fred W. Lange, Paramount general manager in Continental Europe, Harold Smith, Paris representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Andre Agramon, Paramount Theatre publicist.

Minister Flandin congratulated Mr. Lebreton and Paramount on meriting the Award given by Motion Picture Herald for outstanding film exploitation and cited Quigley Publications as the largest cinema press organization. He bespoke his pride in the first winning of the Plaque by a French manager and saw in the Award the cementing of closer Franco-American film business relations.

Mr. Lebreton, voted the January Silver Award for his entry on "The Crusades," is the second overseas theatreman to win a Quigley Plaque, the first going to John Armstrong, former London Paramount theatres publicity head and now advertising director of Radio Picture, Ltd. Mr. Armstrong's campaign on "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" at the Carlton theatre, London, also was selected for the 1935 Silver Grand Award at the second annual judging.

The successful participation in the Quigley Awards by foreign showmen marks the growth of this international project inaugurated by Managers' Round Table Club of Motion Picture Herald in January, 1934. It was felt then that theatremen throughout the world should have some practical recognition for their advertising and exploitation efforts and the Quigley Competitions were launched to bring this about.

The project caught on immediately, industry heads in the various branches joining managers and publicists in voicing their approval. Executives in distribution, advertising and exhibition accepted appointment on the judging committees. Rules and regulations were formulated and with only minor changes have been retained in 1936, the third year of the Quigley Awards.

Theatremen everywhere were invited to submit campaigns on individual pictures to be voted upon by the judges for the Quigley Plaques, First and Honorable Mention Certificates, awarded monthly. Three different judges were asked to serve each month and their majority vote determined the winners.

In 1934, the first year, one plaque was given monthly. This was changed in 1935, with Silver and Bronze Plaques voted the first and second entries considered of greatest merit. In addition, sheepskin engraved certificates were given for campaigns selected for the runner-up class. Awards of the two plaques monthly and the certificates have been retained in 1936.

The Quigley project speedily proved itself a source of inspiration to theatremen in all situations and classifications, with the result that Awards often were voted to managers in small towns and subsequent runs operating on small budgets. From the beginning every campaign was given equal consideration regardless of its source.

Participation of top "names" in the presentations was no small factor in establishing the Awards and it was in Washington, at a managers' get-together, that guest of honor Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, so honored the first Quigley Plaque winner, Ken Grimes, manager, Warner Theatre, Morgantown, W. Va.

It was in Washington, too, that Vice-President Garner in the presence of Senators and Congressmen presented the 1934 Grand Awards to Bill Hendricks, of Warner Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., and Morris Rosenthal, manager, Loew's Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Ct.

In between governors, mayors, senators and other personalities officiated, all expressing pride in the accomplishments of the theatremen so honored.

Among the state executives participating in the 1934 monthly presentations were governors of Michigan, Idaho, Florida, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

The second year of the Quigley Competitions, in 1935, witnessed similar cooperation from important officials. These included governors of Kentucky, Maine, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Maryland. Mayors of Vancouver and Toronto, Canada, also made presentations as did city executives in Toledo, Bridgeport, Pittsburgh, Wellsboro, Pa., and Atlanta. United States Congressmen and officers of Rotary International were others.

At the expiration of the first year of the

BUTTERFIELD'S DEATH REMOVES POWER IN NORTHWEST EXHIBITION

President of Circuit Operating 96 Theatres in Michigan; Started As Program Boy; First Theatre at Battle Creek

Colonel Walter Scott Butterfield, president of Butterfield Theatres, Inc., and Butterfield Michigan Theatres Company, operating 96 theatres, died Monday night after a short illness at the Christian Science Sanatorium in Boston, where he and Ed C. Beatty, vice-president and general manager of the dominant Michigan circuit, were visiting. Mr. Butterfield was 68 years old.

Mr. Butterfield had been ailing for some years, but his last illness came suddenly. A pioneer exhibitor and circuit builder, Colonel Butterfield during the last decade had maintained only a casual participation in his circuit interests, which reach into and control exhibition in every important Michigan city with the exception of Detroit.

RKO owns a 10 per cent and Paramount a 25 per cent share in the Butterfield circuit, which always has retained control and management.

Circuit Expanding

A few hours before death came to their chief, Butterfield executives in Detroit had issued one of several recent announcements of expansion of the circuit, this time at Grand Rapids, where Johnson-Butterfield Theatres, Inc., will lease for 15 years the Eastown theatre on which construction shortly will begin at a cost of $40,000.

Colonel Butterfield is survived by the widow, Irene Daly Butterfield, and five children: Mrs. Caroline Allen, Grand Rapids; Mrs. Laura Page, Charlotte; Mrs. Hall Beery, Los Angeles; Julia Scott Butterfield, Pinehurst, N. C., and Ann Butterfield. Irene Daly Butterfield was his third wife.

Funeral services were to be held Thursday afternoon at Battle Creek, Mich., where Colonel Butterfield maintained a country home in addition to a winter residence at Miami Beach, Fla.

Butterfield theatres were to remain closed Thursday afternoon in respect to their founder.

by ED. C. BEATTY

Associated with W. S. Butterfield in exhibition for 25 years.

Colonel Butterfield's career in the theatre world was one of hard work and accomplishment from an humble beginning as a program boy in a Columbus, Ohio, theatre.

Managed Stage Stars

Born in Connersville, Ind., Colonel Butterfield, when a youth, moved to Columbus where his father operated a newspaper. He tried newspaper work, but a theatre in the same block exerted a stronger influence. From program boy, he rose rapidly to usher, doorkeeper, assistant treasurer and finally to treasurer of the theatre.

After two years' experience in Columbus, he went with the Academy of Music in Chicago, where he became advance agent for the Charles E. Blaney attractions for 12 years, later acquiring a part ownership. He then was manager of such luminaries as Rose Stahl and William Bonelli. Subsequently he produced several attractions on his own for one-night stands, including Charley Loder's "Funny Side of Life," and a drama, "Man to Man."

W. S. BUTTERFIELD

His great ambition was to have a theatre of his own, so he moved to Battle Creek, where he leased the old Hamblin Opera House, remodeling it at a cost of $1,000. He turned it into a popular vaudeville theatre, and there the nucleus of the Butterfield circuit started.

Combined Stage and Screen

Many well known stars of stage, radio and screen have appeared in Butterfield theatres. Chic Sale, then known as "The Rube," worked for Colonel Butterfield for $65 a week. Today he is drawing a large salary on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Ben Turpin, the cross-eyed comedian, was on the Butterfield circuit for $35 a week in the early days with Clark and McCullough. Al Jolson, Fred Allen, Ed Wynn, Waring's Pennsylvanians, William S. Hart, Joe E. Brown and others prominent in vaudeville have appeared on a Butterfield stage in the last 25 years.

Two years after Colonel Butterfield introduced vaudeville in Michigan came the motion picture and the building of theatres for the new entertainment, creating competition for vaudeville. The record discloses he was one of the first to combine films with stage programs.

The death of Colonel Butterfield is a sad loss to the amusement world. Michigan has lost one of its outstanding citizens.

Receiver Named For William Fox

Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson in New York late last week appointed George Frankenthaler, an attorney, receiver for William Fox on the motion of Samuel B. Stewart, Jr., attorney for the Capital Company of San Francisco, which holds an unsatisfied judgment for $297,412 against Mr. Fox.

The move was made, Mr. Stewart said, to expedite collection of the judgment as a receiver has broader powers of inquiry than the judgment holders. The judgment would be a lien against any assets of Mr. Fox which come into the receiver's possession. Among Mr. Fox's assets which will be sought, it was said, are a $900,000 life insurance policy and bank accounts allegedly held in the name of others and believed to represent a large part of the $15,000,000 paid to Mr. Fox for his film and theatre holdings in 1930.

The Capitol Company's judgment was obtained last July on a defaulted lease on the Fox Theatre, San Francisco, which had been personally guaranteed by Mr. Fox. In proceedings subsequent to the winning of the judgment Mr. Fox was cited for contempt of court and his fine fixed at a total of $245,000. Mr. Fox is now seeking leave to appeal this citation to the United States Supreme court.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, attorneys of record in the $1,000,000 action brought against Mr. Fox by the Chicago Title and Trust Company, based on a personal guarantee of Roxy Theatre stock by Mr. Fox, have been given until May 8 to file findings and until May 15 for the filing of briefs with Referee Sol Stroock.

W. J. Burke Is Dead

William J. Burke of the one-time vaudeville team of Howard and Burke, also of Burke and Dempsey, and later a producer of vaudeville acts, died in Detroit late last week from pneumonia. Burial was at his home in Springfield, Mass. He was 59 years old.

Otto Lochbaum Dead

Otto Lochbaum, wellknown California theatre veteran, died last week in San Francisco of heart disease. He had handled many roadshow and special film presentations, and at one time was an independent distributor.

WRITER DICTATORSHIP LOOMS ON COAST WITH STRIKE WEAPON

Amalgamation with Writers in Other Fields and No Contracts After May 2, 1938, Are Proposals Offered

A screen writers' dictatorship with an industry-wide strike as a weapon looms for Hollywood.

A closed shop for all writing talent in the United States in their dealings with the motion picture industry, and "one big union" through indicated alliances with the Screen Actors' Guild and the various studio crafts, is the aim of the Screen Writers' Guild. On May 2 the Guild is to ratify vital changes in the constitution and bylaws, intended to further its intention of getting an iron grip on the production of motion pictures.

Members of the Screen Writers' Guild at the forthcoming meeting will be asked to approve two major channels through which the closed shop is to be achieved in two years or sooner: (1) Amalgamation with writers in other organized fields; (2) no contracts for writing services or sale of writing material beyond May 2, 1938.

Only a dream several years ago, the plan has received strong impetus through adoption by the Dramatists' Guild and the Authors' Guild of similar constitutions linking the three groups in the Authors' League of America, which claims to control 90 per cent of the professional writing talent in the United States. The screen writers' group, with between 800 and 900 members, says it controls about 75 per cent of the major studio writers on the west coast.

Preliminary to the final action next Saturday, the Guild membership late last week voted unanimously for a united front in the closed shop drive.

Would Unionize All Writers

The plan is to unionize all writers, in whatever capacity, to control every source of writing material through "a minimum basic agreement with the producers so that all persons employed are members of the Authors' League and all sellers of material are members of the League." Eventual inclusion of radio and newspaper writers and others is provided for.

That the motion picture producers will not accept these terms without a struggle is anticipated by the Guild which makes provision in the revised constitution for conditions governing strikes.

See Increased Costs

The immediate results of recognition of these terms by the studios would be not only to subject the film companies to virtual dictatorship, but to increase negative costs, with higher film rentals also probable.

Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild and screen writer, said that a minimum basic agreement "will be classed as Communism in Hollywood" but "we simple folk call it good business."

A preview of what may be in store for Hollywood is now being staged in New York, where the Dramatists' Guild arbitrarily has adopted a minimum basic agreement in its dealings with the Broadway producing managers, drastically curtailing their income and authority. The dispute came about largely because of Hollywood's bankrolling of stage production, as a result of which, the playwrights claim, their royalties from play sales to picture companies have been held down. A total of 72 managers, a large percentage financed by the film industry, are pledged not to accept the Guild's terms.

The plan for amalgamation with the Authors' League is embodied in a new constitution approved by the members March 31 in New York which calls for a council of 12 from each of the component units, or 36 in all, whose purpose it will be "to promote and protect the general professional interests of all creators of literary, dramatic or musical material" and "to procure adequate copyright legislation and establish and enforce standard minimum contracts." Full control of the guild thus is vested in the League council.

In addition, a writer's membership in the League will cover his activities in all other affiliated fields.

The Screen Writers' Guild already has invoked Article 12 of the Guild code prohibiting members or signatories to the contract of April 6, 1933, from signing contracts or giving options binding their services or material as screen writers after May 2, 1938.

Guild leaders concede that if they called a strike to force recognition, it would fail. However, they have faith in a weapon provided by the Authors' League in that the other Guilds would ban the sale of plays or other material to studios.

Three attempts by producers under the NRA to effect a 50 per cent salary reduction for writers are behind the formation of the Screen Writers' Guild, and the present moves are partly actuated by a desire to prevent a similar occurrence, declared Ernest Pascal, president of the Guild, in the current issue of The Screen Guilds' Magazine.

Dues Plan

Of the dues plan he said: "In six months, or in a year, when we work out a more equable one, it can and will be substituted.

"In this one, the salient points are these:

"1—Membership in the League, which naturally includes all three guilds, is uniform—$10 a year.

"2—Writers are automatically assigned to the particular guild in which field of writing they happen to be working at that time and will be assessed accordingly.

"3—All writers in all fields are exempt from assessment up to $2,500 income.

"4—A dramatist, therefore, pays relatively high assessments—but receives considerable service. An author of books or magazine stories pays relatively low assessments—and receives very little service. The screen writers' assessments fall in between, being one-half of one per cent of earnings, with a maximum of $250. This assessment, however, applies also to the sale of all material to picture companies from all writing in all fields.

"The only difference between this labor organization and any other labor union is that we are, under present conditions, unable to cut off the supply of manpower and material. The fight in the final analysis comes down to that simple proposition."

The plan, he said, "will tend to abolish the 'option' contract, where the advantage is always on the side of the producer and never on the side of the writer.

"Contracts, except for a very few, will have expired by May, 1938. We will be in the invulnerable position of controlling both material and manpower. Writers, the Authors' League of America, will hold the winning hand. And the producer, who has always proved himself to be a very shrewd poker player, will know it. It won't be necessary to call his bluff. Then without a strike, without any of us suffering from being out of jobs, it is only reasonable to conclude that we will gain all that we are after—Guild shop and a fair minimum basic agreement."

Oliver H. P. Garrett, former president of the Guild, declared that the proposed reorganization "is the only possible means of ultimately cutting off from any producer, proved unfair to writers, all possible material from the stage, magazines and books, as well as from unscrupulous screen writers."

The new setup has been designed to protect the autonomy of the affiliated groups, accord-

NEW CONSTITUTION OF AUTHORS' LEAGUE

The new constitution of the Authors' League of America which members of the Screen Writers' Guild will be asked to adopt May 2 at a meeting in Hollywood, described by the Guild as the most important since its inception, provides for:

The uniting of all writers in the United States in a common organization.

The obtaining of a closed shop for writers in the motion picture industry.

No strikes except by two-thirds approval of active Screen Guild members.

Self-government for each guild—screen writers, dramatists and authors—in its own field.

Separate constitution, bylaws and officers for individual guilds.

Election of Screen Guild officers by the membership.

Election of Authors' League officers by the membership at large.

Election of officers and council members for two years, instead of one.

Recall of officers by a 60 per cent vote of the membership.

All constitutional amendments are to be passed by a 60 per cent vote.

Members' assessments are subject to approval by the membership.

No assessment on incomes up to $2,500.

Appeal to membership in discipline cases.

Adequate machinery for admitting future guilds, such as radio writers and the Newspaper Guild.

Equal voice for East and West.

Screen Guild Hopes to Gain Complete Control of Manpower and Material Under "One Big Union" Idea

WRITERS DEMAND RULE

ing to Mr. Garrett, but the League council will have all power except on a strike vote.

"The present Screen Writers' Guild" working rules for writers will be adopted at once by the newly organized council, and be thereby extended to apply automatically to every American writer who enters the motion picture field," he said. "Their violation will be disciplined by the council, with its power to shut off the offending writer from writing in any other field or form."

Explaining that the League council will have no power to take a strike vote, he declared that "it can only order a strike—and no official of the Screen Writers' Guild has ever believed or hoped that this time would ever come—upon a two-thirds vote of the Guild affected."

Control of Material

L. W. Beilinson, counsel for the guild, and E. E. Paramore, Jr., member of the executive board, declared in an article in The Screen Guilds' Magazine: "The battle between the producers and the writers is essentially one of control of manpower and material in the writing field. Once the Screen Writers' Guild, through the Authors' League, can control these two factors, it can win without a strike. The great difficulty in doing so has been long term contracts."

On the question whether horizontal alliances with other unions such as actors, electricians and such would not be better than alliances with authors outside the industry, they said:

"No. The alliance with authors and dramatists is essential for power. Props, electricians, and even actors are not potential strike breakers to take writers' jobs in case of a walkout. However, horizontal alliances need not be overlooked."

The program for the annual meeting also includes the election of officers and an executive board and reports of officers and committees.

"An emergency which is just looking over the horizon" is facing Hollywood studio writers, theorizes the Screen Writers' Guild, which declares in an editorial in the Screen Guild's Magazine:

"The market for American pictures is contracting steadily. There is already sizeable competition from the British motion picture industry; there are picture quotas in other foreign countries which tend further to reduce the revenue to American picture companies. As this diminution of Hollywood's income becomes at all appreciable, the producers must attempt to rescale salaries of writers and all other personnel in the industry."

And the "successful" screen writers might also, says the Guild, dwell on this: "With television not far off, and radio growing tremendously in importance, the main revenue from writing within a few years may be from other fields. In these transitions, the writer's interests must be guarded."

Flandin Presents Quigley Award

Quigley Awards, the entries winning the monthly plaques were voted upon for the two 1934 Grand Awards. Twenty-six judges, all leading industry names, formed the committee which met at the New York Athletic Club and by majority vote selected the campaigns of Bill Hendricks, manager, Warner Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., and Morris Rosenthal, manager, Loew's Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn.

Similar procedure was arranged for the choosing of the 1935 winners. In this case, the judges, convening again at the New York Athletic Club, made their decisions from among the 24 Silver and Plaque winning monthly entries during the year. Selected for the Silver Grand Award was John Armstrong of London, and for the Silver Grand Award, Harry Goldberg, Warner Philadelphia publicist for his campaign on "Life of Louis Pasteur" at the Chestnut Street Opera House.

Presentation on Coast

Presentation ceremonies attendant to the 1935 Grand Awards were to be held in Hollywood with the winners transported to the Coast via TWA plane as guests of Motion Picture Herald. In addition to the two Grand Awards, it was decided to give a Medal of Merit to Lester Pollock, manager, Loew's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., which Award also included a Hollywood trip.

Fifteen promotions of Plaque winners were made in 1934 and 1935, and these in every case were credited directly to the participation of the showmen in the Awards.

Of interest also is the result of a canvass made among theatremen voted First and Honorable Mentions during the two years of the Competitions. To the question whether the Award activities in any way had improved their situations or strengthened their professional prestige, a decided majority answered in the affirmative.

Douglas Not Candidate

Kenneth Douglas, head of the Capitol Theatre Supply Company in Boston, who had been mentioned as the next president of the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers' Association, has declared that because of pressure of other activities he will decline the office with thanks if the nomination is offered him. The group's convention is set for June 5-8 at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago.

Approves Safety Ordinance

Safety Director Wakefield of Louisville, Ky., has approved and forwarded to Mayor Miller a copy of a proposed ordinance for better fire safety provisions. The ordinance would empower the Fire Prevention Bureau to supervise scenery and props in theatres, as well as inspect valves and automatic sprinklers and other safety measures.

Morris Chicago Office Moves

The Chicago branch of the William Morris Agency will move to larger offices in the Oriental Theatre Building on West Randolph Street this week.

LOWELL MAYOR CURBS SEASON PASS EVIL

Lowell, Mass., becomes the first city to have the distinction of having theatre passes arising as a political campaign issue. Mayor Dewey Archamboult, following campaign promises, has restricted the powers of the licensing commission which, during foreign administrations, were responsible for the issuance of as many as 168 season passes which were passed around indiscriminately. The mayor has seen to it that the number of season passes is now 30, and are non-transferable.

New Emulsion Found For Coating Films

A laboratory experiment which went awry has brought about the development of a new photographic emulsion for coating films, plates or paper, according to the New York Times. The new solution, with the use of ordinary developing materials, prints positives from positives and negatives from negatives instantly, the newspaper story says.

Actors Meet May 5

May 5th has been designated as the date of the annual meeting of the American Federation of Actors, which will be held at the Paramount hotel, New York. Official candidates for membership of the new council are Sophie Tucker, Eddie Cantor, Fred Keating, Eddie Miller, Frank Lynch, Sid Williams, John Dilson and Harry Miller. A proposal to set up a death benefit insurance fund will be voted upon.

Brooklyn Paramount Held

Paramount has retained its 20-year lease on the Brooklyn Paramount theatre under provisions of the reorganization plan for Allied Owners, Inc., which holds title to the theatre. The house now is being operated for Paramount by Si Fabian, whose offer to take over the lease was held several months ago to be the best of several received by Allied Owners.

Boston Censor Approves 383 Films

The report of the censorship division of the Massachusetts Department of Public Safety, for the first quarter of 1936, shows a total of 383 films approved in their entirety. Cuts were required in only eight pictures during this period. The report also shows that 51 per cent of the vaudeville acts reviewed were either banned in their entirety or severely altered.

ANTI-NEW DEAL FILM UNIT EYED BY SENATE

Lobby Committee Questions Witnesses on Sentinels' Satire, "The Amateur Fire Brigade"

Repercussions of the production and exhibition of motion pictures for purposes of political propaganda were heard in Washington late last week when the Senate lobby committee obtained information on the financing of the Sentinels of the Republic for the production of "The Amateur Fire Brigade" and supplementary films for showing throughout the country.

The committee, headed by Senator Hugo LaFayette Black of Alabama, disclosed that a group of prominent anti-New Deal opponents was backing the organization financially or otherwise interested in its activities. It was revealed that the Sentinels last year launched a campaign to raise $400,000 to finance the production, distribution and exhibition of anti-New Deal films.

The motion picture show was the Sentinels' major activity in the Presidential campaign, it was disclosed, and the cartoon titled "The Amateur Fire Brigade: A Parable of the New Deal" was described as "a novel adaptation of the art of political caricature to the screen." This film, animated and in color, broadly satirized President Roosevelt, the "brain trusters" and others of the administration.

The Sentinels' film program was considered the most extensive use of motion pictures in a political campaign, although the organization denied its activities were political, declaring its objective was "to save the Constitution."

34,000 Attend in Chicago

The showings in Chicago drew 34,000 persons in a week, and in Philadelphia the attendance was 30,000, according to the Sentinels. Besides exhibitions in large key cities, the Sentinels sent four motor units touring the South, planning to cover other sections before conclusion of the campaign. No admission was charged.

"The Amateur Fire Brigade" cartoon was the feature of the program consisting of several reels, including one from Pathe News titled "America's Bulwark of Liberty." The Chicago censor attempted to suppress the cartoon "pending an investigation of its producers," and the Ohio state censors banned it as "encouraging disrespect for the office of President of the United States."

The film was given a private showing at the Palm Beach, Fla., winter estate of William Kenny, New York contractor and member of the American Liberty League, a few weeks ago. Alfred E. Smith, Surrogate Foley of New York and former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, a defense attorney in the Government's conspiracy suit against Warner, Paramount and RKO, were said to have been "delighted" with the show, the investigating committee was told. Mr. Reed thought, however, that the characterization of the President might be changed.

The picture subsequently was "toned down" considerably as some of the Sentinels took the position that too much of the reel was devoted to ridiculing the President, said David F. Sibley of Boston, assistant treasurer of the Sentinels, chief witness before the committee.

A few weeks ago the question of financing the Sentinels' motion picture activities was taken up in New York, and at that time officials of the organization wanted the American Liberty League to provide the underwriting. In support of this suggestion it was said that in eight months the League had collected $1,000,000.

The active services of former Governor Smith were sought in financing the films, it was stated in a memorandum written by C. A. Berry, representative of the Sentinels, which was introduced by the committee. Mr. Berry wrote that Thomas L. Chadbourne, also of the Sentinels, believed that through John W. Davis and former Governor Smith "he could secure the money necessary from the League, provided that changes and additions (in the cartoon), which he believes are minor, are made."

"In the event of the Liberty League guaranteeing completion of the program, contributions could then be obtained with much less difficulty," Mr. Berry's memorandum declared.

A second version of the film subsequently was made, with the caricature of President Roosevelt removed. At that time, however, the explanation was given that the substitute version was intended for showing in Ohio and other sections where opposition had arisen. The films were produced by the Ted Eshbaugh studio in New York.

Raymond Pitcairn, Philadelphia industrialist and national chairman of the Sentinels, was shown to have advanced the Sentinels $91,000 since last July for the production and distribution of the films. The amount was to be remitted "when and if" repayment can be made. Three other members of the Pitcairn family contributed outright approximately $12,000.

The contributions and advances to the fund since last July, when the Sentinels began their anti-New Deal campaign, total $168,500, Mr. Sibley told the committee.

Other Contributors

Among other contributors, in amounts ranging from $100 to $1,000 each, were Irénée DuPont of Delaware; Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors; Edward T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, a partner of J. P. Morgan and Company; A. Atwater Kent, Philadelphia radio manufacturer; Nicholas Guy Roosevelt of Philadelphia and former Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania.

Evidence was produced in an effort to show that the various anti-New Deal organizations had two common features: (1) they had as their purpose the defeat of Roosevelt and the New Deal; (2) a considerable part of their funds came from the same individuals, many of them wealthy industrialists and financiers.

The names of William Randolph Hearst, John J. Raskob, Colonel Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune; Colonel Henry Breckinridge, Democratic opponent of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Presidential nomination, and Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia came into the testimony as having displayed an interest in one way or another.

Correspondence dealing with the possibilities of a merger with the American Liberty League also was read into the record, although the negotiations were not consummated.

Alexander Lincoln, Boston attorney and president of the Sentinels, was being heard this week by Governor James W. Curley and his Executive Council on proceedings brought by the governor to remove Mr. Lincoln from the Massachusetts Board of Tax Appeals. He is accused of having granted excessive tax refunds.

Mr. Lincoln said the Sentinels' film show will be concentrated in those states where President Roosevelt's strength is unassured and its exhibition in theatres will not be generally sought.

U.S. WON'T HELP STAGE UNLOOSEN COAST 'GRIP'

Statute Does Not Permit Allocation of $1,000,000 from WPA, Says Farnsworth

Extension of the scope of the Works Progress Administration to permit Government subsidy of private theatre enterprise is "impossible," Edward P. Farnsworth, administrative officer of the federal theatre project, late last week informed the group of Broadway producing managers who seek $1,000,000 from Uncle Sam to establish a revolving fund to revive the legitimate stage independently of Hollywood financing.

Mr. Farnsworth, formerly deputy administrator of the NRA motion picture code, explained to the group, which calls itself the Legitimate Theatre Recovery Committee, that the present statute does not permit such allocation since the WPA funds were appropriated by Congress specifically for unemployment relief.

The committee is prepared to ask federal officials for a modification of the policy or new legislation. The aim is to help the producing managers "restore Broadway to its former prosperity" and to provide them with a substantial source of financing without having to resort to backing by the motion picture industry.

Mr. Farnsworth, who came from Washington for the meeting, based his opinion on a similar experience more than a year ago when an NRA code committee of the legitimate theatre, consisting of Marcus Heiman and Brock Pemberton, producers, Frank Gillmore, president of Actors' Equity Association, and Louis Krouse, assistant president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, was told by Jacob Baker, assistant WPA administrator, that loans to private managers could not be made from WPA funds.

Offered Buildings as Collateral

That plan went further than the present idea because it offered theatre buildings as collateral, Mr. Farnsworth said. To set up such a fund as is now requested would require a change in the relief legislation or a special appropriation, he explained.

The meeting was attended also by Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national federal theatre director, and Philip W. Barber, New York regional director, and representatives of the committee, including Walter C. Jordan, chairman; Guido Orlando, Crosby Gaige, George C. Tyler, George F. Kerr and Clayton Hamilton, head of the Pulitzer drama committee.

Following the meeting, Mr. Jordan said that the plan would be submitted to Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, and it "quite conceivably" would have to be presented to President Roosevelt with a request for modifications in the WPA setup to permit the appropriation.

The committee, said Mr. Jordan, feels that Broadway should not have to depend on Hollywood backing and that with bank credit unavailable to stage producers, the Government should step in and help rehabilitate the legitimate theatre industry "at its source."

The Government, with its vast resources, can continue indefinitely to produce shows at a price scale of from 15 cents to 55 cents top, paying the actors and others $23 a week, whereas a commercial manager would have to pay them $100 to $200 a week, Mr. Jordan declared, and while this is invaluable in providing the needy with the necessities of life, it is doing nothing toward permanently revitalizing the legitimate stage or preventing thousands of others from being thrown on relief.

Furthermore, the motion picture industry would benefit from the encouragement of new talent that restoration of the "legitimate" would bring about, he believed.

Meanwhile, Mr. Farnsworth disclosed that motion picture theatre circuits are planning to employ WPA vaudeville units, the Sparks (Paramount) circuit in Florida having made a request for two units for several weeks' booking, and a circuit in Chicago is negotiating with the WPA for an experimental booking of a troupe of 60 for two weeks.

Also, Mr. Farnsworth said he had received word from Los Angeles that the Lord and Thomas advertising agency is to employ a WPA radio unit, for which it presumably had obtained a commercial sponsor. He said WPA officials approve the move as it takes actors off the relief rolls and absorbs them in private industry, which is the WPA's ultimate intention.

Denies Competition

He scouted the belief that the WPA shows were competing with the commercial theatre, motion picture and legitimate houses.

"It is benefiting all show business by building a new patronage among those who have not been able to pay the prices asked by the commercial theatres," he said. "Those attending WPA shows have not been regular theatregoers."

He said the federal theatre shows play to 300,000 persons weekly throughout the country, on a basis of six days a week or less with no matinees. These include paid admissions and free tickets one night a week to those on relief. The theatre and music projects are the only ones in the WPA returning any income to the Government, he said.

Returning from a survey in the South, Mrs. Flanagan reported that the nationwide results of the project are "increasingly important," and that while the shows in general are not paying back their production cost, "we didn't expect them to."

Enough remains to continue the federal theatre project in the New York region through May 15 or May 30, and no additional Congressional appropriation will be needed, it was said.

Asserting that the federal theatre project, especially in New York, was "spreading communistic propaganda," Senator James J. Davis, Republican, of Pennsylvania, demanded in the Senate Monday that it be investigated.

SCREEN NOW FINANCES STAGE THAT IT RAIDED

Noting that the "legitimate" is coming back on Broadway, John K. Hutchens, writing in the New York Times, declares:

"The screen raided the theatre's writing and acting talent, stole its public on the road, and in general was a heartless child. It is now making amends. It is putting up cash. The motive is not altogether altruistic, to be sure. Times Square, in Hollywood's eyes, is frankly a testing ground. In return for first call on the film rights Hollywood backs at least a third of Broadway's productions. Broadway is grateful for the money, and the scars of subsidy are few. On its home grounds, at least, the theatre's values are theatrical, not cinematic."

Broker Sues Laemmle for Commissions

Alleging he acted as broker in the sale of Universal Pictures Corporation to Standard Capital Company for $5,500,000, Alfred M. Wolf, New York broker, filed suit for $275,000 Tuesday in federal district court against Carl Laemmle, former president of Universal.

The action was filed originally in the New York supreme court, and Judge Alfred Frankenthaler granted permission to Mr. Laemmle's counsel to remove it to the federal court.

The suit is based on an agreement made January 28, 1936, by which the plaintiff was to negotiate the sale of Mr. Laemmle's interest in the company. He said his commission of five per cent was not paid.

New York Senate Passes Minor's Admission Bill

The New York senate this week passed and sent to the Assembly the Joseph bill amending the general city law to permit the adoption of local laws allowing the admittance of children between eight and 16 years old to motion picture theatres unaccompanied by parent or guardian. The Assembly will consider the bill next week. It is sponsored by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York City.

U. S. Admission Taxes Rise to $12,994,795

Federal taxes derived from admissions to theatres and other amusements in the first three quarters of the current fiscal year amounted to $12,994,795, it was reported in Washington this week.

This represents an increase of $1,328,534 over the same period last year.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

In the golden silent days, a number of acrobatic actors—who turned somersaults at the drop of a camera handle—followed the course set by Douglas Fairbanks. One was Richard Talmadge, born to a circus heritage, who became the daredevil of the serials, reputedly earning more than $3,000,000 in films and elsewhere.

In the same golden silent days, when Essanay, Vitagraph and Biograph were among the major companies, it was customary for enterprising rivals to steal film-footage. The only way devised at the time to stop this rampant larceny was to have painted, on the subtitle flashed, the trade mark of the producing company. Grover Jones, "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" scenarist, then in other pursuits, decided to enter the film business. What Hollywood needed most, he reasoned, was an abundancy of these trade mark signs—so he became a sign writer.

The other day Leonard Lyons, New York Post writer, found Richard Talmadge, his $3,000,000 gone, working for Grover Jones in California as house man—and serving Mrs. Jones at her nearby flower shop.

It's a very successful flower shop, underselling its competitors. Talmadge does most of the purchasing. He can buy flowers much cheaper than competitors because the wholesalers are Japanese—who admire anybody who can do acrobatic stunts. At five o'clock every morning Talmadge goes to the flower market, and he—whose stunts once brought him millions—does those very same tricks for the amusement of the Japs, and a lower price for flowers.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Columbia Pictures each variously enjoyed pleasant returns from the box office grosses of westerns starring Tim McCoy. Today Mr. McCoy is basking in the limelight of the Barnum and Bailey Circus, leading bands of "wild" cowboys-and-Indians around the circus arena and thoroughly enjoying the billing they are giving him:

RANCHMAN TIM McCOY, OF WYOMING
TIM McCOY, INDIAN EXPERT
ROUGH-RIDING TIM McCOY OF THE MOVIES
COLONEL TIM McCOY

Timothy John Fitzgerald McCoy, still young at 45, got his cowboy-and-Indian training on the city streets of Saginaw in Michigan. It was polished off in Saginaw's public schools and at St. Ignatius' College at Chicago. Somewhere between St. Ignatius and Chicago's stockyards he probably turned ranchman, Indian expert, "wild west" rough-rider and cowboy. And he loves it.

Some exhibitors think they have found a way to get around the postal ruling forbidding mention of Bank Nights in their newspaper advertisements. The Tampa theatre, in the Florida city of the same name, had stacked its Bank Night awards total up to $1,050, a princely figure, and the management felt that it would be a shame not to let Mr. John Q. Public know how much coin there was waiting at the end of the rainbow. So when John Q. and Mrs. Public read the theatre advertisement the other morning they must have recognized the tip, that "There are 1,050 reasons for you to attend the Tampa theatre tonight."

The books of the United States Government on the Administration's $4,500,000,000 relief expenditures, can now be balanced—Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, having received a check for $2.00 from Amos 'n' Andy in full payment for a loan made about two years ago. It was the smallest loan in the history of the RFC.

Mr. Jones explained that the transaction was authentic and that he had received the check after sending the blackfacers a copy of the annual RFC report. He added, however, that he is still dunning the boys for interest since October 22, 1934, when the loan was made to Amos 'n' Andy's Fresh Air Taxicab Corpalation. Accompanying the $2.00 check was a letter from the pair, which read as follows:

The Fort Sutter Museum, Sacramento, California, presented a large bas relief of John C. Sutter to Carl Laemmle, the other day, for the renewed interest in the late Mr. Sutter as Sacramento's pioneer colonizer, brought about by "Sutter's Gold," Mr. Laemmle's last production for the Universal company which he sold to J. Cheever Cowdin.

The bas relief of Sutter now in Mr. Laemmle's hands is the work of the Italian sculptor, Carlos Taliabue, and was suggested by a portrait of General Sutter as he appears in a painting by Buchser hanging in the Musee des Beaux Arts, at Soleure, Switzerland. This portrait was done by Buchser when Sutter was the richest man in America. When it was completed, Sutter was so poor that he could not pay for it. The disgusted Buchser stamped back to Switzerland with his painting, and there it was discovered by Universal and used as a guide for the makeup which Edward Arnold used in his portrayel of Sutter for Mr. Laemmle.

SEVEN COMPANIES FILE EARNINGS STATEMENTS

Universal Pictures and Fox Theatres Show Losses, Famous Canadian, and Fox Film Gain

Universal Pictures, Inc., and Fox Theatres Corporation this week reported losses in operations, the while Twentieth Century-Fox Film, Famous Players Canadian Corporation and Trans-Lux operated on a profit basis. RKO Distributing Corporation and the Agfa Ansco Corporation were others reporting profits.

Consolidated Net Profit

Simultaneously with the annual meeting of stockholders of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and the subsequent board of directors' meeting Tuesday afternoon, the company reported a consolidated net operating profit of $1,239,760, after all charges including federal income taxes, for the 13 weeks ended March 28, 1936. This compares with a profit of $616,806 for the first quarter of 1935, and a profit of $1,566,763 for the fourth quarter.

On the basis of 1,359,041¼ shares of $1.50 dividend cumulative convertible preferred stock outstanding, the consolidated net operating profit for the first quarter of 1936 amounts to 91 cents per share. After allowing for the preferred dividend of 37½ cents per share for the quarter, paid March 31, there remained a profit equivalent to 59 cents a share on the 1,226,530½ shares of common stock outstanding.

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation has a 42% stock interest in National Theatres Corporation. As no dividends were declared during the period no income was included in the above figures from that source.

At the stockholders' meeting the following directors were elected: H. Donald Campbell, Chase National Bank, John D. Clark, John R. Dillon, Hayden Stone & Company, William C. Michel, William P. Philips, Herman G. Place, Chase National Bank, Felix A. Jenkins, Sidney R. Kent, Arthur W. Loasby, National Distillers Products Corporation, Seton Porter, National Distillers Products Corporation, Joseph M. Schenck, Sydney Towell.

Universal lost $161,701, after all charges and taxes, during the 13 weeks ending February 1, including amortization and $98,676 for depreciation of fixed assets. The period covered the last full quarter under the Carl Laemmle regime, immediately preceding sale of the corporation to the J. Cheever Cowdin-Charles R. Rogers interests. It compared with a loss of $271,459 in the same period in 1935.

Fox Theatres Net Loss $46,748

Fox Theatres Corporation reported net loss of $46,748 for 1935.

Reporting in federal court in New York, Milton C. Weisman, receiver, showed Fox Theatres' assets were $10,248,261, against liabilities of $6,008,929. Included in the assets is an item of $7,500,000 which is termed a "modest" estimate of claims that may aggregate $15,000,000. These claims, against William Fox, former owner, and against others, now are in litigation in Supreme Court, Nassau County, Long Island.

Fox Theatres Corporation itself lost $34,454 in 1934. Profits made by William Fox Realty Company, the Fox Elizabeth Theatre Company and other subsidiaries amounted to $31,150, reducing the parent's loss to some $3,304. However, because of amortization and depreciation, the corporation was left with a net loss of $46,748. A loss from consolidated operations of $320,910 for the receivership period from June 22, 1932, to December 31, 1935, also was reported by Mr. Weisman. Cash on hand was listed by Mr. Weisman at $780,217.

$3,000,000 in Claims Allowed

The liabilities include $3,000,000 in claims against the company which have been allowed and $1,627,649 which represents a reserve for 20 per cent of the amount of disputed claims. Of a total of $24,285,033 in claims filed against the corporation originally, exactly $2,949,103 have been allowed. Of an additional $9,259,474 of claims, $8,148,249 are in dispute.

Fox Theatres Corporation's original investment in Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., recently reorganized, is listed as having been realized at $150,000, representing a book loss of $5,626,176. The company also realized $6,640 on its investment in Fox New England Theatres, Inc., representing a book loss approximating $2,267,884.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., and subsidiaries, largest theatre circuit in Canada, and affiliated with Paramount, reported for 1935 a net profit of $335,266, after expenses and all other charges, compared with a profit of $309,793 in 1934, representing an increase of some $25,473 in earnings in 1935.

RKO Net $684,732

Consolidated net profit for the year 1935 amounting to $684,732 was reported this week by RKO. The audited report compares with a preliminary estimate made by Irving Trust company a month ago, indicating a net of $665,297, the trust company reporting to the U. S. District Court in advance of completion of the audit as RKO trustee.

RKO's new balance sheet shows total current and working assets of $14,939,085, which includes cash in amount of $5,053,004.

Trans-Lux Net $164,291

Report of Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation and subsidiaries for the year ended Dec. 31, 1935, shows net profit of $164,291 after depreciation, amortization, federal taxes, etc., equivalent to 23 cents a share (par $1) on 715,803 shares, excluding 69,357 shares in treasury.

This compares with $180,637 or 23 cents a share on 778,803 shares in 1934.

Forgotten Faces

(Paramount)

Drama

Keynoted by a human heart interest appeal that aims at stirring the more sympathetic emotions, this promises to be the type of film entertainment of more than the usual amount of interest for feminine patrons. Generally serious in tone, but not without occasions provocative of comedy contrast, it is a story of great love and great sacrifice. It tells of a man who sacrificed everything the ordinary mortal lives for, who commits a desperate deed to protect his daughter from the influences and schemes of the one who should love her most, her mother. It tells of a man who kills his faithless wife's lover; a man who before going to jail for his crime takes measures to remove his child forever from association with her mother. It is climaxed by a dramatic sequence when, as the daughter stands on the threshhold of married happiness, the father sacrifices his life as the mother is killed accidentally, to preserve the secret of the girl's identity from gossip and scandal.

The picture is adapted from an original story by Richard Washburn Child. The screen play is credited to Marguerite Roberts, Brian Marlow and Robert Yost. Direction is by E. A. Dupont, who made "The Bishop Misbehaves" for MGM.

Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael are featured in the leading roles. Recent pictures in which both have appeared have met considerable popularity. The supporting cast includes many wellknown screen names and a sprinkling of personalities comparatively new. Included are James Burke, who as Marshall's friend is the only one who knows of the whereabouts of his daughter, Janes Rhodes. She later with Robert Cummings shares the romantic love interest of the story. Others in the picture are Mary Gordon, Alan Adwards, Arthur Hohl, Edward R. McWade, Antoinette Lees, Irving Bacon, Robert Emmett Keane, Jack Norton and Dora Clement.

Half Angel

(20th Century-Fox)

Dramatic Romance

It is anticipated that the manner in which this feature merges thrills, romance, drama, comedy, suspense and surprise in a courtroom, insane asylum and murder house will provide plenty of entertainment for any kind of audience. It is further expected that the manner in which they are combined, together with the value of cast names, production features and unique atmosphere of motivation will provide showmen all the essentials necessary to concoct a bang-up interest-creating campaign.

The story is an original by Tennyson Jesse, with screen play credited to Bess Meredith and Gene Fowler. Direction is in the hands of Sidney Lanfield, maker of the recent popular "King of Burlesque."

It concerns a girl whom everybody, except the jury before whom she was tried, believes to be a poison murderess. Befriended by a newspaper reporter who only wants the exclusive story of her life, even though he has fallen in love with her, she finds shelter in the home of a woman whose idiosyncrasy is the harboring of all sorts of riffraff. To the tune of dramatic mystery, comic action and dialogue which ease the tension of the melodramatic tragedy as several more deaths take place, the real culprit of all the crimes is discovered and the girl finds peace and contentment in marriage with the newspaperman hero.

While the cast is comparatively small, it makes up in prestige for any apparent weakness in numbers. Frances Dee, in her first appearance since "The Gay Deception," is the girl. Brian Donleavy is the newspaperman. Charles Butterworth, Donleavy's stooge and leg man, is a half baked addict to all sorts of pills and panaceas. Etienne Girardot is a lunatic mercy killer with an ambition to be poet laureate of the world. A newcomer, Gavin Muir, erstwhile New York stage actor, is introduced, and Helen Westley is the woman of many odd ideas as to how to spread charity and sunshine. Others in the cast are Sara Haden, Henry Stephenson, Paul Stanton, Philip Sleeman, Hilda Vaughn, Julius Tannen, Nigel de Brulier and William Ingersoll.

NEW ZEALAND BIDS FOR GOVERNMENT CONTROL

Prime Minister Savage of New Zealand has assured a delegation, asserting that American interests dictate operations of the film industry in the Dominion, that he will take legislative action to guarantee local control.

The Prime Minister is quoted as saying, "This thing has been unsatisfactory for years and the time has come for the government to take a hand. We are going to run New Zealand. We do not want it run from New York or Australia."

The Glory Parade

(Republic)

Drama

While drama that has historical significance and romance that endures the blight of war are two of the principal elements in this story, the production as a whole, with five characters the principal featured players, is the melodramatic story of the building of the Monitor, first federal ironclad, the strife of the Civil War which broke the hearts of families and tested the faith of lovers, and the world changing naval battle between the cheesebox on a raft and the Confederate Merrimac.

In building up to the climactic battle between the first two ironclads, it narrates the struggles John Ericcson had to win recognition of the value of his invention from reactionary Washington officials; the causes and effects of war that made enemies of buddies, separated sons from fathers, and lovers from sweethearts, and the great humaneness that characterized the efforts of Abraham Lincoln to restore peace and tranquillity to a war-wracked land.

Based on an original by Wallace McDonald, adapted by Karl Brown with screen play by Bernard Schubert and Olive Cooper, the picture is the first directorial effort on the part of Lew Ayers, who will be remembered as the star of Universal's war epic, "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Playing the parts of fictionalized characters whose lives form the romantic dramatic background for the basic historical story are James Dunn, Mae Clarke, David Manners and Charlotte Henry. Fritz Leiber appears in the role of Ericcson; Henry B. Walthall is President Buchanan and Frank McGlynn, Sr., is Lincoln. Other featured players are George Irving, J. M. Kerrigan, Irving Pichel and Ben Alexander who, like Ayers, was in "All Quiet." As these players constitute a high grade featured cast, name value of the support is also worthy of consideration. Included are Oscar Apfel, Clay Clement, Edward Gargan, Russell Hicks, George Hayes, Douglas Wood, Bodil Rosing, Warner Richmond, Hooper Atchley and Henry Roquemore.

The Big Noise

(Warner)

Comedy Drama

Made up of familiar ingredients and having for its idea the theme that old folk are not so passe as youngsters sometimes like to think, this picture has more than a fair share of amusing entertainment. Not a big picture, it's only 60 minutes long and necessarily has to pack in a lot of stuff to get over its full purpose.

In the yarn, genial Julius Trent is voted out of control of his manufacturing plant by Welford Andrews, who puts his son Don in Trent's place. Trent can't stand the boredom of retirement. As his wife and daughter, Betty, are unaware of what he is doing, he forms a partnership with Ken Mitchell in the dry cleaning business. The establishment quickly becomes the focal point for the activities of a couple of racketeer organizing gangs. Old boy Trent, with years of experience behond him, has difficulty in controlling Ken, who wants to go to the mat with the racketeers immediately. With the caution that it is better to be discreet and live than it is to be heroic and die, Trent contrives to get the rival gangs to make a battle ground of his shop. As they mow each other down in farcical fashion until there is not a survivor in either party, the old boy proves he's not so dumb as folk would like to think him. Marveling at this, Ken is also amazed to find that the girl with whom he has been carrying on a romance all through the comedy drama is Trent's daughter Betty.

Human Cargo

(20th Century-Fox)

Romantic Drama

Thrill action is the tune to which this spins. Essentially exciting drama, it supports this element with a well rounded and logical, if unique, romantic love story, has the required and expected amount of comedy relief, and as it gives an insight into the workings of a pair of vicious rival alien immigrant smuggling rings, with whom the Government and the hero and heroine eventually come to grips, it develops a brand of melodramatic suspense that continually holds attention. Moving fast, eschewing inconsequentials, the picture shows careful attention to production details so that they may be the maximum amount of entertainment material on the screen with its consequent quantity of showmanship availability.

For romance, which always has a dramatic counterpart, the picture pits against each other two persons, one an ace reporter, the other a society girl taking a fling at the reporting profession. First having them as associates on the same sheet, it makes them rivals and eventually brings them to fight shoulder to shoulder in cooperation with the Government to wipe out the smugglers of human cargo.

For melodrama it presents a vivid inside picturization of the workings of the smuggling rings. Illustrating the methods by which aliens are sneaked into the country, detailing the cruel and inhuman blackmail method subsequently practiced upon them, to keep the elements of excitement, action and thrill continually at an intense pitch.

The picture is acted with vigorous realism and conviction. It is so directed that there always is movement, suspense and punch to maintain unflagging interest. Performances on the part of the principals are uniformly good. While none of the cast names ranks importantly in box office ratings, the quality of their work is high as is the interest inherent in the story and its action.

The Mine with the Iron Door

(Columbia-Lesser)

Comedy Drama

Wide liberties have been taken in this adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's story. While much of the original dramatic romantic substance has been retained, a vein of comedy has been so inserted that not until the climaxing sequences is the full dramatic power evident. Though the name of Wright has definite values in many connections as a showmanship adjunct in relation to the picture, this calls for a campaign that concentrates its interest stimulating intentions on the feature itself.

Treasure hunter Bob Harvey and sore-footed cop Dempsey go in search of a fabulous lost mine. The natives have made a commercial proposition of playing up to the needs and ambitions of wouldbe get-rich-quickers. As the comedy of this is contrasted by a developing romance between Martha Hill and Harvey, which has a menacing counterpart in the actions of demented archeologist Burton, Harvey becomes convinced that Burton possesses the mine's secret.

In various ways the audience becomes informed that this is so and that furthermore Burton intends to keep it and also keep Martha from Harvey. Letting the audience in on subsequent action but trickily playing upon its credulity, Harvey by tracing various symbols and fetishes discovers the iron door. Burton, realizing that another possesses his secret, has Martha trapped in the mine. Intent upon killing her and himself, he is prevented from doing so by Harvey, who crashes through the door to stage a terrific fight with the demented old man to save the girl, get the treasure and then find himself in a jam with the Government for gold hoarding.

Previewed at the Figueroa Theatre, Los Angeles. The audience seemed to get a kick from the comedy contrast, but found that the way in which the drama had been worked in was a little too far-fetched for its imagination.

Let's Sing Again

(Principal-Lesser)

Drama

Though the tone of this story is essentially dramatic, with quite a hokum comedy contrast woven in, its principal entertainment and commercial feature is the presentation of youthful Bobby Breen. Heard recently on the Eddie Cantor radio hours, the boy possesses a remarkable voice, and as he demonstrated how well he knows how to use it the preview audience reacted to his singing with impressive enthusiasm. He sings several songs, ranging all the way from topical numbers, through operatic arias to a lullaby. The conclusion of each was greeted with applause. Though the production has much human interest entertainment quality, that, while worthy of attention, seems to be secondary as both an entertainment and commercial magnet. Consequently a campaign that seeks to convince not only music lovers but the general rank and file of patronage as well, that in this they have a personality worthy of their time and attention seems to be the angle for best results.

As the story opens in Italy, Alice Alba, unwilling to await his success, deserts embryonic opera singer Leon Alba, taking their infant child with her. Years pass, the mother dies and Billy is an inmate of an orphan home. A traveling show comes to town. Prohibited from attending for a minor rule infraction, the boy is sneaking in when found by Pasquale. Thrilled with the glamor of the troupe, the boy hides in Pasquale's car to be discovered at the next stop. Hearing him sing and learning his story, Pasquale, once great singer but now clown target for vegetables, takes Billy under his wing. Training him as he sings several songs, trouble making actor Diablo plans to adopt him and make Billy feature in his act. As Pasquale and Billy flee, Pasquale hears a radio broadcast and recognizes the voice of Rosa Donelli, noted diva and once his pupil.

Landing in New York after many adventures, dramatic and comic, Billy gets an interview with Rosa. Telling her Joe is ill, she comes to the hovel in which they are staying. Bringing him to her house, where a reception is being given for famous singer Leon Alba, the boy picks up the melody of a lullaby he is singing. The two brought together, Billy identifies the picture Leon carries as that of his mother. As father and son are reunited, Pasquale has the pleasure of putting the skids under Diablo.

The picture, with Henry Armetta, Grant Withers, George Houston and particularly Bobby Breen giving impressive performances, seems to have quality making it worthy of spot on any program. Though lack of draw names may prove a handicap in larger city theatres, the story quality plus the singing of Breen should stir up word-of-mouth advertising in smaller locales that will make for patron popularity.

Previewed in Ritz Theatre, Los Angeles. The audience, grasping the mood, demonstrated its appreciation of Breen's talents with its applause several times.

Florida Special

(Paramount-Lewis)

Comedy

This is a comedy. To get over that element, capitalizing on the talents of the player it features, the picture's fun is presented along with a lot of drama, melodrama, romance, mystery, thrills and excitement that undoubtedly were counted upon to serve efficiently in rounding out a well balanced piece. There's a lot of fun and so much of the other stuff that it all didn't seem to jell. At least the preview audience didn't think so. It laughed at the fun all right. It also laughed at situations and action that were supposed to hold it in tense suspense.

All action takes place aboard a train. Newspaperman Bangs gets aboard because he is playing good Samaritan to his inebriated socialite wastrel pal, Tucker. The train starts and cantankerous old millionaire Stafford, accompanied by his decorative niece Mariana, and carrying a fortune in gems, is also aboard. There's also a suave looking menace, Macklyn, a lot of out-and-out crooks headed by Herman Weil, and Harrigan, a policeman. As Tucker, spurned by Mariana, falls in love with train hostess Jerry Quinn, Stafford, knowing his jewels are in danger, disappears. To find him and his jewels, Harrigan seals the train.

What is sandwiched in between this and the climax is familiar formula. In the end Macklyn, who has stolen the jewels and has tried to get Jerry to carry them off the train, is walloped in a fist fight with Tucker. Bangs discovers Stafford in disguise. About to return the jewels to him, Weil and his gang step in and grab the loot. As the train pulls up to a station a whole regiment of cops are lined up to welcome Harrigan. The gang is trapped, the jewels are returned, Tucker and Jerry go on to Florida and a Miami honeymoon and Bangs returns to New York.

An average attraction, the picture's field is with audiences who appreciate comedy thrill action entertainment.

Mr. Deeds Goes to Town

(Columbia)

Comedy Drama

A great many persons read all of Clarence Budington Kelland's stories. A great many of these and a great many others go to see all of Gary Cooper's pictures, and so have learned to watch for pictures bearing the signatures of Frank Capra and Robert Riskin, which adorned "It Happened One Night" and "Broadway Bill," a pair of singularly swift, suave, smart and stimulating entertainments. To all these groups the Messrs. Capra and Riskin have been wholly faithful in bringing to the screen "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." The production is precisely that which a citizen approaching it via any of these interest-lanes logically might expect it to be.

The Kelland story is modern in his fashionable manner, an expert knitting together of the fantastic and romantic into pleasantly credible plausibility. The Riskin screen play adroitly preserves the essence of the Kelland narrative, translates its occasionally pensive passages into steadily progressive action, weaves its sharply contrasted characters and counterpointed story threads into constantly changing and always colorful pattern. The Capra direction is altogether in key, sympathetic, now and then daring, always resourceful, confident, positive. The Cooper performance of a role that fits him better than most of his clothes is forthright, unstudied and convincing.

Exploitation angles were plentiful when the picture came from the cameras. Author, star, director and adaptor had, among them, a wealth of carry-over box office value. Normal expectancies to be tapped by advertising copy were varied and widespread. But the material that has accumulated since the preview screenings is abundant beyond the limits of this space to chronicle. By signed testimonial and word-of-mouth the name of the picture has been widely and emphatically associated with the term "entertainment," most effective and difficult to achieve of identifications. To showmen, now, the question is less what kind of than how much exploitation to give the picture. Each man's answer to that, of course, is his own.

The story concerns one Longfellow Deeds, small town bachelor, tuba player and postcard poet, who inherits $20,000,000 from an uncle he doesn't know and is brought to New York by the deceased's dishonest attorney to take charge of the estate. By native shrewdness he thwarts various schemes to deprive him of his wealth, but Babe Bennett, tabloid reporter, ensnares him romantically and, pretending to reciprocate his adoration, writes a series of articles labeling him "The Cinderella Man" and making him a laughing stock. Ultimately she discovers that she really loves him and gives up her job, intending to tell him of her deception, but he learns of it prematurely and, heartbroken, determines to dispose of his fortune by means of a plan to finance small farmers who have been failures.

As he proceeds with this enterprise, the scheming attorney and two remote relatives of the dead uncle conspire to regain control of the fortune by having Deeds pronounced insane and placed in an institution. Disillusioned, he refuses to offer a defense and sits mute while damaging evidence is submitted against him. Miss Bennett is brought to the stand and tries to tell the true story but is prevented from doing so. Finally, as a verdict is about to be rendered, the farmers Deeds has been planning to finance appeal to him to defend himself for their sake if not his own, and he takes the stand, explains away the testimony that has been given and is pronounced sane. He then forgives and marries the girl reporter.

Border Flight

Dramatic Romance

For a thrill action background to this dramatic romantic story, this picture utilizes the activities of the aerial branch of the Coast Guard Service. The production contains much to interest younger audience contingents particularly and those preferring plenty of excitement on the screen. As it picturizes the work of the Service, the training methods and the dangers and adventures which confront its members, it provides ample opportunity for exploitation.

Opening to a fast action pace, the hero, Dan Conlon, lands his disabled plane and with youthful enthusiasm thinks he has done something great. Dramatic tension picks up when the rookie officer becomes the object of Tornell's derision. A comedy contrast, provided by Calico Smith, interludes. Dramatic conflict is further intensified when it becomes evident that Dan and Tornell are rivals for Anne Blane's affections. Reverting to service drama, Dan's flying pal, Dixon, is killed in a brush with smugglers. As Commander Moseley's men declare a war of vengeance on the smugglers, Tornell is forced to resign from the service for indulging in some harum scarum flying as a welcoming gesture to Anne. Secretly becoming allied with the smugglers and a participant in several thrilling air chases, he persuades the girl to believe that he is engaged in a one-man attempt

The Royal Waltz

(Ufa)

Bavarian Romantic Comedy

Munich of 1850 is the setting. Romantic interests of commoner and king in conflict and contrast make up the never serious story content. There is occasional music, both in the story itself and in an incidental opera sequence. English titles on the film clearly interpret the German dialogue.

Exploitation possibilities for American purposes include the fact that Willi Forst, a principal in this picture, was starred in the successful "Two Hearts in Waltz Time." Production is on a lavish scale, photography adequate, the music score effective and tuneful. Many minor characters are striking "types."

The story opens with the young Franz Joseph commissioning Count Tettenbach to go to Munich and diplomatically obtain consent of the King of Bavaria to his marriage with Duchess Elizabeth, which the queen-mother opposes. Count Tettenbach meets Anni Tomasoni in a park incident which is misinterpreted by a meddlesome eavesdropper, who misinforms the populace and incides a demand for retribution. The counts meets her sister, Therese, and they fall in love. He is successful in his diplomatic mission, but when he calls on Tomasoni, an innkeeper, to ask for Therese's hand, he is identified as the officer who figured in the incident with Anni and Therese leads the movement to compel him to marry her sister. As this is about to succeed, she learns from Anni the true, innocent nature of the incident and, by appealing to Duchess Elizabeth, brings all love interests to a satisfactory conclusion.—Weaver, New York.

Milizia Territoriale

(Nuovo Mondo)

Italian Comedy

Humor of the type familiar in American productions of the "Big Parade" and "What Price Glory?" era characterizes this importation, which is presented in the United States without English titles or other means of interpretation. The more serious purpose of the picture is to contrast civilian attitude toward the principles during peacetime and while the war is in progress. The war depicted is the World War, the action beginning prior to Italy's entry, spanning the period of conflict and continuing afterward. The treatment is light throughout and actual fighting is shown only in brief flashes.

The principal character is Ciccio Orlandi, peacetime bookkeeper in a shoe factory, dominated by his sister, his fellow employees and acquaintances. When war is declared he is called to the colors as a major and their attitude toward him changes. His sister boasts of his importance. His employer, whose son is in Orlandi's command, asks favors of him, flatters him, promises him a better position after the war.

At the front Orlandi meets Martina, attractive young widow wooed by the soldiers, including the son of Orlandi's employer, whose suit she favors. Orlandi's timidity prevents a declaration of his own romantic interest.

When the war is over Orlandi returns to his employer, is denied the promised promotion, quickly resumes his inferior status in the company and is imposed upon by all members thereof and again dominated by his sister. On Armistice Day, 1920, Martina comes to see the son of Orlandi's employer, who has lost interest in her. Orlandi consoles her, they discuss the changed conditions, and he decides to assert himself. He subdues his sister, denounces his fellow employees and his employer, evens scores with various individuals and leaves the office arm in arm with Martina.

Dramatic Romance

Generally retaining the full human spirit of the Gene Stratton Porter original story, this picture, evidently for the purpose of meeting modern entertainment trends, takes several radical twists. More concentration is placed on dramatic, romantic and personal conflict than is centered on the natural backgrounds that were so important a part of the original. Consistently, however, it has the homey air of the people, times, locales and incidents which it concerns.

As emphasis is placed on the theme, but with proper regard for production values, the story has more a personal character than a spiritual inspirational trend. Mainly it concerns itself with the plots and machinations of a shrewish mother to win the town's prize catch for her daughter. In doing so the young man's attentions are focused on another girl who is the particular object of the mother's scorn and the one who she fears will frustrate her plans. As production detail illustrates the customs, recreations and personal characteristics of the various folk of the rural locale and era, the poor girl, forced to undergo much sorrow and travail, proves that she is the one with whom the happiness and ambitions of the hero will be safest and not the daughter of the scheming mother.

Mingling drama with comedy and at the same time narrating a sympathy stimulating, romantic story, the picture seems to be one of potent appeal for neighborhood and family audiences. In addition to name values, the show carries many suggestions that readily can be adapted to business stimulating exploitation.

Previewed at Wilshire theatre, Los Angeles first-run neighborhood house. The audience, accustomed to more glamorous attractions, nevertheless reacted favorably.

Action Drama

Speeding automobiles careening around racetracks, speedboats racing at such a clip that they burst into flames, dishonesty and treachery in big industry, a football hero who refuses to capitalize his gridiron reputation and a thread of romance interwoven through all this constitute the exploitation ingredients in this action drama.

The production scale of the film as a whole is not grand, but taken as a whole it should please those audiences who like their heroes strong and willing to fight and the romance is handled in an equally satisfactory manner.

Norman Foster and Florence Rice supply the name value, aided by Mary Carlisle, Charles Grapewin, Arthur Hohl, Robert Middlemass and George McKay.

On leaving college, Foster, All-American backfield star, would rather be an engineer instead of an automobile salesman, a position in which his reputation would serve him in good stead. So, through the intercession of Miss Carlisle, he gets a job as an engineer in her father's automobile plant.

Success is soon coming and he invents a supercharger to which are attributed qualities capable of revolutionizing the entire industry. When Foster prepares to demonstrate his invention the president's right hand man, who actually is working for a rival concern, succeeds in fixing the test car so that it is wrecked and Foster nearly killed.

Foster is ruined as an engineer, Miss Carlisle also loses interest in him and he winds up jobless on the waterfront. Here he meets Miss Rice and Grapewin, operators of a motor boat repair shop. They bring him back to the point where he resembles his former self and he again becomes interested in motors, this time in boats instead of cars.

As Foster again is climbing the ladder of success with his supercharger, Miss Carlisle nearly breaks up the romance blossoming between him and Miss Rice. Foster wins the boat race on the strength of his gadget and saves Miss Rice's life while doing so when her boat bursts into flames, and the fadeout has the two crossing the finish line the winners.

Soviet News
(Amkino)
Sidelights on Russia

A collection of topical subjects photographed in the Soviet and assembled under the caption, "Soviet News," purports to depict various aspects of contemporary Russian customs and conditions. The material may be considered as correlated by association and sequence, although it is taken from various sources and is not otherwise unified.

The longest segment of the compilation shows the parade of Soviet youth in Red Square with Dictator Stalin and other government officials reviewing the exhibition. Several thousand young people participate in various drills and games, finishing with a parade of floats, many of them remarkable as to size and kind. The shortest time is allotted to a troupe of Tartar dancers.

The footage devoted to the Jewish State theatre of Moscow presents the enactment of several scenes from plays, including "King Lear," and is in the stage manner, with the dialogue in Yiddish. Other phases of the program depict the palaces of the old regime, showing the uses to which they have been put under the new order, as rest homes, schools and workers' resorts. Some of these are accompanied by English narration, others by titles in English and French.

Reviewed at the Cameo theatre, Forty-second street near Broadway, New York, which directs its advertising appeal directly to persons interested in Russian pictures, who applauded the appearance of Stalin and audibly approved the athletic display.—Weaver, New York.

Produced by Soyuzfilmnews, Moscow. Distributed by Amkino in North and South America. No P. C. A. certificate. Release date, April 10. Running time, 70 minutes.

The Early Bird and the Worm
(MGM)
Color Cartoon

An early bird and an earlier worm pursued by a serpent and two black crows that talk like Moran and Mack start out as enemies and wind up as friends in this brilliantly colored Harman-Ising fantasy. Music and dialogue are used interchangeably to conduct the narrative. The two black crows afford the funniest element. The subject is about par for the series.—Running time, 9 minutes.

The Struggle to Live—No. 5
(RKO Radio)
Excellent Nature Study

H. L. and Stacey R. Woodward have surpassed their previous excellent works in photographing with rare detail and completeness the habits of ants. Unusually clear camera shots show, first, the home-building and life-sustaining operations of a species which subsists by agricultural pursuits as expertly administered, by division of labor and instinctive regimentation, as by the ablest human farmer. Secondly, the aspects and tactics of a species of harvester ants, which survives by conquest, are likewise minutely shown. Then the two species are photographed in mortal conflict, with the agriculturists giving their lives in defense of their home after successfully blocking the entrance thereto and thus saving those within. The photography is superb, the narration splendid, the subject a substantial addition to any program.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Second Childhood
(MGM)
Our Gang Comedy

Plausibility, so often pardonably dispensed with in Hal Roach's juvenile comedies, is retained almost intact this time, with considerable benefit to story, humor and audience. What happens could happen, so far as the children are concerned, the actionful absurdities being confined to the adult characters, chief among whom is an elderly hypochondriac, played by Zeffie Tilbury, whose cure is brought about by the youngsters. Spanky McFarland is the juvenile lead, of course, and the story is more steadily sustained and pointful than commonly. The subject marks an upward trend in the long-sustained quality of the series.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Coral Isle of the Atlantic
(RKO Radio)
Bermuda Travelogue

Alois Havrilla chats easily, informatively and moderately of Bermuda past and present as the camera conducts a leisurely tour of the islands. Several historical facts interjected into the monologue decidedly augment the pleasantly, placidly unfolded pictorial material. The subject is among the best of the World on Parade series to date.—Running time, 11 minutes.

How To Behave
(MGM)
Excellent Comedy

Robert Benchley broadens the horizon of his solicitous attention to the social usages and appears herein as an etiquette expert who knows both sides of his subject. As narrator he enunciates correct advice on divers points of social behavior and as actor he demonstrates what may and usually does happen to the person who practices what he preaches. Nobody does this kind of thing so well, if at all, and not even in his widely featured "How to Sleep" did he attain the heights of screen usefulness achieved in this subject. It makes a place for itself on any program and to make an equivalent place for it on the billing is plain good sense.—Running time, 10 minutes.

La Fiesta de Santa Barbara
(MGM)
Color Musical Review

More stars than generally appear in pictures advertised as presenting as many as there are in heaven are participants, briefly or otherwise, in this eye-filling presentation in color of the Goings-on at Santa Barbara. Some of them are Gary Cooper, Harpo Marx, Maria Gambarelli, Warner Baxter, Leo Carrillo, Adrienne Ames, Robert Taylor, Mary Carlisle, Edmund Loew, Toby Wing, Buster Keaton, Ida Lupino, Irvin S. Cobb, Ted Healy and somewhat more than that of comparable caliber. Of course some of them are lookers-on and others have only brief sequences between song and dance numbers, but the whole thing is tied together as a compact production unit and it stands up as a junior feature of extraordinary screen value. Pete Smith supplies his usual snappy comments when needed. A wealth of exploitation material is present both in cast names and the circumstances of production.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Dumbbell Letters—No. 3
(RKO Radio)
Rabble Bait

Juliet Lowell, who makes a business of this sort of thing, has collected and here presents another dozen or so of letters written by unintelligent persons to various companies and individuals not above guffawing at ignorance and exhibiting the written evidence thereof to persons of equivalent intellectual stature for purposes of amusement. Possibly there are motion picture audiences capable of lusty response to this kind of thing and to these the present collection of items may be recommended as of especially low grade, therefore likely to evoke especially hilarious reaction.—Running time, 5 minutes.

Bottles
(MGM)
Color Cartoon

As a flight of imagination, as well as in its use of complex color rhythms, this Harman-Ising cartoon rates well above the majority of all its series companions. The idea is essentially simple, expressing the dream of a chemist who falls asleep in a thunder storm, but the working out of detail, the steadily augmented elaboration of interest threads and the periodically reiterated musical themes, are notable both as to technique and as to showmanship.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Debonair New Orleans
(RKO Radio)
Easy Aces Series

The Aces are somewhat less amusing and somewhat more informative than is their habit in commenting on the extremely interesting shots of New Orleans strung together in this Van Beuren travel picture. The past as well as the present of the city is treated and the total effect is to present a traditionally fascinating community in extremely comprehensive and compelling manner. The fadeout gag is a little less funny than usual but detracts in no way from the entertainment impact of the subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Story of the Jonker Diamond
(MGM)
Factual Re-enactment

While players carefully reenact the events he describes, Pete Smith tells the story of the Jonker Diamond, from the beginning of Jonker's patient search for the stone until its successful conclusion eighteen years later. Circumstances resulting in the belief that such a stone existed are explained, the preparations for the cutting into twenty separate stones, the finished products, all are depicted plainly and informatively. An engrossing subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Table Tennis
(MGM)
Sports Study

Pete Smith tells the gags and probably had a hand in staging some of them, but Coleman Clark, ace ping pong paddle of the country, stars in the swiftest, smartest, sportiest presentation of the game that has come to the screen. Buoyed up steadily by the humorous sideplay, in which he participates nimbly, the champion's sizzling play against other champions, brought down to slow motion at intervals, is forthright and interesting stuff. For sheer trick display, his return of a ball by blowing it and his catching in his mouth of an egg pitched from a distance of ten feet are specimen items. Lightly treated and adroitly photographed, the subject is a superb study of a sport too long underestimated and never more effectively presented.—Running time, 10 minutes.

FOX AUSTRALIA AND B & D IN FILM DEAL

Twenty Per Cent Australian Quota Proposed by B & D Managing Director There

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Fox Films of Australia will handle the distribution in Australia of Gaumont British product while British & Dominions will distribute B & D, British Lion and Twickenham pictures there under the terms of a $20,000,000 deal just completed between Fox and Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., in which Fox has an interest, and B & D.

The formal announcement was made at a press luncheon here by Ernest Turnbull, managing director of B & D in Australia. A new company, Dominions Film Distributors, has been formed for the arrangement.

The deal, which has as its basis the perfection of a first class distribution system in Australia, also provides for British production there by leading British units in association with B & D.

Mr. Turnbull has advocated a 20 per cent Australian quota, of which 15 per cent would be made anywhere in the British Empire and five per cent in Australia, and with the maintenance of the existing check on quality and the right of exhibitors to cancel foreign films in favor of Empire product. He declared this provision would be adopted by all the states in the Australian commonwealth.

Alan Williamson, G. B. Australian representative, and David Ostrer, general manager of foreign sales for G. B., declared no definite decision had been made as yet relative to G-B participation in the arrangement. Twickenham is operating under a long term contract with B & D.

Julius Hagen of British Lion declared the company's contract with B & D expires this year and he is delaying decision, although he said he approved the arrangement. The arrival of Stuart Doyle, awaited as this was written, was seen as explaining the hesitancy of G-B and British Lion. Mr. Doyle was expected to make counter proposals to the British producers.

Intensive Study Evident

Holding a preliminary meeting for the purpose of deciding procedure, the Departmental Committee of the Board of Trade which is to investigate revision of the Films Act, and the general problem of British films in its legislative aspect, shows every intention of making an intensive attack on its task.

Letters of invitation to the chief organizations of the trade already have been dispatched, asking for suggested dates on which their various cases shall be presented. A general notice also has been issued saying that any individual or organization wishing to be heard may make application to that effect.

The Film Group of the Federation of British Industries expects to have completed its memorandum for the committee before May 1st. It speaks more particularly for the British production interests which desire a continuance of the Quota and is stiffening by a minimum cost clause, but there is no definite information that its recommendations will be on those lines.

Special Meeting of KRS Council

The Kinematograph Renters' Society, which will present the official policy of distributors, is to hold a special Council meeting soon. The KRS, with a majority of American members, may be expected to emphasize the practical difficulties of a footage quota on a 20 per cent basis and possibly may be found espousing the theory of a revised method of applying quota whereby the option will be given to distributors to spend a statutory amount on British films without any footage obligation or with one of a modified character.

This principle is known to be highly favored by major American companies, several of which are prepared to make supers for world distribution at a $200,000-$500,000 per picture cost in England if they are freed of "quickie" obligations. There are, however, strong British interests also in the KRS.

Special CEA Committee

The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, through its General Council, has delegated the problem for special consideration by its general purposes committee. The Council discussion suggested that exhibitor opinion was undecided. One section wants no amendment of the act, but that it should be allowed to terminate in 1938; this, of course, implies the disappearance of the quota at that date. Another view is that a quota is necessary, to provide a dependable supply of British films as a protection against monopoly and still higher prices, but that it should be reduced to 10 per cent as regards exhibitors and maintained at 20 per cent for distributors. It is certain that official CEA policy will favor any means of combatting "quickies," which do not penalize exhibitors. It may even swallow the £10,000 minimum cost clause if it is coupled with a quota preferentially varied in favor of exhibitors.

Another trade body which will definitely present a case is the Association of Cine. Technicians. This body, which recently has made representations to the ministry of labor in regard to the number of labor permits granted to American specialists, will support the "quality" clause and also will ask a modification of the existing clause which specifies that 75 per cent of the salaries involved in any production shall be paid to British subjects. They assert that stars' salaries sometimes are adjusted, for the purpose of complying with this clause, to the detriment of technicians. They also wish to exclude, for the purpose of the 75 per cent calculation, routine studio workers who in any case must be British; their suggestion is, in principle, that 75 per cent of the money paid to technicians shall go to British subjects.

Turn Down Standard Contract

The Standard Contract draft, recently circulated by the CEA as a representation of a compromise between exhibitor and distributor ideas of the ideal contract, came up for consideration at the Council meeting of the association this week, but a motion that it be adopted was rejected by a large majority. The draft was originally severely criticized as a "distributors' contract." It certainly gave formal recognition to a number of trade practices to which there have been exhibitor objections, including a practically unlimited access by distributors to theatre box offices and the right to impose limited credits; whether exhibitors, by rejecting the Standard, will be able to prevent distributors imposing these conditions is hardly an open question.

State Exhibitor Groups Active

Organization activity was marked this week among theatre owner associations in the field, several gathering in annual spring sessions to discuss product and operating problems.

With 10 other candidates, E. L. Peasley of Stillwater, Minn., was elected president of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest at the concluding session Tuesday of the organization's two-day convention in Minneapolis.

Mr. Peasley was chosen as a compromise candidate. J. B. Clinton, retiring president, was eliminated as a candidate to succeed himself by the bylaws.

Bennie Berger of Duluth resigned as governor, and was succeeded by Mr. Clinton.

In Denver, A. P. Archer, president of Denver Theatre Managers, Inc., said his organization will vote on changing its name to Rocky Mountain Theatre Owners Association at the next meeting.

Allied of Western Iowa and Nebraska surprised showmen this week by announcing it would hold a meeting at the Loyal Hotel in Omaha. L. F. Wolcott, Eldora, Iowa, exhibitor, is listed as president of the revived group.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kentucky, at its annual meeting, elected Lee Moffit of Owensboro, president; Fred J. Dolle, Louisville, vice-president; B. E. Thompson, Louisville, secretary, and Sam Switow, Louisville, treasurer. The association went on record as opposed to the proposed state amusement tax of 10 per cent on admissions, and made preparations to fight the plan.

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey held its regular general membership meeting at the Hotel Lincoln in New York on Tuesday.

The annual convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association will be held August 2-4 at Jacksonville Beach, Fla., O. C. Lam, president, has announced. Officers will be elected for the coming year and annual reports will be submitted.

Stanley Robbins, manager of the Egyptian, Ogden, Utah, has been elected president of the Intermountain Theatre Association, succeeding E. C. Huish of Eureka, Utah.

Walter W. Vincent, executive of the Wilmer and Vincent circuit and board chairman of Republic Pictures, was scheduled as a speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, Inc., at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel in Philadelphia Friday.

President Lewen Pizor, who was a member of the trade practice conference in New York, will give a report on the proceedings.

Schenck, Kent to Europe

Sidney R. Kent, president, and Joseph M. Schenck, board chairman, of Twentieth Century-Fox, were scheduled to sail Thursday noon to attend the company's sales convention in Paris May 4. Later they will attend a similar meeting in London. They are expected to return in time for the national sales convention in Chicago May 30 to June 1.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Quick reference information on product started and completed and a panorama of the news of the week

Location Treks

Sending a company to northern Idaho to film logging scenes for "Come and Get It," Samuel Goldwyn has undertaken one of the most ambitious location treks in a season when all Hollywood seems to be filming scenes in far corners of the world in the interests of authenticity.

The Goldwyn unit, working in sub-zero weather, constantly battling blizzards and other elements, faced more than average hazards.

Considerable audience potentiality is built up by location units. Newspapers for miles around send men to watch film companies work. Word passes around when such pictures are released.

Other companies currently working on location include Selznick International's "Garden of Allah," now at Yuma, Ariz., using the same site that Twentieth Century-Fox utilized for "Under Two Flags." The "Ramona" company, also Twentieth Century-Fox, has found 5,700 open acres at Warner Hot Springs, Cal., on which to reconstruct the ranchos, Indian villages and missions of the early nineteenth century. Particularly important to the "Ramona" company is the fact that there is not a telephone, telegraph, or power line within 50 miles of the site on which the main ranch has been erected.

Most of the public has become too well posted on synthetic pictures and process shots. Realism is demanded, and producers have little choice other than to pack a company off to the wilderness to get it for them.

Studio Pace

Indicative of the pace that is to be picked up during the next few weeks as the drive to complete 1935-1936 production programs gets under way, nine pictures started in the past week. Three were finished. As most companies have completed a large percentage of current schedules, the decks are being cleared now for the busiest spring and summer picture making campaign that Hollywood has known in several years.

Paramount started two pictures. Tentatively titled, "Yours for the Asking" got under way, with Alexander Hall directing. George Raft and Dolores Costello are featured with Ida Lupino, Reginald Owen and Lynn Overman in the supporting cast. With work being done on location at Gallup, N. M., "The Texas Ranger" also started. Currently the cast includes Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker and Bennie Bartlett, with many more additions scheduled to be made when the company returns to the studio. King Vidor is directing.

As the new management swung into action, Universal put two pictures before the cameras. "It's a Small World," which features Joel McCrea, Joan Bennett, Elisha Cook, Jr., and Andy Clyde, is being directed by Alfred E. Green. The same night that "The Great Ziegfeld" opened in Hollywood, its star, William Powell, went to work in "My Man Godfrey." With Gregory LaCava directing, the current cast also lists Carole Lombard, Alice Brady, Gene Pallette and Gail Patrick.

Two pictures also started at Republic. In "The Lonely Trail" will be seen John Wayne, Ann Rutherford, Danny Meadows, Yakima Canutt, George Cheseboro, Lloyd Ingraham and Snowflake. Joseph King is the director. "Navy Born" will present William Gargan, Claire Dodd, George Irving, Georgia Cain, Addison Randall, Douglas Fowley, William Newell, Claudia Coleman, Myra Marsh, Hooper Atchley and Dorothy Tree. Nate Watt is directing.

"False Front" started at Invincible. The cast features Chick Chandler, Evalyn Knapp, Berton Churchill, Richard Carle and Patricia Farr. Phil Rosen is directing.

Twentieth Century-Fox started "The Mercy Killer," George Marshall directing. The cast includes Gloria Stuart, Robert Kent, J. Edward Bromberg, Sarah Haden, Gavin Moore, Henry Armetta, Ann Darcy and Taylor Holmes.

MGM put "The Three Wise Guys" on the stages. It will present Robert Young, Betty Furness, Lewis Stone, Bruce Cabot, Donald Meek, Thurston Hall, Herman Bing and Paul Harvey. George B. Seitz is directing.

Republic completed "The Singing Cowboy." The complete cast is Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Lois Wilde, Lon Chaney, Jr., Ann Gilles, Earl Hodgins, Harvey Clark, John Van Pelt, Earl Eby, Ken Cooper, Harrison Green, Wes Warner, Jack Rockwell, Tracy Layne, Snowflake, Oscar Gahan, Frankie Marvin, Jack Kirk, Audrey Davis, George Pearce and Charles McAvoy, Mack Wright directed.

"Half Angel" was finished by Twentieth Century-Fox. Frances Dee, Brian Donleavy, Charles Butterworth and Helen Westley are featured,

Last of the completed group, Warner's "Earthworm Tractor," stars Joe E. Brown, supported by June Travis, Guy Kibbee,

FROM READERS

HIS PATRONS FAVOR SINGLE FEATURES

To the Editor of the Herald:

The article in Motion Picture Herald (issue of September 11) anent single and double features is timely and interesting.

Recently we conducted a questionnaire wherein our patrons voted their preference for double or single features. The result of the poll was overwhelmingly in favor of single features.

We have observed that double features cause patrons to become tired before the second feature is halfway completed; that many patrons, after seeing one feature, do not stay to see the second one; that in practically all cases, either one feature is bad, or both bad; seldom are both good; that the second feature does not take the place of short subjects, inasmuch as there is still a demand for short reels.

Producers can help the trend back to single features considerably by using all their resources in making pictures that will stand alone, and by easing up on the production of pictures of "double feature" quality. That they are now fighting the evil with extended length features that warrant it is something for which they are to be congratulated.

When it is found that quality in entertainment is more important than quantity, duals will be on the way out. And more patrons will leave the theatres relaxed and refreshed instead of tired and restless.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind.

COURT ESTABLISHES CHANCE GAME STATUS

Lottery Exists When Public Must Purchase Ticket, New York Supreme Court Rules

Several hundreds of theatre owners in New York State using chance games as a box office stimulant have finally learned their legal status in the matter. The state supreme court this week found that a violation of the lottery laws definitely exists when the public participating must purchase a ticket as a condition of the game.

The policy continues to be the cause of much attention both in the courts and in exhibition elsewhere, activities in this connection having been reported from California, Louisiana, New England, North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The operation of chance games in theatres in New York state is legal, and not in violation of the state lottery laws, if the purchase of admission to the theatre is not a prerequisite to participation in the game, according to an interpretation in Albany this week of the decision of the court of appeals.

This was indicated despite the fact that the highest court in the state had upheld previous decisions of special sessions and the appellate division in Manhattan, finding the Winthrop theatre in Brooklyn guilty of operating a lottery. Special sessions decided against the theatre in the operation of Farmer Miller, a chance game on the basis of the fact that payment of admission was necessary before participation. This has since been changed, it was indicated, and free participation is the basis on which virtually all the chance games now in use in the state are operated.

First Case to Supreme Court

The lottery law of the state specifically states that where a "valuable consideration," under which head theatre admission falls, is charged for participation, the chance is a lottery. The court of appeals' reaffirmation of the appellate division decision therefore, was taken on technical grounds, but cleared the important point of court definition of a lottery as applied to chance games in theatres.

This was the first case on theatre chance games to reach the state's highest court. The paragraph in the court of appeals' decision, pointed out as explaining the reason the court technically reaffirmed the lower court verdict, but defined the legality of the games, read:

"Defendants offered evidence tending to show that possibility of participation in the chance by those who bought no ticket of admission to the theatre and in no way paid any valuable consideration for the opportunity to share in the chance, but the trial court rejected the credibility of such testimony. In view of this rejection our decision in People vs. Mail and Express Company. 231 N. Y. 586, has no application."

Newspaper Contest Cited

The decision cited referred to a prize contest for $15,000 conducted by the New York Evening Post on the basis of numbers published in the newspaper. It was decided, however, that since the rules of the contest specifically declared that it was not necessary to purchase a paper in order to participate in the contest, the chance was not in violation of the lottery laws. The same grounds, it was pointed out, apply in the case of theatre chance games.

A recommendation that crowds gathering as a result of Bank Night be restricted to the sidewalks of the theatre involved may be forthcoming in Sacramento as a result of an investigation started by the county grand jury. At the present time special details of police are necessary to handle crowds which overflow to the streets, a situation which in at least one case entirely closed the thoroughfare to traffic.

Chance games in New Orleans are facing a court test as a result of the alleged refusal to admit a colored boy holding the winning ticket on the ground that the colored balcony of the Fiorito was crowded. Judge William Seeber in the city court has set April 27 as the date for a hearing.

New England Bank Nights

The Bank Night situation in New England is tense on all fronts. The final battle to establish Bank Night's legality in Massachusetts is on the doorstep of the state supreme court where the hearing of attorney George S. Ryan's appeal from the conviction of James Wall of the Fellsway theatre in Medford is set for May 11. The game, which has received convictions on lottery charges all along the line on its two extant test cases, is banned at present in most Bay State spots. An effort to have the legislature rewrite the lottery laws to clarify Bank Night's position fell through also.

In Augusta, Me., Bank Night was opposed by the Methodists of the state at their annual convention. The organization plans a move against the premium scheme at the next session of the legislature.

A permanent injunction has been issued by United States District Judge E. Y. Webb in Newton, N. C., against the Imperial theatre, operated by G. G. Mitchell, which prevents him from using Jack Pot, Gold Mine, or any similar drawings on the grounds that it is an infringement on the Bank Night patent.

Arrests in Cincinnati

At the same time, in Cincinnati, Thomas A. Reilly, owner of the Rialto, downtown subsequent-run theatre, Nicholas Russo and Bert Leder, ushers, along with Jack Pendleton, promoter, were arrested for operating Sweepstakes, on warrants signed by police, who attended a performance and seized the prize money as evidence.

Albert Weinstein, attorney, appearing for the defendants, and himself associated with the management of the Strand, downtown independent house, contended that Sweepstakes, pronounced legal in other Ohio situations, is not a game of chance. The case has been continued.

In Pittsburgh, Art England, representative of Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., owner of Bank Night, revealed that damage suits charging infringements of the firm's copyright have been filed in the local federal district court against the Colonial theatre of Buckingham, W. Va., operated by Garland West, and the Drake theatre in Oil City, Pa., operated by Oil City Theatre Company. A similar action on file is aimed at M. Akselrad, owner of the Regent theatre in McKees Rocks, Pa.

Griffith Men to Meet

A conference of partners and managers of Griffith Amusement Company, Consolidated Theatres, Inc., and affiliated companies will be held in Oklahoma City May 5-7. The circuit controls 125 houses in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Change in Unions' Demands Waited

Demands of studio unions for wage increases and shorter working hours are expected to be revised in the conferences on a renewal of basic minimum agreements with the producers now under way in New York.

The meeting started last Thursday, and a decision on all points is not expected before early next week. Pat Casey, studio labor contact, in whose office the conference is in progress, said no information would be given out until the negotiations are concluded.

Labor is represented by George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators; Steve Newman, vice-president, IATSE; Daniel Tobin, president of the teamsters' union; Daniel Tracy, electricians; Joseph Weber, musicians.

The producers' committee consists of Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox, chairman; Nicholas M. Schenck, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; M. H. Aylesworth, RKO; E. W. Hammons, Educational; Harry Buckley, United Artists; Nate Springold, Columbia; Austin Keough, Paramount.

Operator union negotiations with Chicago theatres were postponed over the weekend when, because of the New York meeting, Mr. Browne was unable to attend.

Meanwhile, developments in the field came into prominence with a strike of IATSE operators at Saenger (Paramount) houses in the South. Operators in Shreveport walked out in a controversy over the number of booth personnel, and in New Orleans the men struck at four houses when contract negotiations failed.

Non-union men were substituted, and in New Orleans the circuit obtained a federal court order restraining city authorities from enforcing the ordinances requiring operators to be examined.

In Newark, N. J., Vice Chancellor Berry postponed dismissal of the receiver now handling the affairs of Local 244, IATSE, until officers are elected who are satisfactory to the receiver and the court. He ruled that the election must be held some time between May 1 and 15. The chancellor also deferred a hearing on charges that some theatre operators were violating union contracts by cutting wages and staffs.

The operators' union in Portland, Maine, won a decision against the Frederick E. Lieberman circuit when Justice Sidney Thaxter in supreme judicial court denied an injunction against picketing at Keith's by projectionists and stage hands. In Kansas City, Kan., however, the circuit court granted a permanent injunction to the Midway against picketing by operators.

A settlement was considered in sight in the strike declared four weeks ago by Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, against 92 New York music publishers. Meanwhile individual agreements have been effected with 33 publishers. Wage scales and working conditions for arrangers, copyers and proof readers of music are involved.

Brill Joins Rosener

Dave Brill, general sales manager of Principal Films, will resign, effective April 25th, to become associated with Herbert Rosener Enterprises. Mr. Rosener has numerous first-run theatres along the Pacific Coast and also distributes foreign films. Mr. Brill is to handle distribution in all territories except the Pacific Coast. He also will open several theatres in the East.

SELF-REGULATION POINTS STUDIED

term. It was plainly pointed out by Government attorneys that failure of the Supreme Court to hear the appeal until the fall is likely to delay the trial of the equity action in New York until after the decision of the high court.

Russell Hardy, chief of the Government legal staff in the case, argued the Government's motion before Judge Davis. In his presentation, Hardy argued that the appeal to the Supreme Court is an effort on the part of the defense to delay the New York action, indicating that the hearing of the appeal in the Supreme Court will delay the date on which the federal action would get underway.

Distributors File Answer

Meanwhile, in New York, answers were filed in United States District Court, this week, by the three distributor defendants, and a bill of particulars was asked of the Government to clarify many of the allegations contained in its complaint.

A hearing on the defense petition for a bill of particulars was set for federal court. The Government's attorneys are expected to oppose the petition and pending a court decision on whether or not it should be granted it is doubtful whether the Government will ask the court to set a trial date for the suit itself. This is seen as delaying the actual setting of a trial date by a few days, at least.

The answers filed for the defendants make general denials of all the Government's allegations except for certain factual declarations. Denied in toto are allegations that film franchises with the Missouri, New Grand Central and Ambassador, in St. Louis, were canceled except for breaches of contract by Skouras Super Theatres Corp., with which they were made; that intimidation or coercion was employed in an effort to have the leases transferred to Warners; that lessees or prospective lessees were disparaged; that a conspiracy to refuse the houses a film supply existed, or that threats were made of refusals to sell to the lessees' houses elsewhere.

The question of res adjudicata is set up in the answers as a separate defense under the contention that the allegations in the Government's complaint have already been litigated and determined in favor of the defendants through the dismissal of the criminal action. The answers ask dismissal of the suit in New York on that ground.

Industry Leaders Meet to Adjust Trade Practices

Moving to effect self-regulation within the industry and machinery for adjusting the so-called unfair trade practices, in order to develop harmonious relations between exhibitors and distributors, seven of the large distributors—not including Warner—and six leaders of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, opened negotiations in New York last week with the view of making necessary changes in the present system of selling—contractually and otherwise. (Candid camera pictures of conferees on following page.)

The gathering was in the nature of a round-table discussion, shorn of all formalities, held Thursday afternoon, in the Rose Room of the Cinema Club adjoining the Hotel Algonquin. There, Ed Kuykendall, president, Charles W. Williams, Omaha; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis; Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; Jack Miller, Chicago and Oscar C. Lam, Georgia, representing the MPTOA, met with William F. Rodgers, representing MGM; Neil F. Agnew, Paramount; James R. Grainger, Universal; Paul N. Lazarus, United Artists; Jules Levy, RKO; John D. Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Abe Montague, Columbia.

Next Meeting in Fortnight

The conference developed out of an invitation extended by the MPTOA to all of the distributors to discuss ways and means of effecting self-regulation and changes in distribution policies that would alleviate the burdens that the MPTOA claims are now handicapping exhibitors. The MPTOA presented a 10-point program, embracing (1) an unconditional and reasonable rejection privilege; (2) establishment of local conciliation boards for adjusting contract and other disputes; (3) adjusting unreasonable clearance; (4) preventing overbuying of pictures by an exhibitor competitor; (5) abolition of cut-rate competition, double bills, premiums and such; (6) controlling unfair non-theatrical exhibitions; (7) enactment of a new standard form of contract, reduced to essentials; (8) elimination of the score charge; (9) discontinuance of arbitrary designation of playdates; and, (10) discontinuance of the practice of forcing excess and unwanted short subjects with features.

Both sides listened to suggestions for accomplishing the desired results, and then rested, returning to their respective MPTOA and distributor corporate relations to study the plan. In another two weeks, or thereabouts, they will again meet and exchange attitudes on the program, then splitting the main body into subcommittees to start work on specific problems covered in the plan.

When the distributors met with the exhibitors, they had not previously had sufficient information pertaining to the program for purposes of analyzation to determine definite corporate policy on the matters in time for the conference. The interim period for study will determine how much ground the distributors will give to the exhibitors, and when.

Regardless, distributors were believed willing to offer exhibitors an unrestricted cancellation privilege up to 10 per cent. Cancellations and the machinery for local boards were taken up first, and following adjournment it appeared that the tenor of the distributor attitude at the outset was that concessions are due the exhibitors, although the distributors' unofficial spokesmen explained that much of the proposed program requires careful consideration and probably lengthy negotiation. Both sides, however, appeared optimistic over eventual results.

The exhibitors' committee indicated it was prepared to battle for an unrestricted 20 per cent cancellation and distributors appeared determined to oppose anything more than a 10 per cent elimination under the unrestricted conditions.

When the group resumes it is expected to be augmented by Frank C. Walker, Morgan Walsh, of San Francisco, and L. C. Griffith, of Oklahoma City, for the exhibitors. Following the next session, it is expected that the MPTOA will discuss the problems at issue with the individual companies.

A uniform distributor stand on the matters is not expected, in view of the differences now existing in policies of the various companies.

CANADIAN CLUBS NOW COOPERATING

A long step from the wholesale denunciations of motion pictures a few seasons back in Canada and the arguments whether films in general were suitable recreation for minors was the support of recommended lists voiced this week by Mrs. R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa, in her annual report as president of the Ontario Federation of Home and School Clubs. Mrs. McLaughlin, who is the wife of the Canadian vice-president of General Motors, said that "all over the Province our associations are realizing more and more the dangers of bad pictures."

From the full report exhibitors inferred that theatremen now would find the local executives of such organizations in a cooperative mood, willing to assist in the promotion of acceptable films and readily conceding that pictures which justified their endorsation now were coming along regularly.

Canadian school teachers questioned at random were practically unanimous in expression of interest in specific advance information on films for their own districts.

Independents Seek Clearance Session

At a meeting this week of the Independent Theatre Owners, Inc., of eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware, in Philadelphia, a resolution was unanimously adopted that this organization call upon all major distributors in the territory to appoint representations to meet with the representatives of the organization, other exhibitor groups and affiliated circuits, at a joint conference to lay the foundation for the adoption of a uniform and fair clearance and zoning schedule for the territory.

Another resolution was adopted appointing a delegate to represent the organization at the trade practice conferences in New York, when and if independent exhibitor groups are invited by the MPTOA to participate. President Charles Segall was empowered to represent the Philadelphia ITO.

New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association is expected shortly to file its threatened federal anti-trust suit against the distributors for allegedly indulging in unfair trade practices, especially the forcing of shorts with feature sales. The action is looked for within ten days.

Western Iowa and Nebraska Allied States Association and the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners were but two of many state exhibitor groups which this week began a study of their relations to the trade practice problems now confronting distributors.

Pathe to Release 30 Films Through Grand National

Pathe's sponsored producing and distributing organization, definitely named Grand National Films, Inc., contemplates national distribution of approximately 30 pictures in 1936-37, it was announced over the weekend by Edward L. Alperson, president-designate of the new company.

While producing and distribution plans are in the making, arrangements have been completed for the management and financing of Grand National, said Frank F. Kolbe, president of Pathe Film Corporation.

Mr. Alperson, long associated with the Skouras Brothers, will resign as chief film buyer for National Theatres, Skouras-operated Twentieth Century-Fox affiliate, to assume the presidency and general management of the company as of May 1, the Kolbe statement said.

Whether Harry Thomas, president of First Division, which is being absorbed by Grand National, will continue with the new company, has not been announced. It is understood that negotiations are underway for settlement of his five-year contract, which has three years to run.

The board of directors will consist of Mr. Alperson, Mr. Kolbe, Edwin Silverman, president of Essaness Theatres, Chicago; Robert W. Atkins, partner of Abbott, Proctor and Paine, large financial house; Charles L. Stillman, treasurer of Time, Inc.; James A. Davidson, now Mr. Alperson's assistant in National Theatres, and Carl Leserman, Warner sales executive, who will head sales for the new company.

"A large portion of Pathe's interest in Grand National will be distributed to the stockholders of Pathe Film Corporation as a dividend and it is expected that the stock will be listed on the New York Curb Exchange," Mr. Kolbe's statement said.

"Grand National Films, Inc., will engage in the business of producing and distributing motion pictures, including, for the remainder of the season, pictures handled by First Division Exchanges, Inc., a subsidiary of Pathe Film Corporation. The State theatre in Denver, Colo., formerly operated by Pathe, will also come under the management of the new company.

"The formation of Grand National Films, Inc., marks the first entry, for a number of years, of a national producing and distributing company into the motion picture business, and meets the ever-increasing product demand of the exhibition field."

It is contemplated that the company will finance independent producers, with whom discussions are underway.

The name of the company was changed from Premier Productions, Inc., with the secretary of state at Dover, Del., where the company was incorporated earlier this month to engage in all branches of motion picture business, listing a capital of $1,000,000. Incorporators were Raymond J. Gorman, Harry C. Hand and Charles N. Caldwell, Jr., all of New York City.

Van Beuren Loses Decision

An arbitrator's decision, holding a $240,000 obligation of the Van Beuren Company to Pathe to be due and payable, was handed down Wednesday by Theodore Kindel.

National Legion of Decency Classifies 28 New Pictures

Of 28 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency listing for the last two weeks, 15 were approved for general patronage, 10 were termed unobjectionable for adults and three were called objectionable in part. The new pictures and their classifications follow:

Unobjectionable for General Patronage—"Alles Weg'n Dem Hund," "Cloitrees de Femmes," "Comin' 'Round the Mountain," "Desert Phantom," "Donogoo Tonka," "Feud of the West," "Lawless Border," "Liebe und Trompetkenlang," "Millionaire Kid," "Panic on the Air," "Re Burlone," "Ridin' On," "The Royal Waltz," "Till We Meet Again," "Too Much Beef."

Unobjectionable for Adults—"Brilliant Marriage," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Karneval und Liebe," "La Figlia Ritrovata," "Moonlight Murder," "The Moon's Our Home," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Small Town Girl," "Schoen istes verliebt zu sein," "Witness Chair." Class B, Objectionable in Part—"Girl From Mandalay," "Lightning Jim Carson," "Things to Come."

John Flinn Made Pickford-Lasky's General Manager

John C. Flinn, veteran motion picture executive, have been appointed general manager of Pickford-Lasky Productions, it has been announced by Mary Pickford and Jesse L. Lasky.

Mr. Flinn, with headquarters in New York, will make several trips a year to Hollywood for conferences with Miss Pickforl and Mr. Lasky.

Emil Jenson, formerly associated with Inspiration Pictures under Charles B. Duell, will be Mr. Flinn's permanent contact in the East. Announcements of further additions to the executive staff will be made shortly after Mr. Flinn takes charge. His appointment is the first in an expansion campaign which is to be launched simultaneously with the release of the company's initial production, "One Rainy Afternoon," starring Francis Lederer and Ida Lupino.

Mr. Flinn started his career in 1914 as director of advertising and publicity for the original Jesse L. Lasky Producing Company. He then joined Famous Players-Lasky in a similar capacity, and publicized some of the foremost films, including "The Covered Wagon," "The Ten Commandments" and "The Miracle Man."

He subsequently joined Cecil B. DeMille as vice-president and general manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation. When that company merged with Pathe, he became vice-president of the combined organizations. Mr. Flinn was head of the Motion Picture Code Authority under the NRA. During the past year he acted as assistant to Sid Silverman, Variety's editor and publisher.

New Drive Starts

Fox Intermountain Theatres in Denver has started its second quarterly drive. The group now includes 62 theatres.

Schenck Denies Hart's Charges of Conspiracy

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, described the $500,000 breach of contract and conspiracy suit brought by William S. Hart against United Artists as "extremely unfair and unjust," when testifying this week in the trial underway before Justice Philip J. McCook and a jury in the New York supreme court.

As the first witness for the defense, Mr. Schenck denied that in 1925 when he was chairman of the board of United Artists he conspired to force out Mr. Hart as a producer.

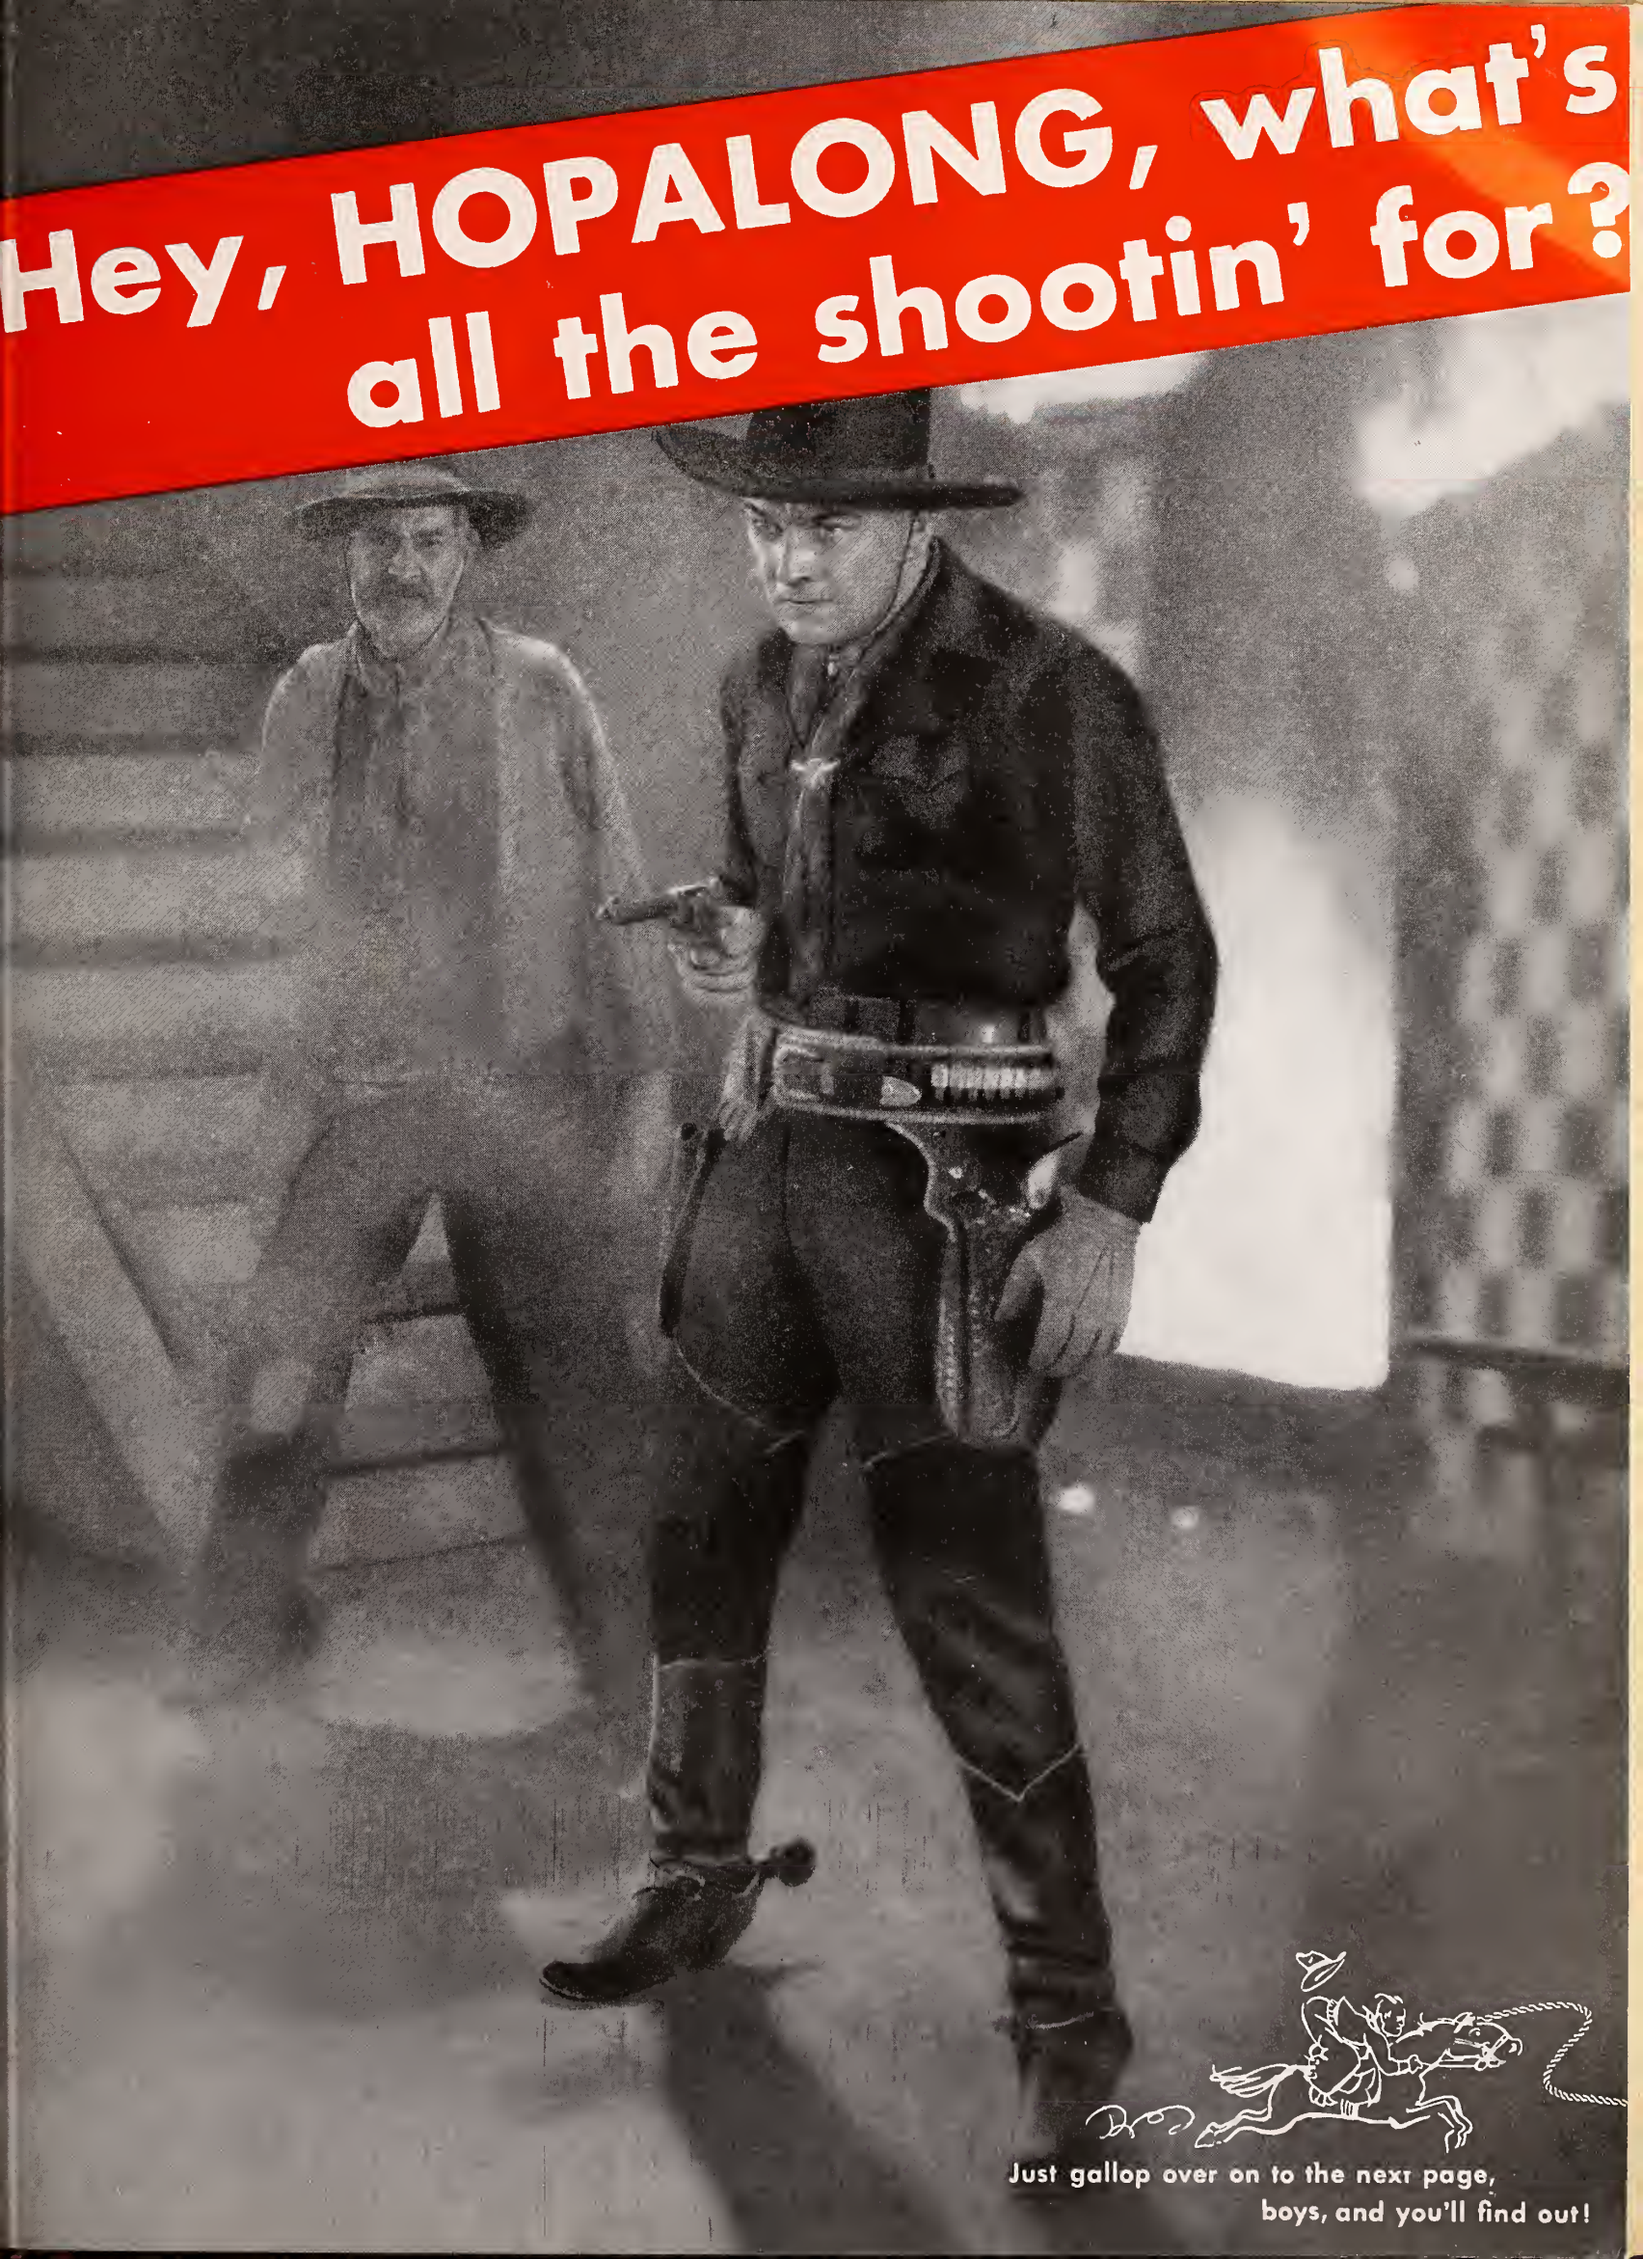
Answering Mr. Hart's charge of conspiracy in connection with the distribution and exploitation of "Tumbleweeds," Mr. Schenck said: "We used more energy to exploit Mr. Hart's picture than for any other, because we knew it needed it. We knew he had gone overboard on the production cost and spent more than he intended."

Mr. Schenck related that exhibitors showed sales resistance to the film immediately after its opening at the Strand in New York and that he had to issue an order to sell it to as many accounts as possible for whatever rental they would pay. This was done, he said, so that United Artists could make up on volume what it was unable to obtain in high rentals from the first-runs.

G. H. Frost, an accountant from Los Angeles, presented records to support Mr. Hart's claim that United Artists had charged him for 165 more prints than were ordered on "Tumbleweeds," which was the western star's last venture as a producer and in which he claims to have lost $300,000, virtually his life's savings.

Testimony by William Hines, formerly a sales official for United Artists, was that the Saenger circuit in New Orleans and other exhibitors were compelled to take "Tumbleweeds" in a block sale with "Wild Justice," a dog picture. Frederick Remley, counsel for Hart, pointed out that "Wild Justice" cost $20,000 and the Hart picture $302,000.

Mr. Hines testified that United Artists set a sales quota of $800,000 on the picture, a figure twice as high as that set for his earlier films, "to build Mr. Hart up."



Ohio March Cuts Light

Ohio censors ordered 25 eliminations in 563 reels in March. For the week ending March 26 there was but one elimination in 137 reels. The March record compares with 47 eliminations ordered in 465 reels reviewed in February. For the first three months of this year 1,639 reels were reviewed, and 98 eliminations made.

New NBC Outlets Signed

The National Broadcasting Company has added three additional outlets to its network with the signing of agreements whereby station WNAC in Boston becomes part of the company's red network in affiliation with stations WEAN in Providence and WICC in Bridgeport.

WILL ROGERS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL OPEN TO ALL BRANCHES OF INDUSTRY

Tribute to Memory of Star Will Be Dedicated with Observance in All Theatres in the Week Starting May 22nd

by MARK A. LUESCHER

Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Campaign Committee

It is fitting that the motion picture industry throughout the nation should set aside a week as a tribute to the happy memory of Will Rogers.

It is fitting also that the industry should take the initiative in the recreation of a suitable and useful memorial to perpetuate his memory. This will take definite form when the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital will be dedicated with a national celebration observed in all motion picture theatres from coast-to-coast during the week starting Friday, May 22nd, and ending Thursday, May 28th.

Irvin Cobb recently voiced the sentiment of Will's best friends and closest associates when he wrote Major L. E. Thompson, chairman of the campaign committee:

"All the world knew Will Rogers as a friend and loved him as a friend, but some of us were privileged during those latter, fruitful, happy, laughing years of his to have more intimate contact with him than the rest did; and we know how much of self sacrifice, talent, energy and cash he gave to aiding the needy and the poor and the unfortunate of his profession. It is a fine tribute, with the combined help of the motion picture industry, to dedicate this memorial in his name and to his memory for the alleviation of the ailing and broken members of his trade—the actors of screen and stage. Well—we are sure that is the sort of thing Will would have liked. We are sure that's the sort of thing he does like."

Many others have expressed the opinion that the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital will provide a useful and a most desirable reminder for years to come of the great humorist-philosopher. It was built at a cost of over a million dollars, and opened June 28, 1930, as the NVA Sanatorium and Lodge. Since its opening there have been 231 tubercular patients admitted, of whom 177 were discharged. Patients will now be accepted from every branch of the profession and every station, including actors, stage carpenters, stage hands and stage electricians, operators and employees.

This great retreat, which is turned over to the Will Rogers Memorial Commission by the motion picture industry, is one of the most complete sanatoriums in the United States. Located at Saranac Lake in the foothills of the Adirondacks, the hospital is in the center of forty-eight acres of woodland.

The medical staff will consist of one of the most efficient obtainable, Dr. Karl Fischel, medical superintendent in charge of all medical and administration affairs, being ably assisted by Dr. George Wilson, medical director, and Dr. Paul Weil, staff physician. The X-ray department, which includes diathermy and lamp treatments, is supervised by R. F. Plank, an able technician in this line of work.

Dr. Fischel, superintendent of the institution, is a staunch believer in occupational therapy in order to prepare patients who are to be discharged for another line of work than that which they have been accustomed to, and with that end in view, when ever possible and advisable he will allow several patients to attend vocational training schools in the village of Saranac Lake, better to fit them for a new life which lies ahead of them upon their discharge from the Memorial Hospital.

These are the men who will officiate in the various zones:

ALBANY, Phillip Fox, of Columbia.
ATLANTA, John Ezell, of Universal.
BOSTON, Tom Spry, of Warners.
BUFFALO, Sid Sampson, of Twentieth Century-Fox.
CHARLOTTE, Ira Furman, of M-G-M.
CHICAGO, Clyde Eckhardt, of Twentieth Century-Fox.
CINCINNATI, Joe Oulahan, of Paramount.

Here is a reproduction of one of the one-sheets for permanent display in the lobbies of theatres subscribing to membership in the Will Rogers' Memorial Hospital Fund. The $500,000 industrywide campaign by a committee headed by Major L. E. Thompson has been timed for theatres for the week of May 22 to 28 to coincide with the dedication of the hospital at Saranac Lake, N. Y., as a retreat for the ill and needy of the stage and the screen.

ITINERANT EXHIBITOR PROBLEM IN CANADA

Protest Not Over Traveling Shows for Theatreless Areas But Over the "Floater"

by J. A. COWAN
in Toronto

Floaters are becoming a real problem to the film industry in western Canada. A variety of vest-pocket edition of the road-show picture, the itinerant exhibitor has been increasing rapidly in the wheat-belt territory. There are now reported to be more than 200 cases of such touring film shows and action is being taken by the Motion Picture Exhibitors and Distributors of Canada to clarify the situation. The subject was thoroughly discussed at the recent annual meeting in Toronto.

As a rule, both the city and the small-town exhibitors in the Canadian west expect to draw custom from a considerable surrounding territory. While such business is intermittent it mounts to considerable in a year and in these days of close figuring may quite easily make the difference between red and black in the books. Cases of small-town western exhibitors drawing patronage from as much as 60 to 90 miles are the rule.

While the meandering presentation may not actually run as opposition to an established house in the same town, it will cut into the business by playing in the little spots throughout the district. The regular exhibitor with a substantial investment in land, building and equipment, paying his full quota of taxes and, naturally, paying higher rentals for film, is at a disadvantage and feels that he is a victim of cut-rate competition.

Most of these touring one-nighters, who play in community halls, sometimes schools but usually in public buildings of one sort or another, have also become a prime headache for the distributor, finding it practically impossible to keep track of showings. The floater has his entire outfit in a small truck and often drives off with no set schedule at all, simply playing still dates wherever he can get in. Some of the itinerants follow regular routes but plenty of them flit about wherever they think they can pick up a few dollars. So the distributor complains not only about collection of his rentals but also as to the whereabouts of his films.

One side of the problem which concerns the Canadian association of exhibitors and distributors is the safety factor. An outbreak of fire in one of these small halls, most of which are of frame construction, could be a serious blow to the whole business. Efforts are being made, in cooperation with provincial and local authorities, for the installation of fireproof booths in the halls which are on the regular routes of the traveling exhibitor.

The association also distinguishes clearly between different types of touring film shows. Numbers of them cover regular routes and show in isolated spots where the residents are far out of the zones of any regular theatres. These exhibitors have a regular place in the industry throughout the scattered sections of the west. But it is the "hobo exhibitor" who is causing the trouble. He simply wanders.

There is already legislation on the books in most Canadian provinces covering the itinerant. Ontario, in effect, bars him altogether and no such license ever has been granted. An application for one was made two years ago and rejected. This applies to 35 mm. film, of course. Recently, there have been occasional attempts to roadshow theatrical subjects on 16 mm. Quebec does issue licenses, including tent show permits, but protects the established theatre by banning such shows in places of more than 1,000 population. The three midwestern provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, all make provision for the licensing of itinerants and the law provides little protection from them for the regular exhibitor in these areas. British Columbia also licenses touring film shows but regulation is strict, halls must be approved and the established house is protected. In the maritimes, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the law is not specific but apparently permits the operation of such traveling units, though New Brunswick does forbid exhibition in any town where there is a theatre in operation.

Denver Circuits Expand

Two Denver theatre circuits have added additional theatres to their lists. The Gibraltar Enterprises will take over the Princess theatre at Douglas, Wyo., May 1, from J. S. Ward, and C. U. Yaeger is adding the Empress theatre, Salida, Colo., to his chain. Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Kelley formerly operated the Empress.

New Copyright Bill To Replace Duffy's

With little likelihood apparent that any of the copyright measures proposed will be enacted this session, the House patents committee in Washington this week faced the difficult task of writing a bill which will get the legislation through the House following conclusion of two months of hearings.

At its initial executive session Monday, the committee failed to achieve more than a vote to authorize Chairman William I. Sirovich to appoint a subcommittee to undertaking the writing of the bill. That group will be headed by Representative Lanham of Texas, with Representatives Deen of Georgia, O'Malley of Wisconsin, Kramer of California, Daly of Pennsylvania, Perkins of New Jersey, McLeod of Michigan, Barry of New York and Hartley and Risk of Rhode Island.

Whether Copyright legislation will be enacted this session now depends upon two major factors: whether the committee will be able to agree on a bill and, if a bill is prepared, whether Congressional leaders will permit it to be taken up. Grave doubts exist on both points.

The committee is sharply divided into two camps, for and against the music industry as represented by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, with a third group, which may hold the balance of power, believing that the Society is all right as an organization but misguided in its efforts to enforce compliance with its royalty demands.

The pro-ASCAP faction is led by Chairman Sirovich, himself a playwright. The opposition has been most pronounced on the part of Representative O'Malley, who has had considerable support.

The discord is chiefly over the clause in the Duffy bill eliminating the $250 statutory damage award for infringements and the provision for entry of the United States in the International Copyright Union through adherence with the Berne convention.

If the committee is to obtain action on the legislation this session it will be necessary for it to work fast. To bring about adjournment by June 1, it will be necessary to side-track all controversial legislation not on the President's "must" list.

FILMS' SELF-CENSORING STUMPS ELMER RICE

Want to Prevent Industry from Refusing to Screen Certain Stories, Says Author

The motion picture industry's system of self-censorship is functioning so effectively "we don't know how to lick it," declared Elmer Rice, playwright, as spokesman for anti-censorship groups at the sixteenth annual dinner of the American Civil Liberties Union at the Town Hall Club in New York Monday night.

Mr. Rice's protest against what he termed "the menace of self-censorship" was made in the course of a report on "freedom from censorship of radio, movies, mails and the stage," given as part of a discussion of "present-day attacks on American liberties." Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild, also was scheduled as a speaker on the subject, but did not attend.

The playwright told 300 members of the League, including lawyers, preachers, college professors, authors, labor movement leaders and just plain liberals and exponents of protest that "the greatest menace against freedom of expression in the theatre is an unofficial censorship imposed on the motion picture industry by the industry itself which prevents the production of films protesting militarism and fascism." Against this, he held, the problem of censorship of obscenity is a comparatively minor matter.

Cites Three Stories

As an example of "the menace," Mr. Rice cited "three stories which have been suppressed for films by the Hays organization." These he listed as "It Can't Happen Here," the Sinclair Lewis novel; Humphrey Cobb's "Paths of Glory" and his own "Judgment Day."

"We don't want to prevent the industry from making any picture, but we want to prevent it from not making pictures which have political or social implications," he said.

"We find the same problem in radio, which has prevented freedom of the air in some instances to speakers on political topics.

"These are the chief menaces to freedom from censorship, and we haven't been able to find a way to combat it."

Privately, Mr. Rice said following the meeting that his play, which was produced on Broadway in 1934, was not "banned outright but three motion picture companies which were considering it dropped it when they heard it could not be made as a picture."

Points to French Protest

During the New York run of "Paths of Glory," which Sidney Howard dramatized, it was reported that Paramount, Universal and RKO were interested in it, but purchase plans were withdrawn following a strong protest by the French government which held that the play cast aspersions on its wartime military machine.

With regard to official censorship, the situation is unchanged, Mr. Rice reported, explaining there has been no increase in the number of state censor boards. The American Civil Liberties Union, he said, "has not succeeded in repealing any censor laws but has succeeded in arresting censorship in a number of states."

In the field of the legitimate theatre, the Union has been cooperating with theatre men and producers in court fights to defeat bans on plays in Chicago and Boston, Mr. Rice went on, and a supreme court test is planned "of the arbitrary power of Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago to ban any play he doesn't happen to like," which authority has been upheld by the circuit court of appeals.

In its continuing campaign, the Union, through its affiliate, the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, has among its objectives the opposition to federal censorship of motion pictures and abolition of the censor boards in six states, "leaving sole control of movies to public opinion, and, in extreme cases, criminal prosecution."

RCA Sets Redemption Date on Preferred Stock

Radio Corporation of America has set July 1 as the redemption date for all its outstanding Class A preferred stock at 110 and accrued dividends to that time, equivalent to $55.87½ per share. The full redemption price, $27,689,000 has been deposited with the Bankers Trust Company in New York and provisions have been made restricting transfers of the stock on the company's books to June 30.

Under a currently effective recapitalization agreement recently approved by stockholders, certificates for the new first preferred stock and for common stock exchangeable for Class B preferred will be available for issuance about April 15. Deposit receipts will be issued for all B stock deposited under the plan until April 15 and time for deposits has been extended to May 1.

RCA also has applied to list securities on the New York Stock Exchange for 920,277 shares of $3.50 dividend bearing convertible first preferred stock and 5,368,279 additional shares of common stock. The new first preferred will be issued under the terms of recapitalization. The additional common is a provision for possible conversion of preferred into common.

ACTOR UNITS PROTEST WPA TRANSFER PLAN

Actors' Equity Association and other organizations this week protested the reported plan of the Government to transfer control of the WPA, including the theatre projects, to the states on July 1, when appropriations expire.

Seeing nothing but "the direst confusion and suffering" resulting from the move, Frank Gillmore, Equity president, declared that "not more than a half dozen states have sufficient concentration of theatre workers to make it probable that they would maintain their own theatre projects."

A similar remonstrance was registered with federal officials and Congress by the American Federation of Actors.

The move is possible but not probable, declared project officials, explaining that a final decision awaits Congressional action on appropriations.

Roxy Shows a Profit; Fee Allowed Counsel

The Roxy Theatre Corporation, which went into receivership four years ago, is now earning a considerable operating profit, according to Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey in New York, who late last week granted an allowance of $62,000 to Proskauer, Rose and Paskus, attorneys for Howard S. Cullman, receiver. The attorneys had asked for $75,000. He directed that $20,000 be paid "at an early date," the balance to await the reorganization proceedings.

Real estate taxes, plus penalties, aggregating more than $460,000 have been paid out of earnings up to March 24, this year, Judge Caffey said, while receipts have run to nearly $2,500,000. "The outlook now is that there can be a reorganization, from which there will be a substantial yield on securities," the court declared.

563 New Zealand Theatres Open

The annual report of the New Zealand Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association for the year 1935 states that a total of 563 theatres were in operation on a commercial basis, as compared to 498 houses the year before, according to a report received in Washington from Vice-Consul George Bliss Lane from Wellington.

WNAC Joins National

Radio station WNAC, Boston's oldest broadcasting unit, has joined the network of the National Broadcasting Company and will become part of the Red Network as soon as current commitments are worked out.

AMERICAN PRODUCT MAINTAINS LEAD IN AUSTRIA DESPITE KONTINGENT LAW

Ministry Now Demands That Superimposing of Titles Be Done in Austria or $680 Fee Be Paid per Feature

by DR. ADOLF LICHTENHAUSER in Vienna

American product importation into Austria this season is expected not only to maintain the lead it established last year, narrow as it was over Germany's, but to increase its total to 144 pictures from eight companies. Independent films are not released at present.

There were 65 American features imported into Austria in 1932; 90 in 1933, and 110 in 1934. For the first time since the coming of sound, in 1935 America reached first place with 126 films (Germany had 116, England 13, Czechoslovakia 11, France 6, and Austria's own production total was 27). It should be added that on the average an Austrian or German film is released in four or five prints, while there are only one or two prints of an American film. The receipts of the distributors for 1935 are estimated at 14,000,000 schillings ($2,640,000), of which a third to a fourth may be the American share.

By companies, in the current season American features distributed presumably will finally reach these figures: MGM, 30; Fox, 30; Warner-First National, 25; Paramount, 16; United Artists, 13; RKO, 12; Universal, 10; Columbia (by various distributors), 8—all told, 144 films.

Austria is a little country with 6,600,000 inhabitants. It has only one great city, Vienna, in which, however, are living 1,850,000 persons, or almost 30 per cent of the whole Austrian population. Larger provincial towns are Graz (152,000), Linz (120,000), and Innsbruck (60,000). There are half a dozen towns with 30,000 to 40,000 inhabitants. The others consist of tiny industrial or rural towns and villages.

775 Sound Theatres

There are in Austria 775 sound theatres. Of the 182 Vienna theatres, 161 give daily performances; of the 593 provincial theatres not more than 59 give daily shows, and 275 show only once a week.

On the whole the Austrian and German pictures meet most fully the emotional demands of the Austrian public. This public of course includes various shades of opinion, and the possibilities of the American film vary in consequence. Its main field is Vienna, or, more properly speaking, the inner districts of Vienna, and to a certain degree also the larger towns, whereas the small town and rural population is less accessible to it.

The suburban and provincial audiences in general do not like pictures in foreign languages. Dubbed versions in German, however, are produced of only such American films as are exhibited in Germany, for the dubbing cost would not be justified, from a rental standpoint, for the German-speaking country is outside Germany alone. The American imports into Germany having become very small in comparison with other years, there will be only 24 dubbed versions among the 144 American pictures being shown this season in Austria. With these dubbed versions, under favorable circumstances, considerable business can be done in provincial towns where original versions can make their way only if they have great stars or strong action with little dialogue. There are several hundred of small places with only one theatre in each which can meet requirements from the 150 Austrian and German films released annually. In these cases even dubbed versions can not be placed easily, and only at cut prices.

Vienna Prefers Original Film

It is different in Vienna. In the first-run theatres nearly all those films of which a dubbed version is available are screened also in their originals. The educated and big city public prefers to see the original version, even if it cannot always follow the English dialogue. It considers the dubbed versions to be of inferior artistic quality, nor does it like the often strongly marked North-German dialogue of these Berlin dubbings. This part of the Viennese public may be estimated at from 40,000 to 50,000 persons.

There are in Vienna seven first-run theatres, seating from 200 to 650, which exclusively show foreign talking films, with a run usually of one or two weeks. In the outer districts of Vienna dubbed versions are preferred. An American film presented in Austria only in the original version draws about 90 per cent of its receipts from Vienna. Should a dubbed version be available, Vienna's part is reduced to 40 to 50 per cent.

The advance of the American film is due partly to the questionable quality of the average German film of today. The boycott of German films by a part of Vienna's Jewish population may also help the American film.

Operating Expenses High

In view of the small market, the operating expenses are very high. The contingent fees, to which Austrian production owes its life, play a large role in costs to foreign companies. For short product and newsreels this fee amounts to $23 up to 350 meters, and $46 up to 700 meters. For a feature film in German, that is, for a dubbed version of an American film, the fee is $680 (3,600 schillings). In the case of foreign talking films with superimposed captions this fee may be reduced to $226, when released in one copy and to $340 for two copies.

Up to the present this reduction always has been granted, but now the Austrian Ministry of Commerce demands that the printing of the superimposed captions be done in Austria or the full contingent fee (3,600 schillings instead of 1,200 or 1,800) should be paid. This demand will affect several American companies which get titled copies from their headquarters abroad. If they have their copies titled in Austria, each copy will cost $115 to $150 more. The consequence may possibly be that the firms in question will not further import the less profitable films. It is assumed that an arrangement with the Ministry of Commerce will be reached by which the American companies undertake to have a certain part of their films titled in Vienna. In any case, this will lead to a further handicap on the American film business.

Restrictions Lightened

A tripartite agreement, effected in April this year, with Germany and Czechoslovakia, lightens the restrictions on imports and exports among those countries. Fourteen Austrian films are admitted to Germany without taxation or kontingent limitations and money exchange problems are to be clarified by bank negotiations as they arise. All German product is admitted by Austria. Governmental control of rentals is dropped between Austria and Czechoslovakia, and here again friendly negotiations are to settle money exchange. German films are exempted from the Austrian kontingent with the exception of a few obviously national-socialist propaganda films. For about a year, as a result of the Franco-Austrian trade treaty, French films also can be imported free of kontingent. About 80 per cent of the kontingent cost to foreign production falls upon the shoulders of the American film. The kontingent not only makes the individual film more expensive to handle, but prevents the showing of such films as are likely to bring small profit. Therefore, many outstanding American films never come to Austria, which is regrettable also from the cultural standpoint. Should it be possible to arrange that foreign language films presented in only one copy are excepted from the kontingent, many of those pictures assuredly could be shown.

Duties are moderate, $15 to $23 for a feature film copy. Copies can be kept in Austria duty-free for six weeks, provided they are not screened publicly.

The general expenses for the release of an American picture in Austria are estimated at $1,320, when shown in one copy, $1,700 for two copies, and $2,450 for three copies. If the picture is not released by the branch or agency of the producing firm, an additional license fee must be paid. The maximum receipts of the American distributing firms may amount up to $9,000 to $10,000 with an original version, up to $20,000 on a dubbed version, and even up to $40,000 in the case of Garbo pictures, which always are dubbed. Of course, there are films which barely cover expenses, or even fall below them.

The proposed joint official representation of the American companies in Vienna may be of great service to them.

CZECHS AND AUSTRIANS IN DEAL WITH GERMANY

Three-Way Agreement on Interchange of Product; Germans Plan to Make 140 Films

by J. K. RUTENBERG
in Berlin

Discussions of film imports and exports between Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia have led to a three-sided international agreement. In addition, a bilateral agreement will be signed between the German State Film Chamber and the Austrian Film Conference by which experiences on economic and technical questions will be exchanged and by which a preliminary agreement between the two industries in the case of international film discussions will be established.

The Austrian and German industries thus have been linked by an inside agreement. In a special convention Austro-German film interchanges from July, 1936, to July, 1939, have been arranged along the following lines:

The number of films to be brought from Austria into Germany without taxation or contingent provisions has been fixed at 14 a year. Importation of a greater number of films is subject to special conventions. The unlimited number of films to be sent from Germany into Austria is normally subject to the Austrian Cinematograph Act. For the period to July, 1936, an additional export of Austrian films to Germany will be agreed upon.

Export of currencies will be settled by a special agreement between the Austrian National Bank and the German Reichsbank.

Discussions have been held between Austria and Czechoslovakia which have resulted in an agreement to put Austro-Czech film exchange on a broader basis. No state influence will be exercised upon rentals. The question of money export likewise will be settled by friendly negotiations which will be incorporated in the Austro-Czechoslovakian exchange system.

German production in 1936-37 will amount to about 140 features. A new system of financing, laid out by the State Film Chamber in cooperation with the Film Credit Bank, will make the extension of production over the whole year possible.

"Broadway Melody" is continuing its sensational run here. It has played five weeks and will be extended for one more, a run unusual either for German or American films.

Arthur Kelly Honored At Testimonial Dinner

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of United Artists in charge of foreign sales, was guest at a dinner Monday night at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York in appreciation of his work during the period before the appointment of George J. Schaefer to vice-president and general sales manager of the company. The domestic sales force presented Mr. Kelly with a silver tea service.

Among the executives attending the dinner were: Mr. Schaefer, Harry D. Buckley, vice-president handling corporate matters; Harry Gold, Paul Lazarus, Haskell Masters, Monroe W. Greenthal, Lowell Calvert and Emanuel Silverstone.

Theatre business in Central America and Mexico is showing a definite upturn, especially in Mexico since the settlement of the protracted strike against major American distributors, centering in Mexico City, declared Arthur W. Kelly,

His trip covered Panama and other Central American countries, Cuba and Jamaica as well as Mexico. In Guatemala City recently there was opened a new 3,000-seat house, the De Luxe, and despite its unusual size for that territory, it is doing well, said Mr. Kelly. In Cuba, as in most of the other areas he visited, Mr. Kelly said, American films are holding their own, but superior Spanish pictures find a good market, with a loyal following. This is especially true of Havana, he said.

Mr. Schaefer will depart for Hollywood shortly to confer with various United Artists producers on future product. He may set the date of the company's sales convention while there.

Original Music Scores Filmed for Music Study

Plans for a collection of motion pictures of original musical manuscripts at the New York Public Library and known as the Toscanini Collection, were made known last week at a meeting in the library at which specimens of such films were shown for Arturo Toscanini and other guests. It is proposed to begin with reproductions of the 40,000 photographs of original scores in the Archives for Photographs of Musical Manuscripts in the Albertina Museum in the National Library at Vienna and to extend it to reproductions of other manuscripts elsewhere.

Grossman and Fulton Plan Illinois Chain

Edward Grossman, former exchange manager for United Artists and Warners in Chicago, and Carl Fulton, president of E. E. Fulton Company, theatre equipment company, are reported planning the formation of a new circuit, the first theatre to be erected at Joliet, Ill. The second house in the group will be started shortly in Aurora, Ill., to be followed by another in Galesburg.

Form Supply Company

Standard Theatre Supply Company, capitalized at $25,000, has been chartered at Greensboro, N. C., to handle theatrical supplies. The incorporators are Max Zager, Goldie H. Zager and L. P. Wicker, Jr.

Paramount Golf Tourney

The Paramount Studio in Hollywood will hold its annual golf tournament May 24. The course has not yet been selected.

Taxation Troubles Up in Five States

The attention of theatre owners in new tax legislative matters has narrowed down principally to Alabama, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, although other kinds of legislation affecting their operations still lingers.

In Alabama, apparently defeated in efforts to obtain passage of a bill calling for a 10 per cent amusement tax, a new proposal has been offered by Senators Walton, Kelly and Woodall levying a rate of one cent on each 25 cents admission or fractional part thereof. However, passage of this new proposal seems unlikely as the legislature is deadlocked over increasing taxes and an early adjournment is expected.

Opposition to the proposed state amusement tax has been voiced in Frankfort, Ky., by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kentucky as the association went on record this week as being against the 10 per cent tax on theatre admissions which is included in Governor A. B. Chandler's program. Plans for lobbying against the matter are also being laid.

In Baltimore, Governor Harry W. Nice has affixed his signature to the relief revenue bill passed at the recent session of the Maryland general assembly and which provides for a one per cent tax on gross receipts of all places of amusement and a special graduated tax on free tickets to such places. The tax is made retroactive to April 1.

In Boston, several bills harmful to the industry have been either killed by the Massachusetts legislature or put over to the next session, including those measures of Representative Flaherty who sought the enforcement on holidays of Sunday laws, the bill of Representatives Kiley and Centracchio for the modification of Sunday laws to permit stage dancing on Sundays, the number of measures of Leslie R. Porter dealing with the construction and safety measures of theatres.

In Trenton, sufficient New Jersey Democratic votes have been promised up to the present time to pass the amusement tax bill in the Senate this week. The House passed the measure last week.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association's chances of going to the court of appeals in Albany with its action for an injunction against the assessment and collection of the city sales tax in New York City on film rentals were enhanced this week when the city did not oppose the ITOA move at a hearing before the appellate division.

In Pennsylvania the adoption of a temporary state sales tax is feared by the industry when the special session of the legislature meets in Harrisburg on May 4. $70,500,000 is needed for additional direct relief to see the welfare agencies through to Jan. 1, 1937.

Screen Joins Bombs in Italy's Propaganda War on Ethiopia

Natives Herded into Square in Front of Temple and Shown Pictures of Spouting Guns

by HARRY HIRSCHFELD

Motion pictures are being accorded parity with military ordnance as engines of conquest as Benito Mussolini's expeditionary armies in Ethiopia converge upon Addis Ababa itself. Second only to machinegun and bombing plane in pushing the Italian campaign of subjugation toward the capital, the omnipresent, portable motion picture "theatres" effectively are disseminating a type of propaganda which can result only in eliciting first fear and finally enduring respect from the natives on the northern front.

For the sake of exemplifying the screen course of empire, let's suppose that you are Kanyasmatch Jochem Jijibou, a citizen of Adowa.

The Italian soldiers are tramping into your town several days ago after a storm of brimstone from the heavens. You throw away your long hooked sword which you were saving to hack off a few rooster-feathered Italian heads. You raise your arms, surrender and await your doom, and the fate of your hut, your horse, your goats and women.

Herded Into Temple Square

It is dusk. You hear a commotion in the center of town, in front of the Coptic temple. You join a crowd of your countrymen who are being herded into the square, roughly but not brutally, by a company of enemy soldiers. Other soldiers are stretching a white piece of cloth between two poles. The soldiers tell you to watch the cloth. In front of the cloth, at a distance of about 40 paces, there is one of those newfangled things, taller than a man, 10 times as big as a horse, which carries scores of men on its back as it slides over the country on strange discs to the accompaniment of roars more terrific than those of the lions of his majesty Haile Selassie.

Harry Hirschfeld (not to be confused with Broadway's Harry Hershfield) is American correspondent for a group of newspapers and motion picture magazines in the Baltic states, Finland, Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Poland. He has just returned to his New York headquarters after six months covering the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. In the accompanying article Mr. Hirschfeld points the Italian use of the motion picture as a propaganda adjunct to the military weapon.

There is a buzz of questions from the throng. You stare at the big white mantle. Suddenly there is a dazzling, blinding light. It comes from the white cloth. Devil-power! Then the crowd stirs, murmurs, mutters. Now a few nervous outcries, and now! Look out! What's that thing moving across the white cloth? Look out; it'll kill you! It's coming this way. That's that noise? It's thunder. No, it's brimstone. Run for your lives!

Italy's empire builders have five motorized theatres. These trucks carry good sound equipment and good projection machines. As soon as a new territory is militarized, in they go and set up the "theatre." The audience sits on the bare ground. The screen is the only equipment in addition to the truck.

The hard-pounded earth in the open space in front of the village church is chosen for several reasons. This is the largest and most diverting popular gathering place. Across from the church there stands usually an old and strong tree upon which the frequent Ethiopian hangings have been consummated. Then, too, the proximity to the homes of the native Coptic priests is expected to aid in allaying the fears of the natives. So far, however, this expectation hasn't materialized.

I witnessed one of those wild flights of an Ethiopian "premiere." Within a minute after the first frame flicked on to the screen the "house" was devoid of all natives except those either blind or crippled. All the others had fled to their beehive huts or to treetops.

Priests Just As Frightened

The picture that was being shown was a typical Italian propaganda film—newsreel sound shots of familiar scenes in their own country—its life and its beauty. But it takes several performances of even this mild sort of show to educate the panicky and wholly uninformed blacks that here is a mechanical commonplace and not a fire-spuming demon of destruction.

Shortly after the first night "riot" I have described (it actually took place at Adowa), the Italian officials went to the local Coptic priests with the idea that if any one could pacify the natives it would be their religious leaders. They guessed wrong. The priests were even more convinced than their followers that the white square cloth was full of unholy ghosts.

As often as possible the Italians patiently stage their portable free film shows, and eventually the native photophobia is smoothed away. Then it is that the screen bill-of-fare begins to change. The innocent scenes of quiet country-and-village life are gradually supplanted by scenes of Italian and black troops building roads; of soldiers moving into position; of trucks and tanks and big guns moving endlessly up the new roads; of big guns and machine guns working their destruction on town and village—and finally scores of blood-chilling scenes of actual conflict—of havoc and horror, always with the emphasis on Ethiopian casualties contrasted with Italian supremacy, or with the material benefits bestowed by the conquerors.

BULLETS AND THEATRES

The Italians believe wholeheartedly that this constant emphasis on the expediency of Ethiopian surrender and on the advantages of Italian rule will work wonders in "selling" their sovereignty to the black men.

Eventually the Italians intend to show Hollywood and European features free to the natives. They say that the blacks sooner or later will develop a taste for this sort of film fare.

In this harnessing of filmdom to the powerhouses of statecraft the natives are rigidly barred from theatres where such pictures as "The Sheik," famous Valentino film, are shown. "The Sheik," by the way, still is being played and replayed in Eritrea. Now this type of picture is immensely popular with the Italians—both colonial officials and military men—in Eritrea. Why can't the blacks see them? Because their plots reveal Africanders in sundry minor battles, sometimes successful ones, with the whites. Of course, the Americans or Europeans win out at the finish in these pictures—but there is enough anti-white psychology in them to put the bars up.

Women Bring Meals

At the theatre in Asmara (it has no name, no competition, and is the largest house in either Eritrea or the conquered areas of Ethiopia) the admission is 35 cents for white folk and 10 cents for the blacks, who are permitted to occupy only the second balcony and must enter the theatre by a side street.

But long before the house is opened, groups of white-shemmahed men and women gather in characteristic huddles in the street. They bring their food (strips of unsavory raw meats) and their drink (a sort of tea called "tetch" which they carry about in tea kettles and which is kept in a lukewarm state by the tropical heat). Here they sit complacently munching their victuals and gossiping while the ominous accoutrements of war rumble by in a steady stream. When the house opens they carry their food in with them and continue eating during the screening.

The blacks are fascinated by the movement of strange peoples and strange vehicles in even stranger settings. Ninety per cent of the films shown at the Asmara theatre are American talkers. The natives can't read the Italian subtitles, can't understand the film dubbed in Italian.

The program at the Asmara theatre, with its 600 seats, consists of one feature and one newsreel. The newsreel is always Italian, containing stiff doses of virile war propaganda or colonization propaganda.

There is one other film "theatre" in Eritrea.

It's one for Ripley's book—for it has no roof and it is set plump down in the hottest city in the world.

Massawa, the seaport where all Italian equipment and supplies are being dumped for distribution inland, is called by all who are unfortunate enough to live there, "Hell-on-Earth."

Before the war Massawa was a town of 300. Now there are 20,000 longshoremen and laborers living and working there in a temperature of about 120 degrees in the daytime. At night there is relief. It goes down to 110 degrees! There is no wind and the flies and mosquitoes fall into one's lap by the dozens.

But here is the roofless Eritrea theatre, roofless because a covering would make it so stifling as to be untenable. The theatre front consists of a 12-foot stone wall with two doorways over which the letters "Eritrea" are painted. The other three walls consist of a flimsy hedge and board fence. There is a "mezzanine," a rough board platform reached by walking up a narrow ladder like a chicken going to roost. The "mezzanine" is reserved exclusively for the black men. They pay 10 cents.

The whites, at 35 cents a ticket, sit in portable chairs on the ground floor, and ground it is. The few women of the town—officers' wives—never attend, for reasons of caste.

The Eritrea seats 400. It runs one show, at night, which begins at about 9, and it usually plays to capacity.

Jungle Is Background

The white screen stands out against a solid black wall of dank jungle. It is here that the forgotten masterpieces of an earlier and perhaps happier day flash across the dense African night. Here, with many a scratch and many a jumpy patch, are the fine old silents; the Gish Girls in "Orphans of the Storm"; Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad" and "The Mark of Zorro"; "Quo Vadis" (in its lurid primeval version); Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus"; William S. Hart in "The Squaw Man," Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" and "Rosita."

But with the finish of the feature comes the newsreel. Propaganda again. All about the big victories; the big guns; the big roads; the big statues to present-day saints.

The audience sits stolidly, fanning and watching. A story of newsday statecraft, a course of destiny, is moving rapidly across a background of white against black.

The motley "spill" from this primitive theatre straggles out into the main highway. For two hours they have been in a faraway cinematic Utopia. Now they must return to the actuality of war. They stand by the roadside, waiting patiently for a break in the almost interminable parade of two-eyed monsters which rolls and clanks forward out of Massawa into Ethiopia's impenetrable gloom.

India Producer in Hollywood

Wolf Henious, representing Imperial Productions of Bombay, has arrived in Hollywood to acquire equipment and accessories which his company will use in Bombay productions. He already has closed a contract with Abe Meyer for the purchase of stock shots, sound effects and music.

Coast Actors' Guild Elects

Reelection of officers at the annual meeting of the Junior Screen Actors' Guild Sunday night in Hollywood returned to their posts: President, Pat Somerset; vice-president, Bob Ellsworth; second vice-president, Jay Eaton, and secretary-treasurer, Aubrey Blair.

Because of an amendment to the bylaws, the office of third vice-president was supplanted by that of assistant secretary, resulting in a change of position for Nate Edwards.

Also because of a change in bylaws, 33 instead of the previous number of 21 directors will serve for 1936-37. New directors elected are: Dick Allen, Louis J. Decker, Jack Cheatham, Helene Caverly, Betty Blair, Oliver A. Cross, Larry Emmons, Mel Forrester, Peter Gardner, Sam Garrett, Charles Graham, Mabel Ingraham, Mike Lally, Harry Mayo, Jack Mower, Lee Phelps, Max Pollack, Jean Valjean, Flo Wix. Alternate directors are Buck Moulton and Bud Winters. In addition, there are 10 directors whose terms have one year to run.

The nominating committee consisted of Charles Drubin, chairman; Sam Benson, Red Burger, Bill O'Brien, Harvey Parry, Lee Powell, Bee Stephens.

Speakers at the meeting were J. W. Buzzell, secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, and other labor leaders.

Directors Revise Bylaws

Also in Hollywood, the directors of the newly organized Screen Directors' Guild have liberalized its bylaws to extend membership to directors of independent features and short product.

The change which revised the eligibility rules provides that the applicant must have screen credit on two features and six shorts or one feature and three shorts within a three-year period. The membership is scheduled to ratify the changes in May.

Phil Rosen was elected to the directors' guild board to represent the independents. Richard Wallace was named to substitute for William K. Howard on the directorate during his absence in England.

Equity Elects May 25

In New York, Actors' Equity Association will hold its annual meeting at the Hotel Astor on Monday, May 25, to elect 10 members and four alternates to the council. The nominating committee has chosen the regular ticket as follows: Beverly Bayne, E. J. Blunkall, Robert T. Haines, Madia Reade, J. Malcolm Dunn, Richard Sterling, Clyde Fillmore, T. Reed Brown, Jr., Robert Keith and Bretaigne Windust, all to serve five years. Nominees for alternate councillors are Katharine Warren, Dudley Clements, Richard Whorf and Lily Cahill.

A number of younger members, many of whom were affiliated with the defunct Actors' Forum group, have prepared an opposition slate in the form of individual petitions of candidates.

The independent slate is: for five years, Richard Gordon, Allyn Joslin, John B. Litel, Burgess Meredith, Mary Morris, Paul McGrath, Edward J. McNamara, Ann Revere, Shepperd Strudwick, Edith Van Cleve; alternates, John Brown, Edward Everett Hale, Eric Dressler, Alexander Kirkland.

The American Federation of Actors, union of variety actors of which Rudy Vallee is president, will hold its annual meeting in New York May 5 at the Hotel Paramount, New York.

AMERICAN FILMS KEEP LEADERSHIP IN INDIA

Product Distributed in Year Is 50 Per Cent from U. S., 10 From British and 40 Indian

by RAM L. GOGTAY in Bombay

The American film has retained its leadership in India in the ratio of 50 per cent American, 10 per cent British and 40 per cent Indian. The American ratio, with an eye to motion picture reaction on the Indian audiences, can be improved further.

By far the most popular films in the past year were those based on novels of world-famous writers, as the substance of the stories was familiar, although many could not distinctly follow the dialogue. The three best received among these were "Anna Karenina," "Becky Sharp" and "Les Miserables," which were considered excellent productions in other respects as well.

Although the favorite author of the producers was Charles Dickens, the box office decreed otherwise, because native India finds Dickens far more difficult to understand than Tolstoy, Thackeray or Victor Hugo. Furthermore, Dickens' humor, for which he is the most read, cannot very well be adequately translated on the screen, although W. C. Fields in the role of Micawber in "David Copperfield" proved himself the exception to the rule. "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" though from a play rather than out of a book, was unusually popular, as the names of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett are household words wherever English is taught. Despite the success of these adaptations it is difficult to appreciate why none of the writers who are alive today and have given the world such masterpieces as "Arrowsmith" were not signaled out in 1935.

Detective and Crime Stories

Detective and crime stories, the majority of which were drawn from books, such as "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," "Sherlock Holmes" or "The Whole Town Is Talking," were popular. The honor of being the popular ideal of Sherlock Holmes went to Clive Brook, with William Powell running a close second. "Dr. Socrates" appeared to be the only gangster picture liked by all, but the publicity given to it was not sufficient to attract the medical profession or the school element.

Musicals

The musical was the next best in popularity. Representative of the ideal musical for India would be "Whoopee" or "Broadway Melody of 1936," both of which have swept all records so far. "One Night of Love," "Folies Bergiere" and "Merry Widow," because of the well received personalities of Grace Moore, Maurice Chevalier and Jeannette Macdonald were popular. Musicals like "George White's Scandals," "Diamond Jim" or "Sweet Surrender" have been coolly received. "Metropolitan," from the 20th Century Studios, was a timely favorite.

Historical pictures based on incidents of popular knowledge, even of Scriptures, came next in popularity. "Cleopatra" topped them all, and "Crusades" would have been a worthy competitor, but for the preponderance of the love interest which at times chilled the fire kindled by combatants in the Crusades. "Cardinal Richelieu" and "Clive of India" were very well received, but "Clive" was severely mangled by the film censor, indicating that American producers should get the principal incidents in pictures based on Indian history pre-certified by the film center in India. The reception given to "The First World War" stimulated not only the popularity of newsreels and hatred of war, but pointed out most emphatically that pictures of modern history had a great future in India.

Comedies

Full-length comedies of Laurel and Hardy had a place in the hearts of the patrons which was second only to that accorded to Charlie Chaplin, and were of as universal appeal as the Silly Symphony or the Mickey Mouse. The termination of the Cohens and Kellys series was much regretted, although their place was partially filled by Wheeler and Wolsey and occasionally by pictures like "Night Life of the Gods," which kept the audience wondering whether it was not written under the inspirational shadow of Mark Twain in the "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

Universal's "horror" pictures were the best received. The reception given to pictures like "Bride of Frankenstein" and "Werewolf of London" were rivaled only by "Bonnie Scotland" or "Babes in Toyland." Universal need not bother about "filmusicals" as far as the Indian audiences are concerned if it will give them more of the "shock" productions.

Educational Pictures

This variety was appreciated and greatly needed. By educational is not meant the classroom picture or the well received shorts produced by Educational Pictures. What is meant is pictures like "Aerial Epic over Africa," "Le Gong," Pete Smith's Oddities, "Magic Carpet," "Strange As It May Seem," or sports lessons, the Silly Symphonies. So, too, the newsreels, the best welcomed being the British Movietone. Hearst Metrotone News arrived too late for appreciation, except for purely American events.

Technique and General Prospects

The technique in American pictures was the best so far seen.

The people of India are coming to realize that the film can be their education. By the same token, it is evident from the public's reaction in the last year that greater attention to the story told by the box office and a little more direct publicity most certainly will improve the position of the American industry in India.

Daylight Time Helps Grosses In Some Areas

Daylight saving time, or a change to eastern standard time where central time hitherto prevailed, has brought some gains in theatre grosses this year over last. The movement is confined, however, to the northeastern and central sections of this country and to Canada. It is general in South America and Europe.

Most of Ohio and Michigan are now on eastern standard time the year round and Chicago recently changed to eastern time with some of the surrounding territory. Connecticut has repealed its law against display of daylight saving time on clocks, due to the fact that most of its leading cities have been observing the time change without moving the clocks. This makes a block of three New England states, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, solidly on daylight time from April 26th to September 27th.

New York will have 320 towns and cities on the advanced time schedule this year, starting April 26th. Last year there were 337. In Rochester, where a referendum opposed the change, many business establishments advance opening and closing hours. New Jersey's total is 118 communities, the same as last year. Pennsylvania is unchanged at 93; Maine, with 59. New Hampshire has lost two and will have 21 this year. Vermont will have three instead of two, Delaware 11 instead of 8, Illinois 93 instead of 90, exclusive of Chicago and surrounding communities. Indiana increases from 14 to 20.

In Canada two more towns have joined the move, making the total 75. Some of them do not make the change until May 2 or 3, and others switch late in May or early in June and put the clocks back to normal at varying times.

More Academy Papers On Science Planned

William Koenig, chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has appointed a publications subcommittee to handle the increasing number of information bulletins on new technical developments which the council plans to issue. The committee consists of Nathan Levinson, chairman; Carl Dreher, E. H. Hansen, and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

The Academy Technicians Branch also has announced a total of 287 fully paid-up and actively participating members, an increase of 108 members during the past 12 months.

Muni's "Pasteur" Honored

Paul Muni's work in the "Story of Louis Pasteur" has been voted the best individual performance during March by the Screen Actors' Guild. Honorable mention went to Jean Hersholt, for his performance in "The Country Doctor." Bonita Granville received second mention for the role of Mary Tilford in "These Three."

MISSOURI MOVES TO OUST THE EIGHT MAJOR COMPANIES FROM THAT STATE

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI

En Banc

September Term, 1935

The State of Missouri at the Information of Roy McKittrick, Attorney General of the State of Missouri, Relator, vs GENERAL THEATRICAL ENTERPRISES, INC., a Corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri; VITAGRAPH, INC., a Corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York and licensed to do business in the State of Missouri; PARAMOUNT PICTURES DISTRIBUTING CO., INC., a Corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey and licensed to do business in the State of Missouri; and R.K.O. DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION, a Corporation organized under the laws of Delaware and licensed to do business in the State of Missouri, Respondents. } No.....

Information in Quo Warranto

Comes now Roy McKittrick, Attorney General of the State of Missouri, who prosecutes this suit in behalf of the State of Missouri, and causes the Court to understand and be informed:

I

That the respondents are corporations organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the states hereinafter mentioned, to-wit:

(1) Respondent General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri.

(2) Respondent Vitagraph, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York and duly qualified and licensed to do business in the State of Missouri under the laws of the State of Missouri relating to foreign corporations.

(3) Respondent Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey and duly qualified and licensed to do business in the State of Missouri under the laws of the State of Missouri relating to foreign corporations.

(4) Respondent R. K. O. Distributing Corporation is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware and duly qualified and licensed to do business in the State of Missouri under the laws of Missouri relating to foreign corporations.

II

Your informant further states that Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal office in the City of New York. That the said corporation is organized for the purposes, among others, of producing, buying, selling, distributing and trading in motion pictures, the conduct and operation of motion picture theatres, the buying and selling of sound equipment and other equipment, furnishings and supplies for use in motion picture theatres and for the holding of stock in other corporations.

That the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., in the conduct of its said businesses, did organize and have incorporated the respondent Vitagraph, Inc., under the laws of the State of New York, for the purpose of acting as the exclusive agent of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., in the sale, distribution and trading in the motion pictures produced and controlled by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. That all of the capital stock of the said respondent Vitagraph, Inc., is owned by the Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and the directors and officers of respondent Vitagraph, Inc., are directors, officers or other representatives of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

The suit filed this week by Missouri's attorney general, Roy McKittrick, literally to oust Fox Midwest Theatres and all the eight large distributors from doing business in that state, is on two counts. The ouster of Warner, RKO and Paramount is asked on grounds of unfairly monopolizing product in St. Louis and for forming a price fixing pool as a move to help Warner gain control of the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres in that city. The ouster of Fox Midwest and the eight large distributors is asked on grounds of conspiracy against the state anti-trust laws through the operation of a pool to control the sale of films in Kansas City. Complete text of the state's complaint follows:

That all, or a large majority, of the stock of the First National Pictures, Inc., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Maryland, is owned and held by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; that one of the corporate purposes of the said First National Pictures, Inc., is to produce, buy, sell, distribute and trade in motion pictures; that the said First National Pictures, Inc., does sell, distribute and trade in motion pictures in the State of Missouri. That the said Corporation was duly licensed to do business in the State of Missouri until the filing by said Corporation on December 31, 1929, in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Missouri, of an affidavit of retirement from the State. That from September, 1928, and prior to December 31, 1929, the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., had acquired all, or a large majority, of the stock of the said First National Pictures, Inc., and had obtained control of the business of the said First National Pictures, Inc., and that directors, officers and representatives of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., upon the acquisition of the control of the First National Pictures, Inc. by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., were made directors and officers of the said First National Pictures, Inc. That after so acquiring control of the said First National Pictures, Inc., the motion picture product of the said First National Pictures, Inc., was and still is being marketed, sold and distributed by and through respondent Vitagraph, Inc., so that the said combined products of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and the said First National Pictures, Inc., are being sold, marketed and distributed by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. through its said wholly owned subsidiary, respondent Vitagraph, Inc.

That the operations of the said First National Pictures, Inc., and the said Vitagraph, Inc., are conducted from the general offices of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., in the State of New York.

That the respondent General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., was organized under the laws of the State of Missouri by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and all of the stock of the said Corporation is owned and controlled by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and the officers and directors of the said General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., are officers, agents and representatives of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. That the said General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., was incorporated and is being operated as one of the means for effectuating the unlawful conspiracy in restraint of trade and in unlawful boycotting as hereinafter alleged.

III

Your informant further informs the Court that the respondents, between the —— day of July, 1932, and the —— day of March, 1934, created, entered into and became members of and have ever since said time participated in a pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation and understanding among themselves and with each other, which tends to and does result in the restraint of lawful trade and full and free competition in the importation, transportation, purchase and sale of and trading in motion picture films (sometimes herein described as motion pictures) in this State with the purpose, design and view to regulate, control and fix the prices of motion picture film, to maintain such price when so regulated and fixed, to fix the amount and quality of motion picture film bought, sold, distributed and dealt in, in the State of Missouri, and to lessen lawful trade and full and free competition in the importation, transportation, purchase and sale of and trading in motion picture films in this State, and in the refusal of respondents to sell motion picture film to persons not in such pool, trust, combination, confederation and understanding and in threatening persons from selling and supplying motion picture film to persons who are not members of or parties to such pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, association or understanding, and in boycotting persons not members of or parties to such pool, trust, agreement, combination, federation, association or understanding.

IV

Your informant further states that in pursuance of the said pool, trust, agreement, confederation, combination and understanding so entered into by said respondents as aforesaid, for the accomplishment of the objects and purposes aforesaid, respondents have committed and perpetrated the following act:

Motion pictures are of three kinds: features, shorts and news reels. Feature motion pictures are photoplays of a longer type; they are divided into two classes, first class and second class. First class features are the more elaborate motion pictures in which the widely known and popular actors appear and which are directed by the most highly skilled directors; they are the more remunerative pictures. They are indispensable to an exhibitor who is conducting a motion picture business in a large first class or so-called "de luxe" theatre.

The Ambassador, Missouri and new Grand Central Theatres are motion picture theatres located in the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri. They and each of them were and are designed to be conducted as first class de luxe theatres. They are modern, spacious, comfortable and luxurious. The seating capacity in each theatre respectively is:

Ambassador Theatre	3,018
Missouri Theatre	3,514
New Grand Central	1,860

Said theatres were and are designed and built for the purpose and with the intent of exhibiting therein first class motion pictures, and the lessees of said theatres have, as soon as they took possession thereof, at various times attempted to secure many of such pictures from said respondents, and the said lessees of said theatres were at all times willing, able, and offered to pay for said pictures the market price or a reasonable consideration therefor.

That the exhibitors who have been conducting the motion picture exhibition business at said theatres have regularly and continuously acquired the use of and exhibited at said theatres motion pictures purchased from Warner Bros.

RECALLS REORGANIZATION STEPS

Pictures, Inc., First National Pictures, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation and RKO Distributing Corporation and from the corporations to which the last two mentioned corporations are successors, for exhibition at the said Ambassador, New Grand Central and Missouri Theatres until approximately the months of February, March and August, 1934, and motion pictures have been imported, transported, sold, purchased, marketed and supplied by said motion picture producing and distributing companies for delivery to and use at said theatres in the course of trade in motion pictures.

That by reason of default in the payment of indebtedness secured by mortgages on the said Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central Theatres, proceedings were instituted in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri for foreclosure of said mortgages. That a bondholders' protective committee was formed and said Bondholders' Protective Committee did present and submit to the said United States District Court a plan for the reorganization of the said loans for the benefit of the bondholders. That in the formulation of a plan of reorganization the said Committee did invite bids for leases on the said theatres to become effective if the properties were bid in by the Committee and the plan of reorganization of the loans approved by the Court; that said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., did submit to the said Bondholders' Protective Committee offers for the leasing of the said theatres but that the said Committee rejected the said offers and did, on or about the 20th day of February, 1934, enter into a contract in writing with other persons for the leasing of the said theatres to them upon foreclosure sale and the acquisition of the said theatre properties by the said Bondholders' Protective Committee.

6,000 Invested in Bonds

That said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., did oppose the approval by the said District Court of the plan of reorganization which included the leasing of the said three theatres to persons other than the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or an affiliated or subsidiary company of said corporation. That the exceptions of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., to the said plan of reorganization were overruled and the said ruling of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri was affirmed upon appeal by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. That the said theatres were sold at public sale under the decree of foreclosure in the suit aforesaid on or about the 6th day of June, 1934, and the said theatre properties bid in by the said Bondholders' Protective Committee for the benefit of the bondholders. That the said Bondholders' Protective Committee did then organize two corporations under the laws of the State of Missouri under the name of Ambassador Building Corporation and Missouri Theatre Building Corporation, and executed leases in accordance with a form of lease agreed upon in the said contract of February 20th, 1934, with the St. Louis Ambassador Theatre, Inc., and St. Louis Missouri Theatre, Inc., two organizations organized under the laws of the State of Missouri by the persons who had entered into the contract of February 20th, 1934, with said Bondholders' Protective Committee for said leases. That the possession of the said theatres were by the said Holding Corporations organized by the said Bondholders' Protective Committee delivered to the said lessees on or about July 20th, 1934.

That approximately 6,000 persons, many of whom are citizens and residents of the State of Missouri, did invest in the bonds which had been secured by the mortgage deeds of trust on the said theatre properties (which mortgage deeds of trust were foreclosed as aforesaid), and that the said persons are now stockholders of the said two corporations organized by the Bondholders' Protective Committee and which own the said three theatre properties. That because of the inability of the operators of said theatres to procure motion pictures, owing to the unlawful acts of the respondents as herein set forth, said persons, to-wit, approximately 6,000, have suffered the loss of large sums of money, and the said corporations in which said persons are now stockholders and which own the said theatre properties are placed in jeopardy because of the inability to pay taxes and other expenses incident to the conduct, maintenance and preservation of said theatre properties, and the said persons and the people of the State of Missouri have been and will continue to be greatly and irreparably injured by the restraint in commerce and trade in motion pictures, and the unlawful boycotting of the said theatre properties and the owners, lessees and operators thereof as hereinafter more fully alleged.

That up to the time of the rejection of the offer of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and the acceptance of an offer from other parties for the leasing of said theatres, the motion pictures sold and distributed by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., being the motion picture film products of the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and First National Pictures, Inc., distributed by respondent Vitagraph, Inc. (engaged solely in the business of selling and distributing the motion picture film of the said Warner Bros. Pictures and First National Pictures, Inc.), had been for a number of years and were still being furnished to and exhibited at the said Ambassador and Missouri Theatres.

That, for the purpose of opposing and preventing the establishment or continuation of the motion picture exhibition business at the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central Theatres by any person or corporation except Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation affiliated with or controlled by it, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and respondent Vitagraph, Inc., discontinued selling and furnishing and thereafter and ever since has refused to sell and furnish motion pictures produced by the said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and the First National Pictures, Inc., for exhibition at any of the said three theatres.

That pursuant to said unlawful conspiracy and agreement, and in execution thereof, the said Paramount Pictures Distributing Co., Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation and R K O Distributing Corporation have discontinued selling and furnishing motion pictures for exhibition at the said Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central Theatres, and have refused and continue to refuse to furnish motion pictures for exhibition at the said theatres or any of them so long as the same are operated by any other person than Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation organized or controlled by said Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

That in order to make said restraint of trade in motion pictures and the boycott of respondents effective, respondents have conspired to perform all acts and things and use all means necessary and possible to that end, including the means, acts and things hereinbefore and hereinafter more particularly alleged and other means, acts and things to informant unknown.

For the purpose of effectuating the aforesaid conspiracy, the respondents caused the cancellation of so-called franchises, to-wit, contracts which provided for a supply of motion pictures for use at the Ambassador, New Grand Central and Missouri theatres for many years, and acquired a large number of bonds of the owners of said theatres for the purpose of opposing and preventing the establishment or continuation of the motion picture exhibition business at said theatres by any person or corporation except Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation affiliated with or controlled by it.

Charges Coercion

For the purpose of effectuating the aforesaid conspiracy, the respondents endeavored to intimidate, coerce and compel the owners of said theatres, their representatives or agents, to transfer the possession and control thereof only to Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation affiliated with or controlled by it, and to refuse to grant a lease or leases for said theatres, or the possession and use thereof, to any other person or corporation, and endeavored to intimidate, coerce and compel prospective lessees to refrain from leasing said theatres and procuring suitable motion pictures for exhibition in said Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central Theatres, and from engaging in the aforesaid motion pictures trades and commerce:

(1) By threatening to acquire and acquiring control of and to engross the entire supply of motion pictures which was available and necessay for use at the aforesaid theatres;

(2) By threatening to prevent and preventing any other lessee than Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., from acquiring any of the motion pictures which were available and necessary for use at the aforesaid theatres;

(3) By threatening to cause and causing said owners great injury, loss and damage if said theatres should be leased to, acquired or used by any other person or corporation than Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.;

(4) By threatening to cause and causing injury to any lessee other than Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., of said theatres by any and all means, including injury to any other lessee in his business, trade, reputation, and property in the exhibition of motion pictures at said theatres;

(5) By threatening to spend, use or lose a large sum of money if necessary, and actually spending, using and losing large sums of money, and to use the entire resources of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., to so injure any other lessee;

(6) By threatening to engage in and engaging in the business of exhibiting motion pictures at St. Louis in competition with any other lessee, and to conduct and did conduct said competing business in a malicious and unfair man-

RUSS. TICKET SCALPERS' EXISTENCE PRECARIOUS

The life of a theatre ticket scalper in Moscow is most certainly not an easy one, particularly when the Soviet government learns his identity. Witness the case of thirty former managers and other high officials of Moscow theatres who went on trial this week on charges of speculation and defrauding the state of hundreds of thousands of rubles in revenue. The defendants were arrested several weeks ago after wholesale private speculation in theatre tickets had been discovered.

Last year several theatre men were marched before a firing squad after conviction on similar charges.

MONOPOLY OF PICTURES CHARGED

ner, that is to say, by engaging in any and all acts and practices of unfair competition which would cause, and for the purpose of causing injury, loss and damage to any other lessee as an exhibitor at said theatres.

Monopoly Move Charged

For the purpose of effectuating the aforesaid conspiracy, the respondents arranged and agreed that Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc., First National Pictures, Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Co., Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation and R K O Distributing Corporation would refuse to enter into contracts for, or to furnish motion pictures for use at said theatres to any person or corporation except Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation affiliated with or controlled by it, and would furnish motion pictures in the aforesaid trade in motion pictures in Missouri for use at said theatres only to Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation affiliated with or controlled by it.

In pursuance of the aforesaid arrangement and agreement, and to effectuate the aforesaid conspiracy, and especially to enable Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., to acquire, hold and control all of the motion pictures necessary for use at the aforesaid theatres and which would otherwise have been available in the course of trade in motion pictures in Missouri to any lessee of said theatres, and for the purpose of preventing the lessee or lessees of the Ambassador, New Grand Central and Missouri theatres from procuring an adequate or any supply of motion pictures in the aforesaid trade in motion pictures in Missouri for use at said theatres, the respondents have refused to enter into contracts for, or to furnish, motion pictures except to Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation affiliated with or controlled by it, and Paramount Pictures Distributing Co., Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation and R. K. O. Distributing Corporation have entered into contracts granting to Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., or a corporation affiliated with and controlled by it, the exclusive right to the first run exhibition at St. Louis of motion pictures sold and distributed by them in the motion picture trade, all in furtherance of and part of said conspiracy.

V

Your informant further states that respondents herein, by reason of said combination, pool, trust and understanding, and the acts done in furtherance and in pursuance thereof, as herein stated, have obtained and now have a monopoly of the supply of suitable motion pictures available for use at the said Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central Theatres in St. Louis; have unlawfully restricted and limited and do continue to restrict and limit the supply and the trade in motion pictures for exhibition in the City of St. Louis, Missouri; have prevented and are preventing competition among themselves in the purchase, sale and trade in motion pictures in the State of Missouri and have boycotted and are still boycotting the said Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central Theatres in St. Louis, and are unlawfully depriving the owners and lessees of said theatres of the opportunity to acquire suitable motion pictures for exhibition in said theatres; and that said combination, confederation, pool, trust and understanding so entered into and maintained by said respondents as aforesaid and the acts and methods done and performed by said respondents in pursuance and in furtherance thereof, have deprived and do deprive the public of free, full and unlimited competition in the buying, selling and trading in motion pictures for exhibition in the City of St. Louis, to the great damage and detriment of the public and the people of Missouri.

That by reason of the premises, said respondents have and up to the present time are grossly offending against the laws of this State and have willfully and flagrantly abused and misused their rights, authority and franchises as corporations and have wilfully and unlawfully assumed and usurped authorities and privileges not granted to said corporations by the laws of the State of Missouri and that the acts and agreements of respondent corporations as hereinbefore set forth constitute a wilfull and malicious preversion of the franchises granted to said corporations by the State of Missouri, and illegal and wilfull usurpation of privileges and authorities not granted to said respondents by the State of Missouri, to the great and permanent injury of the public.

WHEREFORE, YOUR INFORMANT, prosecuting in this behalf for the State of Missouri, prays that the respondent corporations and each of them severally be excluded of all corporate rights and privileges under the laws of the State of Missouri, and that their franchises, rights, authority, licenses and certificates to do business under the laws of the State of Missouri be declared forfeited and that each and all of them be ousted from their corporate franchises, privileges, licenses and authority to do business under the laws of this State.

Second Count

Your Informant, for a second count against respondents, and each of them, hereby adopts and makes a part hereof as fully as if the same were herein re-written and incorporated, each and all of the allegation in the first count of this information so far as the same are applicable hereto and further shows to the Court that:

I

Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., is a Delaware corporation, doing business in the State of Missouri and other states and is engaged in the business of owning, leasing and operating, or, under some working arrangement unknown to this Informant, is associated in the operation of motion picture theatres in Missouri and other states, including the following twelve theatres in Kansas City, Missouri: Uptown Theatre, 3700 Broadway avenue; Plaza Theatre, 4701 Wyandotte; Isis, 3102 Troost; Apollo, 3227 Troost; Warwick, 3927 Main; Madrid, 3808 Main; Rockhill, 4608 Troost; Waldo, 75th and Washington; Linwood, 3036 Prospect; Benton, 3200 Independence avenue; Gladstone, 4608 St. John avenue, and Vista, 2613 Independence.

(Follows identification of Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.: Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation; Columbia Pictures Corp.; United Artists Corp.)

Your Informant further states that during the year 1935, a more exact date being unknown to Informant, Respondents created, entered into and became members of and have ever since said time participated in a pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation and understanding among themselves and with each other, which tends to and does result in the restraint of lawful trade of full and free competition in the importation, transportation, purchase and sale of and trading in motion picture films in this State, with the purpose, design and view to regulate, control and fix the prices of motion picture film, to maintain such price when regulated and fixed and fix the amount and quality of motion picture films bought, sold, distributed and dealt in in the State of Missouri, and to lessen lawful trade and full and free competition in the importation, transportation, purchase and sale of and trading in motion picture films in this State, and in the refusal of respondents to sell motion picture film to persons not in such pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation and understanding and in threatening persons from selling and supplying motion picture film to persons who are not members of or parties to such pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, association or understanding and in boycotting persons not members of or parties to such pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, association or understanding.

II

Your Informant further states that in pursuance of said pool, trust, agreement, confederation, combination and understanding, so entered into by said Respondents, for the accomplishment of the objects and purposes aforesaid, respondents have committed and perpetrated the following acts:

(1) Formulated and set up an arbitrary grouping and zoning of subsequent run theatres in Kansas City, Missouri, in which the availability, runs and clearance of motion pictures to be exhibited by subsequent run theatres in said city and zones were established. By "availability" is meant the number of days that must elapse between the close of the first run and a subsequent run. By "runs" is meant the order in which the theatres will exhibit a motion picture, that is to say as a first run, first subsequent run, second subsequent run and further subsequent runs. By "clearance" is meant the number of days that must elapse between any two runs, whether first or subsequent, or two subsequent runs. The zoning and schedule of availability, runs and clearances so set up by the Respondents is substantially as follows (the zone numbers being used herein solely for convenience in references):

(a) Zone No. 1, to include Plaza, Isis, and Apollo theatres owned or leased and operated by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and the Gillham, Bagdad and Strand theatres, owned or leased and operated by independent or unaffiliated exhibitors. The Plaza theatre is to have the first subsequent run in said city and all motion pictures shall be available to the Plaza theatre 35 to 42 days after the close of the first run in said city. It shall receive 7 days clearance from the first date of availability over the third subsequent city run, 14 days' clearance from the last date of availability over all subsequent run theatres in said city charging an adult admission price of 20c, 72 days' clearance over all subsequent run theatres in said city charging an adult admission price of 15c, and 129 days' clearance over all subsequent run theatres in said city charging an adult admission price of 10c. All motion pictures exhibited in the Plaza theatre on a single bill policy in that theatre shall not be played by any subsequent run theatre in said city on a double bill policy.

The Isis or Apollo theatres shall have the third subsequent run in said city. The availability for the third run shall be 7 days after the first date of availability of the second subsequent run. The Isis or Apollo theatres shall have the first run over the Bagdad, Gillham and Strand theatres.

(b) Zone No. 2 to include the Warwick and Madrid theatres, owned or leased and operated by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and the Roanoke, Westport, LaSalle and Mokan Theatres, owned or leased and operated by independent or unaffiliated exhibitors. The availability to said theatres in said zone shall be 126 days after the close of the first run in said city. The Warwick theatre shall have the first run in said zone and the Madrid theatre the third run in said zone.

(c) Zone No. 3 to include the Rockhill theatre, owned or leased and operated by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and Lindbergh, Sun, Southtown, Bijou and Mary Lou theatres, owned or leased and operated by independent or unaffiliated exhibitors. The Rockhill theatre shall have the third run in said zone which shall be the first 15c run in said zone.

(d) Zone No. 4 to include the Linwood theatre, owned and operated by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and the Oak Park, Prospect, Colonial, Circle, Murray, Central and Baltic theatres, owned or leased and operated by independent or unaffiliated exhibitors. The Linwood theatre shall have the second run in said zone and which shall be the first 15c run in said zone.

(e) Zone No. 5 to include the Benton, Vista and Gladstone theatres, owned or leased and operated by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and National, Ritz, St. John, State, Belmont and Admiral theatres, owned or leased and operated by independent or unaffiliated exhibitors. The Benton theatre shall have the first run in said zone, the Gladstone theatre the second run and the Vista theatre the fourth run.

(f) Zone No. 6 to include the Waldo theatre, owned or leased and operated by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and the Paseo theatre, owned or leased and operated by an independent or unaffiliated exhibitor. The Waldo shall have first run in said zone and exclusive run over any new theatre which might be erected within a radius of 20 blocks.

(g) Zone No. 7 to include the Lincoln theatre, owned or leased and operated by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., to have first run in the colored zone over all theatres catering to colored patronage in the city.

(h) Zone No. 8 to include the theatres in Wichita and Topeka, Kans., and Springfield and Joplin, Mo. As to theatres in these cities it was provided that all pictures playing a run of seven days or more should not be permitted to play a double bill in any subsequent run theatre.

Choice to Fox Midwest

(2) Respondent producers and distributors refused to negotiate or make contracts with independent or unaffiliated exhibitors until Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., had been afforded an opportunity to make its choice of motion pictures, and of availability, runs and clearances for theatres owned and operated by it in Missouri and Kansas, including Kansas City, Mo., or to negotiate and enter into contracts with independent or unaffiliated theatres until Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., had been afforded an opportunity to set up and work out with the respondent producers and distributors the zoning and availability, runs, and clearance schedule hereinbefore described.

(3) After said zoning and availability, runs and clearance schedule had been set up, fixed and determined upon by respondents, each of the respondent producers and distributors entered into contracts with Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., agreeing to supply said respondent with motion pictures for the 1935-36 season in substantial accordance with said zoning and availability, runs and clearance schedule and not to supply motion pictures to any independent or unaffiliated exhibitor in Missouri or Kansas, including Kansas City, Mo., contrary to the provisions of said schedule.

(4) Prior to the setting up of said zoning and availability, runs and clearance schedule, respondent producers and distributors informed independent or unaffiliated exhibitors that they would not be able to furnish any motion pictures to independent or unaffiliated exhibitors unless the same were subject and pursuant to said schedule.

(5) Respondents have set up said zoning and availability, runs and clearance schedule and respondent producers and distributors on the one hand, having contracted with Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., on the other, not to furnish motion pictures to independent or unaffiliated exhibitors except in accordance with said schedule, the respondent producers and distributors refused to negotiate any contracts or to contract with independent or unaffiliated exhibitors, except on the basis of the zoning and availability, runs and clearances provided in said schedule, and forced other theatre owners as a condition precedent to obtaining any motion pictures for the 1935-36 season to consent and agree that motion pictures should and would be furnished to them only in accordance with said schedule and pursuant to the agreement, conspiracy and monopoly existing between respondents.

III

That by reason of the premises, said respondents have and up to the present time are grossly offending against the laws of this State and have wilfully and flagrantly abused and misused their rights, authority and franchises as corporations and have willfully and unlawfully assumed and usurped authorities and privileges not granted to said corporations by the laws of the State of Missouri and that the acts and agreements of respondent corporations as hereinbefore set forth constitute a wilfull and malicious perversion of the franchises granted to said corporations by the State of Missouri, and illegal and willful usurpation of privileges and authorities not granted to said respondents by the State of Missouri, to the great and permanent injury of the public.

WHEREFORE, your informant, prosecuting in this behalf for the State of Missouri, prays that the respondent corporations and each of them severally be excluded of all corporate rights and privileges under the laws of the State of Missouri, and that their franchises, rights, authority, licenses and certificates to do business under the laws of the State of Missouri be declared forfeited and that each and all of them be ousted from their corporate franchises, privileges, licenses and authority to do business under the laws of this State.

REFILING OF MISSOURI SUIT HELD LIKELY

Missouri's suit to oust distributors for unfair practices may have to be withdrawn and refiled to correct an apparent legal defect which explains why none of the defendants has been served as yet.

There is some legal question in Missouri as to whether the two counts have been properly drawn in connection with their involving some large distributors without actually naming them, and because of the complications of the two different situations: the Warner - Fanchon and Marco-St. Louis controversy and the Fox Midwest Kansas City clearance fight with independents.

White, Leonard To Head AMPA

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' nominating committee in New York, reconsidering its previous resignation, presented to the membership this week a new slate of officers for 1936-37. Their election is thus assured, since Charles Alicoate's ticket, headed by Hal Horne, was at the same time withdrawn, in favor of the following nominees submitted by Charles Leonard's "regular" committeemen:

For president, Gordon S. White; vice-president, Charles Leonard; secretary, Ralph Lund; treasurer, Herbert Spencer Berg; trustee, William Ferguson. Gordon White and Mr. Berg and Mr. Ferguson are serving now in the offices named.

Nominated for the directorate, and likewise assured of election, are: Mr. White, Mr. Leonard, Mr. Lund, Mr. Berg, Monroe Greenthal, Barret McCormick, Tom Waller, George Gerhard and Milton Silver.

AMPA's members, in session for the regular Thursday meeting last week tentatively accepted the artist's design for the medals that will be awarded to the best trade paper, fan publication and newspaper advertisement published in 1935 by the New York advertising departments of distributors, and to be judged by prominent trade, fan and newspaper editors and publishers. The judging was to take place at this week's meeting, and the election of officers at the following meeting.

In reconsidering its resignation, the nominating committee abandoned its attempt to enlarge the board of directors, because of unconstitutionality involved.

Hamrick-Evergreen Meeting

Hamrick-Evergreen Theatres held its first quarterly meeting in Seattle last week. Cash bonuses were awarded to Hal Drigler of the Paramount, Portland; Morris Nemmer, Wenatchee, and Carl Mahne of the Egyptian, Seattle, and George Appleby of the Coliseum, Seattle. Frank L. Newman, Sr., John Hamrick, Al Rosenberg and Al Finkelstein addressed the gathering.

DISTRIBUTORS IN SPAIN BENEFIT BY MUTUA'S DEFENSE OF EDELSTEIN

Credits Tightened and Contractual Obligations Strengthened Through Fulfillment; United Front Achieved for Industry

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER
in Barcelona

With the tightening of credits and the strengthening, in fulfillment, of all contractural obligations directly resulting from the firm stand taken by the Mutua in the controversy centering upon Jacques Edelstein and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Iberica, SAE, which he heads, the distributors, American, foreign and Spanish, find themselves in a position of daily increasing advantage. Recognition by the Spanish Ministry of Labor and of the Consejería de Trabajo of the Regional Government of Cataluña is now confidently expected for the demand of the major distributors that the voting majority of the Cámara Española de Cinematografía be predicated not upon nationalities or unit numbers, but upon the plurality of labor employed.

One of the most active members of the Mutua, M. J. Messeri, director-general of Paramount Films, SAE, long has urged that the voice of the major distributors, with their more extended and more practical experience with exhibitor groups be made the determining factor and that sweeping reforms throughout Spain be thus instituted. Already even the smaller units of the Spanish coterie in the Mutua are beginning to register the benefits of the new and determined stand taken by their organization against the warring exhibitors and it now appears that the distributors' body henceforth will have no difficulty in continuing to show its present united front.

Cites Responsibility

"The majority of votes for the big member companies of the Mutua is as essential as the existence of the Film Board of Trade itself," Mr. Messeri said. Such a step would mean the shouldering by the big companies of responsibility for the introducing of constructive ideas and constructive measures for all the members.

"Until recently the entire film industry in the country has been so disorganized that only the hard work and cooperation of all may now bring it to normalcy as compared with that of other countries.

"If the small distributor has been able to live comfortably up to this day, he has to thank the big companies for rigidly maintaining their contracts and, above all, for the maintenance of rental prices.

"A strong Film Board of Trade can only be built upon lines charted by the big distributors. This must naturally take the form of a big distributors' majority, so as to avoid disturbing and unsettling influences arising from agitation by the smaller units on points meaning nothing of constructive value to the Film Board of Trade. Once this majority is realized, then the following points should be studied and put into effect as soon as possible:

(1) Zoning of each key city.
(2) Stiffening of admission prices.
(3) Circuiting of releases.

"Thus far we have had the incongruous situation of a fifth run, for example, playing a picture before a second or a third run. This situation tells on the entire industry.

"Among other items are minimum guarantees, box office checking, double and treble bills and evils too numerous to recount, but which a united stand and determined action may succeed in correcting—speedily and permanently."

Technical Freedom Urged

Original Spanish-language production of motion pictures, both by Spanish and American companies, will be second only to English language production and logically will enjoy distribution not only in Spain, but throughout the Spanish-Americas, the Philippines and in the big Spanish colonies in the United States and abroad, when technical personnel and equipment from abroad are more freely admitted and welcomed, in the belief of Clifford R. Smith, European commercial manager of Electrical Research Products, Inc.

Interviewed at the Barcelona office of MOTION PICTURE HERALD at the Hotel Ritz, Mr. Smith, who was accompanied by Mrs. Smith upon his visit from London, his headquarters, said his observations here and in Madrid had convinced him that original Spanish language production was making noteworthy progress.

"The weakness of Spanish productions," declared Mr. Smith, "seems to me to lie in a lack of the trained technical personnel, directors, cameramen, sound technicians, makeup men—the invisible army.

"When the Spanish picture industry seriously settles down to develop that side of the business, and if it employs the traditional intelligence and acumen it has manifested in other lines of endeavor, to adopt in the beginning, at least, a liberal policy toward bringing into this country experts in the fields I have indicated, who can teach and train Spanish personnel, then we shall see the start of serious and efficient original production in Spain.

"The tremendous improvement in British production that we have seen within the last two or three years has been due very largely to the fact that they have brought in experts from Hollywood to train English personnel. I believe the ultimate solution of the existing problem here will be a mixture of the best foreign language product dubbed into Spanish and a reasonable number of Spanish originals based upon Spanish stories.

"In the near future there certainly will be an increase both in the quantity and in the quality of original Spanish pictures made in this country.

"It is obvious that with the possible exception of French production, that in the Spanish language has by far the greatest possibilities in the export market. Eventually there may be greater distribution for Spanish than for French pictures and second only to English language films—but they will have to be good pictures! Further, I believe the American companies will take a financial interest in original production in Spain as soon as the Government and the local cinema factors have provided the facilities. There is no fundamental difference between the technique, the equipment and the methods of recording used in the studios in this country and those in Hollywood or London or Paris."

Mr. Smith, visiting the studios of two Western Electric production licensees—Fono España in Madrid, and Voz de España in this city—was guest of honor at a luncheon at the Hotel Ritz by John W. Dolphin, general manager of Western Electric Company of Spain. Among those present were: Mr. Messeri; Enrique Aguilar, the recently appointed general director of Hispano American (Universal) Films; William B. Morgan and Bernard J. Gottlieb, chief executives respectively of Artistas Asociados (United Artists) and Columbia Films, and S. Persichetti and G. Paolucci, of the Voz de España Studios.

COERCION CHARGED IN SPANISH SUIT

Alfred Allentorn, Francisco Fernandez and Francisco Benajez, owners respectively of the Smart, Basque and Delicias theatres, Barcelona, have charged coercion in a suit brought in criminal court against Zolio Oliver, president of Mutua, Enrique Aguilar of Universal, vice-president, Jose Viros of Warner, secretary, and the distributor organization itself.

The exhibitors' complaint alleged that the defendants forced Senor Benajez to pay 29,000 pesetas assertedly due MGM when he had a standing balance of 7,000 pesetas with Mutua.

PULLMAN MOVIES REPORTED CLOSER

Features Shown Rail Executives Amid Screeching of Brakes and Blowing of Whistle

After months of experimentation, sound motion picture exhibition on trains is about to become a commercial reality, according to a report from Chicago where Sidney Cohen, formerly with MGM and said to be a former New York exhibitor, is understood to have closed a deal with the Pullman Car Company.

Extensive tests were made by the Pullman company on a car of the Illinois Central railway at Chicago, and they showed that sound pictures can be shown successfully while a railway train is in motion, observers said.

Hollywood Interested

That Hollywood interests have at least an eye to the development of the idea was seen in the assignment by Louis B. Mayer, production head of MGM, of Fred Barthow, MGM publicity man, to witness the demonstration and to report back to Mr. Mayer on the possibilities.

The desire of the Pullman company is to have the plan in operation by the time vacation rates go into effect, so that they can advertise the feature in summer vacation ad campaigns.

Several others have been attempting to promote the idea, and the railroads have been eager to add films for the convenience of travelers, but Mr. Cohen's negotiations are the first to have reached a definite stage, according to sound equipment companies. Installations are scheduled to be made on the Illinois Central and probably other lines some time this summer.

Meanwhile from Lincoln, Neb., comes word that independently of the Pullman company the Burlington line is giving films a trial in its dining cars to obtain public reaction to the idea. It is planned to equip all through trains for sound films.

The Union Pacific railroad also is reported to be preparing for nightly motion pictures on through trains running between Denver and Chicago and other long jumps.

Tests Made Near Chicago

The Pullman-Illinois Central tests were made with RCA Photophone 35 mm. on an 18-mile stretch near Chicago. Every sort of condition prevailing in railroading was used. Stopping, starting, whistle blowing and screeching brakes were applied while feature films were being shown to railroad executives in a standard club car. Several are reported to have said that the demonstration proved sound films can be shown advantageously to railroad passengers.

Mr. Cohen left immediately after the tests for Hollywood, where, according to the reports, a company is being formed to handle the commercial phase of train exhibitions. Details were promised soon. Mr. Cohn then returned to New York.

RCA Photophone in New York had no information other than that Mr. Cohen has been working on the plan for some months and that a previous test had been conducted at Pittsburgh. However, it was said that the plans contemplated use of a new model RCA portable projection equipment.

Captain Jefferson Davis Cohn, a Wall street broker, also has been working on the idea about a year and negotiated for installations of Trans-Lux rear projection equipment. His plan was to show newsreels, comedies and other shorts in a special car, giving a one-hour performance at an admission of 50 cents. His negotiations had been with the Pennsylvania railroad and an initial installation had been planned for the run between New York and Washington.

Another company promoting the idea is the Coast-to-Coast Railroad Theatre Corporation, chartered at Albany, N. Y., recently by Oscar Rubin, Goldie Stahl and Mollie Schnee.

The tests conducted in Chicago, the other day, were attended by railroad officials from practically every company. The executives included several presidents of railroads as well as other officials and technical chiefs.

Standard Car Used

For the demonstration a standard Pullman club car was used. The equipment, built by RCA with this use specifically in mind, was very compact. The whole unit, generator, transformers, and projector was enclosed in a steel case about four feet high, three feet wide and 15 inches deep. As each car only generates 32 volts and 115 volts are necessary for projection purposes a generator was used.

A tripod brace effect and special clamps holds the projector unit in place. It is easily mounted and dismantled. A screen of the roller type is used at one end of the car. In the tests the picture was so clear that drawing the curtains, was not necessary, although it was done to show the film at its best.

According to one of the railroaders present, one was unconscious of the action of the train. The sound equipment gave perfect reproduction and made one forget the outside noises.

Present plans for showing pictures in Pullman cars on all the better trains are expected to be culminated shortly. A closed Pullman company, selling no stock, has been formed to handle the entire motion picture project for the Pullman interests. This company expects to equip 300 cars during the next six months, enough to handle all principal trains for all railroads.

The company will not only equip the trains but will provide operators, films and handle all details. Booking of pictures will be handled by the new concern and the Pullman company will pay a flat rate for the entire service, paying so much per car installation and per car service.

Dimension Illusion Process Revealed

A third dimensional illusional process developed by the Fleischer Studios was explained in New York this week when it was demonstrated to a special audience by Max Fleischer, head of the company. Mr. Fleischer did not claim actual third dimension but said his device tricked the eye into thinking it saw depth. Further experiments in the process are being made.

Mr. Fleischer said he had developed a camera with a finity of only six feet, so that objects beyond that distance are not photographed. Miniature sets are built on angles to conform with this six-foot perspective and the animated characters are photographed several inches in front of the sets. The platform holding the set is constructed as part of the camera and must be in slight motion to give the desired effect.

Experimental shots taken with the new process have been incorporated in many of the recent Fleischer cartoons, released by Paramount. According to Mr. Fleischer, many unsolicited letters from exhibitors to himself and to Paramount, inquiring whether third dimension was used in filming the cartoons, convinced him he was on the right track.

The plane of action is limited to left and right and up and lown. Figures walking away from the camera would increase in size and figures walking toward it would shrink. The real secrets of the system are contained in the camera, which is to be patented before further details are revealed.

Plan Nebraska Circuit

A new circuit is in the offing for Grand Island, Neb., and vicinity, with William N. Youngclaus, veteran independent, and Lloyd Thompson, son of Senator W. H. Thompson, supplying the backing. The proposed circuit will be capitalized for $199,000. Mr. Youngclaus also has the State, Central City; Shelton, Shelton, and Empress, Grand Island.

Chilean Theatre Equipped

Western Electric Company of Chile has announced the signing of contracts for the installation of equipment in the new Teatro Circo in Santiago, Chile. The house, which is now in the final stages of construction, will seat 10,000 and will be used for all types of entertainment similar to that presented at Madison Square Garden in Manhattan.

Broadway Theatres Auctioned

The Astor-Bijou-Morosco theatre block at Broadway and 45th Street in Manhattan was sold at auction last week to the City Investing Company, real estate firm, for $1,800,000. The sale is subject to a first mortgage of $1,000,000 held by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Mayor to Address SMPE

Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago will address the opening luncheon of the Spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago, April 27-30. Other Chicago speakers will be John Balaban and Jack Miller.

THE WILL ROGERS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL FUND

CELEBRATED IN ALL THEATRES
throughout the United States
Week of May 22 to 28 inclusive

For a period of one week, starting Friday, May 22nd, 1936, a theatre campaign for funds will be conducted for the maintenance and expansion of the WILL ROGERS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL at Saranac Lake, N. Y. This hospital, built at a cost of over one million dollars, will be available to the needy and destitute of our industry. Ushers, film exchange employees, actors, managers — everybody in the business will be eligible for admission to this living monument to the memory of a man you all loved.

Patients taken care of at the WILL ROGERS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL are drawn from every part of the country—therefore the appeal should be general. Sponsored by every producing, distributing and exhibiting organization, it has been decided that the widest appeal and the greatest results could be obtained through either theatre collections or the theatre membership plan described in the coupon below. It is hoped that exhibitors will adopt one plan or the other in order to insure the complete success of the campaign.

Theatres in which collections are to be taken up will receive a trailer featuring such box-office names as Shirley Temple, Bing Crosby, Irvin Cobb, May Robson and Lowell Thomas. This trailer makes a stirring appeal and should produce fine results with audiences. Exhibitors participating in the membership plan will receive a short trailer stating "This Theatre Is A Member of and Has Contributed To The Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Fund" as well as a card to display at the box office indicating his support.

Watch the trade papers for further announcements on the WILL ROGERS MEMORIAL FUND and get behind the campaign 100%. It deserves and needs your support because it is not only a tribute to the memory of a great man, but a definitely constructive force in the industry. It is YOUR hospital!

I HEREBY APPLY FOR MEMBERSHIP IN THE WILL ROGERS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL FUND AS FOLLOWS:

1. I will take collections three times daily in my theatre / theatres and run the trailer with Lowell Thomas, Bing Crosby, Shirley Temple, Irvin Cobb and May Robson, during the week of May 22nd - 28th. ☐ YES ☐ NO

2. I will subscribe memberships for my theatre / theatres on the seating basis, and enclose my check for $_____ ☐ YES ☐ NO

(Each theatre seating 500 or less $10)

CHINA'S THEATRES SHOW BIG GAIN IN RECEIPTS UNDER SHOWMANSHIP

Short-Wave Broadcast Mirrors Return to Exploitation; Decline of Domestic Production Aids the Foreign Films

by J. P. KOEHLER
in Shanghai

If the cheering results of the box office for the month of January are any indication of the year to come, then the motion picture industry in China is due for progress that upsets all calculations. For, taking everything into consideration—depression, increased taxation, floods and droughts, a depressed currency, and many business and bank failures—the month saw record attendance at China's motion picture theatres.

One reason for the improvement was the fact that both the now officially recognized January 1st New Year holiday and the Chinese Lunar New Year came in this month, and, contrary to expectations, the government lid was not clamped down so hard this year on the Lunar New Year celebrations, with the result that the teeming population had several days of holiday commencing January 24 and lasting until January 28th.

This brought to the cinemas tens of thousands of persons whose one yearly vacation falls on the Lunar Year, and whose one yearly attendance at the theatre coincides with the same date.

The distributing agencies made a noble effort to give the crowds what they wanted, and when they wanted it. Certainly January was a record month for big picture releases in Shanghai. January 1st saw "Mutiny on the Bounty" (MGM); "Three Musketeers" (RKO-Radio); "Stars Over Broadway" and "Frisco Kid" (Warner) on the screens of Shanghai's four first-run cinemas, and the Lunar New Year did record breaking business at the same theatres with "A Night at the Opera" (MGM); "Top Hat" (RKO-Radio); "The Littlest Rebel" (Fox) and "The Bride Comes Home" (Paramount).

In between these great holiday releases Shanghai cinema patrons were given "The Melody Lingers On" (UA); "Ah Wilderness" (MGM); "Shipmates Forever" (Warner); "Mary Burns, Fugitive" (Paramount); "Alice Adams" (RKO-Radio); "Steamboat Round the Bend" (Fox); "Sweet Surrender" (Universal); "We're in the Money" (Warner); "Remember Last Night" (Universal); "The Arizonian" (RKO-Radio); "Thunder Mountain" (Fox); "Moonlight on the Prairie" (Paramount); "Freckles" (RKO-Radio); "So Red the Rose" (Paramount); "The Case of the Lucky Legs" (Warner) and "The Payoff" (Warner); with a reissue of Fox's five-year-old "Just Imagine." All played to excellent business.

Exploitation projects are coming back to Shanghai after a lapse of such work for a long time. Real showmanship was reflected in the broadcasting of the music from a popular local night club via short-wave radio, that was received in England and Australia, for Warner's "Shipmates Forever."

"Mutiny on the Bounty" did record business for 10 days at the Nanking theatre, Shanghai. "Top Hat," doing 8 days to C$23,000, almost reached the Metropol theatre's previous high record of "Curly Top" which ran 12 days to C$25,000. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers continue to be the most popular musical comedy team on China's screens.

But what is probably the outstanding business of the month and past year is the run of eight days, at the 2,000-seat Grand theatre in Shanghai, of "The Littlest Rebel" (Fox) which topped C$40,000! Even four shows a day, one over the regular amount, did not take care of the crowds. Shirley Temple is today almost universally conceded to be the greatest box-office attraction in China. Paramount's "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," which finally has received the official sanction of the Nanking censors after a long delay, is following this record business at the Grand theatre with the "full house" sign out at all performances and with seats reserved ahead for days.

Such films are real meat for the cinema patrons in China, and undoubtedly the releases scheduled for the next two months, which include: "Metropolitan" (Fox), "Last Days of Pompei" (RKO-Radio), "Crime and Punishment" (Columbia), "China Seas" (MGM), "Captain Blood" (Warner), "Charlie Chan in Shanghai" (Fox), and others, should and will bring encouragement to a situation that was distressing, to say the least.

See Local Production Drop

That there will be a decided drop in Chinese native film production during the coming year is the rumor, seeming well founded, that now is going the rounds. It may be that Chinese film producers, finding no money in the cheap "quickies," are curtailing production and conserving assets against larger and better native pictures in the near future. If such is the case, foreign films will find a larger market for at least the next 15 months to fill the gaps in the smaller theatres which have been playing almost 100 per cent native film and will have to use foreign pictures.

However, it is a foregone conclusion that only foreign films of the action variety or exceptional appeal will make their way into these houses, and most of the product will be drawn from old stocks already well played. New product moves comparatively slowly in China, due to transportation problems and widely scattered theatres. The usual practice of the distributors being to import one print, or, in the case of popular pictures, two or three prints at the most, circulation takes an unusually large percentage of playing time.

Canton Fee Still a Problem

That the Canton censor fee situation is still a center of contention and may yet develop into another serious interruption of film service, is shown by the reluctance (or obstinacy) of exhibitors in Canton to settle up due accounts. It is high time that certain of China's exhibitors realized that film rentals are moneys belonging to the renter, and not money to be used for paying up other accounts. Delinquent receipts are the bane of the distributors' existence in China and many are the accounts that are outstanding after weeks of patient and willing cooperation to assist an exhibitor to carry on over a tight period.

If service is stopped due to unpaid rentals, a howl is set up that pressure is being brought to bear to put the exhibitor out of business, and resentment is set up that rankles in the minds of both sides for long periods.

Generally speaking, the great majority of China's exhibitors sincerely cooperate in the observance of contracts, playdates and remittances of percentage receipts, but there are too many cases of C.O.D. flat rentals being left to lie in post offices or in the hands of banks, just because the exhibitor wants to play something else. And in China, these things nearly always take place in outlying ports where there is no alternative except losing the date, and thereby disrupting all bookings along the line.

The task of the Film Board of Trade (China) has been to decrease such delinquencies without ill-feeling, by giving the exhibitor a fair opportunity to explain, and it is to the credit of the organization that in every case where the exhibitor was willing to come forward and give reasonable reasons for such delinquencies he has been met more than half-way and decision very often given in his favor against a member, for the good of the trade as a whole. Most of its members being of long experience in China, the problems peculiar to this country are known, and also exhibitor temperament and custom, and therefore they cannot be accused of trying to force a foreign viewpoint upon native exhibitors.

When China's delinquent exhibitors fully realize this, and understand that in the exhibition of films their success lies not only in the fullest cooperation with the distributor, but also in observance of playdates and forwarding of shipments so that the exhibitor next in line will benefit, then and only then will overhead costs be reduced and rentals cut down. However, what China needs badly is speed and reduction of red tape in film transportation, and only the government itself can relieve this by instituting special handling for motion picture films; for time lost, due to transportation, transfers, port delays and local censorships, is more than 50 per cent of available playing time.

QUALITY OF FILM MUSICALS PRAISED

"Forty-nine musical films have been produced in the United States during the past year, whereas previously they made only between 30 and 40," declared Miss Margaret Lockwood, chairman of the committee on Music and Motion Pictures of the Ohio Federation of Music Clubs, in addressing the federation convention in Cincinnati last week. "There has been a decided improvement in the quality as well as the quantity. All indications point to increasingly good pictures. Almost all of the great operas and the better operettas will be produced for the screen, according to predictions," she continued.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 18.—(A) Why should there be two doors to a projection room entrance, with space between? (B) How may inductances be tested in the projection room? (C) Describe two methods for testing the adjustment of lateral film guides in the sound head.

Answer to Question No. 14

Bluebook School Question No. 14 was: (A) What is polarity? (B)Is the light from the arc tail flame of any value in illuminating the screen? (C) How does the illumination value of an electric arc compare with its crater area and its brilliancy?

Until about May 10 I will be on a trip. This and the succeeding answer have been prepared before all the answers were in. Therefore, all names of those submitting correct answers may not be given. The following sent in correct answers to Question No. 14:

S. Evans and C. Rau; B. DeVietti; G. E. Doe; W. C. Brown; J. J. Cuddy; A. L. Cooper; W. H. Edwards; W. Limmroth; J. R. Prater; M. and J. Devoy; C. L. Loft; R. A. Hooker; O. L. Daris and F. Simms; H. T. Lally; T. H. Morton, F. H. and L. Klar; D. L. Hunt; R. and K. Wells; L. D. Dodson and H. T. Todd; P. and L. Felt; K. B. Victor W. H. Edmonds; H. D. Lilly; S. E. and C. Gay; D. L. Slinger; D. L. Potholm; W. B. Gilespie and R. Long; M. R. Williams; H. Nolan; D. Pollock; R. Mills and N. J. Perkins; R. F. Swift; S. Myers and N. F. Fanchette; A. L. Long and T. J. McGuire; T. R. Fanning, W. Burns and W. Daniels; D. McGee and N. E. Olliver; S. G. Sanders and G. Sargent; W. Bollinghause; R. D. Oberleigh and J. Lansing; T. H. E. Richman; G. K. Bruice; T. L. and G. Daniels; J. G. Schofner; D. Howard; F. L. and N. Savlor and G. N. Guidotti; H. T. Tomkins and G. L. Stall; G. Johnson and L. R. Spooner; George J. O'Brien; T. T. Golley; B. H. Thaller and D. Anderson; H. K. Abernathy and R. Tomkins; G. G. Branscomb; T. C. Callihan and B. L. Jenkins; G. J. Long and T. Burt; D. Emmerson; W. L. Simmons; B. L. Mathew and H. C. Larson; D. W. Myers; C. Hawkens; J. L. Samson and L. D. Samson; A. L. Sanderson and B. Davis; R. L. Sottu; D. N. Nixon; H. T. Ball; L. L. Davis and G. W. Billings.

(A) C. L. Loft says, "Polarity is the foundation principle of electrical action," which is correct, if not very explanatory.

R. A. Hooker says, "The electrical difference between the two wires of a live electrical circuit is termed polarity. Action between the two may only be secured by establishing a current carrying connection between them."

S. Evans and C. Rau explain thus: "Polarity is the electrical affinity that exists between positive and negative wires, or parts of any electrical circuit."

Barney DeVitti says, "Polarity is the force or attraction exerted by negative for, or to, negative which tends to overcome any existing resistance and thus to enable them to combine."

William C. Brown describes it thus: "Polarity is a condition existing in every live electrical circuit. One wire carries a negative,' the other a 'positive' charge. This condition exists between the charged wires or objects only when both are attracted to the same power source."

P. and L. Felt explain it thus: "Polarity is the name employed to describe a certain electrical condition existing between conductors charged with an opposite electrical pressure or condition emanating from the same power source. It is what, in effect, we mean by the term voltage. Scientists do not as yet very fully understand exactly what it consists of. We do know, however, that if a wire be attached to the positive of a working generator, battery or electrical power source, and another to the negative, there is a pressure or condition existing in or between them that may be used in an electrical engine (motor) much the same, or with much the same effect that steam under pressure is employed in a steam engine, and it is this positive and negative power, force or energy that is termed polarity."

Which is a pretty fairly comprehensive answer. But I will give you one more from A. L. Cooper, who says, "Polarity is the foundation of electrical principle, which in effect is the separation of elements that desire to unite. These elements are termed positive and negative. It is their tendency to unite that we term polarity, or voltage."

(B) William Limmroth says, "The illumination supplied by the arc tail flame has no value in so far as has to do with screen illumination. It is so located that it cannot possibly be focused on the projector aperture, at least in such manner that it will be carried forward to the projection lens."

A. L. Cooper says, "The tail flame has no value at all in screen illumination. The projector optical system is so designed that only the crater floor or mazda filament can be focused at the aperture."

G. E. Doe says, "While a portion of the light from the tail flame may and probably does, at least in most instances, get through the projector aperture, it cannot possibly get into the projection lens for the reason that its location is so far from the optical axis of the system that light from it would be sent downward beyond the aperture and thus all fall below the projection lens. If projectionists using a light source having a heavy tail flame will, without film in the projector, raise the fire shutter when the arc is burning normally, and hold a white card at proper angle above and below the rear end of the projection lens, they will in most cases find the one below to be much more brightly illuminated than the one above, which is due to tail flame light."

(C) William C. Brown says, "The illumination value of an electrical arc crater is directly proportional to the area and brilliancy per unit area of its floor," which is a comprehensive and correct answer.

B. DeVitti says, "The only illumination that can be utilized by a lamphouse optical system, where an electric arc is used, is light from the floor of the arc crater. Since this is true, it is very evident that any change in the area of the crater floor must and will result in corresponding change in the screen illumination value of the light source. The brilliance per unit area of different types of electric arc are each of fixed value that does not change with changes in amperage, hence it is evident that the illumination value of an electric arc light source is in direct proportion to its brilliancy per unit area and its total area."

Dear Herald:

We are in receipt of a letter from B. R. Johnson, who operates the Orpheum theatre at Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada, in which he says, "Say, J. C., come up and see us some time, also see God's country where drought, dust and grasshoppers are unknown." Say, B. R., that must be some country.

He also tells us about the fishing up there, and that would make any Izaak Walton sit up and take notice. The facts are we'd sooner whip a Royal Coachman or a Brown Hackel or a Black Gnat over some of the trout streams up there for a half a day than to be president of the United States for 15 years. So don't anyone try to nominate us. B. R. says they ship annually 60,000 pounds of strawberries and 15 tons of blueberries. Gee whiz, just think of the blueberry pies that would make, and who wants anything better than baked trout and blueberry pie? Some time ago we received a letter from a boy up in Nova Scotia and one from another away down in Australia and another from London, England, and this proves that the HERALD doesn't only cover the field like an April shower, but that it also covers the entire earth.

We want to take this opportunity to thank all these boys for writing us; it was mighty doggone nice of them, and they have, not only ours, but the best wishes of the HERALD also.

Every once in a while a few of us learn something. We have learned something to a certainty, and that is that our heating system won't run without oil in the reservoir. In this respect it resembles April Shower very much, for she won't run without gas in her tank. But speaking of gas, you ought to listen to some of the political spellbinders on the radio.

We went to see "The Country Doctor" with Jean Hersholt, June Lang, Slim Summerville, Michael Whalen and Dorothy Peterson and the Dionne quintuplets, a picture produced by the 20th Century-Fox company. Our judgment is that this picture will have a tremendous appeal to the motherhood of the country, and the dads will be enthusiastic about it, also, largely because of the Dionne quintuplets. And our judgment is also that if you exhibitors want something to please your audiences and to stimulate your box offices you better get this one.

Jean Hersholt plays the part of Dr. Allen Roy Dafoe and he gives an excellent performance of that character. June Lang plays the nurse part and she certainly knows how to play a nurse. Slim Summerville is the constable who is supposed to arrest the doctor for doctoring without a license, but he don't know just what to do, and John Qualen acts the part of the father of the quintuplets, and when Jean Hershort brings in the babies, one at a time, to have them wrapped in warm blankets you should see that Dad. Boy, he will have both your congratulations and sympathy. Slim Summerville took a few drinks and then passed out. When it comes to strawberries, blueberries and babies we have got to hand it to Canada. Also fish. Twentieth Century-Fox can be proud of this one, and an exhibitor can be proud for showing it. The quintuplets playing in the nursery will get you, or else we don't know pictures.

When we receive letters from exhibitors in foreign countries it makes us wonder at the wide circulation of this magazine.

It not only proves the popularity of motion pictures, but it proves the necessity of the Herald wherever pictures are shown.

Down in Washington is where they make laws to govern the people of the country, and out in the country is where they get the money to pay for the governing.

During the past winter the Middlewest has had more snow than in any winter that we know of, and we have seen a lot of 'em, and when it melted the most of it went into the ground. The run-off was very light, and that makes the outlook for the coming season very good. And now if they will fill up the drainage ditches that are draining the lakes and marshes of the country and conserve this water, they will have done something worth while. But then, maybe we don't know.

We see a statement in the press that the Government pays out $712 for every time we draw a breath. Good gosh, but ain't that sumpin? Spose we all try holding our breath a while and let the taxpayers catch up.

Since the electric chair has terminated the Hauptmann-Lindbergh case, we are wondering just what the yellow journals, politics and the vaudeville are going to turn to for front-page publicity.

Some people wonder just why Lindbergh left this country. The morbid minded newshawks and camera might furnish the answer. Maybe the law enforcement officers could help some, too. It has always been our belief that Madam Justice had something to say, but how about it, Mabel?

It seems that the Townsend Old Age Pension folks have got Congress all hot and bothered. Maybe they are wondering just what effect it is going to have on politics, and maybe from a political angle they are wondering about the National Union for Social Justice, too, but what we'd like to know is just when the bass season opens in northern Minnesota, and how the outlook is for the huckleberry crop.

Those people who have been led to believe that they would get $200 a month pension should get a pencil and paper and figure out how they could get something for nothing. We never could, but then our mathematical calculations have been confined mostly to figuring out the cost of beans and sowbelly.

We can't think of a sensible thing today
To make this colyum seem fit,
But we think we can hear Ernie Rovelstad say
"Hurrah, for he's going to quit."

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

ATLANTIC ADVENTURE: Nancy Carroll, Lloyd Nolan—A fair program picture which played to below average business. In fairness to the picture, we feel it should have played better were it not for a two-day blizzard.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS, THE: Richard Arlen, Charlotte Wynters—This is not a bad show, but don't be deceived into thinking it's like the book because the only thing they took from the book is the title. There should be a law against this practice as your customers are going to be disappointed if they read the book and the most of them have. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 28-29.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—This may be rather unusual, but like to compliment Columbia on this wonderful picture. Saw it last week at a special screening in Memphis for exhibitors and I think without a doubt it is better than "It Happened One Night" and Frank Capra is to be commended in turning out such entertainment as it is. Pictures like this make me proud to show them. You won't have to hide when they come out after viewing this one.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

FEATHER IN HER HAT, A: Pauline Lord, Louis Hayward—This English stuff don't go in our town. Can't see why they insist on making it. Running time, 73 minutes. Played April 8-9.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

FIGHTING SHADOWS: Tim McCoy, Geneva Mitchell—This was above average McCoy picture. The farmers broadcast the news and the exhibitor put oil on the front doors. It's a story of the mounted police. McCoy didn't do so much shooting, but puts on a swell fight.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HEROES OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard, June Gale—If your patrons like good singing, then this will suit them to a "T" as they open the picture singing "Boots and Saddle." However, Ken spoils it later singing a song and playing a fiddle, but it seems that is necessary to put over the story. Good action in it and a fight that keeps the audience interested. Ken never fails to deliver and my patrons like his westerns. Running time, six reels. Played April 10-11.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

LAWLESS RIDERS: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell—Okay for a week end date on a double bill too many western pictures now and Maynard doesn't carry the zip he used to have. The story is very weak. No complaints, but business off 25 per cent. Played April 3-4.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, La Crosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

LONE WOLF RETURNS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Gail Patrick, Tala Birell—Interesting program picture, nice comments, fair business. Not enough box office strength in the star. Played April 4.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Family patronage.

SHE MARRIED HER BOSS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Edith Fellows—Opinion unanimous that the child actress, Edith Fellows, was the outstanding star in this one. She played the part of a mean, little, spoiled brat to perfection, then turned right around and had everyone in the audience loving her before the film closed. Douglas also very good in his part, and Colbert wonderful as ever. Very good entertainment. Played April 11.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WESTERN COURAGE: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell—If Columbia gives this star any more poor material like this story, he will be finished. The only intelligent part of the whole show is the horse. Ken acts so dumb he lets the girl take both of his guns away from him twice during the show and you know what a cowboy is without a gun. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 14-15.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—A natural; pleased everyone. Joe Brown is growing in popularity with us. I think this picture should do business anywhere.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Erroll Flynn, Olivia De Havilland—Personally thought it a great picture. Apparently my women patrons heard it was too realistic and stayed away. We got the men and the result was average business. Played April 5-6-7.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Family patronage.

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—Swell title. Not as good as they have made. But what really counts is it took in the money for three days when it was 18 below zero here. Played February 20-21.—R. L. Sherman, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

SONG OF THE SADDLE: Dick Foran, Alma Lloyd—We have a double policy on Friday-Saturday. I played this feature on single bill and out-grossed the socalled specials. Played April 3-4.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR, THE: Paul Muni, Josephine Hutchinson—A very fine picture, but a hard one to put over. Most of these pictures are too technical, but this was not. It carried through what evidently was Pasteur's life in a logical way. Muni, as always, gives a good performance and was splendid as Pasteur. Those that saw it liked it, and it was generally acclaimed as well produced and interesting in the steps that brought the cure for rabies and the advancement of medical science.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Mascot

HARMONY LANE: Douglas Montgomery, Evelyn Venable—Nothing to this picture, story and direction very weak; got by as I played it on Bank Night, but my advice is to pass it up if possible as would fall flat if you expected it to hold up on its own power. Played April 1-2.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, La Crosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AH WILDERNESS!: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Eric Linden—After Metro took all the smut out of the story they also took all the kick out of it, too. Wasn't suitable picture material in the first place and certainly wasn't the special that Metro classified it as. No business, but just another reason why Metro will be out of my two towns next year. Played March 22-23.—Ralph Larned, Paramount Theatres, LaCrosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell—Still probably the best musical comedy ever made. Filled with stars of screen, stage and radio, and entertaining from beginning to end. How that girl (Eleanor Powell) can dance! Running time, 103 minutes. Played April 12-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery—Played this pretty old, but it was only recently that we felt justified in taking on a Metro contract at the prices they seem to think they should have. They were a little more liberal than before, so we'll try again. This, of course, is a very fine picture, but did not draw any more than our usual run of specials. Running time, 89 minutes. Played April 5-7.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KIND LADY: Aline MacMahon, Basil Rathbone—A real dud. Nothing to it. When people came out they wondered what it was all about. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 13-14.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Groucho Marx, Chico Marx, Harpo Marx, Kitty Carlisle, Allan Jones—Did a good weekend business to satisfied patrons. Did not care much about it, but as I did business, think it should do business in any small town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PERFECT GENTLEMAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Cicely Courtneidge—Fair picture of comedy romance type. No drawing power. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 6-7.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

PERFECT GENTLEMAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Cicely Courtneidge—A washout. She can't sing and she can't dance, so what have you?—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RIFFRAFF: Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy—Good picture and Spencer Tracy's acting always pleases. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 29-30.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeannette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—I never heard people rave so about a picture in all my life. Did better than average Sunday-Monday business in spite of bad weather. Sound and photography very good. Give her both barrels, boys; she's worthy of every effort and you won't disappoint a single person. Running time, 112 minutes. Played April 5-6.—Jerry Waller, Elroy Theatre, Elroy, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—Might be a swell show. I did not get film rental. Bad weather. Played February 25-26.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

THREE LIVE GHOSTS: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker—Terrible business! Picture had possibilities, but negligent directing spoiled it. Love interest was subordinated to the point where it was almost thrown in spasmodically. Not enough scenes. What! Is Metro trying to save money after spending $2,000,000 on "Mutiny?" Producers ought to have learned by now that comedy and tricky plots are insufficient to carry a picture. It's got to have love interest somewhere in it. That's what the ladies go for, and in most theatres it is the ladies that constitute the major part of the audience. Played April 8-9.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Family patronage.

THREE LIVE GHOSTS: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker—Metro's error, no hits, no runs and everyone left on the bases, the audience and exhibitor with them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TOUGH GUY: Jackie Cooper, Joseph Calleia—Believe you me, this is a honey. If you haven't played it, get it and don't be afraid to drag them and they'll be pleased. Played April 2.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

VOICE OF BUGLE ANN, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—Just about the best small town picture we've had the pleasure of playing in several moons. More favorable comments than we have ever received on any picture. Barrymore's recital of Senator Vest's eulogy on the dog is worth a spot in anybody's theatre. Played March 26.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

Monogram

GREAT GOD GOLD: Martha Sleeper, Sidney Blackmer—Good stars. Weak picture. Played on a double bill.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Paramount

IF I HAD A MILLION: George Raft, Cary Cooper, W. C. Fields, May Robson, Richard Bennett—A reissue. My advice is not to play this picture. Might have been wonderful when they first released, but not now. Leave it off. I made the mistake of giving Raft feature billing over the rest of the cast. W. C. Fields and May Robson best "act" in this picture. Bennett also good. Running time, seven reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MEN WITHOUT NAMES: Fred MacMurray, Madge Evans—Fine picture. But I cannot see how it could be compared with "G Men." It is not that good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

TWO FOR TONIGHT: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett—Bing is slipping. This was the poorest excuse of a piece of entertainment that he was ever in. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 18-19.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

BAR 20 RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Story weak for this type western. Bill Boyd too old to fool the public and I think that Jimmy Ellison's praise has gone to his head. At least he has let down from the pace that he started in the first Cassidy yarns. My advice to Paramount if they have to have an old man for a western is to get Harry Carey. He can ride rings around most of the young and old ones, too. He has a voice that really commands and I for one would like to see him starred in a series of outdoor pictures. Played March 27-28.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, La Crosse and Basine, Kan. General patronage.

BAR 20 RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—An excellent western with all the "it" of a big production. Should please any audience. This theatre not used to running westerns, but the Hopalong Cassidy series have proven great entertainment. Paramount takes the cake for these outdoor operas.—G. McChesney, Strand Theatre, Freehold, N. J. Small town patronage.

DRIFT FENCE: Larry Crabbe, Katherine DeMille—Somewhat above the average of westerns, this pulled and pleased on a mid-week run. Running time, 56 minutes. Played March 25-26.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DRIFT FENCE: Larry Crabbe, Katherine De Mille—Just about average Zane Grey western, but hardly the usual beautiful scenery. Story was good, however. Running time, 56 minutes. Played April 10-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

F MAN: Jack Haley, Adrienne Marden—A good comedy based on the story of a boy who wants to be a G Man and William Frawley kidding him to believe that he is in training to become one lends to open the way for a lot of funny situations and quite a lot of new gags. Good audience reaction and business good. National Screen's trailer is good advance copy. Will please for any day in the week. Played April 1-2.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, La Crosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

GLASS KEY, THE: George Raft, Edward Arnold, Claire Dodd—George Raft is the whole show. Mystery plays do not seem to take well with us, and attendance not as good as usual. This picture is very similar to "The Thin Man," but perhaps a little more interesting. If your patrons like mystery plays, this one is O. K., but we don't want many of them.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

HER MASTER'S VOICE: Edward Everett Horton, Peggy Conklin—Lack of action and a superabundance of dialogue combine to make this only a fairly entertaining picture. Used as a preview, it got by, but it is doubtful that used as a single attraction it would stand up. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 27-28.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HER MASTER'S VOICE: Edward Everett Horton—Excellent comedy; pleased everyone. Drew fair. Running time, 76 minutes. Played April 7-8.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

KLONDIKE ANNIE: Mae West, Victor McLaglen—One of Mae West's best pictures, but the worst Sunday business in many weeks and, though West has never been the draw that Paramount leads you to believe, I feel sure the adverse advertising this picture has received from Hearst newspapers did a lot to hurt business, yet the picture itself is quite clean and even a couple of ministers commented on it. Extra advertising did not help business. Played April 5-6.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, LaCrosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Kent Taylor, Evelyn Venable—Played this as a revival to a disappointed box office as a result of weather.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PETER IBBETSON: Gary Cooper, Ann Harding—Too slow and draggy. People did not like it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 25-26.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

SO RED THE ROSE: Margaret Sullavan, Randolph Scott—A Civil War story that is different. Good cast, well produced, interesting, entertaining, well liked, but played to poor box office. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 4.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

TIMOTHY'S QUEST: Eleanore Whitney, Dickie Moore—Another very good feature with not too good cast names. Dickie Moore and Virginia Weidler are excellent, but we thought Virginia very much miscast. She is a swell little actress, as is also Dickie a dandy little actor. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WINGS IN THE DARK: Myrna Loy, Cary Grant—A fairly good action story, but it is somewhat spoiled by the mistakes of the photographer, which are altogether too noticeable. There should have been about 100 feet more at the end of the last reel, as the picture left you with the same impression as when reading a novel and finding the last few pages torn out. All the parts are played well. Average attendance. Played April 10-11.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

Republic

SINGING VAGABOND, THE: Gene Autry, Barbara Pepper—Poor direction and a bad actor in a bum picture.—Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky. Neighborhood patronage.

TWO SINNERS: Otto Kruger, Martha Sleeper, Cora Sue Collins—Little Cora Sue Collins tops them all, even Shirley Temple, in this picture. This is one of the finest pictures. You cannot please your dear public without this picture. Played Sunday-Monday. April 12-13. Business above average.—Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky. Neighborhood patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—This one had everything that makes for good entertainment but box office appeal. We expected good business, but did almost none. Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 14-15.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

ANOTHER FACE: Wallace Ford, Phyllis Brooks—Pleasing program picture containing just the proper amount of action and suspense to make it plausible. Excellent for double bills. Played April 9.—J. R. DeLand, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town patronage.

FANG AND CLAW: Frank Buck—This kind of picture is dead at the box office. It no longer brings 'em back alive. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 24-25.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

FARMER IN THE DELL: Fred Stone, Jean Parker—Made to order for Iowa exhibitors. We outgrossed "Top Hat" with it. Just the kind of a homey picture that people like. Make no mistake, Stone is and will be box-office with more suitable stories and young players with him. Running time, eight reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Tops. Their best to date. Good for all kinds of customers. Played April 5-6.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

GAY DIVORCEE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This is not to inform anyone of the merits of this wonderful picture, but merely to say that at this late a date I received a very fine print from RKO. Personally, liked this much better than "Top Hat," but somehow don't believe many people would agree with me.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

HIS FAMILY TREE: James Barton, Maureen Delany—Just wonder how RKO expects to sell their product next year with features like this and some more I have coming. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 1-2.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux, Neb. General patronage.

I DREAM TOO MUCH: Lily Pons, Henry Fonda—Who would think that RKO would deliver the best picture yet released starring an opera star. The story is fairly good and Miss Pons is good to look at and her voice simply wonderful; all of her songs are not of the classical type and she sings jazz as charming as the others. While business was not up to standard, everyone that saw the picture enjoyed it and I believe that her next one will prove more profitable at the box office, but I hope that they leave Henry Fonda out of it. Played March 25.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, LaCrosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

KENTUCKY KERNELS: Wheeler and Woolsey, Spanky MacFarland—Old but fine. Spanky MacFarland is a "wow" in this. "Here Comes the Band" next week and the children are already talking about "Spanky." He appears in the last named picture also.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Dorothy Wilson, Preston Foster—From here on, I lay off this type of picture, providing the exchanges will let me. Smallest business this year. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 8.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE ON A BET: Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie—One of the best. What your patrons want to see. Played March 22-23.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

MURDER ON THE BRIDLE PATH: Helen Broderick, James Gleason—Neat little mystery picture. Plenty of comedy and it moves right along. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

POWDER SMOKE RANGE: Hoot Gibson, Boots Mallory—I expected a lot from this picture and was not disappointed. RKO put something into this picture besides a drug store cowboy and horse. They had a good story and they got some real actors to put it across. The result, a darn good show. Running time, eight reels. Played April 4-5.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

RAINMAKERS, THE: Wheeler and Woolsey—Typical of this team's previous offerings. If there is any one point of complaint, it is in the overlong railroad chase sequence, which became tiresome. Pulled well and generally pleased. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 27-28.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SILLY BILLIES: Wheeler and Woolsey—These boys usually click here, but we struck bad local competition, but no fault of picture that we didn't fare so well on it. Come again. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame, Paul Lukas, Heather Angel—Didn't do so well on this. I can't make a thing on RKO or haven't so far with the exception of "Top Hat" and "Powder Smoke Range." This picture is good, but would have been better with Fairbanks. I can't see why Fairbanks doesn't remake "The Thief of Bagdad" and reissue "The Black Pirate." They would be wonderful productions for a sick box office.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Although I played this too old, it still did better than average business. The trouble is they let the radio stations play the songs to death before we small town exhibitors get a chance to play the picture. Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 20-22.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN: Preston Foster, Jane Wyatt—A good story of a cop who can lick the world with his fists and only comes to his senses after he is temporarily blinded and proves that fear demands caution. Everyone liked the picture and the supporting cast of Jimmy Gleason, Jane Wyatt and Jane Darwell exceptionally good. Played March 27-28 and owl show.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, La Crosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbes—Little Shirley pulls at your heartstrings, upsets your tickle box and gives an all-round pleasing performance. Played to excellent business in spite of "flu" epidemic. Don't miss it if you're in the business to make money. Played April 5-6.—J. R. DeLand, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Warner Oland, Irene Hervey—Old, but nevertheless a mighty good program picture. Our patrons enjoy these Chan stories. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 3-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET: Warner Oland, Rosina Lawrence—Fair mystery. Seemed to satisfy; not much business, however. Probably due to Lent.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Family patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cobb, Rochelle Hudson—This is a remake of "The Working Man," which George Arliss made some years back, and I really believe that Cobb does as good work as Arliss did. My opinion of Cobb is that if Fox gives him suitable stories and with a little more action that he has the best opportunity of taking the place of Will Rogers. Rochelle Hudson does very good work, but Norman Foster is a washout, but give us more of Johnny Downs. He is a swell youngster and will go a long ways. Everybody liked "Everybody's Old Man." Played March 29-30.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, La Crosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cobb, Rochelle Hudson—I played this as a double bill, with below average Wednesday-Thursday biz. Cobb is a natural, with good wit and and humor mixed with good common sense. I believe he will draw good in this town when he gets better known on the screen. Very good program picture. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 8-9.—Jerry Waller, Elroy Theatre, Elroy, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT: June Lang, Thomas Beck, Spring Byington—Very good program feature with an unknown cast which is becoming more and more typical of Paramount program pictures. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Dorothy Wilson—A masterpiece, the kind the exhibitor wishes he could play once a week.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IT HAD TO HAPPEN: George Raft, Rosalind Russell—Pleased to see Raft in the type of character most fitted for him. Satisfied all my patrons.—G. McChesney, Strand Theatre, Freehold, N. J. Small town patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Jack Oakie—Swell show. Weather bad. Played February 28.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

METROPOLITAN: Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce—The music teacher and myself were the only ones who liked it. A gang of young bloods threatened to lynch me if I ran any more like it. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 22.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers—Our hat is off to Jane Withers. "Paddy O'Day" was a fine vehicle for this versatile miss. Not a strong picture, but good enough. Give us more like it. Running time, 76 minutes. Played February 15.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—When I think of the pictures that Fox put Baxter in some two years ago, and then see this one, in which Baxter gives as great a performance as he did in "The Arizona Kid," I wonder where their judgments have been. Given the roles that he can sink his teeth into, as he does in this one, he is right back on top. And I am glad to see Harry Carey get a break, as he does in this picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Barthomew—Another reason why Victor McLaglen wins the Academy award. A swell picture that pleased everyone. A good Damon Runyon story and the thing that impressed me with this picture was that while the story was laid in a foreign country the dialogue throughout was American with the exception of Freddie Bartholomew, and his is pleasant English. Good for any day of the week. Played April 3-4.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, LaCrosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew—Over-acted. Played April 7-8. —R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—Played this late. Not up to Rogers' par, but his pictures always reflect at the box-office in increase in business.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Family patronage.

SHOW THEM NO MERCY: Rochelle Hudson, Cesar Romero—A fine picture, but the title killed it. Numbers of patrons remarked, "Didn't think I would like it, but I did." Fair business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 7-8—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

THANKS A MILLION: Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak—Did good business in spite of zero weather and 10-foot snowbanks. Pleased every one. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 29-March 1.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY: Edward Everett Horton —Edward Everett Horton is not strong enough to carry a starring role. Yet in support he cannot be beat. This picture, while a fair comedy and story, is not the howling, screaming comedy that the trailer and advertising would lead you to believe. Will please on a double bill or bargain night. Played March 26. —Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewell Theatres, La Crosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

United Artists

GHOST GOES WEST, THE: Robert Donat, Jean Parker—Whether this pleases your patrons or not depends on the type of audiences you cater to. If they prefer what is termed broad comedy, then this picture will be a flop. But if they enjoy the more subtle humor and something that draws on the imagination, then this certainly should click. Personally thought it as clever and different as anything I have ever seen in pictures, but few shared my opinion. Business fair. Running time, 82 minutes. Played April 3-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MELODY LINGERS ON, THE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Houston—Not so good for a small town; a little too high class. Just one of those that appeal to the high-brows and there are not enough of those. I don't like to see them walk out on a picture and they did that on this one.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—The customers said either no good or swell. Played April 9-11.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

RED SALUTE: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young, Cliff Edwards, Gordon Jones—I can't see why this picture has received so many bad reviews in this department. It proved to be very, very good in my town. Many, many fine compliments. Cast good with extra honors going to Cliff Edwards. The song he sings in this is fine. Very good trailer from National Screen Service. Gordon Jones is also good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

STRIKE ME PINK: Eddie Cantor, Ethel Merman—Fair show that got the money. Played March 29-30.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

THREE MORE REPORT ON PRODUCT SHOWN

From Kentucky and New Jersey this week come reports on "What the Picture Did for Me" from showmen contributing for the first time their comment on product. They are:

Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

G. McChesney, Strand Theatre, Freehold, N. J.

Returning to the army of reporters after more than a year's "absence without leave" is W. B. Boughn, Jr., of the Soo Theatre at South Sioux City, Nebraska.

Universal

DIAMOND JIM: Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—Played this late, but drew them in. Very good, and when they tell you it's good here, they turn out for it. Followed Diamond Jim Brady's life nearly to the letter. Enough human interest to keep them interested and still appeal. Spot this any day and play up the railroad angle. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 10-11.—Ken A. Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

GREAT IMPERSONATION, THE: Edmund Lowe, Valerie Hobson—Fair program. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 10.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

LOVE BEFORE BREAKFAST: Carole Lombard, Preston Foster—No April Fool joke in presenting this one to our patrons. It's got that certain something that makes the patrons leave the theatre all smiles. Reminiscent of "Hands Across the Table," and "The Bride Comes Home." This has originality and a refreshing tempo of its own to make it click in any situation. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 1-2.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—Beautiful picture; a magnificent production. Irene Dunne is splendid and as for Robert Taylor, this picture makes him. Business the best in many, many moons.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Family patronage.

THREE KIDS AND A QUEEN: May Robson, Henry Armetta—Fine picture. Not so good on the draw for me.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

COLLEEN: Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Dick Powell—Just finished Sunday business with above average receipts. The Lenten season is over now, which means a lot to me. Hugh Herbert as a poor but honest millionaire carries the comedy, assisted by Jack Oakie, as his executive assistant, but in reality a one-man brain trust. I have seen Powell better, but it pleased everyone. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 12-13.—Jerry Waller, Elroy Theatre, Elroy, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGEROUS: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone—Good entertainment. Terrible weather. Business average. Played February 16-17.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

FRESHMAN LOVE: Frank McHugh, Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull—Silly picture; practically no plot or dramatic punch. College is far from this hackneyed story portrayal. I'm a college senior myself; I ought to know.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Family patronage.

FRISCO KID: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay—Good action picture; played to good business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 25-26.—M. D. Warner;, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN HUNT: Marguerite Churchill, Ricardo Cortez, Charles "Chic" Sale—Exciting comedy drama with a not too-well-known cast. Played April 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MISS PACIFIC FLEET: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—I was disappointed in this one as were most of my patrons. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 17-18.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST, THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart—This picture was petrified until Bogart appeared in the gangster sequence and then it started to move. Howard kept his record clean in being no draw at the box office. Four long reels it dragged, until Bogart appeared and this was the only saving grace of the whole picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

STARS OVER BROADWAY: Pat O'Brien, Jane Froman, James Melton—Played this musical very late and then on bargain night. Business not so hot and trailer failed to do picture justice. Melton has a wonderful voice and a fairly handsome fellow. Women liked him very much and believe he will go better next time. Personally think him better than Crosby. Jane Froman is a nice eyeful and swell voice. Story is not good, but all musicals are rather thin in story value. Good picture for any date. Played April 1-2.—Ralph Larned, Paramount and Jewel Theatres, La Crosse and Bazine, Kan. General patronage.

STARS OVER BROADWAY: Pat O'Brien, James Melton, Jane Froman, Jean Muir—This show did not click in our situation. Thought it much below average. Grand opera is never appreciated by our farmers. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

STARS OVER BROADWAY: Pat O'Brien, Jane Froman—Just a fair picture that was spoiled for my audience by two arias from grand opera. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

GUM SHOES: Broadway Comedies—Good comedy, or at least the audience laughed. Running time, 20 minutes—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

I DON'T REMEMBER: Harry Langdon—For downright belly laughs, this one will get them for you, and it is clean as a hound's tooth. Running time, two reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

PARDON MY GRIP: News World of Sport Series (1934-35)—A birdseye view of modern wrestling techniques in various parts of the world. Comments by the announcer add to the general humor of the picture. Presents wrestling as it really is: a big joke. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 6—Boswell Sisters, Jimmy Durante, the Three Stooges, Henry Armetta and others stage a "benefit" at Grauman's Chinese Theatre. Loosely tied together and very short, the various "acts" manage somehow to get a laugh, so I suppose everything's okay. Fair entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STARS OF TOMORROW: Just fair. Running time, one reel.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

"TECHED IN TH' HAID": Barney Google—In color, this is the first of the new Barney Google series. Sure to get a good response from any audience. The comic song "Barney's Teched in th' Haid" is still echoing around the corridors here. Almost up to the "Popeye" standard. Running time, seven minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Educational

WAY OUT WEST: The Cabin Kids—Mostly Cabin Kids and they are not enough to carry two reels. Just another one of those things that are called comedies.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALIBI RACKET: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Splendid miniature drama in the Crime Doesn't Pay Series. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

AUDIOSCOPIKS: Special—Shorts do not get any money for me. Although this is worth while running it will make your customers talk about your theatre.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

DONKEY BASEBALL: Oddities—If you haven't played this, play it soon because it will go great in this time of the year, during the hall season. Would advise you to get at least a one-sheet on this and let your patrons know it's coming. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU, PARADISE OF THE PACIFIC: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—An exceptionally interesting and beautiful travelogue in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE PAPA: Our Gang—This little fellow Spanky is a wow and he's almost the whole show in this two-reeler. You can't go wrong on this one. Running time, two reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

PRIMITIVE PITCAIRN: MGM Miniatures—Good one-reeler of its kind, hut my audience is tired of this type of shorts. Good to run hefore "Mutiny on the Bounty.' Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

STARLIGHT DAYS AT LIDO: Musical Revues—Another swell musical from Hal Roach. Running time, two reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

STARLIT DAYS AT LIDO: Musical Revues—All color, two-reel musical, with Hollywood stars. It's the hest we played in a long time. Don't fail to get this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilhury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TOP FLAT: Todd-Kelly—Another good one in this series. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. H. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TWIN TRIPLETS: Todd and Kelly—Another good comedy from this team. Plenty of laughs and good wholesome entertainment. Running time, two reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

Paramount

DIZZY DIVERS: Popeye the Sailor—Fine one-reeler. Popeye mighty popular here.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

EASY ACES SERIES: Can't see these shorts as comedies. My patrons do not care so much for them. RKO has good colored cartoons, hut I can't say much for the rest of their one-reelers. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

FRAMING FATHER: Smart Set—Slapstick comedy that is ahove the level. Kids will get a great kick out of it and it pleases the older ones, too. It's great to hear them enjoying a comedy and they sure did this one. Running time, two reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR THEATRE OF THE AIR: No. 3—Nothing outstanding, but on the whole acceptable entertainment. Running time, 19 minutes. —M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11—This series appeals to only a few people in my town. Children do not like it and they don't fail to tell me so. Running time, two reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MISMANAGED: Paula Stone—Another Amateur short. Pretty good. Running time, two reels.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

TUNED OUT: Headliner Series—Good comedy, different from the ordinary run. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neh. General patronage.

Universal

CARNIVAL TIME: Mentone Musical Comedy—Splendid variety type offering, presented in a different manner. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CASE OF THE LOST SHEEP, THE: Oswald Cartoons—This cartoon is not as good as former ones from this character. Can't see why Universal has changed Oswald. Think his color, etc., of last year much better than present year makeup. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR OSWALD: Oswald Cartoons—Pretty good cartoon.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre. Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS: No. 14—These shorts still holding out here and many say they are as good as a feature. But they still will have to climb to heat "Strange As It Seems." Running time, nine minutes.—Ken A. Higgins, Capitol Theatre, Harrisville, N. Y. Small town and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS: Have only played one in this series and it was pretty good. But I have played so many reels of this kind lately that my audience didn't care so much for this. Running time, one reel—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MENTONES: One of the hest subjects of its kind on the market. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

OSWALD CARTOONS: Not as good as last year, as they have made Oswald look too much like a real rabbit. Running time, eight minutes.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: Good filler for any program, especially good if you have a comedy feature. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: Good one-reeler. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre. Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN BE HAD: Universal Comedies—One of the hest comedies of its kind ever made. All actors are chimpanzees. If you want to get something that will cause a riot with the kids as well as please the adults play this two-reeler from Universal. And advertise it. "Fay East" (a takeoff on Mae West) is very good. Running time, two reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FUNNY LITTLE BUNNIES: Silly Symphonies—Very clever. Fine for a weekend around Easter.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MICKEY'S FIRE BRIGADE: Mickey Mouse—One of the best of the Mickey Mouse series. Running time, eight minutes.—M. H. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MICKEY'S FIRE BRIGADE: Mickey Mouse—Fine entertainment. All United Artists colored cartoons are excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neh. General patronage.

THREE ORPHANS KITTENS: Silly Symphonies—One of the best color cartoons we have ever screened. Running time, seven minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Vitaphone

CURIOUS INDUSTRIES: Our own United States Series—Very good single reel. Very educational.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

KEYSTONE HOTEL: Old Timers—The first Warner Bros. comedy we had that hrought out some real good laughs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MR. AND MRS. MELODY: Broadway Brevities—Disappointed in this musical. They make hetter ones than this.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilhury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SOME CLASS: Charles Ahearn—Very good one-reeler. Pleased very much on Sunday-Monday. Children are still singing "Huckleberry Pie." Would be better for Saturday, I believe. Characters all take the part of hoboes and Charles Ahearn teaches them the art of "panhandling." Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Serials

Mascot

MIRACLE RIDER: Tom Mix—Fair serial, nothing extra. I can't see why Tom Mix should receive so much "knocking" as several exhihitors have given him on account of his acting in this serial. True, he is not as good as when he was a young man in the silent days, hut he is still plenty good enough for our patrons. Wish he would make a few westerns with some company that knows how to make 'em. Believe they would be real money makers for weekends. Can't see why Universal hasn't reissued the westerns Tom Mix made a few years ago with them.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Universal

TAILSPIN TOMMY SERIALS: Universal makes about as good serials as there are on the market. Running time, 20 minutes each chapter.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. General patronage.

Roxy Reports $138,778

Howard S. Cullman, as trustee for the Roxy Theatre Corporation in New York, has filed a statement in the federal court of the receipts and disbursements of the corporation from Feb. 28, 1936, to March 26, 1936. The report said that the cash receipts amounted to $138,778 and the disbursements $152,255, and that $45,664 was paid to New York City in tax arrears. He explained that there are no arrears on taxes at present. The report added that as of Feb. 27, 1936, the date of the last report, there was cash on hand in the bank amounting to $82,023, and as of March 26, the sum of $68,546.

Academy Honoring Laemmle

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will tender a testimonial dinner in Hollywood to Carl Laemmle, Sr., at the Ambassador Hotel April 23. It will be an industry and civic affair with the Los Angeles and Hollywood Chambers of Commerce backing it. The Producers' Association had planned to give a testimonial dinner to Mr. Laemmle until it discovered the Academy had been formulating plans for a similar event. Frank Capra has been named chairman and Irving Thalberg toastmaster.

Small Estate $2,194,000

The will of Mrs. Theresa Small, widow of Ambrose J. Small, Toronto theatre owner, disposed of an estate valued at $2,194,000, approximately one-half of which was bequeathed to the Roman Catholic Church. The will is being contested by Mary F. Small, his sister. Ambrose Small vanished a few moments after he had left his Toronto theatre on the night of Dec. 2, 1919, and the case has been continuously before the public since that time.

General Electric Report

An increase of 21 per cent in orders received by General Electric Company for the first quarter of 1936 represents more than $10,000,000, it has been announced by Gerard Swope, president. It is said to be the largest quarter since the third period of 1931, $59,569,879 was reported for the current quarter in comparison with $49,379,932 for a similar time in 1935.

Pettey to Join WHN

Herbert L. Pettey, secretary of the Federal Communications Commission, will join the Loew-MGM radio station WHN in New York. He will take up his new post as director in charge of sales and promotion on May 1, when his FCC resignation takes effect.

Terry Promotes Davis

Mannie Davis, associated with Paul Terry for the last 15 years, has been made head of the Terry-Toons story department.

CHICAGO PALACE AND CANTOR SPLIT INTAKE

Novel Contract for Appearance of Comedian's Radio Show; Ross Finds Business Better

by BILL CROUCH
in Chicago

Eddie Cantor has signed to appear in person at the Palace theatre with his radio show in the week of May 22d. The terms in Cantor's contract for this engagement are most unusual. The film and radio star will split the box office receipts with the theatre, fifty-fifty, from the first dollar.

This is the first time such an arrangement has been made by a Loop theatre for any stage attraction. The percentage is very high and starting from the first dollar probably will bring the comedian a fancy price for the engagement. Local theatre men expect the gross for the Cantor date to run near the $40,000 mark, which would mean a salary of about $20,000 for Eddie and his entertainers.

The Cantor show is one of the first of the larger stage offerings planned by the RKO-Palace executives who brought vaudeville back to this Loop house after five weeks of straight film program. Abe Lyman and Band start this Friday. The RKO French revue, "Folies Comique," will be booked in for the week of May 8th and may be held over for a second week. Jack Hylton and his Band are in line for a return engagement, and Eddie Duchin and his Band will appear later this spring. Pictures booked for the Palace include "Rhodes, the Diamond Master," "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," "Showboat" and others.

At the B. & K. Chicago, stage attractions to appear in the near future include: Our Gang, Ted Lewis and Band, the Radio City Music Hall Choir and Jack Benny with his Radio Show. Film bookings at the Chicago already set are: "13 Hours by Air," "Captain January" and "Small Town Girl." At the Oriental Buddy Rogers and his Orchestra will perform on the stage as will Fletcher Henderson and his Band. The film attractions at this house include "Paddy O'Day," starting Friday, followed by "The Voice of Bugle Ann." At the United Artists theatre "Things to Come" follows "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and at the Roosevelt "Under Two Flags" follows "The Country Doctor," "Mr. Deeds" follows "Message to Garcia" into the Apollo. The Garrick bookings have not been set to date.

H. A. Ross, president of Ross Federal Service, passed through Chicago last week en route to New York after his annual three months' tour to practically every key city in the country. Mr. Ross drove the entire route.

"Business conditions seem to be improving everywhere," Mr. Ross said. "In the south and southwest business is better than in the northwest. Business on the Pacific coast is very good in San Francisco and Los Angeles. In Seattle, labor troubles have hampered things. In the midwest the rise has been gradual.

"Theatre business throughout the country is showing a great improvement. Everywhere you go you find theatre men more optimistic than they have been any time during the past five years. New theatres are being built, theatres are being remodeled and there are few dark houses anywhere. Theatres for sale are a minus quantity.

"Double bills are very current, and while most theatre men do not like them they say they are a necessary evil."

The National Posters Association held their annual convention at the Palmer House last Saturday and Sunday. More than 40 delegates were on hand to hear the discussions. Simon Libros, president of the association, conducted the meetings.

While no official announcement was made of the organization's plans for the coming year Mr. Libros pointed out that the group planned to broaden its field and take on added work. It was definitely decided, he said, for the group to enter into the manufacture and distribution of screen art products for lobby displays as well as other accessories. He said the plans for the coming year had much to offer the exhibitor, full details to be announced in a few weeks.

Roy Kendis of the Cleveland Poster Exchange was named vice-president. Last year's officers were reelected.

Under the guidance of James E. Coston, Warner theatres in Chicago and Milwaukee will enter into a business-getting drive for May, June, July and August, starting May 1st. The drive will be in the form of a baseball league with awards to the winning teams and players. An all-day meeting of Warner theatre executives and managers will be held at Goose Lake, Ill., next Monday.

The Better Films Council of Chicagoland held a directors' meeting last Friday and voted $25 for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Fund. The annual meeting of the council will be held next Friday with Dr. Frank Garrett Ward of the Central YMCA as guest speaker. Dr. Ward will demonstrate the use of "Secrets of Success" films which have been made from excerpts of famous motion pictures. The meeting will be held at the Lighting Institute.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plans to hold its anuual sales convention here this spring. The date set is May 11th. The Palmer House will probably be headquarters.

HONORS OVERSEAS

Reported and pictured otherwise in this issue are the further honors heaped upon the Quigley Competitions by the presentation in Paris of the Quigley January Silver Plaque to Rene Lebreton by M. Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

In this crucial period of world affairs, it is highly gratifying that the Foreign Minister of France should find occasion to so honor the Paris Paramount Theatre manager, publicist Andre Agramon and the Paramount organization in France represented at the ceremonies by executives Andre Ullman, Ike Blumenthal and Fred W. Lange.

Lebreton and his associates may well feel honored by the sentiments of M. Flandin who expressed his pride in the outstanding accomplishment of the French theatremen. They may feel doubly honored that in taking so important a part in the Quigley Awards presentations, the French statesman stamps his approval upon the high standard of advertising and exploitation craftsmanship established by our brother-showmen on the other side of the water.

CAN'T HAVE IT BY JUST ASKING

Favorite topic to sound off on, again pops up with recent perusal of a circuit house organ in which the call is clarioned for loyalty from the help, for that extra yardage to push the grosses over the good ole goal.

Which is all well and good. No reason at all why theatremen should not feel loyal toward their organizations and superiors if—(and there's always an "if") in turn the big bosses are loyal to them.

Fact is, you'd be surprised how much the average manager wants to be loyal, to be proud of his association, to work his ears off for the job, to respect and genuinely like his superiors.

But, shucks, Aunt Clara, 'tis amazing how few of the Big Guys really try to inspire this sentiment in the ranks by giving the other fellow a fair shake and by rallying 'round when a manager needs a friend.

Sure, there's stout fellahs sitting up at the top desks who have the loyalty of their men and treasure it as they would the rarest of hard-won decorations.

They have the loyalty of their managers because they deserve it and not only because they ask for it.

MORE LATITUDE

Key man of an important suburban church group on behalf of his organization recently called upon managers of three opposition theatres in his community to discuss the putting on of a benefit performance for the church treasury.

The first theatreman, though anxious to cooperate, was limited by an arbitrary home office regulation in the matter of percentages and thus could not offer a satisfactory arrangement on outside sales.

The second manager just couldn't be bothered and gratuitously volunteered his general ideas on the subject. The third was so much enmeshed in auditing department perplexities attendant upon the handling of benefit tickets, that he likewise proved unsatisfactory.

Thus, for one reason or another, three theatremen who could do with a lot of extra business pass up not only what undoubtedly would be a big evening but also extra future admissions that might result.

To obtain needed revenues from as yet untapped sources of patronage, managers capable of making their own deals should be allowed latitude as befits individual cases—or are we asking too much?

"Do You Remember", Unusual Co-op Idea

Ten merchants of Brandon, Canada, cooperated with Manager A. C. Digney on a six-week advance contest that built up the date on "Remember Last Night" and also helped grosses on pictures intervening. Details are reported as follows:

Campaign opened with a two-page co-op spread announcing contest, to wit: Each week 12 scenes taken from pictures previously played at the theatre were shown at the theatre, six scenes to each change of program. Patrons were asked to name the pictures from which the scenes were taken and to fill in the names on special contest blanks obtainable only from the participating merchants.

During the last week of the contest, all the contest scenes, 72 in number, were shown again for those who missed any during the regular showings.

Each Monday night during the drive, on the stage, two of the merchants sealed the 12 titles involved in an envelope and turned it over to local Dominion bank manager who secreted them in special deposit box at bank. This was done to impress the fairness of the contest upon patrons and that only Digney knew the answers.

At the end of the contest, on night of opening of "Remember Last Night," all envelopes were opened by the bank manager on the stage and titles read. Announcement was made that prizes would be distributed later in the week, which brought another big house.

Prizes were $200 in cash, and each week of contest this was announced in a special page co-op ad. Merchants were furnished fresh blanks each week by Digney, who had the coming program imprinted on reverse side with copy on the contest.

Entrants secured the blanks at stores and had to turn them all in at one time to the judges. Digney's trailers all stressed the "Remember" angles going back four years for pictures selected for the contest.

Puts On Gold Rush For "Sutter's Gold"

Located in the home of the Colorado School of Mines and also the center of a large mining territory, it was fitting that Manager Walt Jancke, Gem, Golden, Colo., put on a gold rush for juveniles as exploitation on "Sutter's Gold." In cooperation with one of the local dailies, the stunt was featured with great success, paper breaking page one and paying for some of the incidental printing.

Story run day ahead of the opening invited all the kids in town to take part in the "rush," silver coins buried in a vacant lot being the prizes in addition to awards for youngsters wearing best prospectors' costumes. The young miners assembled at the theatre (see photo) for the judging and to receive "claim stakes," which also carried theatre copy. Kids were told to plant the stakes alongside the spots each chose to dig, to protect individual "mines".

Other of the stakes were planted in every front lawn in town and placed twenty yards apart on all roads leading into town. Jancke says the unusual posting made quite a flash, as many motorists stopped to read the copy.

Valuable ore specimens and interesting mining equipment was borrowed from the School of Mines for prominent window display. Included, too, were old carbide lamps and mining picks used in some of the surrounding mines some 50 years back.

For other windows, Jancke made up a lot of "gold nuggets" from brass. This was done by melting brass into bucket of sand by means of brass welding rod and torch, brass dropped into sand in small pieces. When cooled, the metal chunks make a very passable gold nugget, says Jancke, and he reports fooling a lot of the boys on Film Row with his newfound "wealth."

Second Annual "Show"

Answering queries in particular and for the information of readers in general, announcement is now made of the second annual "Show of Showmanship" sponsored by Motion Picture Herald through Managers' Round Table Club, to be held in Rockefeller Center for four days, starting Tuesday, May 19.

Featured among the exhibits will again be representative exploitation and advertising campaigns reported by members in the field. Also shown will be the entries voted the 1935 Quigley monthly Silver and Bronze plaques, including the campaigns that won the 1935 Quigley Silver and Bronze Grand Awards. Other exhibits are contemplated.

In addition to theatremen in the metropolitan area, home office and circuit heads, arrangements are being made for attendance of representative out-of-town theatre groups, executives in allied lines, advertising agency directors and others interested in the mechanics of theatre advertising and exploitation.

Further details of plans to make the second annual "Show of Showmanship" bigger 'n' better will be carried in following issues. There is to be no charge for admission.

Musselman's "Gold" Contest Lands in Two Newspapers

Careful research of the files of one of his town's newspapers revealed to J. J. Musselman, Rialto, Louisville, Ky., an ad published in the March 5, 1849 issue, advertising for adventurers to accompany a party leaving for the gold fields. This ad was reprinted in announcement with contest rules which required writing of an ad for a similar modern discovery. Cash prizes and tickets were awarded winners.

Another stunt that netted Musselman extra publicity was presentation of a dozen copies of the novel to the public library. In order to make the stunt good copy, this enterprising manager got Miss Norma Yutz, local beauty prize winner, to do the presenting. Staff Impersonates Chaplin for Gilman Dressing his service staff as Chaplin impersonators for "Modern Times," Sam Gilman, Loew's Regent, Harrisburg, Pa., put them to work traveling around city in trolleys and busses (see photo). Special animated front was constructed with oversized head of the star, with mustache and eyes in motion.

Newspaper contest was planted with cut showing outlines of various faces, amongst which was one of the star, with prizes to those circling Chaplin and submitting best essay on why they would like to see the picture. Local hairdresser ran ad with cut of Goddard and copy reading "two important discoveries of modern times: Chaplin discovered Miss Goddard and we've discovered a new method for permanent waves, etc." Other merchants used window displays with cards reading "greatest value in modern times" tying in with picture.

Theatres of Kansas City Ranked High in Service

Find Patrons Make Few Complaints On Convenience and Comfort

by K. FORCE
Kansas City Correspondent

A predominately agricultural and distribution center, Kansas City serves a trade area which devotes its activities to farming, stock raising, oil activity and mining. Even so, Kansas City, nineteenth in population, stood eleventh in value of manufactured products in 1933 and twelfth in post office receipts. America's most American city, in 1930 Kansas City had only 24,278—6.1 per cent—foreign born; and, considering its geographical location, comparatively few negroes: 38,594. This may be partly responsible for the remarkably large and fine residential district.

With 400,000, the city is a focal point for a population of 1,059,821 who, from within a 50-mile radius, visit Kansas City more or less regularly on business or pleasure. Business and large events such as the American Royal Live Stock Show attract persons from many hundreds of miles, and enables the city to levy tribute particularly in the 200-mile radius with its population of 5,323,582.

Figures are not available on relative percentages of skilled and unskilled labor, white collar workers, intellectuals, etc., but the character of the city's working population is indicated by the fact that more persons are engaged in wholesale and retail trade than in any other single occupation. Most manufacturing is light, which makes for exceptional cleanliness and brightness of appearance. Wholesale houses, packers, mills, grain exchanges, live stock market; distribution of fruits and vegetables, butter, eggs and poultry; farm machinery manufacturers, automobile assembly plants, and railroad shops, absorb a large share of labor.

In comparison with living costs, wages are comparable with those paid in cities of similar size.

Majority Own Cars

The average admission of first run theatres is 31 cents plus; for subsequent runs it is not quite 16 cents. In this connection it is interesting to note that suburban theatres do not run matinees except on week ends. They have a children's matinee on Saturday, and continuous shows from around noon on Sunday. Even the first run Fox Uptown, far enough out of the downtown section to be called suburban, finds its one-a-day matinee on week days a poor puller except on outstanding pictures. Matinee prices for first run theatres is 25 cents except for the Mainstreet, which charges 35 cents when it has combination stage and picture bills.

An efficient street railways system taps the city's population and makes downtown Kansas City fairly accessible to all parts of the city. The introduction two years ago of passes good for any number of rides on bus or street car has helped movies some.

Much good advertising and exploitation comes out of the Kansas City sector with Round Tablers thereabouts represented frequently and importantly in these pages and it may be reiterated that the first run theatremen "are regarded as very capable men who know their job and get it done."

Physical care of theatres in Kansas City is notable and the general service said to be above the average, all of which is covered herewith in this article which continues the Showman's Travelogue series now running weekly in Managers' Round Table.

—A-MIKE VOGEL.

The majority of families here and in the area own motor cars, due partly to the fact the city is spread out over a large area in proportion to its population, and partly to the character of the inhabitants. Buses reach suburban cities within a fifty-mile radius (replacing interurbans with slower schedules), and this, combined with the fact Kansas City is a railroad center for its trade area, makes trips easy and inexpensive.

The spread-out character of the city creates a natural advantage for suburban theatres by giving them plenty of free parking space nearby. This has been one of the important factors contributing to the trend of attendance away from downtown first runs to suburbans, which set in some years ago, and has continued since.

Parking facilities downtown are as good as, perhaps better than, those in other cities of similar size. But patrons of downtown theatres have to pay for it and it is not so convenient to the theatre. Free parking is decreasing, though paid space is increasing, downtown. The Shubert, old time legitimate house, and another large downtown building only recently have been razed to make way for parking stations.

Four of the five first run theatres (Uptown, Midland, Newman and Mainstreet) are chain operated. This means in most cases that policies originate, pictures are booked, etc., outside the province of the local manager, whose job chiefly is to put them into effect. The same holds true of a subsequent run theatre under chain control.

However, Kansas City is perhaps not unusual in this respect, and first run managers are regarded as very capable men who know their job and get it done. The names of first runs have been made familiar among theatre men of the country by their managers.

It might appear that lack of full responsibility causes the general apathy of theatre men toward affairs outside their own industry. But the criticism holds true of all theatremen in the city, independent and chain operated. Except in a few instances, theatre and film men have not identified themselves with the community through active membership in clubs. They stick closely to the precincts of their own business.

Says More "Jining" Needed

There is very little talking before organizations by members of the industry. This may be explained partly by the generally critical attitude toward movies of a number of groups, particularly those whose purposes are in the direction of "social betterment." This attitude, especially aggressive in some instances, has had the effect of putting theatremen "back on their heels." Too often theatre men have been asked to appear before groups, not for the purpose of increasing understanding and knowledge of the movie business, but for "baiting." They've had to justify the motives of producers rather than explain the large social and cultural significance of movies. This attitude is, apparently, softening somewhat."

But more "jining" is needed to help offset it, and in spite of the industry's sticking to its own bailiwick, it shows a remarkable inability to turn a united front against common non-theatrical competition and criticism.

A theatreman new to the city recently commented that its theatres are above an average on service. Patrons have no complaint to make on the score of convenience and comfort. The only basis of comparison, with other attractions such as the symphony, sports, live stock shows, even legitimate theatre attractions, leaves a very good balance in favor of motion picture theatres. It is simple and easy to get in and out of them, and they are well manned. Built conservatively but expensively and well to start with, the properties are sound and are kept up. Conditions and efficiency of projection and sound equipment are maintained at a high standard. Most theatres here have, in the past year or two, installed cooling systems. Owners of even the cheaper houses have paid a good deal of attention to service and comfort.

MORE ON KANSAS CITY THEATRES

One cause for this is that every theatre in a measure competes with every other, and appeals to more or less the same people. Exhibitors can't rest on purely neighborhood appeal. This is one reason zones are considered very much out of date.

Being distinctly not an industrial town, the city has very little smoke and dirt, and theatres do not become dingy and dirty with their accumulation.

To the outsider it would appear Kansas City theatres use more newspaper advertising space than theatres elsewhere. This is due to a newspaper situation peculiar to Kansas City. One paper, the Kansas City Star, afternoon, with the Times, its morning edition, completely dominates the city. The opposition paper, the Kansas City Journal-Post, carries advertising only on three first runs. The other two first runs and all subsequents advertise exclusively in the Star and Times. Actually the theatre budget for newspaper advertising probably is no greater than in cities of like size. But they spend all or most of their advertising with one newspaper company in two papers.

City Says No Ballyhoo

Ballyhoo is little used by theatres due to very strict ordinances governing parades, special signs, etc. Character of patronage, conservatism of the dominant newspapers, the attitude of the city management, all have contributed to make theatres more or less conservative in their exploitation. One other factor in this respect is the small and conservative fronts of even the finest and largest theatres in Kansas City, which surprises visitors. Theatre building money has gone into soundness of construction and interior beauty and comfort, rather than display.

The Star and Times are cooperative, but conservative, almost as much so as the New York Times, largely due to the highly American character of their subscribers. Hence they do not go in at all for tie-ups or contests, and about all the theatres can get in this respect are cooperative advertisements with merchants and business firms. Music and department stores recognize the advantage of exploitation because of the importance of movies and their effect on styles, so it is easy to get window cards, pictures, in some cases large blowups, in downtown and neighboring windows. On big pictures business houses cooperate in the distribution of heralds, on contests, etc. Theatres tie in with milk companies on bottles, with drug stores, radio and music shops on windows, pictures, etc. The street railway company is very cooperative, publishes bi-weekly a list of attractions at the atres in its "Take One" bulletin, and frequently outside cards on cars and buses along this line, "Attend your favorite movie by bus or street car."

Theatres use straight display advertising in the newspapers. First runs of course employ art layouts; in the case of the Plaza and Apollo, first subsequent runs, small art layouts are sometimes used.

The Times carries a daily column "What's What in The Movies." For the most part this comes from Hollywood and is written by Mary Moffitt, wife of the Star and Times movie critic, Jack Moffitt, who is on leave in Hollywood writing script for Paramount. Occasionally it is written by Landon Laird, who is handling movies while Moffitt is away. It is a chatty column about pictures, productions and stars.

The Times carries an art layout on Thursday (the four downtown first runs open regularly Friday, the Uptown Saturday) of new pictures and their stars. Laird carries some movie stuff in his daily "About Town" column.

The Kansas City Journal-Post has a daily "Views and Previews" column for movie chatter by movie critic Lowell Lawrence. On Sunday its second section's first page is given to movie and theatre reviews with pictures of stars, and Lawrence's column. In the latter, Lawrence plugs outstanding new shows before openings.

Newspapers carry a good deal of stuff from Hollywood, planted well in advance. The Star publishes a syndicated column daily, and treats Hollywood news liberally. Stories of stars and movie personalities passing through Kansas City are carried in the regular news columns.

But publicity is hard, almost impossible to get. If a story has genuine news value, it gets published, but the dominant newspapers are pretty cold to anything that smacks of publicity.

Comparatively little radio advertising is done by theatres. John McManus, manager of Loew's Midland, talks 15 minutes each Tuesday evening over W9XBY on movies and stars.

Opposition runs pretty much to sports—

"Show of Showmanship Coming."

NEWSPAPER DISPLAY. Among the slants used at the world premiere on "Sutter's Gold" in Sacramento, Cal., was a lobby poster carrying copies of old newspapers.

baseball, basketball, ice hockey, etc. Kansas City is considered the hub of fine basketball in the country, and the many games here during the season draw well. Night baseball games are becoming more frequent in the summer. Fights and wrestling pull. The newspapers, manned by good sports writers, devote a good deal of space to sports. Night clubs flourished immediately after repeal, but their attendance has dwindled.

Legitimate shows offer little competition. With the razing of the Shubert, only the Orpheum is left, and its plays during a short season actually bring in some matinee business for movies from outlying communities. The Empress burlesque opened this winter after being dark several years, but folded in a few weeks because of the poor take. The other burlesque house, the Gayety, has been made over into a club. The town has a number of little theatre groups.

Civic Events Aid Matinees

Fritschy concerts, six to ten during the winter, the Kansas City Philharmonic, the Better Homes, Food and Automobile shows, etc., are backed strongly by the newspapers as civic events it is the town's duty to support, and naturally they are pretty stiff competition. They do, however, bring Kansas Citians downtown and people in from out of town, so that downtown theatres at least get them for matinee business. What first runs would like to see is some effort to get people downtown to the theatres, which advertise, pay taxes, buy labor, every day in the year. In some cities merchants are alive to the problem, and are helping; not so here.

One theatre manager said he was old-fashioned enough to think radio and weather still his biggest opposition. But radio competition, he believes, is diminishing. There was a time two or three years ago, when theatres had no business Sunday evening till the Cantor hour was over. This isn't so true any more of outstanding radio programs.

"Kansas City is a good show town." "It isn't." "It used to be—which is true of them all." Opinions vary. It is true, however, that the tendency is away from downtown houses to suburbans.

Few Transients in the City

Causes are several. Subsequents have a choice of all product. However, first runs regard clearance as the most important factor, and point to their very good matinee business when people are downtown. The problem is to get them downtown at night. Chicago, St. Louis, elsewhere, don't have to depend largely on residents for their patronage; they have enough transients. Kansas City has very few. Downtown theatres, then, must appeal to the same group of patrons as suburbans.

There are other factors. First runs, except for the Tower, with vaudeville, and the Mainstreet, with occasional stage shows, offer the same program as suburbans. The latter are as comfortable, have as good projection and sound equipment, are as attrac-

Walt Davis' Free Lobby Match Service

Davis Explains Gadget Lobby

Foyer of the Capitol, Regina, Saskatchewan, is a panorama of constant change, writes skipper Walt Davis who reports a number of the services he furnishes for lobby use. Davis sure goes for what he terms gadgets, among others being the two illustrated top and bottom and originated by this member.

Note the match stand, holding 62 matches, filled frequently during the day. Besides being quite an accommodation, saves lots of wear and tear on the furniture.

Smart, too, is the stand for relief of frosted eyeglasses. That Canada country is right cold and bespectacled patrons coming into the warm lobby are invited to cleanse their glasses with squares of kleenex furnished by the theatre. Walt cuts a box of kleenex through twice to make squares right size for this purpose.

THEATREMEN FIGHT FLOODS

What M & P New England Managers in the Distressed Areas Did to Defend Theatres from High Water

Some weeks back in these pages was described the manoeuverings of Famous Players-Canadian theatremen to keep the show going in the face of floods and the following is a further account of the resourcefulness and devotion to duty displayed by managers of the M & P circuit in the distressed New England area.

Fast Work in Haverhill

The main street in Haverhill is along the banks of the Merrimack River and the flood waters rose to such a height that the entire business district was engulfed—the water rising as high as the marquee of the Colonial Theatre.

Just as the flood hit the theatre Manager Ralph Tully got all of the employees together and went in to salvage as much as possible. All equipment on the stage, including the horns, was tied off and flown in the air. All carpets, furniture, office equipment, files, etc., were removed and placed in the balcony. The employees took up about 300 seats and got the inner set of entrance doors off before the flood waters covered the entire auditorium. It was necessary to abandon the theatre at that time as the water had reached the stage level and was rapidly rising.

At the Paramount Theatre, with his power and light gone, Manager Elias Brodie tried desperately to keep his show going. All the wiring into the house is underground and thus affected by the water. It was necessary to keep the house dark Friday and Saturday. Major Bowes' Unit was booked to open on Sunday for three days. No light and power were available and until Saturday night it was uncertain whether the theatre would be able to open.

In the meantime Brodie hunted around in the back country until he located a gasoline power generator such as is used by carnivals. He made a deal with the owner, rushed it down to the theatre, hooked up, and Sunday, with the commercial light and power still gone, put on a show.

Both Tully and Brodie in three days and three nights had about four hours of sleep.

Dykes Built in Lowell

Thursday night the flood waters had risen to such an extent that Managers Nat Silver of the Strand and Arthur Keenan of the Merrimack Square, Lowell, realized that danger threatened both houses.

The civic memorial auditorium was surrounded by the flood and the water was only a foot or so below the canal bridge in front of the Strand Theatre. This canal runs under the front lobby of the Strand and alongside the theatre wall, separated by a narrow strip of land, Silver and Keenan felt they would have to do something about the back and sides of theatre to prevent the canal from coming in under the stage. They tried to secure sand bags in Lowell but could not. They notified District Manager Stoddard, who located a truck and bags and took them to Lowell. Silver in the meantime had secured ten tons of sand.

The entire crews of both theatres stayed up all night, packed sand in bags and built a dyke around the back wall of the theatre, banking it with sand and diverting the water away from the theatre. The dyke parapet was about six feet high and the water came up about four feet on the dyke. This was above the level of the basement windows. Without the dyke the boiler room, orchestra pit and stage basement would have been completely flooded.

Water had seeped through the ground foundations into the boiler and transformer rooms, which called for an immediate organization of a bucket brigade by the house personnel to keep the water away from the transformer and generator. Heroic work was done in this manner until the arrival of a pump from circuit headquarters.

Stuart Saves Equipment

Although not facing such disastrous flood conditions as faced the theatres in the Merrimack Valley, Manager Walter Stuart at the Community Theatre, North Attleboro, had a bad condition with his main lounge, under stage and boiler room flooded. In the emergency he was forced to hire an outside pump which was put to work after a sudden rise had stopped his heating plant and put his own pump out of commission.

No performances were lost, although the theatre was for a day and a half without heat.

At another subsequent extreme rise of water, generators and oil burners were removed to safety. This was only accomplished by constant watching and certain employees were on the job day and night.

Looks Kinda Like Babe Ruth's Bat

Holding a baseball bat along the lines of those once toted by Babe Ruth, girl in shorts and sweater (see photo) was planted out front of prominent Times Square sporting goods store to plug the two-reel Vitaphone "Slide, Nellie, Slide" for date at the Strand.

Bat was the McCoy, said to be the largest ever made and autographed by many stars of the diamond. Adjacent was display board with stills from the short and theatre credits.

THE MARCH "FIRSTS" CAMPAIGNS

Highlights of Four Entries Voted Quigley "First Mentions" by the Judges in the March Competitions

Much fine advertising and exploitation was evidenced in the entries of theatremen voted the "Firsts" in March. Douglas George, Ed Hart, Jack Nelson, Harry Goldberg and Steve Barutio secured wide coverage in putting over their campaigns, subsequent as well as first-run entries taking down the honors. Brief outlines of the standout ideas created by these members are set down on this page, among them being examples of showmanship slants that deserve high praise for their ingenuity.

Playing last run in the Philadelphia zone, Manager Douglas George, Parker, Darby, Pa., was booked to play "Dangerous" a few weeks after Bette Davis was voted the Academy Award, and upon this George built his campaign on the picture. News was immediately flashed on screen, clippings pertaining to the award planted on lobby board, and letters sent to mailing list.

Autograph book was placed in lobby two weeks ahead with patrons asked to sign names to congratulatory message to star. Book was also taken door-to-door by ushers for further signatures, also to schools where pupils in class were allowed to sign. Copy at head of each page carried theatre credits. Book was also taken around to newspapers, radio stations, obtaining extra publicity in the downtown papers and on film critic program. Local Mayor also signed.

George says over 14,000 signatures were gotten and book mailed to Miss Davis at the Warner studios. Wire of thanks from star was promoted, displayed in lobby and promoted jumbo reproductions planted in windows. Copies of wire were mimeographed for herald distribution. Photo of star holding her award was obtained and reproduced for give-aways by stores buying them in quantity from the manager, printing store and theatre ads on reverse side.

Title was tied in with police safety driving campaigns in nearby communities, which allowed stencilling of street corners and among other tieins were windows and merchants co-op congratulatory page in weekly paper, extra copies of which were run off with front page stramer heads for street distribution. Neat idea, too, was electric sign above screen reading "Academy Award Winner" and lowered (see photo) when trailer was run.

Hart Makes Local Picture As Feature of Campaign

Condensed version of "Next Time We Love" made by a cast of high school pupils was featured by Ed Hart in his campaign on the picture at the Paramount, Plainfield, N. J. Local merchant paid all costs in exchange for having one of the scenes filmed in front of his place.

Stage wedding also clicked. Hart tied this in with local undernourished children's fund sponsored by local paper. Mayor was offered $25 for performing the ceremony and that worthy in turn turned over the fee to the fund—as of course was arranged. Resultant publicity was plentiful.

Also hooking to the paper's fund was a special show of shorts proceeds going to the relief of the children, and for extra publicity Ed obtained permission of Margaret Sullavan to devote part of the day to this showing.

Hart was even brave enough to put on a baby contest week ahead, judging to take place opening matinee of picture. Local dairy sponsored this and also paid for special short of the kids shown at the theatre, helping the tiein further with newspaper ads and bottle tops. Publicity tieins were profuse. All local Sullavans were admitted free, as were those submitting best love letters. Limerick contest also clicked, as did stunt of offering tickets to wives who had proposed to husbands during any Leap Year.

For cooperation with local safety drive, Ed had boy scouts distribute red safety cards at traffic corners. Slogans were tied into the title with line such as "next time we walk" and "next time we ride," etc. Boys were given special showing for their aid. Street ballys included boy and girl in wedding costumes carrying lettered umbrella and girl in nurse uniform wheeling bannered baby carriage.

Arranges Railroad Excursion for "Country Doctor" Date

Few weeks back, description was run of Manager Jack Nelson's 20-page special newspaper Quins supplement for his date on "Country Doctor," at the Capitol, North Bay, Canada. Forwarding his full campaign on the picture, Nelson reports the aid of most every organization in town to round up the unusual publicity, with heads of these organizations contributing feature articles.

Newspaper drive was called "Five-Star Sales Campaign" and merchants adopted the slogan with pennants distributed by the paper. Further cooperation was gotten with elaborate tiein windows as part of the drive. Extra copies of the supplement were run off and purchased by subscribers to mail to their friends and paper also mailed free copies to every householder within a 50-mile radius.

Nelson prevailed upon the district manager of the Canadian Pacific to institute a cent-a-mile excursion for Saturday of the showing and heralds with theatre copy were distributed to this effect by the railroad within the limits of the bargain rate.

Restaurants featured a "quintuplet" sandwich. Among the other slants were included radio and elaborate front that featured giant cutout heads of the children.

George's Academy Award Electric Sign

Goldberg Tops "Pasteur" Campaign With Editorials in Four Papers

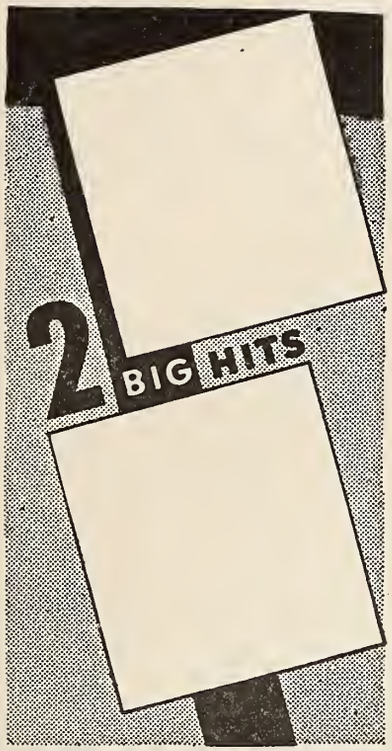
Splendid cooperation was obtained on "Louis Pasteur" by Harry Goldberg for the date at Warners' Boyd, Philadelphia, by stressing that those tieing in were performing a public service. This was especially true as concerned newspapers, four different dailies contributing editorials and special stories. Items were unique, says Goldberg, and rarely happen.

Same helpful attitude was displayed by the County medical society in endorsing picture to members. Though very strict on publicity, letter was obtained, endorsement going for the entertainment angle as well as an authentic scientific biography.

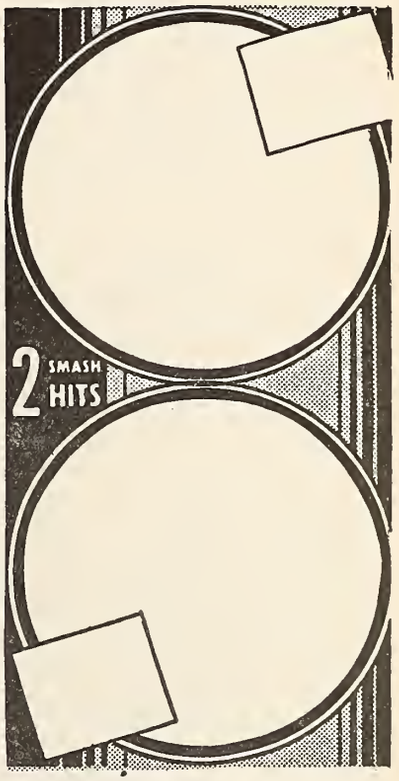
Drug and milk companies also aided. Cards were distributed by wholesale drug companies to druggists to be placed on cash registers, all medicos, nurses, etc., in city and vicinity received copy of medical society letter. Heralds were distributed through local Milk Council to neighborhoods likely to contain downtown customers.

University dean, heads of college medical departments, etc., also endorsed showing and had announcements made in classes. Theatre cards and still displays were planted at these schools and high schools. Leading insurance company included plug for picture in outgoing mail, public health department tied in and all top women's organizations were contacted directly.

Goldberg further reports that as a result of the intensive cooperation with the high schools, some eight per cent of the students attended, and quotes this for the reason that the attendance at downtown theatres of high school students is generally no more than one per cent.



For the intensive canvassing of the schools that brought such good results Steve Barutio, Boyd manager is credited.



Inadvertently, Barutio was not credited in the March competitions for his cooperation on this entry. Therefore, announcement is made that First Mention Sheepskin certificate is hereby awarded to Steve for the "Pasteur" Campaign.

PASKOW'S DOUBLE-BILL LAYOUTS

Small neighborhood houses and others similarly situated cannot afford to change their mats for newspaper ads too often, says Bob Paskow, Warner Theatres New Jersey zone ad head, who therefore has created some 50 ad combinations for Warner theatres playing double features, some of which are reproduced on this page. These one-column layouts are all actual size.

The entire 50 are made up in one cut and reproduced as one mat with two ordered for each theatre. Offset proof is furnished with each mat. Idea is a money saver and muchly appreciated by the men in the field.

GEORGE B. BARBER

manages the Hippodrome in Herrin, Ill., and since George is the first member to join the club from Herrin, we are going to depend on him to keep us posted on what's what there for the edification of our readers. Here's hoping that in very short order your fair city will be among those accounted for in our pages.

Kansas City High In Theatre Service

tive. They have the additional advantages of being close to patrons, which is especially important because the city is spread out, and are equipped with abundant free parking space.

Another factor is the advertising setup. The Star and Times' almost 100 per cent circulation twice a day with movie ads one page has made the papers a catalogue for movie patrons selecting a show. Buying only in two, rather in three, media, suburbans take more space, compete day in and day out alongside downtown first runs.

A poor review of a good picture hurts the first run take. But by the time it reaches the suburbans, the criticism, whatever it was, is forgotten by the public, and word has had time to get around that it is a good picture. This has occurred with several pictures here this winter. The result has been that first runs suffered, suburbans reaped the profit.

Critics see the picture in a "cold" projection room; and set their individual and personal judgment against that of the thousands on whom the film industry must depend to "buy" it.

Also important is the fact that downtown Kansas City is a bottle-neck at one end of the town, the longest possible distance from residences of its inhabitants.

Regular, profitable attendance for any theatre is a thing of the past. Patrons are shopping for their movies more than ever before. It used to be an exhibitor could open his doors and business would flow in.

Fox Midwest Dominant

Dominant exhibition factor is the Fox Midwest circuit, with its eleven subsequent runs which represent approximately one-third of the subsequents in Kansas City, Mo. With five 25-cent houses—practically all there are in this price classification—Fox has first, second and third subsequent runs exclusively. Last fall it set up zones which governed the sale of film to all subsequent runs in the city on 1935-36 product.

Operation by the circuit more than 100 theatres throughout the area, plus its tie-up with other strong circuits throughout the country through common ownership under National Theatres gives it dominance particularly on buying.

Independents here always have been fairly energetic within the movie industry, but, characteristically, they have found it difficult at times to keep together on meeting common problems. Twice independents have taken the lead in an effort to eliminate giveaways, once under Jay Means during code days, and more recently under Emanuel Rolsky. Neither effort succeeded, but Rolsky still is working to get signed up the two or three independents who are preventing a 100 per cent cooperation, which is required to make the elimination successful.

TAKIS G. VALOS

at the Retlaw Theatre, Fond du Lac, Wis., started as assistant manager of the Roxy Theatre in Peru, Ind. A year later he was transferred to the Roxy in Ottawa, Ill.; from there Valos was put in the Roxy at Frankfort, Ind., and then to his present theatre as assistant, and when the organization took over two other houses he was made manager.

MACK HERBERT

manages the Bijou, a neighborhood theatre here in New York City and started in showbusiness as an actor in one of Gus Edwards' shows, later did a single in vaudeville. From 1923 to 1927 Mack operated Farmer Jones country store nights in about forty local independent theatres. Later owned and operated the City Theatre in Union City, managed other theatres around New York and then to his present assignment.

started as doorman at the Wisconsin, Milwaukee, for Saxe Amusement Enterprises and studied the pipe organ at the same time. Later took jobs as relief organist and the featured organist. Clarence then played with several orchestras and on to vaudeville. Left the stage to become assistant at the Uptown, Milwaukee, from there transferred to the Mojeska and later to the Granada.

is the manager of the Strand Theatre in Springfield, Mass., a town that is most actively represented in the Round Table membership roll. We shall expect a little lively competition from you, Emerson, and your responsibility to the club doesn't end with signing the membership blank, you know.

who is certainly no stranger to our pages, just joined the club. Hal has the record of having worked continuously during his career for the Griffith Amusement Company. Starting at Hugo, Okla., in 1924, he worked there four years and then went to Stillwater, Okla., to attend college working as an operator during his school career. Upon graduation he joined the circuit as relief manager, working in Ada, Okla., Borger, Texas, and Wellington, Texas, then on to other of the circuit's houses until we now find him managing the Palace, Lindsey and Texan Theatres in Lubbock, Tex.

is the assistant manager of the Palace, in Lubbock, Tex., starting as usher at the Orpheum, Oklahoma City, and then to the Rialto there. In 1933 John was transferred to Lubbock, Tex., also attending college there, later went to the Lindsey Theatre and then to his present job.

acts as the assistant manager of the Apollo Theatre in Chicago, Ill., and while we haven't heard from him since he joined the club, we are sure with this gentle reminder it won't be long before we'll be receiving contributions from the Apollo.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.
